IF, in spite of your resolution in favour of Victoria, I still hesitate on removing my abode and the seat of the Legislature from the spot established by law, you will understand that I consider the public faith and honour engaged on the one side, and possible expediency on the other. If, as some persons assert, the present uncertainty be found to be more detrimental to the public interests than any decision which may be arrived at, I shall come to that decision, and make public the recommendation I may lay before the Secretary of State. I, however, look confidently forward to the time when the centre of population will be found on the eastern side of the Cascade Range.

Proclamation.
20 July 1859.

"I WISH the question of the seat of Government to be set at rest, and if your Grace can see your way to establish it at Victoria without injustice to those who have purchased land at New Westminster on the faith of the proclamations I enclose, I shall not offer one word of remonstrance. Either town will suit me equally well as a place of residence, and in the present financial condition of the Colony, I shall be very glad to have but one house to keep up. Victoria has made the most progress; consequently, perhaps, under existing depression, it would be well to concentrate our waning resources upon the spot where the greatest outlay has been made. I will not allow that Victoria possesses any natural advantages over New Westminster, but it is older and more developed as a town."

I enclose the message I addressed to the Legislative Council on the subject. The last paragraph simply means that I will not be controlled in my policy by meetings held in the Victoria Theatre.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency James Douglas, Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Governor and Commander in Chief of British Columbia.

WHEREAS it is expedient to publish, for general information, the method to be pursued with respect to the alienation and possession of agricultural lands, and of lands proposed for the sites of towns in British Columbia, and with reference also to the places for levying shipping and customs duties, and for establishing a capital and port of entry in the said Colony;

Now therefore, I, James Douglas, Governor of the said Colony, do proclaim and declare as follows, viz.:

1. All the lands in British Columbia, and all the mines and minerals therein, belong to the Crown in fee.

2. The price of lands, not being intended for the sites of towns, and not being reputed to be mineral lands, shall be 10 s. per acre, payable one-half in cash at the time of the sale, and the other half at the end of two years from such sale. Provided that under special circumstances some other price, or some other terms of payment may from time to time be specially announced for particular localities.

3. It

FOR THE CAPITAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

3. It shall also be competent to the executive at any time to reserve such portions of the unoccupied Crown lands, and for such purposes as the executive shall deem advisable.

4. Except as aforesaid, all the land in British Columbia will be exposed in lots for sale, by public competition at the upset price above mentioned, as soon as the same shall have been surveyed and made ready for sale. Due notice will be given of all such sales. Notice at the same time will be given of the upset price and terms of payment when they vary from those above stated, and also of the rights reserved (if any) for public convenience.

5. All lands which shall remain unsold at any such auction may be sold by private contract at the upset price, and on the terms and conditions herein mentioned, on application to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works.

6. Unless otherwise specially notified at the time of sale, all such sales of Crown land shall be subject to such public rights of way as may at any time after such sale, and to such private rights of way, and of leading or using water for animals, and for mining and engineering purposes as may at the time of such sale be specified by the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works.

7. Unless otherwise specially announced at the time of sale, the conveyance of the land shall include all trees and all mines and minerals within and under the same, except mines of gold and silver.

8. When any "Ditch Privilege" shall be granted, there shall be included (unless excluded by express words) the right to lop, dress, or fell any trees standing on unoccupied Crown lands which, in the opinion of the proprietors of the ditch, might by their accidental fall or otherwise, endanger the safety of the ditch or any part thereof.

GOLD CLAIMS.

9. Until further notice, gold claims and mines shall continue to be worked, subject to the existing regulations.

CAPITAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

10. It is intended with all dispatch to lay out and settle the site of a city to be the capital of British Columbia, on the right or north bank of Fraser River.

11. Plans of the city are intended to be prepared and published in the month of March next. Three-fourths of the whole number of lots, excluding the public reserves, will be submitted in lots to public competition, by auction, in the month of April. One-fourth of the whole number of lots, excluding the public reserves, will be reserved in blocks for purchasers in the United Kingdom, Her Majesty's Colonies in North America, and elsewhere. All of such last-mentioned lots which may not be disposed of in the United Kingdom, or Her Majesty's Colonies, other than British Columbia, will be submitted to public competition in this Colony, of which due notice will be given.

12. As the Government is desirous of concentrating the commercial interest of the Colony in and around the capital, purchasers of town lots in the said proposed capital who may be owners of town lots in Langley, under the late sale on the 25th November last, on which the whole amount of purchase-money has been paid to the Government, will if so disposed, be allowed to surrender the lots in Langley so purchased, and to have the price so paid to the Government allowed them as payment in full for a lot or lots purchased by them in the said proposed capital of an equal or less price in the aggregate, and as payment in part for lots in the said proposed capital of a greater price in the aggregate. Every such surrender must be executed and delivered in writing, addressed to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works in British Columbia, at Victoria, Vancouver Island, one week at least, previous to the day appointed for the intended sale.

13. The proposed capital will be declared to be a port of entry so soon as the necessary arrangements shall have been provided, which will be done with all convenient dispatch. Custom House officers will then be stationed there, and vessels will be able to proceed direct to Fraser River without touching at Victoria, or may clear at Victoria, at their option.

14. The whole of the river frontage will be laid out in a continuous road, the edge of which it is contemplated ultimately to convert into a public quay. No quay will, however, be at present constructed at the public expense, nor will the absolute property of the soil along the edge of the water be now alienated by the Crown. But the right to make and maintain quays of convenient sizes, and to demand certain tolls and rates for the use thereof, will be granted to private individuals for the space of seven years; such rights will be disposed of at public auction at or immediately after the sale of town lots, to the bidder of the highest annual rent. No restrictions will be placed on the lessee as to the form or nature of the quays, except such as shall be necessary to protect the public safety and convenience.

Issued under the public seal of the Colony of British Columbia at Victoria, Vancouver Island, this fourteenth day of February, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, in the twenty-second year of Her Majesty's reign, by me,

James Douglas. (L. S.)

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency James Douglas, Companion of the most Honourable Order of the Bath, Governor and Commander in Chief of British Columbia, Vice Admiral of the same, &c.

WHEREAS Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to decide that the capital of British Columbia shall be styled the City of New Westminster;

Now therefore, I, James Douglas, do hereby declare and proclaim that the town heretofore called and known as Queensborough, and sometimes as Queenborough, in the Colony of British Columbia, shall from henceforth be called and known as New Westminster, and shall be so described in all legal processes and official documents.

Issued under the public seal of the said Colony at Victoria, Vancouver Island, this twentieth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, in the twenty-third year of Her Majesty's reign.

(signed) James Douglas.

By command of his Excellency,
William A. G. Young, Acting Colonial Secretary.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

MESSAGE.

Frederick Seymour.

THE Governor lays before the Legislative Council, for their information, certain petitions addressed to him, requesting that Victoria may be made, according to some of these papers, the capital, according to others, the seat of Government of the United Colony.

It is in no cavilling spirit that he points out that those first alluded to, appear to have been signed under a false impression. There is no intention of erecting public offices in New Westminster during the present condition of the colonial finances. The Government officers do not complain of the accommodation afforded to them; and if economy be alone considered, the retention of the seat of Government on the banks of the Fraser is to be preferred, inasmuch as a considerable outlay would be required to make the Government House at Victoria permanently habitable.

It is a matter of sincere regret to the Governor, that this vast and thinly-peopled territory should, in the early stage of its political existence, have been divided into two separate Colonies, and that two necessarily rival towns should have been founded in comparatively close proximity. His labours would now be lighter, and the Colony more prosperous, had the spare resources of the inhabitants been concentrated in the erection of one town of magnitude, of sufficient importance and attraction to retain during the winter the greater part of the unattached population of the Colony. He would not care if the site for the capital had been fixed where Victoria now stands, or on the Bay of Esquimalt, or at New Westminster. Nor could he, if the matter had been clearly understood by all, have objected to one scale of taxation being fixed, favourable to commerce, upon those who elected to live live in the chief town, or within a certain radius of it, and another upon those who took to other occupations in outlying districts. But it is not in order to express-regret over the past, that the Governor now comments on the petitions he forwards.

New Westminster was, by proclamation, having the force of law, created the "Capital" of British Columbia. Her Majesty was invited to name the young city, and bestowed on it the designation it now bears. Though styled capital, it would not appear to have been the seat of Government, and the affairs of the mainland were directed from the chief town of the neighbouring insular Colony. Dissatisfaction, whether general or local the Governor is not in a position to say, ensued, and Her Majesty was advised to separate the Administration of the Government of British Columbia from that of Vancouver Island.

On his acceptance of office in this Colony, the present Governor was instructed to use all means in his power to bring about an entire union of the two Colonies, which the Secretary of State had reluctantly advised the Queen to disconnect. His Grace stated that it was the intention of the Government, that New Westminster should be the seat of Government of the Colony, if a fusion could be obtained, although he believed that Victoria would always retain commercial supremacy. The Legislature of the Mainland was accordingly called upon to provide a house, suitably furnished, for the residence of the Governor, while no such provision was required from Vancouver Island.

On his arrival in the Colony, the Governor found the sum of 10,000*l.* voted for the erection of public buildings in New Westminster, but with the cheerful concurrence of the public officers interested, he declined to lay out the money in that manner, choosing rather, in the general interest, to devote it to the lowering, by improvements in communication, the price of commodities in the gold districts.

The desire for union the Governor looked for, grew and matured in a section of the present Colony, until the Imperial Legislature considered the time had arrived for carrying into effect a policy Her Majesty's Government had steadily kept in view. Then British interests on the shores of the North Pacific were consolidated by Act of Parliament.

The Governor understands that, during the passage of the Act, it was stated in both Houses of Parliament, that New Westminster should be the seat of the general Government. An influential member of the Government informed him a few days before his departure from England—"I do not think it necessary that the Secretary of State should give you instructions as to the seat of Government. It is understood that New Westminster should be the capital, and that you should visit Victoria when you think necessary. But if you wish for definite orders, you will do best to ask for them in a formal letter to the Secretary of State." The Governor has no doubt that such an application would have resulted in a Royal decision in favour of New Westminster, and he may state that it was on his intercession alone that the order to sell the Government House at Victoria was withheld.

He is of opinion that the question as to the future seat of Government and of the assembling of the Legislature had better, ultimately, be decided on local recommendation. He would, however, not desire that the interests of New Westminster should be prejudiced by his regard for the general interests of the Colony having been superior to that he felt for the comfort of himself and public officers. Nor, on the other hand, would he wish any undue consideration to be given in favour of Victoria, on account of a large outlay having been made on a governor's residence, at a time when Vancouver Island could but ill afford it. He would take no advantage of the fact of one section of the Colony having asked for unconditional union, while the other stood aloof; nor would he maintain that any Proclamation, though having the force of law, may not be repealed when the community reaches a more advanced state of population and mode of government, but, for the present, he will leave matters as they are. He will watch, without preference or prejudice, over the general interests of the Colony as they may develop themselves in the uncertain future, and will be prepared to act upon his own judgment in the advice, if any, which he may lay before Her Majesty's Ministers.

He trusts that no immediate action may be urged upon him. He feels deeply the injury the Colony has sustained from political agitation, and now states plainly that should he find it necessary to set the present question at rest, he will humbly recommend to the Queen that he and his successors in office be commanded to reside permanently in the present capital of the Colony.

Governor Seymour to the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

10 Dec. 1867.

COPY of a DESPATCH from Governor Seymour to His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

My Lord Duke,

New Westminster, 10 December 1867.

* Page 4.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your Grace's Despatch, No. 49, of the 17th August, respecting certain resolutions passed by the Legislative Council in favour of the seat of Government of the Colony being established at Victoria. The schedule of Despatches received by your Grace from me, which came by the same mail, shows me that my communication, No. 87,* of the 13th July, on this subject is already before you.

2. The question is one really of very great difficulty in the present depressed condition of the Colony. Were either Victoria or New Westminster prosperous, it would matter but little where the Governor had his abode, and where the Legislative Council met.

3. New Westminster was proclaimed the capital of British Columbia. Vancouver Island prayed and agitated for admission on any terms into an union with the mainland Colony. Hence it would seem but natural that New Westminster should be the capital of the united Colony. Victoria, however, previous to the separation of the Colonies, was virtually the capital of both, and, as I have clearly stated in my Despatch above referred to, had concentrated many powerful influences.

4. If I may be permitted to set aside the consideration of Sir James Douglas's proclamation, and the apparent deviation from good faith towards the purchasers of town lots in New Westminster, I would state the case as follows:—

5. Victoria has the largest population, the richest shopkeepers, the largest Church endowments, the greatest trade, and is singularly favoured by the headquarters of the Pacific squadron being placed in the neighbouring harbour of Esquimalt. It is also unquestionably the most convenient place for communicating, if desirable, with the United States' authorities at San Francisco or Alaska. It has certain public offices of good appearance, but I am informed by Major General Moody, R.E., of the most unsatisfactory construction. Victoria possesses additionally a Government House of some pretensions, built at a cost of about 9,000 £, at the time when the Colony could not meet its indebtedness. This house is large and unfurnished, but being situated amongst rocks, so disposed as to keep off the sun, and not the cold breezes of the Straits, it is singularly unattractive. The walls have no paper to hide the cracks which the settlement of the older portions of the buildings have entailed upon them. There is no water on the grounds in summer; all for consumption has to be purchased.

6. New Westminster has, on the other hand, the disadvantage of being more out of the way of foreign callers, and being less connected with Her Majesty's Navy. It is away from the head-quarters of the Hudson's Bay Company's establishments, and from the abodes of the principal merchants of the Colony. It is but a small place as compared with Victoria. Its public offices are inferior; and if there be, as seems to be supposed in Victoria, a necessary connection between trade and Government, New Westminster must yield the palm to the older city. Here, however, the Government House is a cottage, without pretention, on the banks of the Fraser. It is a modest English house, nicely furnished, in a lovely situation, and abundantly supplied with water. I can hardly imagine a Governor of his own free will leaving it for the more ambitious building at Victoria, which fails to supply one of the necessities of comfort after an outlay of three times as much as the house from which I now write has cost.

7. It is held in certain petitions which have been presented to your Grace, and to which I shall refer in a separate Despatch, that the seat of Government should be where the population is most concentrated; yet such is not the opinion in the neighbouring states. Washington has not the trade or bustle of New York; Sacramento is insignificant as a settlement compared with San Francisco.

I might

I might go the round of the states by name, and show that the deliberative and executive government are removed from the great bustling and excitable centres of population. Our, to us here, eastern Colonies seem to have followed the same principle; Ottawa has not the trade of Quebec or Montreal, Frederickton that of St. John's.

8. As regards the political question connected with the seat of Government for British Columbia, I would observe, that I never saw a community more politically excitable and tempest-torn than that of Victoria. Your Grace's predecessors will have had but too great knowledge of the mode in which matters were conducted under the late legislative constitution of Vancouver Island. Under that at present existing people are quieter, but I do not think that the Council would be as much able to do their duty to the community at large when sitting in the feverish political atmosphere of Victoria, as if deliberating in the less troubled town of New Westminster.

9. If, however, we consider the question merely as how to please immediately the greater number of persons, the selection of Victoria as a capital would be most advisable.

10. I had written thus far when I received your Grace's Despatch, No. 67,* of the 1st October; the matter to which it refers shall have my most careful consideration, and I shall reply to it by the next opportunity.

My Lord Duke,

New Westminster, 29 April 1868.

IN obedience to the instructions conveyed in your Grace's Despatch, No. 67,§ of the 1st of October 1867, I have fixed upon a capital for the united Colony. The Message which I enclose will show that I have selected Victoria.

2. There is one circumstance in the affair which I trust you will pardon, and that is my having ventured to lay your Grace's Despatch before the Council.
483. The

The feeling existing in both New Westminster and Victoria is so strong on the subject of the seat of Government, that I felt it necessary when acting in the matter to invoke the assistance of a stronger power than my own in order to prevent disturbance.

3. I forwarded your Grace's Despatch in the Message I enclose. I received the following reply. I commenced my Despatch with the final conclusion.

4. I sincerely trust I have acted for the best. I well know I have secured but present tranquillity.

5. In my own heart, I must allow, there was a feeling in favour of the manly, respectable, loyal, and enterprising community established on the banks of the Fraser.

THE Governor lays before the Legislative Council a Despatch,* with Enclosures, from Her Majesty's Secretary of State, directing him to come to a decision as to the selection of a seat of Government for the united Colony of British Columbia. He adds a copy of his reply.

The Governor would feel greatly obliged by the Honourable Council assisting him with their advice on the subject. He wishes it to be clearly understood that Honourable Members holding official positions are requested freely to pronounce their opinion.

Enclosure 2, in No. 6.

PURSUANT to the Order of the day, the consideration of his Excellency the Governor's Message No. 1 was taken up.

The Hon. Mr. Walkem moved, the Hon. Mr. Stamp seconding :

"That this Council having been requested by his Excellency the Governor to assist him with their advice in coming to a decision as to the selection of a seat of Government for the United Colony of British Columbia, is of opinion, after careful consideration of his Excellency's Message and its Enclosures on the subject, that Victoria is the place most suitable for the seat of Government of the United Colony."

Moved in amendment by the Hon. Mr. Robson, the Hon. Mr. Barnard seconding :

"Whereas, it is highly probable that this Colony will very shortly form a part of the new Dominion of Canada ;

"And whereas, under Confederation, the seat of Government will naturally gravitate towards the centre of population on the mainland ;

"And whereas, a considerable expenditure of revenue would be involved in the removal of the seat of Government to Victoria ;

"And whereas, a reaction has already set in on the mainland against the removal of the seat of Government to Victoria ;

"And whereas, it is probable that, were the seat of Government now removed to Victoria, the people on the mainland would be found, in less than 12 months, petitioning for its restoration to the mainland ;

"And whereas, the frequent removal of the seat of Government involves great expense and inconvenience, and exerts a most injurious influence upon the public mind, by keeping up a continual agitation upon the subject, and destroying confidence ;

"And whereas, the constitution of this Council is not of that representative character which should entitle it to deal with such a question as the removal of the seat of Government, where it has been established by law ;

"And whereas, there is every reason to believe that a dissolution of this Council and a direct appeal to the country would demonstrate that a large majority of the bonâ fide colonists are averse to the removal of the seat of Government to Victoria ;

"And

11

"And whereas, the removal of the seat of Government from where it is at present established would inflict serious injury upon an important community of British subjects, without securing any compensating advantages to the Colony at large;

"Be it therefore Resolved:

"That this Council is of opinion that it would be inexpedient to remove the seat of Government, at least until the Colony shall possess such full powers of self-government as will render its Legislature competent to deal with the question, and such fixity of population and permanent interests as may indicate, with some degree of clearness, a site which would prove to be permanently suitable."

Whereupon a debate arose.

On the amendment being put, the Council divided:

Messrs. Smith,

The names having been taken down by the clerk, pursuant to request.

So the amendment was lost.

The Hon. Mr. Robson rose to speak to a question of privilege.

The Hon. the Presiding Member ruled that it could not be brought before the Council until after the question now before it was disposed of.

On the original question being put, the Council again divided:

THE Governor has received the Resolution of the Legislative Council, of the 2nd of April, expressing the opinion that Victoria is the place most suitable for the capital of the united Colony. Her Majesty's Government would seem to lean to the same opinion. Under these circumstances, the Governor will cause to be proclaimed, on the Queen's birthday, the selection of the capital within the town which bears Her Royal name.

My Lord Duke,

Victoria, 28 May 1868.

I HAVE the honour to forward copy of the Proclamation by which I declared
Victoria to be the capital of the united Colony.

2. So thoroughly has the question of the relative merits of the two principal towns for the seat of Government been canvassed, that I do not think it neces-

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency Frederick Seymour, Esq., Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Colony of British Columbia and its Dependencies, Vice Admiral and Ordinary of the same, &c., &c.

WHEREAS, under and by virtue of a Proclamation, made and issued on the 14th day of February 1859, the site of the present city of New Westminster was laid out as the Capital of the Colony of British Columbia as then defined and existing.

And whereas, under and by virtue of an Act of Parliament, made and passed in the 29th and 30th years of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "The British Columbia Act, 1866," and the Proclamation thereof made by the Governor of British Columbia, upon the 19th day of November 1866, the formerly separate Colony of Vancouver Island and its dependencies was united with the formerly separate Colony of British Columbia and its dependencies, under the name of the Colony of British Columbia :

And whereas it is expedient to declare the capital and seat of Government of the said united Colony :

Now know ye, and I do hereby proclaim and declare as follows :—

From and after the date hereof, and until otherwise appointed by Her said Majesty Queen Victoria, Her heirs and successors, the City of Victoria, in the Colony of British Columbia, shall be and be deemed for all purposes whatsoever the capital and seat of Government of the united Colony of British Columbia.

Given under my hand and the public seal of the Colony of British Columbia, at Government House, Victoria, in the said Colony, this 25th day of May, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and in the 31st year of Her Majesty's reign.

Sir,

Downing-street, 1 October 1867.

I HAVE to acknowledge your Despatch, No. 87*, of the 13th of July last, from which I learn that you are not yet prepared to recommend the adoption either of Victoria or of New Westminster as the capital of British Columbia.

I leave the determination of this question still in your hands, merely desiring that it may not be long delayed.

I take the opportunity of forwarding to you various documents† which may affect your judgment, but which I have not hitherto sent to you, because I was expecting from you a definite recommendation on the subject to which they related.

As the second paragraph of your Despatch contains something like an appeal to me for an expression of opinion, I think it requisite to say that the establishment of New Westminster as the capital of British Columbia did not, in my opinion, involve any pledge on the part of the Government that the site of that capital shall never be moved. It is, of course, always undesirable to disappoint natural expectations, and much consideration may be due to those who are so disappointed. But every land purchaser in New Westminster or any other locality, must be considered to buy his land, subject to the possible changes which the varying political or commercial interests of the whole community may from time to time render necessary.

I will add that, although I do not prescribe to you the choice of one or the other capital, you will be at liberty, in case you should decide in favour of Victoria, to quote the authority of the Home Government in support of that course.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatches, No. 31*, of the 29th of April, and No. 51†, of the 28th of May, the first reporting that, having brought the question of the selection of a capital for the united Colony under the consideration of the Legislative Council, you had received a resolution from them, expressing the opinion that Victoria is the place most suitable for the capital; and the second, forwarding a copy of the Proclamation by which you declared Victoria to be the capital of the united Colony on the 25th of May.

In reply, I have to inform you that I have been glad to be apprised of the settlement of a question which, while it remained open, must have furnished a continual source of irritation and uncertainty, and I feel little doubt that you have judged rightly in placing the seat of Government in that part of the Colony where the greatest stationary population has collected, and where maritime communication is easiest.

RESOLUTIONS.

In the House of Assembly, February 25, 1868.

Resolved—That the delegates so to be appointed are to urge upon the attention of the British Government and the Imperial Parliament the strong feelings of this House and the people of Nova Scotia upon the question of Confederation; that they are to ask for the restoration of the constitution of this country as it existed previous to the passage of the "British North America Act;" that they are not to accept any alteration of or amendment to such Act, and that they are hereby authorized, if necessary, to retain counsel learned in the law to plead the claims of Nova Scotia at the bar of the House of Commons, and to take all such necessary steps for carrying out the Resolutions of this House as may be deemed advisable.

(Signed) H. D. TWINING,
Clerk of House of Assembly.

In the House of Assembly, February 25, 1868.

Resolved—That his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor in Council be authorized to appoint delegates charged with the Resolutions passed by this House on the 21st February instant in respect to the constitutional rights and privileges of the people of this Province.

Resolutions passed unanimously by the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia, on the 21st day of February 1868.

1. Resolved—That the members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province, elected in 1863 simply to legislate under the Colonial Constitution, had no authority to make or consent to any material change of such Constitution without first submitting the same to the people at the polls.

2. Resolved—That the Resolution of the 10th April, which led to the passage of the British North America Act, and is as follows (that is to say):—

“Whereas, in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that a Confederation of the British North American Provinces should take place:

Resolved, therefore—That his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor be authorized to appoint Delegates to arrange with the Imperial Government a scheme of union which will effectually insure just provision for the rights and interests of this Province, each Province to have an equal voice in such delegation, Upper and Lower Canada being for this purpose considered as separate Provinces,” was the only authority possessed by the Delegates who procured the enactment of the “Act for the Union of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick.”

3. Resolved—That even if the House of Assembly had the constitutional power to authorize such delegation, which is by no means admitted, the foregoing Resolution did not empower the Delegates to arrange a federal union of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, without including in such Confederation the Colonies of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

4. Resolved—That no Delegates from the two last-named Colonies having attended, and an unequal number from each of the others being present, the delegation was not legally constituted, and had no authority to act under the said Resolution, which expressly required each of the Colonies to be represented by an equal number of Delegates.

5. Resolved—That the Delegates did not “ensure just provision for the rights and interests of this Province,” as they were, by the express terms of such resolution, bound to do in arranging a scheme of Union; but, on the contrary, they entirely disregarded those rights and interests, and the scheme by them consented to would, if finally confirmed, deprive the people of this Province of their rights, liberty, and independence—rob them of their revenues—take from the regulations of their trade, commerce, and taxes the management of their railroads and other public property, expose them to an arbitrary and excessive taxation by a Legislature over which they can have no adequate control, and reduce this hitherto free, happy, and self-governed Province to the degraded condition of a dependency of Canada.

6. Resolved—That no fundamental or material change of the constitution of the Province can be made in any other constitutional manner than by a statute of the Provincial Legislature, sanctioned by the people after the subject matter of the same had been referred to them at the polls, the Legislature of a Colonial Dependency having no power or authority implied from their relation to the people, as their legislative representatives, to overthrow the constitution under which they were elected.

7. Resolved—That the scheme of confederating Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia was never submitted to the people of this Province at the polls before the 18th day of September last, upwards of two-and-a-half months after the British North America Act was, by the Queen's Proclamation, declared to be in force, when the people were thereby informed that they had been subjected, without their consent, to the absolute dominion of more populous and more powerful Colonies, and had lost their liberty.

* The Address to the Queen will be found at page 6.

NOVA

8. Resolved—That there being no statute of the Provincial Legislature confirming or ratifying the British North America Act, and the same never having been consented to or authorized by the people at the polls, nor the consent of this Province in any other manner testified, the preamble of the Act reciting that this Province had expressed a desire to be confederated with Canada and New Brunswick is untrue; and when the Queen and the Imperial Legislature were led to believe that this Province had expressed such a desire, a fraud and imposition were practised upon them.

9. Resolved—That the truth of the preamble of the British North America Act, reciting the desire of the Nova Scotia to be confederated is essential to the constitutionality of the Statute; and if the same is false the statute is defective, because a statute cannot be rendered constitutional by falsely assuming as true the condition which is indispensable to its constitutionality.

10. Resolved—That from the time the scheme of Confederation was first devised in Canada until it was consummated by the Imperial Act in London, it was systematically kept from the consideration of the people of Nova Scotia at the polls; and the Executive Council and the Legislature, in defiance of petitions signed by many thousands of the electors of this Province, persistently and perseveringly prevented the same from being presented to the people.

11. Resolved—That at the recent election the question of Confederation exclusively occupied the attention of the people, who were then, for the first time, enabled to express their will on a subject of the most vital importance to their happiness; and the result has proved that this Province does not desire to be annexed to Canada, and that the people of Nova Scotia repudiate the enforced provisions of the British North America Act, which, for the reasons set forth in the foregoing Resolutions, they believe to be unconstitutional, and in no manner binding upon the people of Nova Scotia.

12. Resolved—That the Quebec Scheme, which is embodied in the British North America Act, imprudently attempted to be forced upon the people of Nova Scotia, not only without their consent, but against their will, has already created wide-spread irritation and discontent; and unless the same be withdrawn, will, we fear, be attended with the most disastrous consequences, as the loyal people of this Province are fully conscious of their rights as British subjects, set an inestimable value upon their free institutions, and will not willingly consent to the invasion of those rights, or to be subjected to the dominion of any other power than their lawful and beloved Queen.

13. Resolved—That the Colonies were politically allied to each other by their common relationship to the Queen and her Empire, in a more peaceable and less dangerous connexion than under any scheme of Colonial Confederation that could be devised, even on the fairest, wisest, and most judicious principles.

14. Resolved—That the people of Nova Scotia do not impute to Her Majesty the Queen and the Imperial Parliament any intentional injustice, as they are well aware that fraud and deception were practised upon them, by those who misrepresented the public sentiment of this country, and who, for reasons that we will not venture to assign, desired that Confederation might be forced upon this Province, without the consent and against the will of the people.

15. Resolved—That an humble Address be presented to the Queen embodying the substance of the foregoing Resolutions, informing Her Majesty that her loyal people of Nova Scotia do not desire to be in any manner confederated with Canada, and praying Her Majesty to revoke her Proclamation, and to cause the British North America Act to be repealed, as far as it affects the Province of Nova Scotia.

The foregoing are a true copy of the fifteen Resolutions passed unanimously by the House of Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia on the 21st day of February, A.D. 1868, which I certify.

(Signed) HENRY TWINING,

Clerk of the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, February 25th, 1868.

To the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the House of Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful subjects, the representatives of the people of Nova Scotia in Provincial Parliament assembled, most respectfully approach your Majesty with assurances of our unabated loyalty and devoted attachment to your Majesty's person and Government.

We call the attention of your Majesty to the fact that His Majesty King George the Second, upwards of a century ago, granted to the people of Nova Scotia a Representative Constitution, and ordained that the Legislature should consist of a Governor, Council, and Assembly, constituted of the freeholders of the Province, and this Constitution was improved subsequently by the liberality of succeeding Sovereigns, in graciously conceding extensive powers of self-government to your Majesty's loyal subjects of Nova Scotia.

We would humbly submit to your Majesty that a Constitution thus solemnly granted, and guaranteed to the people of this Colony, could not be revoked without the consent of your Majesty and of the people of Nova Scotia, who had an undoubted right to be consulted before their Constitution could be materially altered.

We also humbly submit that a Legislature so constituted for the single purpose of making laws, statutes, and ordinances, for the peace, order, and government of the Colony, possessed no power nor authority in any manner to alter—much less to overthrow—the Constitution without the consent of your Majesty, and of the people of Nova Scotia, who had a right to be consulted before such alteration could take place.

That delegates were appointed, under a resolution of the House of Assembly and Legislative Council, which bears date on the 10th day of April 1866, and is as follow, that is to say:—

“Whereas, in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that a Confederation of the British North American Provinces should take place: Resolved therefore—That his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor be authorized to appoint Delegates to arrange with the Imperial Government a scheme of union which will effectually insure just provision for the rights and interests of this Province; each Province to have an equal voice in such Delegation—Upper and Lower Canada being for this purpose considered as separate Provinces.”

To this Resolution we beg to call your Majesty's special attention, as it constituted the only power the Delegates had to alter or interfere with the Constitution of the Province.

Your Majesty will observe that this Resolution, even if the Legislature had any power to pass it, did not clothe the Delegates with power to arrange a Federal Union of Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, without including Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

That no Delegates from the two last-named Colonies having attended, and an unequal number being in attendance from each of the others, the delegation was not legally constituted, and had no authority to act under the Resolution.

That the Delegates, so far from insuring just provision for the rights and interests of this Province, which, by the express words of the Resolution they were bound to do, entirely disregarded and sacrificed those rights and interests, and the scheme by them assented to would, if adopted, deprive the people of the inestimable privilege of self-government, and of their rights, liberty, and independence, rob them of their revenues, take from them the regulation of their trade and taxation, expose them to arbitrary taxation by a Legislature over which they would have no control, and in which they would possess but a nominal and entirely ineffective representation, deprive them of their invaluable fisheries, their railroads and other property, and reduce this free, happy, and hitherto self-governed province to the degraded condition of a servile dependency of Canada.

We beg most respectfully to call your Majesty's attention to the following facts:

That the scheme of confederating Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia was never submitted to the people of this Province at the polls before the 18th day September last, upwards of two months and a half after the British North American Act was, by your Majesty's Proclamation, declared to be in force, and your Majesty's faithful subjects of Nova Scotia were thereby informed that they had been subjected, without their consent, to the absolute dominion of more populous and more powerful Colonies, and had lost their liberty.

That their being no statute of the Provincial Legislature confirming or ratifying the British North American Act, and it never having been consented to nor authorized by the people, nor the consent of this Province in any other manner testified, the preamble of the Act, reciting that this Province had expressed a desire to be confederated with Canada and New Brunswick, is untrue, and when your Majesty was led to believe that this Province had expressed such a desire, a fraud and imposition were practised upon your Majesty.

That from the time that the scheme of Confederation was first devised in Canada, until it was consummated by the said Act in London, it was systematically kept from the consideration of the people of Nova Scotia at the polls, and the Executive Council and Legislature, in defiance of petitions signed by many thousands of the electors of the Province, persistently and perseveringly prevented the same from being submitted to the people.

That at the recent election the question of Confederation exclusively occupied the attention of the people, who were then for the first time enabled to express their will on a subject of the most vital importance to their happiness, and the result has proved that this Province does not desire to be annexed to Canada, and that the people repudiate the enforced provisions of the British North American Act, which for the reasons set forth in this our humble Address, we believe to be unconstitutional, and in no manner binding on them.

That the Imperial statute passed not only without the consent of the people of Nova Scotia, but against their will, has already, we regret to inform your Majesty, created wide-spread irritation and discontent, and unless the same be repealed, will, we fear, be attended with the most disastrous consequences, as the truly loyal people of this Province are fully conscious of their rights as British, set an inestimable value on their free institutions, and will not consent to the invasion of those rights, or to be subjected to the dominion of any other power than your Majesty, their gracious Sovereign and dearly beloved Queen.

We would humbly submit to your Majesty that the British American Colonies were politically allied to each other by their common relations to your Majesty and your empire, in a more peaceable and less dangerous connection than under any scheme of Colonial Confederation that could be devised, even on the fairest, wisest, and most judicious principles.

We by no means impute to your Majesty or the Imperial Legislature any intentional injustice, as we are well aware that fraud and deception were practised upon your Majesty by those who misrepresented the public sentiment of this Province, and who desired and contrived that Confederation should be forced upon Nova Scotia, without the consent and against the will of the people.

We therefore, as in duty bound, inform your Majesty that the people of this Province not only do not desire, but will never willingly consent, to be in any manner confederated with Canada; and relying most implicitly on your Majesty's exemplary regard for constitutional liberty, well-known love of justice, and the respect which your Majesty has ever manifested for the constitutional rights of your people, we, on behalf of the loyal people of Nova Scotia, most humbly beseech your Majesty to revoke your Royal Proclamation of the 22d day of May last, and to cause the British North American Act to be repealed, as far as it affects the rights and liberty of this ever loyal Province.

(No. 107.)

Duke of BUCKINGHAM AND CHANDOS to Viscount MONCK.

MY LORD,

* Page 5.

I DULY received the Address to the Queen from the House of Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia, contained in your lordship's despatch, No. 42,* of the 14th of March, representing that they object to the measure of confederation by which the Province has been joined with Canada and New Brunswick, and praying that, so far as regards Nova Scotia, the Act of the Imperial Parliament effecting the union may be repealed.

I have also had an interview with Mr. Joseph Howe, Mr. William Annand, Mr. Troop, and Mr. Smith, being the deputation who were appointed by the Executive Council of Nova Scotia to visit this country in order to explain and support the representations offered against confederation.

I have the honour to inform you that I have laid the Address of the House of Assembly before the Queen, and that Her Majesty received with much satisfaction the assurances which it contains of their unabated loyalty and attachment to Her person and government. The Queen regrets to learn that any dissatisfaction should have been caused amongst her faithful subjects in Nova Scotia by the measure of Confederation adopted by the Imperial Parliament, and assented to by the Crown, but Her Majesty trusts that the objections which have been expressed may admit of removal.

I can assure your lordship that the subject of the Address has engaged the earnest consideration of Her Majesty's Confidential Advisers. They are well aware that the inhabitants of Nova Scotia have always been distinguished by a sentiment, honourable alike to the Colony and to this country, of attachment to the British Crown and Government, and they are anxious to promote the contentment of a people so justly entitled to consideration. But the magnitude of the interests at stake renders it a duty not to shrink from examining fully the grounds of the complaints which have been adduced; and if it should prove that some of them are mistaken and others removable, I should indulge the hope that a different view of the subject will be ultimately taken.

The leading complaints appear to be reducible to two:—First, that confederation was accomplished without properly consulting the Province; and secondly, that the results may be prejudicial to some of its special interests.

Now as far as regards the second of these topics, Her Majesty's Government feel that they need only draw the attention of yourself and of your Government to the points raised in the Address relative to taxation, the regulation of trade and the fisheries, as they are confident that it will be equally the wish of your Government and of the Parliament of the Dominion to relax or modify any arrangements on those subjects which may prejudice the peculiar interests of Nova Scotia, and of the maritime portion of the Dominion. No doubt can be entertained that the Parliament of the Dominion will be fully alive to both the justice and the expediency of consulting all the various interests of the territory over which its jurisdiction extends.

With respect to the evidences of the opinion of the Province, I observe that Nova Scotia was on several occasions the first of the Provinces to move the project of confederation. In 1854 it was proposed in the Legislature of Nova Scotia. In 1857 it formed one of the topics entrusted to some delegates from the Government of Nova Scotia to Her Majesty's Government. The plan was moved in Canada in 1858, but being subsequently dropped, was revived in Nova Scotia in 1861; and made the subject, in 1862, of a Circular Address from Nova Scotia to all the other Provinces.

In 1864 delegates were appointed by the Government of Nova Scotia to attend the conference at Quebec that framed the scheme on which the Act of Confederation now in force is based. As soon as that scheme was unanimously adopted by the delegates from the several Provinces, the Secretary of State remarked that the project should be submitted to the several Legislatures. Prince Edward Island declined both in 1865 and 1866, and Newfoundland never adopted the proposal. But in 1866 both Houses of the Legislature in Nova Scotia, and both Houses of the Legislature in New Brunswick, passed resolutions (of which copies are annexed to this Despatch) requesting the Governor to name delegates to arrange with the Imperial Government a scheme of union, whilst Canada had previously passed similar resolutions, of which also copies are annexed. Such were the proceedings which attested to the Government of this country, on the highest authority, the wish of the Legislatures in those Provinces.

I am advised that the Act of Confederation was duly and lawfully passed by the Imperial Parliament.

It is objected that no previous appeal was made to the people in the Provinces; but this has not been thought necessary in parallel cases. There was none, for instance, in uniting the two Canadas in 1839, although much difference of opinion existed, and in Upper Canada much close conflict in the debates. An appeal to the country was proposed in the Assembly of Upper Canada at that time, and rejected by a large majority. The same proposal was made in the late debates on confederation in Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, but in all of them was thrown out by a large majority.

NOVA

Again, it has been objected that the union was not made subject to legislative ratification by the several Legislatures. But no such course has been followed in the numerous modifications of Colonial constitutions, and in the separations and unions of colonies, which have been effected by Imperial legislation.

It does so happen, however, that after the present measure had been introduced into the Imperial Parliament, and its terms made public, it was cordially approved of by both Houses of the Legislature in Nova Scotia in their Addresses to the Governor at the opening of the session in 1867. And the same took place in New Brunswick, where the session opened after the Imperial measure had become law. Copies of the passages to which I refer are annexed.

The Provincial Governments and Legislatures in the present case, after the terms had been substantially settled, with the knowledge and approval of all, looked to the Imperial Parliament to accomplish their union. This has been done exactly in the manner requested; the neighbouring Province of New Brunswick has entered into the union, in reliance on having with it the sister Province of Nova Scotia, and vast obligations, political and commercial, have been already contracted on the faith of a measure so long discussed and so solemnly adopted.

I should do injustice to the character which Nova Scotia has always conspicuously borne of a faithful member of the general British community, if I did not add as a consideration sure to have weight with it, that the measure is believed by Her Majesty's Government to be not merely conducive to the strength and welfare of the Provinces, but also important to the interests of the whole Empire.

I have already said, that any practical regard which may be due to the special position and interests of the Province will, Her Majesty's Government are confident, be cheerfully given by the Parliament of the Dominion; but after the foregoing explanations, I trust that the Assembly and the people of Nova Scotia will not be surprised that the Queen's Government feel that they would not be warranted in advising the reversal of a great measure of State, attended by so many extensive consequences already in operation, and adopted with the previous sanction of every one of the Legislatures concerned, and with the subsequent approval of the Legislatures of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

I have, &c.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, Your Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Council of New Brunswick, in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly approach Your Majesty with the conviction that a union of all Your Majesty's British North American Colonies, based on the Resolutions adopted at the Conference of Delegates from these several Colonies, held at Quebec on the 10th day of October 1864, is an object highly to be desired, essential to their future prosperity and influence, and calculated alike to strengthen and perpetuate the ties which bind them to Your Gracious Majesty's Throne and Government, and humbly pray that Your Majesty may be pleased to cause a measure to be submitted to NOVA SCOTIA, the Imperial Parliament for the purpose of thus uniting the Colonies of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island in one Government.

EXTRACT OF ADDRESSES SUBSEQUENT TO THE INTRODUCTION OF THE IMPERIAL MEASURE.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Extract of Address of Legislative Council to the Governor on opening of the Session, dated 16th March 1867.

The success which has attended the Delegates sent by your Excellency to confer with Her Majesty's Government on the union of the North American Provinces is gratifying to the Legislative Council, and we concur with your Excellency in the belief that the union of Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, upon the terms contained in the Bill submitted by Her Majesty's Government to the Imperial Parliament will tend to increase their prosperity, and contribute to the strength and stability of those British institutions which we prize so highly.

Extract of Address of Assembly to the Governor, dated 16th March 1867.

We have learned with deep satisfaction that the efforts to affect a satisfactory union of the British North American Colonies have been so successful, and we entertain no doubt that the best interests of all these Provinces will be greatly enhanced, and their connection with the Crown and the parent state permanently secured thereby.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Extract of Address of Legislative Council, dated May 11th, 1867.

We rejoice to hear of the success which has attended the labours of the Delegates appointed to proceed to England to unite with Delegates from Canada and Nova Scotia, in arranging with the Imperial Government for the Union of British North America, and we thank your Excellency for directing the papers connected with the subject to be laid before us.

We are well assured that the people of this Province will cordially unite in giving effect to the provisions of the Act of Union, and we are confident that it will be productive of lasting benefit to New Brunswick.

Extract of Address of Assembly, dated 11th May 1867.

We are pleased to learn that the Delegates appointed to proceed to England to unite with the Delegates from Canada and Nova Scotia in arranging with the Imperial Government for the union of British North America have successfully accomplished that object; and we thank your Excellency for the assurance that the papers relating thereto will be laid before us.

We feel confident that Her Majesty's loyal subjects in New Brunswick will cheerfully unite in giving effect to the provisions of the Act for the union of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, and that, under Providence, it will be productive of lasting benefit to this Province.

ACTON S. AYRTON.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 14th December 1868.

MY LORDS have before them the Articles of Agreement entered into between the Government of Newfoundland and Mr. Inman, for the conveyance of Mails between the Port of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the Port of St. John's, Newfoundland, once each way in every four weeks during the months of January, February, and March, and once each way every two weeks during the remaining nine months in each year, for a subsidy of 9,000*l.* a year. The agreement to commence as from the 15th July 1868, and to continue in force until the expiration of a written notice of not less than 12 calendar months given at any time on or after the 1st day of July 1870, by either the Governor of Newfoundland or the Contractors.

As one half of the subsidy payable to the contractors in this case will have to be repaid by the Imperial Post Office, it appears to My Lords that although the agreement with the contractors does not strictly come within the provisions of the Resolution of the House of Commons, of 24th July 1860, in regard to Packet and Telegraphic Contracts, inasmuch as it is not a contract entered into by the Home Government, yet as the contract raises a charge on the Public Revenue for a period of years, it will be advisable that it should be brought under the cognizance of the House.

Let a copy of the Agreement entered into between the Government of Newfoundland and Mr. Inman for the conveyance of Mails between that Colony and the Colony of Nova Scotia, together with a copy of the foregoing Minute, be laid upon the Table of the House of Commons.

COPY of CONTRACT for MAIL SERVICE between Halifax, Nova Scotia, and St. John's, Newfoundland.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT made the 2nd day of October 1868, between Anthony Musgrove, Esquire, Her Majesty's Governor of Newfoundland for the time being, of the first part; William Inman, of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster, England, shipowner (which William Inman and his executors or administrators are hereinafter described as the Contractors), of the second part; and Thomas Langton Birley, of Carr Hill, Kirkham, in the county of Lancaster, Esquire, and Charles Inman, of Liverpool, aforesaid, Esquire, of the third part; Witness that the said William Inman, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth hereby covenant with the Governor of Newfoundland, his executors, administrators, successors, and assigns, Her Majesty's Governor of Newfoundland for the time being, in manner following, that is to say:—

1. The contractors will faithfully convey, or cause to be conveyed, by a good and sufficient steam vessel or steam vessels, of not less than 350 tons builders' measurement, provided with a screw propeller, and with engines of not less than 80-horse power, all Her Majesty's Mails (which designation shall, for the purposes of this contract, be considered as including all bags, boxes, or packets of letters, newspapers, books, or printed papers, and all other articles transmissible by post, without regard either to the place to which they may be addressed, or to that in which they may have originated), also all empty bags, empty boxes, and other stores and articles used or to be used in carrying on the Post Office service, which shall be sent by, or to or from the Post Office, which the Governor of Newfoundland, or any of his officers or agents shall require to be conveyed during the continuance of this contract between the port of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the port of St. John's, Newfoundland, once each way in every four weeks during the months of January, February, and March, and once each way every two weeks during the remaining nine months in each year, making in all 23 round voyages in each year; but otherwise upon such days, and at such hours as the Governor of Newfoundland shall in writing appoint (provided that such days and hours shall be so appointed as will conveniently admit of the whole service, both ways, being performed by one vessel), and shall and will, at their own costs and charges duly receive and safely deliver such Her Majesty's Mails at Halifax and St. John's respectively.

2. The contractors will, on the 15th day of July 1868, provide at the port of Liverpool, a good and sufficient steam vessel in all respects ready for sea, for conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails from Liverpool to St. John's, and such vessel shall, immediately after Her Majesty's Mails are put on board, proceed without loss of time direct to St. John's, and will, after the arrival of the said vessel at St. John's, on such days and hours as aforesaid, during the continuance of this contract, provide at the said ports of St. John's and Halifax alternately, a good and sufficient steam vessel in every respect ready for sea, for the conveyance of the said Mails between the last-mentioned ports; and such vessel shall, immediately after Her Majesty's Mails are put on board, proceed without loss of time from such one of the said ports as shall for the time being be the port of departure to the other of the said ports; and every such voyage shall be completed within the period of 72 hours; and upon the arrival of such vessel at St. John's aforesaid, it shall remain there for a space of not less than 72 hours before sailing again.

3. The vessel or vessels to be used under this contract, between the 15th day of January and the 15th day of April in every year, shall be substantially built of wood only, or shall be built of the like materials as the materials employed in building vessels belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company, being suitable for winter service.

4. Whenever the port of St. John's shall be found to be inaccessible on account of ice, Her Majesty's Mails shall be landed or embarked (as the case may be) at such port on the South West Coast of Newfoundland as shall be the

the nearest port to the said port of St. John's which shall be accessible, and shall be conveyed between such port and the said port of St. John's by land, by and at the expense of the contractors.

5. If the contractors fail to provide an efficient vessel at Halifax or St. John's aforesaid, ready to put to sea at the times so to be fixed as aforesaid, under this contract, then, and so often as the same shall happen, the contractors shall forfeit and pay unto Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the sum of 500 l.; and the contractors shall also, in like manner, forfeit and pay the further sum of 100 l. for every day after the first day during which they shall fail to provide such vessel in manner aforesaid; but so, nevertheless, that the aggregate amount of such penalties in respect of any one voyage shall not exceed the amount of such part of the subsidy as shall be the proportionate part applicable to such voyage.

6. If the duration of any voyage made in pursuance of this Agreement shall exceed the time hereinbefore provided in that behalf by a period equal to or exceeding 12 hours, then and so often as the same shall happen, the contractors shall forfeit and pay in like manner a further and additional sum of 30 l. for each complete period of 12 hours by which such voyage shall exceed the time so provided, but so that the aggregate amount of such last-mentioned additional penalties in respect of any one voyage, shall not exceed the amount of such part of the subsidy as shall be the proportionate part applicable to such voyage.

7. The payment by the contractors of any sums of money by way of penalties, shall not in any manner prejudice the right of the Governor of Newfoundland to treat the failure, if any, on the part of the contractors to provide a proper vessel at the appointed time, or to perform any voyage at or within the times hereinbefore in that behalf mentioned, as a breach of this Agreement.

8. The vessel or vessels to be employed under this Agreement shall always have comfortable accommodation for passengers and be furnished with all necessary and proper machinery, engines, apparel, furniture, stores, tackle, boats, fuel, lamps, oil, tallow, provisions, anchors, cables, fire-pumps and other proper means for extinguishing fire, lightning conductors, charts, chronometers, proper nautical instruments, and whatsoever else may be requisite for equipping the said vessel or vessels, and rendering it or them constantly efficient for the service hereby agreed to be performed; and also manned and provided with competent officers with appropriate certificates granted pursuant to the Act or Acts of Parliament in force for the time being relative to the granting certificates of officers in the merchant service, and with a sufficient number of efficient engineers, and a sufficient crew of able seamen and other men; and the Governor of Newfoundland for the time being shall have authority and liberty, whenever he may deem it requisite, to cause a survey to be made by any competent person or persons of any of the said vessels, and the hulls, machinery, and equipments thereof, upon giving notice, in writing, to the commander for the time being of the vessel about to be examined of such his intention, so as to be satisfied that such vessel is in all respects capable and fitted for the service to be performed under this contract.

9. The Governor of Newfoundland shall, subject to the provisions contained in Clause 1 of this Agreement, have power from time to time to alter the days and hours of departure from each port so to be appointed by him as aforesaid, upon giving three months' written notice to the contractors; and shall also have power by a written order delivered to the master or commander of any vessel employed by the contractors under this contract, to delay the departure of such vessel from either port for any period not exceeding 24 hours.

10. A separate and secure place, of sufficient size protected from leakage, and under lock and key, shall be provided in such steam vessel or vessels for the deposit and safe custody of Her Majesty's Mails, and the place so provided shall be subject to the approval of the Governor of Newfoundland for the time being, or of such person as he shall appoint to inspect and approve the same, and the masters or commanders of such vessel or vessels, shall take due care of, and the contractors shall be responsible for the receipt and delivery of the said mails, and each of such masters or commanders shall make the usual declaration or declarations required, or which may hereafter be required by the Governor of Newfoundland in such and similar cases, and furnish such journal returns and information to, and perform such services as the Governor of Newfoundland or his agents may require; and every such master, or commander, or officer duly authorised by him, having the charge of mails, shall immediately, on the arrival at Halifax or St. John's of such vessel or vessels respectively, deliver all mails into the hands of the Postmaster or such other person, at such places respectively, as the Governor of Newfoundland shall appoint to receive the same.

11. In the event of any steam vessel being lost or destroyed by fire, tempest, or any other casualty, or requiring repair during the continuance of this contract, the contractors shall provide without any unnecessary delay and within such reasonable time as may be required by the Governor of Newfoundland, another good and sufficient steam vessel, and shall convey Her Majesty's Mails in the meantime in a good and sufficient sailing vessel or vessels to be provided by them, to be approved of by the Governor of Newfoundland; but such sailing vessel or vessels shall not be bound to complete the said voyages in a more limited period than the usual and average period which sailing vessels occupy in making similar voyages at the season of the year at which the said voyages respectively shall take place.

12. The contractors and all commanding and other officers of the vessel or vessels which may be employed in the performance of this contract, and all agents, seamen, and servants of the contractors shall at all times during the continuance of this contract punctually attend to the orders and directions of the Governor of Newfoundland, as to the mode, time and place of embarking and disembarking mails.

13. The contractors shall not receive, or take or permit, or suffer to be received or taken on board such vessel or vessels, any letters for conveyance other than such as shall be contained in Her Majesty's Mails, save and except such letters as are not by law required to pass through the post office, nor any mails for conveyance on behalf of any colony or foreign country, without the consent of the Governor of Newfoundland, and the whole postage of every mail shall under all circumstances be at his disposal; and in case of any such default respectively, the contractors shall be liable to be proceeded against for a breach of this Agreement.

14. The contractors shall not convey in the vessel or vessels employed under this Agreement any nitro-glycerine or any other article which shall have been legally declared specially dangerous.

15. If on the determination of this Agreement any vessel or vessels shall have started, or shall start, or ought to have started with the mails, in conformity with this Agreement, such voyage or voyages shall be continued and performed, and the mails be delivered and received during the same, as if this Agreement had remained in force with regard to any such vessel or vessels and services; and with respect to such vessel or vessels and services, as last aforesaid, this Agreement shall be considered as having terminated when such vessel or vessels shall have reached the port or place of destination.

16. The Governor of Newfoundland is hereby authorised to delegate any of his powers under this Agreement to such persons as he may deem fit to exercise them.

17. The contractors, when so required, shall be bound to convey from any one port of departure or call to any other such port any number of Government passengers not exceeding two of the first class with their wives, children, and servants; two of the second class with their wives and children, and eight of the third class; such passengers, with their families, to be treated in no respect, whether as regards food, cabin, or other accommodation, or aught else, in a way inferior to that of ordinary passengers of the same class, or that required by the Regulations of Her Majesty's Transport Service. The messing of the first and second class Government passengers to include each day an imperial pint of good sound bottled or draught ale or beer; and, that of the first class, in addition, an imperial pint of good foreign wine, either port or white. The several classes of passengers to mess in separate places. Medical attendance, attendance, medicine, and medical comforts, to be provided, as also, mess utensils and fittings, cooking utensils, articles for table use, and mess places, fuel, lights, requisite articles of bedding, and all other necessities. Third class passengers to have hammocks or bunks (subject to the approval of such persons as the Governor of Newfoundland may appoint to approve the same) placed between decks.

18. The passage money for Government passengers or their families to be the same as that charged by the contractors for ordinary passengers of a similar kind, and to include all the requisites specified in the 17th clause of this Agreement, and the freight of baggage according to Government scale, as shown in the Regulations of Her Majesty's Transport Service. Whenever any alterations of rates for ordinary passengers shall be made, the contractors shall immediately apprise the Governor of Newfoundland and the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty of such alterations.

19. Returns of the embarkation and disembarkation of all Government passengers shall be furnished by the contractors to the Director of Transport Services, immediately after each departure and arrival of the said vessel or vessels.

20. The contractors shall apply for the payments for the passage money of Government passengers by invoices, according to a form to be obtained from the office of the Director of Transport Services for Newfoundland; and such payments shall be made upon the production to the said Director of the orders for the passages, together with a certificate under the hand of the commanding officer of the said vessel, specifying the number of the third class passengers (men, women, and children) conveyed, with the ages and sexes of the latter, and stating the periods during which these have been regularly supplied while on board with provisions; and also a certificate under the hand of each first and second class passenger of his or her having been landed at the place of destination; and of having been properly accommodated and messed during the voyage, and specifying the dates from and to which they were so messed, computed from the first to the last dinner meal; save that the contractors shall not forfeit the passage money of any such passenger who shall improperly or unreasonably refuse to give such certificate.

21. The passage money for the wives and families of commissioned and civil officers, when not ordered to be conveyed at the public expense, shall be paid to the contractors by the officers themselves, and in such case the accommodation to be furnished to them shall not be regulated by the provisions of this contract.

22. In all cases where an officer in the civil, naval, or military service of Her Majesty, who may not be entitled to a passage at the public expense, shall require a passage on board any of the vessels employed in the performance of this contract, the contractors shall be bound, when they have room, to provide such passage for such officers in preference to ordinary passengers, and to charge no higher rate for such passage than is chargeable for ordinary passengers; Provided that the contractors shall not be bound, for the purposes aforesaid, to commit any breach of contract entered into with ordinary passengers before such officers shall have engaged their passage; and the accommodation to be furnished to such officers shall not otherwise than as aforesaid be regulated by the provisions of this contract.

23. The contractors shall receive on board each of the vessels employed in the performance of this contract, and shall convey on behalf of the Admiralty, any small packages which may be ordered for conveyance; and also (on receiving from the Governor of Newfoundland, or his officers or agents, or from the British naval officer in command of the station, two days' previous notice,) shall receive on board any naval or other stores not exceeding five tons weight at any one time in any one vessel, and shall convey and deliver such small packages and stores at the lowest rate of freight charged by the contractors for private goods; immediate notice being given to the Governor of Newfoundland and the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, of any alteration in such rate of freight; and the contractors shall in all cases be responsible for the custody and safe and speedy delivery of the packages and stores.

24. Except where otherwise specified, none of the duties hereinbefore provided to be performed by the contractors, shall give them any claim to remuneration beyond the general subsidy.

25. All and every the sum of money hereby stipulated to be paid by the contractors unto Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, shall be considered as stipulated or ascertained damages, whether any damage has or has not been sustained by reason of the breach for which the penalty may be levied; and the amount may be deducted by the Governor of Newfoundland out of any moneys payable, or which may thereafter become payable to the contractors, or, at his discretion, the payment thereof may be enforced with full costs of suit.

26. This Agreement shall commence as from the 15th day of July 1868, and shall continue in force until the expiration of a written notice of not less than twelve calendar months, given at any time on or after the 1st day of July 1870, and by either the Governor of Newfoundland or the contractors.

27. And in consideration of the due and faithful performance by the contractors of all the services hereby contracted to be by them performed, the Governor of Newfoundland doth hereby covenant that there shall be paid to the contractors, so long as they perform the whole of the said services in the manner and with such vessel or vessels as are herein respectively provided, at the rate of the sum of 9,000 l. per annum, payable quarterly at the office of the Receiver General at St. John's aforesaid, on the 1st days of January, March, July, and October, in every year; the first of such payments to be made on the 1st day of October 1868.

28. All notices or directions which the Governor of Newfoundland, his officers, agents, or others, are hereby authorised to give to the contractors, their officers, servants, or agents, other than any notice of termination of this contract, may at the option of the Postmaster General, his officers, agents, or others, either be delivered to the master of the said vessel or vessels respectively, or any other officer or agent of the contractors in the charge or management of any vessel employed in the performance of this agreement, or left for the contractors at their office or last known office in Liverpool; and any notices or directions so given or left shall be binding on the contractors: Provided always, that any notice of termination of this contract shall be served on the contractors, their officers, servants, or agents, at their office or last known office in Liverpool.

29. The contractors shall not assign, underlet, or otherwise part with or dispose of this Agreement or any part thereof without the consent of the Governor of Newfoundland, in writing, for that purpose.

30. In case of the breach of the 29th clause of this contract, or in case of a great or habitual breach of the contract of any other kind, the Governor of Newfoundland shall have power, and that without previous notice, to terminate the contract; and the contractors shall not be entitled to any compensation by reason of such breach or any prior breach of this Agreement, nor shall such termination of the contract interfere with the completion of any voyage which may have been commenced at the time of such determination.

31. If at any time during the continuance of this Agreement, or after the determination thereof, any dispute shall arise between the parties hereto, or their executors, administrators, or successors respectively, concerning any breach or alleged breach by or on the part of the contractors of this Agreement, or the sufficiency of any such breach, to justify the Governor of Newfoundland in putting an end to the same, or concerning any of the covenants, matters, or things herein contained, or in anywise relating thereto, and notwithstanding the power herein contained to determine this Agreement, and any execution or attempted execution of such power, such dispute shall be referred to two arbitrators, one to be chosen from time to time by the Governor of Newfoundland, and the other by the contractors; and if such arbitrators should at any time or times not agree in the matter or question referred to them; then such question in difference shall be referred by them to an umpire, to be chosen by such arbitrators before they proceed with the reference to them, and the joint and concurrent award of the said arbitrators, or the separate award of the said umpire when the said arbitrators cannot agree, shall be binding and conclusive upon both parties. And this Agreement may be made a rule of court by either of the said parties hereto.

32. And lastly, for the due and faithful performance of all and singular the covenants, conditions, provisoes, clauses, articles, and agreements, hereinbefore contained, which, on the part and behalf of the contractors, are or ought to be observed, performed, fulfilled, and kept, the said William Inman, Thomas Langton Birley, and Charles Inman, do hereby bind themselves, their heirs, executors, and administrators, and each of them doth hereby bind himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, unto our Sovereign Lady the Queen, in the sum of 3,000 l. of lawful money of the United Kingdom, to be paid to our said Lady the Queen, her heirs and successors, by way of stipulated or ascertained damages, hereby agreed upon between the Governor of Newfoundland and the said William Inman, Thomas Langton Birley, and Charles Inman, in case of the failure on the part of the contractors in the due execution of this Agreement or any part thereof. In witness whereof the said parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

My Lord,

I SENT a message this morning, by the cable, in answer to your telegraphic inquiry of yesterday. It stated that the Government of the Dominion would gladly give the same facilities to the immigrants, proposed to be sent out by the Admiralty, as to others arriving in Canada.

It is desirable, however, that no undue expectations should be raised as to the extent of those facilities.

There is an emigrant tax imposed by law for the support of emigrant hospitals, and the protection of the emigrant himself and his family. This, probably, Parliament would allow the Ministers to give up in the present case.

An application to that effect will be duly submitted for Parliamentary sanction.

The Government agent will meet the ships at Quebec, and give the best advice and assistance as to destination and the most available fields of labour. This is about all that the Dominion Government can do.

The Government of the Province of Ontario make free grants of land in some districts, but such grants will, I fancy, be of little value to artisans who want immediate employment as such.

In the spring the men will, probably, find employment on the Intercolonial Railway, until they can get engagements in their several trades.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Downing-street, 10 April 1869.

I ENCLOSE the copy of a letter which I have received from the Emigration Commissioners, on a matter which formed the subject of my telegram of 8th instant.

It appears improbable, on inquiry, that anything like the expected number of emigrants will be sent out. Probably not more than three or four hundred souls will accept the offer made them.

It is also at present intended to send these people, not on the 20th instant, but by a ship which will leave a few days later, after I shall have received from you the explanation which you promise in your telegraphic despatch.

The immediate return of the ships being absolutely necessary, I need hardly urge on you the expediency of taking steps to secure the prompt disembarkation of the emigrants.

I shall keep you informed of the numbers and occupations of the probable emigrants, in order that you may have every facility which I can give you for ensuring their speedy employment after their arrival.

I have, &c.

DOCKYARD ARTIZANS, &c. ON ARRIVAL AT QUEBEC. 5

Enclosures in No. 6.

Sir,

Emigration Board, 5 April 1869.

I HAVE the honour to enclose herewith, for Earl Granville's information, the copy of a letter we have received from the Admiralty, stating that the Lords Commissioners have consented to sanction the conveyance to Quebec, in transports going there on public service, of 1,000 or 1,500 of the artizans recently discharged from Her Majesty's Dockyards. Their Lordships accordingly request us to enter into communication with Sir S. Robinson and Admiral Mends, with a view to make the best arrangements for the conveyance of the people.

We have lost no time in communicating with Sir S. Robinson and Admiral Mends, and we learn from the latter that two of the transports, which it is hoped will be sufficient to carry the whole number of people, will be dispatched from Portsmouth on the 20th instant. We have not yet received from Sir S. Robinson the list of the persons whom it is proposed to send, but we would submit that the Government of Canada should be at once apprised of the intention to send these people, and that they should be requested to give the necessary instructions to the emigration agent at Quebec for receiving them, and forwarding them to the places where their labour may be most in demand.

2 April.

W. G. Romaine, Esq., C.B., to Mr. Walcott.

Gentlemen,

Admiralty, 2 April 1869.

I AM commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you that, having been in communication with the Board of Treasury on the subject of the distress which prevails at the dockyard towns, partly occasioned by the large discharge of artizans from the dockyards during the summer of 1868, my Lords have received a letter from that Board, concurring in a proposed arrangement for conveying to Quebec, in three of Her Majesty's transport ships (which were to have proceeded there empty), during the approaching spring, from 1,000 to 1,500 statute adults selected from the discharged workmen.

The Treasury having also approved of this service being conducted in concert with you, my Lords request you will be good enough to put yourselves in communication with Vice Admiral Sir R. S. Robinson, the Controller of the Navy, who superintends the dockyards, and with Rear Admiral Mends, the Director of Transports, with a view to the best arrangements being made for the selection and conveyance of these people.

My Lords desire me to add, that the Treasury have informed them that they will be prepared to provide in the Civil Estimates for any expenditure in connection with this service which it may be found necessary to incur.

My Lords, however, hope that this will not be considerable, especially as the sum of 1,000*l.* will be placed at their disposal from another source for this emigration.

The Commissioners,
Colonial Land and Emigration Office.

Lieutenant Governor Wilmot to the Earl Granville, K.G.

Government House, New Brunswick,
13 April 1869.

(Received, 29 April 1869.)

My Lord,

I HAD the honour to receive a telegram from your Lordship on the 8th inst., and after consultation with my Council, forwarded the answer, which you have no doubt received.

During the next summer there will be several hundreds of miles of the Intercolonial Railway in process of building in this Province between the Nova Scotia line and the river Metapedia.

There are some districts of ungranted lands along that line of very superior quality, and which may be had by such of the artizans and labourers on the railway as may wish to settle, upon terms almost amounting to a gift. Lots of 50 acres each may be had for actual settlement, upon the grantee working for five days in each of three successive years upon the roads leading thereto, or upon payment of 10 dollars, equal to about two guineas sterling; or lots of 100 acres each may be had for double the above amount of road work or money; so that putting the day's work on the railway at the probable value of one dollar, 10 days will pay for 50 acres, 20 days for 100 acres; and when the settler has cleared and prepared for crop a couple of acres and erected a comfortable log house, he may, with industry and sobriety, succeed in establishing for himself and family a comfortable home, as thousands have done in this Province hitherto.
196. five

Some of our best wheat-producing lands lie along the Bay Chaleur in the vicinity of the Intercolonial Railway, while the bay itself abounds with fish.

Parties desirous of emigrating may come to St. John from Liverpool by steam or sailing vessels, and be forwarded thence by railway and steamers to any parts along the line where their services may be required, or they may come out by sailing vessels, to Richibucto, Miramichi, or Dalhousie, at low rates.

The Intercolonial Railway, when opened, will secure to the north-shore settlers a good market for all their surplus produce, and will therefore lead to very extensive cultivation in a part of the Province which has hitherto made but little progress in agriculture.

Wheat, oats, barley, peas, turnips, potatoes, carrots, and other field crops may be grown throughout the whole district; and I know of no other part of the province which holds out a better promise for industrious settlers.

The privileges with respect to grants of land above mentioned are not confined to those who may work upon the railway, but are extended to all persons desirous of settling in the Province.

Enclosure in No. 9.

The Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, to the Governor General.

Sir,

Toronto, 13 April 1869.

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of copies of cable telegrams, and of a letter from your Excellency to the Colonial Secretary, dated the 8th instant, and having reference to the reception in Canada of artizans discharged from the dockyards in England.

Upon receipt of the papers in question, I lost no time in bringing the matter before the members of my Cabinet.

The subject is one which has recently received much consideration at our hands, and I have this day confirmed the appointment of a special commissioner of emigration, who will at once proceed to England to fulfil his instructions relative to the promulgation there of such intelligence respecting this Province as will be of use to intending emigrants and to societies formed for the purpose of assisting them.

Mr. White, the gentleman appointed, is in every way qualified for the discharge of the task allotted to him. A long connection with the press and a considerable experience in public speaking will be of great service to him in communicating the fund of general information which he possesses respecting the resources of this Province.

The Government of Ontario cordially concurs in the views enunciated in the telegram and letter addressed by your Excellency to the Colonial Secretary, not dissenting from the suggestion that free grants of land may not be what will at first best satisfy the wants of the artizans only newly arrived.

I should, at the same time, observe that with a view of doing everything in its power subsidiary to the efforts now being made in England to further the cause of emigration, the Government of this Province has addressed a circular to the municipal council of every city, town, township, and village in Ontario, asking for a return of the probable number of labourers and mechanics which could be absorbed by each, the several trades and occupations to be specified.

When this information has been obtained, it will be placed in the hands of the agent who may be appointed to superintend the disembarkation of emigrants, and I have no doubt that in this Province alone employment can be found for any reasonable number of skilled workmen who may be brought to these shores by the action of the Imperial Government, which is the subject of the correspondence forwarded to me by your Excellency.

Quebec, 7th May 1869.

The emigrants are landed “all well,” and I have much pleasure in reporting, that from the time they have been on board the “Crocodile” their conduct has been everything that could be desired, and no body of men could have given less trouble.

I may here state that the chaplain and surgeon, with the paymaster and other officers, have been unremitting in their zeal and desire to carry out their Lordships’ instructions, and the emigrants have not been remiss in expressing their gratitude for the kindness shown them.

On their landing to-day I have supplied them with the same rations issued to the troops on their passage to Suez from Alexandria, as the agent informed me that they had a long and cold journey before them. I also kept them on board last night to enable them to have a comfortable night’s rest, instead of placing them in the emigration shed on shore, where there is no convenience or proper accommodation for decent families.

Yesterday, being a general holiday, prevented the emigration agent from procuring railway transportation for them.

THE emigrants have behaved well, and I am happy to inform their Lordships that the passage being a smooth one, they have experienced little or no discomfort.

P.S.—The emigrants disembarked this morning. Before leaving they expressed themselves much pleased, and very grateful for the passage.

I HAVE the honour to inclose herewith, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the copy of a letter addressed to us by the emigration agent at Quebec, describing the arrangements adopted for forwarding the emigrants by Her Majesty's ship "Crocodile," to Toronto, and stating that immediate employment had been found for them without difficulty.

EXTRACT of LETTER from Government.

Immigration Office, Quebec, 21 May 1869.

THE emigrants were transhipped on board the Richelieu Company's steamer "Montreal," on the afternoon of the 7th instant, and dispatched to Toronto.

In order as far as possible to obviate any inconvenience or complaint likely to occur on the road, I deemed it prudent to allow a subordinate officer of this department to accompany them, so that their wants were properly attended to on the journey, and they arrived in Toronto in good health and spirits on the morning of the 10th instant, due preparation having been previously made by the agent there to receive them.

Owing to press of business, the Toronto agent, Mr. Donaldson, has not yet had time to favour me with a full report of his proceedings, but from information recently forwarded to me I learn that these people were judiciously distributed amongst the rural districts in his neighbourhood, and that no difficulty was experienced in obtaining immediate employment for them.

COPY of a DESPATCH from Governor General Viscount Monck to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

Government House, Ottawa, Canada,
7 March 1868.

(Received, 23 March 1868.)
(Answered, No. 69, 13 April 1868, page 9.)

My Lord Duke,

I HAVE the honour to transmit for your Grace's information and favourable consideration an approved Minute of the Privy Council of Canada on the subject of certain resolutions adopted at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Victoria, British Columbia, with reference to the desire of that Colony to be incorporated with the Canadian Union.

I have &c.

No. 1.
Governor General
Viscount Monck to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.
7 March 1868.

6 March 1868.

Enclosure in No. 1.

COPY of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by his Excellency the Governor General on the 6th day of March 1868.

Enclosure in No. 1.

THE Committee have had under consideration a memorandum, dated 5th March 1868, from the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, stating that certain resolutions on the subject of union with Canada, adopted at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Victoria, British Columbia, on the 29th of January last, transmitted through the Hon. S. L. Tilley to the Secretary of State for Canada, were, on the the third instant, referred to a Committee of the Hon. the Privy Council, and by the Council referred to him, the Minister of Public Works, for immediate Report.

That he has read and duly considered the purport of these resolutions, the circumstances under which they were passed, and the action which ought to be taken by the Government of Canada thereupon.

That it appears from these resolutions and the memorial of the Committee appointed at the public meeting, which accompanies them, that the Legislative Council of British Columbia on the 18th of March 1867, unanimously adopted a resolution requesting his Excellency Governor Seymour "to take measures without delay to secure the admission of British Columbia into the Canadian Confederacy on fair and equitable terms."

That it appears further that neither the people of British Columbia, nor the Government of Canada have been apprised of any measures that may have been taken by the Government of British Columbia, in pursuance of the resolution of the Legislative Council.

That

DOMINION OF
CANADA.

That the resolutions adopted at the public meeting of the 29th January which was called and presided over by the Mayor of Victoria, the chief city of the Colony, and the statements of the memorial signed by the Mayor and by members of the Legislature and others, leave little room to doubt that the people of that Colony are willing and anxious that it should be admitted into union with Canada if the terms of admission can be agreed upon.

The Minister of Public Works calls attention to the 146th section of "The British North America Act" which applies to the case of British Columbia in express terms. That it will be seen the resolution of the Legislative Council was passed before the British North America Act came into force, and that it did not specify the terms of admission which the Council asked the Government to secure. That it is evident, therefore, that further action is necessary by the Legislature of British Columbia before admission can take place under the provisions of the Imperial Act.

That it is suggested in the memorial of the Mayor and other citizens of Victoria that the Legislature of the Colony, being largely composed of officials, is not so zealous for Confederation as the people whose opinions and wishes it ought to represent.

The Minister submits that, considering the peculiar constitution of the Legislature and Government of British Columbia, and that notwithstanding the resolution of the Legislative Council in March of last year, and the resolutions of public meetings and the expression of opinion through the press of the Colony, both before and since the Act of Confederation, in favor of union with Canada, no official communication on the subject from British Columbia has reached this Government, he would recommend that your Excellency communicate to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham a copy of the memorial and resolutions referred to, and request his Grace to instruct Governor Seymour to take such steps as may be deemed proper to move the Legislative Council of British Columbia to further action in terms of the Imperial Act. He further recommends that his Grace be informed that the Government of Canada will be prepared to submit to Parliament a proposal for the admission of British Columbia into the union in the expectation that the Imperial Government will lose no time in transferring the intervening North Western Territory to the jurisdiction of the Canadian Government.

(Certified)

Wm. H. Lee, Clerk, P. C.

To His Excellency the Governor General and the Honourable the Queen's Privy Council of Canada.

The Memorial of the undersigned, a Committee appointed at a Public Meeting of the Citizens of Victoria, B.C., held on 29th January 1868,

Respectfully sheweth,

1. That on the 18th of March last, a resolution was unanimously passed by the Legislative Council of this Colony, asking his Excellency, Governor Seymour, to take measures without delay, to secure the admission of British Columbia into the Canadian Confederacy on fair and equitable terms.

2. That a public meeting was held at the same time in Victoria, expressing concurrence with the action of the Legislative Council.

3. That the people of Cariboo, the next most populous and influential portion of the Colony, held in December a highly enthusiastic meeting, and unanimously passed resolutions in favour of immediately joining the Dominion of Canada.

4. That the "Daily British Colonist," the leading newspaper of the Colony, has, and does, strenuously support confederation. The "Cariboo Sentinel," a paper of local influence, pursues a similar course. The "British Columbian," a semi-weekly, published at New Westminster, regarded as somewhat subject to Government influence, has expressed itself in favour of confederation, but not very earnestly. The "Columbian" has only a local influence. The "Examiner," a semi-weekly, published also at New Westminster, advocates confederation. The "Morning News," a weekly, published in Victoria, the only other paper in the Colony, is in favour of annexation to the United States, failing that, supports confederation. The only paper that circulates through the whole Colony is the "Colonist," and represents the general feeling of the country on confederation.

5. That public opinion throughout the Colony, so far as we can learn, is overwhelmingly in favour of confederation.

6. That there is a small party in favour of annexation to the United States, and if it were practicable or possible, their number would be largely increased.

7. There is a small party, other than annexationists, who are opposed to confederation.

8. Nearly all the office holders in the Colony are allied to the latter party.

9. The

WITH THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

DOMINION OF
CANADA.

9. The total number of those opposed to confederation on fair and equitable terms, is numerically small, but supported by the office holders, they may exert a good deal of resistance to the popular will.

10. That from information in a telegram from Ottawa, dated 22nd January 1868, we learn, that Governor Seymour has not made any propositions to the Dominion Government respecting our admission as was expected.

11. That the Legislative Council, the only Legislative body in the Colony, is made up of a majority consisting of heads of departments, gold commissioners, magistrates, and others, subject to Government influence, and cannot be relied upon to urge on confederation as it ought to be at the present juncture.

12. That the only popular institutions in the Colony are the city councils of Victoria and New Westminster.

13. That, therefore, the people of this Colony are really without the means of expressing and carrying out their wishes through the Legislature.

14. We, therefore, representing as we do the views of the people of this the most populous and influential section of the Colony, and acting in unison with the general and expressed wishes of the people throughout the Colony, would respectfully ask the Government of the Dominion to take immediate steps to bring this Colony into the Dominion, by telegraphing or communicating with Her Majesty's Government, to issue instructions, with as little delay as possible, to Governor Seymour, or otherwise to conclude negotiations as to the terms of our admission.

15. We feel that, without the help and support of the Government of the Dominion, the time will be remote when this Colony will be admitted into the Dominion, but with the aid which we solicit, we believe that there is no obstacle to prevent our admission by the 1st of July next.

16. We would further represent for the information of the Government of the Dominion, that the terms of admission which would be acceptable to the people of this Colony would be:—

1. Canada to become liable for the entire public debt of this Colony, estimated at $1,500,000.

2. Canada to provide for federal officers and services.

3. To grant a sufficient fixed subsidy, and per capita subsidy, to insure the support of the local Government, in addition to the powers of taxation reserved to Provincial Governments in "British North America Act."

4. Representation in the Senate and Commons of Canada.

5. The construction of a trans-continental waggon-road, from Lake Superior to the head of navigation on the Lower Fraser, within two years after the time of admission. This is regarded as an essential condition.

6. Popular representative institutions, insuring responsible control over the Government.

17. Hereafter we hope to communicate further information. In the meantime we confidently trust the Government of the Dominion will cheerfully aid the people of this Colony in furthering their wishes for immediate admission into the confederation.

18. Enclosed we send you a copy of requisition to the Mayor to call a public meeting, and also resolutions passed at said meeting, held on the 29th January 1868.

We have, &c.

and Chairman of Committee.

A. De Cosmos, Member of Legislative Council.

J. H. Powell, M.P., Member for the City of Victoria, of the late Legislative

REQUISITION.

To his Worship the Mayor of Victoria,

We, the undersigned citizens of Victoria, would respectfully request your worship to call a public meeting in the theatre, on an early day, for the purpose of inquiring of his Excellency the Governor what progress has been made in the negotiations respecting the admission

And 55 others.

REPLY.

Gentlemen,

Victoria, 27 Jan. 1868.

In reply to your numerous signed requisition asking me to call a public meeting for the purpose named therein, I have great pleasure in acceding to your request, and, therefore, appoint Wednesday evening next, at half-past seven o'clock, for said meeting.

I have, &c.

(signed) James Trimble,
Mayor of Victoria.

To Messrs. Geo. J. Findlay.
J. W. Powell.
Lowe Bros.
Robert Wallace.
Lumley Franklin.
J. R. Stewart.
J. H. Turner & Co., and others.

Mr. De Cosmos then offered the following Preamble and Resolution:—

WHEREAS we recognise in the successful consolidation of Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, into one great Government, constituting a new Nationality, the hand of destiny pointing unerringly to the speedy consolidation of all British North America: And whereas the recent action of the Canadian Parliament in asking the Imperial Government to transfer the North-West territory to the Dominion, making British Columbia its western boundary, removes all obstacles of a territorial character to our admission into the Confederacy:

And whereas the Legislative Council at its last session unanimously passed an address to the Governor, asking him to apply to the Government of Canada to admit this Colony into the Dominion; and whereas information respecting such admission has not, as yet, been communicated to the public through the Legislative Councillors as was expected:

Resolved, That we deem it expedient that steps should be taken to conclude negotiations with the Government of Canada for the immediate admission of this Colony into the Dominion, on fair and equitable terms; and that an essential condition to such admission should be the construction by the Dominion Government, within two years, of a trans-continental waggon-road, connecting Lake Superior and the head of navigation on the Lower Fraser.

“When put to vote, the resolution in favour of confederation, with the Overland waggon-road as an essential condition, was successful amid the wildest enthusiasm. Only about 20 hands were raised in opposition. A resolution, appointing a committee to wait upon the Governor to ascertain what progress had been made in the matter, and to take steps to further negotiations for the union of this Colony with the Dominion, was unanimously adopted, and the meeting broke up with three cheers for the Mayor.”—Colonist.

Mr. Seelye offered the following Resolution, which was seconded and carried unanimously:—

Resolved, That a committee of six, including the Mayor, be appointed by the chair, to wait on his Excellency the Governor, and urge the adoption and carrying out of the views of this meeting, and that such committee be authorised to transact any other business that they may deem expedient to further the cause of confederation.

The Mayor appointed Messrs. Lumley Franklin, A. De Cosmos, Dr. Powell, H. E. Seelye, Robert Wallace, and G. J. Findlay, who, with his Worship added, completes the number called for in the resolutions.

Three cheers were given for the Mayor, and three for confederation, after which the vast assemblage separated, and thus ended the most enthusiastic meeting in favour of confederation ever held here.

The presiding member resumed the chair.

The committee rose, and the chairman handed in the following resolution, which, having been put to the Council, was carried unanimously, and it was—

Resolved, That this Council is of opinion that at this juncture of affairs in British North America, east of the Rocky Mountains, it is very desirable that his Excellency be respectfully requested to take such steps, without delay, as may be deemed by him best adapted to insure the admission of British Columbia into the Confederation on fair and equitable terms, this Council being confident that in advising this step they are expressing the views of the colonists generally.

My Lord Duke,

WITH reference to my Despatch, No. 126,* of this date, I have the honour to place in a separate despatch, with less reserve, a few remarks on the desire of the people of this Colony to join the Eastern Confederation.

* Page 11.

2. A resolution was passed by the Legislative Council in favour of negotiations being entered into with a view to a union of all the British possessions in North America.3. Though the motion passed through the Council without opposition, there was but little warmth felt in its favour. The question is obviously at present one of great difficulty. It is hard to know what benefits the Colony or the Eastern Confederacy would derive from a closer connection while the lands intervening between Canada and our frontier belong to a private company. The resolution was the expression of a despondent community longing for change.
It was felt that no harm could be done by making public the desire for amalgamation with English communities so much nearer the mother country, and that possibly some assistance might be given either by England or Canada towards the making of a road across the continent.4. When gold was discovered in British Columbia, and glowing accounts of the wealth of the country filled columns of the leading London journals, a considerable number of immigrants arrived from home, with expectations which even the vast national resources of the Colony could not satisfy. Most of those who sought their fortunes here were men unable to make their way in Europe, unequal to the labour which gold mining entails, without the business habits requisite for the trader or the capital necessary to the farmer. Many of them failed, and have thrown the blame of the failure upon other shoulders than their own. No immigrants from England now resort to this Colony. The only Englishmen who find their way hither filter to us through California, and, as adventurous Americans still visit us, the population is now becoming alien to a large extent.5. It is thought by many of those who have made this their home that the only chance of its being prosperous while a dependency of a very distant country, which helps more by advice than by the substantial aid which a young and struggling community requires, is a union with the more developed and apparently more prosperous colonies on the Atlantic. My own impression is that the main chance of keeping British Columbia English in sentiment is to furnish from home some pecuniary aid, some military assistance, or help its communications with the Dominion of Canada. Even independent of the great distance from the mother country, natural features seem to indicate its connection with the eastern lands. The Cascade Mountains on the western side of our principal gold mines and finest agricultural districts are more rugged than the Rocky Mountains; and Dr. Rae, the celebrated explorer, informed me that there were greater difficulties already surmounted on the line of road between Yale and Lytton in this Colony than were to be found between Lytton and the Red River settlements. The extraordinary natural difficulty of the access from the Pacific to our best gold mines and agricultural districts seem to point to an eastern connection.6. I feel that I must necessarily write very vaguely on this subject. It is for me merely to state the wish of the people of this Colony and my own for a fusion or an intimate connection with the Eastern Confederation. It rests with your Grace to see if that wish can be carried out. Merely to join the Confederation on the condition of sending delegates to Ottawa, and receiving a Governor from the Canadian Ministry, would not satisfy the popular desire.

I HAVE the honour to submit the annexed resolution of the Legislative Council of the 24th instant.

Resolved, That this Council, while confirming the vote of last Session in favour of the general principles of the desirability of the union of this Colony with the Dominion of Canada to accomplish the consolidation of British interests and institutions in North America, are still without sufficient information and experience of the practical working of confederation in the North American Provinces to admit of their defining the terms on which such an union would be advantageous to the local interests of British Columbia.

EXTRACT from Governor's Speech at Opening of Legislative Council.

Encl. 2, in No. 4.

DURING the last Session, your Honourable Council unanimously passed a resolution in favour of negotiations being entered into for the union of this Colony with the confederation which has been formed among the Eastern British Provinces on this continent. Although I could not be blind to difficulties which made me consider the resolution principally as the expression of a disheartened community, longing for change of any kind, yet the possibility alone of something arising out of it to promote an overland communication with Canada, was enough to induce me to support your resolution. I learn, in reply to my communications on the subject, that the consideration of it must, at all events, await the time when the intervening territory now under the control of the Hudson's Bay Company shall have been incorporated with the confederation."

EXTRACT from Governor's Speech at the Closing of the Legislative Council.

"I NOTICE that, while adhering to your vote of last year, in favour of confederation with Canada, you are of opinion that it is not necessary to take any further steps in the matter at present. I think your resolution a wise one. The question is by no means slumbering; but the difficulties of the project are seen clearer by those who have a wider range of vision than we can possess, and without whose material assistance our efforts would be but vain."

REFERRING to my Despatch, No. 45,* of the 14th May, I have the honour to forward to your Grace copy of a motion which was made in the Legislative Council by Mr. De Cosmos in favour of an Address to Her Majesty, on the subject of confederation with the Dominion of Canada. This motion, your Grace will see, was lost.

2. There is, however, a feeling with many persons in this Colony, that the best hopes of its progress are to be found in an intimate union with Canada. The difficulties, however, appear to me to be, in the present state of things, almost insuperable, and the advantages remote.

Confederation would, however, probably attract greater attention to this Colony than it now receives in England.

Enclosure in No. 5.

Enclosure in No. 5. PURSUANT to a deferred Order of the day, the Honourable Mr. De Cosmos moved, the Honourable Mr. Stamp seconding, the following Address to Her Majesty, on the subject of Confederation with the Dominion of Canada:—

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Members of the Legislative Council of British Columbia, in Session convened, would most respectfully represent,—

I. That in an Act passed in the thirtieth year of Your Majesty's reign, entitled "The British North America Act, 1867," provision is made for the admission of British Columbia into the Dominion of Canada.

II. That the 146th section of the said Act declares that British Columbia may be admitted into the Dominion of Canada, provided that addresses to Your Majesty, containing the terms and conditions of such admission, shall be passed by the Houses of Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of British Columbia.

III. That Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects the inhabitants of British Columbia most earnestly desire that such admission may take place without delay, on the terms and conditions hereinafter enumerated.

IV. That being fully convinced that such admission would, in a marked degree, strengthen British power and influence, and establish more firmly British institutions in your Majesty's possessions in North-west America; and generally throughout all British North America; and faithfully representing, as we do, the general and expressed wishes of the inhabitants of this Colony, we earnestly desire that such admission may take place without delay, on the terms and conditions hereinafter enumerated.

V. Therefore we, Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Members of the Legislative Council of British Columbia, humbly pray that Your Majesty may be graciously pleased to admit without delay the Colony of British Columbia into the Dominion of Canada, in accordance with the provisions of "The British North America Act, 1867," and on the terms and conditions following:

1. The limits of British Columbia, on and after admission, to be the same as at present.

2. The Dominion of Canada to become liable for the public debt of British Columbia, and make the same a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, the said debt not to exceed one million five hundred thousand dollars ($1,500,000).

3. British Columbia to be liable for such portion of her funded and floating debts as may exceed the said 1,500,000 dollars.

4. The

4. The Dominion of Canada to pay annually out of her Consolidated Revenue Fund, in semi-annual advances, to British Columbia for the support of her local Government and Legislature, the sum of 110,000 dollars, and also an annual grant in aid of the local Government of British Columbia, equal to 80 cents per head of the population of British Columbia, the minimum number of said population, including Indians, not to be estimated at less than 40,000 at any time, and the increase of population after admission to be the increase of population other than Indians, and the said increase of population to be determined by census or otherwise, as may from time to time be expedient.

5. All Crown lands, mines, minerals, and royalties situate in British Columbia at the time of admission, and all sums of money then due or payable, or that may afterwards accrue for such Crown lands, mines, minerals, and royalties, to belong to British Columbia, and be under the exclusive control of its Government and Legislature.

6. All stocks, cash, bankers' balances, and securities for money belonging to British Columbia at the time of admission to be the property of British Columbia.

7. All public works and property of British Columbia at the time of admission to belong to the Colony of British Columbia.

8. The Dominion of Canada to construct, within three years after admission of British Columbia, a good overland waggon road extending from Lake Superior, Ontario, to the head of navigation on Lower Fraser River, British Columbia, and to commence the construction of the same through the Rocky Mountains within one year after admission.

9. The Imperial Government to guarantee a loan to construct the said overland road, if deemed expedient.

10. British Columbia to be represented in the Senate by not less than two Members, and in the Commons by not less than three Members, at any time.

11. At the first election of representatives to the Commons, and until otherwise provided by the Parliament of Canada, the Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia to proclaim what shall be the qualifications and disqualifications of representatives and electors, the boundaries of electoral districts, and the laws governing such elections.

12. At the time of admission, the revenue laws of the Dominion of Canada to extend and apply to British Columbia, and thereupon the revenue laws of British Columbia thereby affected to be null and void, and all duties and revenues derived in and from British Columbia under the revenue laws of the Dominion of Canada to belong to Canada.

13. The exclusive powers of provincial legislatures enumerated in the 92nd section of "The British North America Act, 1867," and all other provisions of the said Act that extend and apply generally to the provinces of the Dominion of Canada and that may be applicable to British Columbia, except as otherwise in this address provided, to extend and apply to British Columbia, at and from the time of admission.

14. Except as otherwise provided, all laws in force in British Columbia, at the time of admission, and all courts of civil and criminal jurisdiction, and all legal commissions, powers, and authorities, and all officers, judicial, administrative, and ministerial existing therein at the time of admission to continue in British Columbia as if such admission had not taken place; subject nevertheless to be repealed, abolished, or altered by the Parliament of Canada, or by the Legislature of British Columbia, according to the authority of the said Parliament or of the said Legislature, under "The British North America Act, 1867."

15. Until the Parliament of Canada provides otherwise, all officers of British Columbia, at and from the time of admission, having duties to discharge in relation to matters other than those coming within the classes of subjects assigned by "The British North America Act, 1867," to the provinces, to be officers of Canada.

16. And generally all such unenumerated provisions, acts, and things as may be necessary to the due and proper execution of the terms and conditions hereinbefore enumerated, and to the granting of the prayer of this address.

17. And as in duty bound we will ever pray.

The Hon. Mr. Wood moved, in amendment, the Hon. Mr. Ball seconding:

That this Council, while confirming the vote of last Session in favour of the general principle of the desirability of the union of this Colony with the Dominion of Canada, to accomplish the consolidation of British interests and institutions in North America, are still without sufficient information and experience of the practical working of confederation in the North American Provinces, to admit of their defining the terms on which such an union would be advantageous to the local interests of British Columbia.

Whereupon a debate arose, which having terminated,—

The Hon. Mr. De Cosmos moved that the Standing Orders be suspended, in order to enable him to withdraw his motion.

Governor Seymour
to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.
30 Nov. 1868.

COPY of a DESPATCH from Governor Seymour to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

Victoria, 30 November 1868.

(Received 16 January 1869.)

(Answered (No. 10) 4 February 1869, page 29.)

My Lord Duke,

I HAVE the honour to lay before your Grace a letter addressed to me by the principal leaders of a large and respectable public meeting, or, as these gentlemen prefer to style it, a Convention held at Yale. I add a copy of my reply.

2. The principal questions upon which the convention agreed appears to have been,—

1. Union or confederation with the Dominion of Canada.
2. Representative Institutions and Responsible Government in the Colony.
3. Retrenchment in the public expenditure, principally in the way of dismissing certain public officers, and reducing the salaries of others.
4. A reciprocal commercial treaty with the United States, whereby the raw productions of the Colony might be introduced into the neighbouring republic, duty free.

3. As regards the first point, I do not suppose that there is an Englishman who would not desire to see one unbroken Dominion under his flag extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. For all present facilities of intercourse we are as near to Japan as to Ottawa. But the matter does not rest with the so-called Convention at Yale, but has already occupied your Grace's attention, and that of the Government of Canada. I must say that this Colony appears to possess so little interest for the people of England, that perhaps any change which would call attention to its really wonderful resources would do good.

4. The second resolution is in favour of Representative Institutions and Responsible Government in the Colony. The Legislative constitution of the Colony is a subject which has occupied my attention much of late; but I have not been able to see a clear path before me. Local politics have their head-quarters in Victoria. If one ascends the Fraser but a few miles one finds less excitement and better tempers at New Westminster, and so it goes on in proceeding up country till, at Clinton, the whole thing is ignored. The miners of Cariboo and Kootenay are in the most profound state of indifference as regards what is passing at head-quarters. I should be glad if we had some mode of allowing the people of Victoria, through their representatives, to relieve themselves of their burden of complaints, and by simply stating what the "miserable misgovernment" (with which cry the streets echo) consists of, enable a respectful explanation to be furnished. I shall anxiously consider this subject, and it is not unlikely that it will be brought up at the next Session of the Legislature.

5. The

5. The Convention then urges retrenchment. We have an enormous amount to pay for interest on loans, nearly a third of our revenue. Were we free from debt, our finances would be in a most flourishing condition. I am not answerable for the debt. It was not incurred by me, yet it devolves upon me to pay, and I believe that the doing so is the principal cause of the outcry of "miserable misgovernment." Reductions in salaries, to the extent of upwards of 80,000 dollars, have been made during my tenure of office. I have never appointed anyone higher than a constable, and have no hope of doing so during my incumbency of office. I think my own salary a little high for the Colony to pay, but certainly not so for the holder of the very important and expensive position I fill to receive. Sir James Douglas, in October 1858 (when the revenue had not amounted to 22,900 £.) reported to the Secretary of State that he could not live under 5,000 £. a year.

6. As regards a treaty of commercial reciprocity, I agree entirely with the Convention. Our nearest markets for lumber now are Australia and France; and at this moment when San Francisco has been half ruined by an earthquake, and it is proposed to rebuild the shaken houses of timber instead of stone, the citizens will have to depend upon the mills of Washington territory for their supplies, instead of being able to make use of the magnificent timber of Burrav Inlet, a few miles from the boundary, but unfortunately for the mill-owners on English soil.

7. It is but right that I should state that the proceedings of the Yale meeting did not meet with universal approval. I enclose two notices, very respectably signed, protesting against the whole affair.

8. I may add that the more prominent advocates for confederation were defeated at the last elections in Victoria for Members to serve in the Legislative Council.

I have, &c.

MEMORIAL from Messrs. R. Wallace & De Cosmos and others to Governor Seymour. Encl. 1, in No. 6.

May it please your Excellency :

The Memorial of the undersigned respectfully sheweth,—

THAT a Convention, consisting of 26 delegates from different sections of the Colony, was held at Yale, B. C., on 14th September 1868, "for the purpose of accelerating the admission of this Colony into the Dominion of Canada upon equitable and beneficial terms, and also to devise means to secure Representative Institutions with Responsible Government for this Colony, and to take such other steps as the Convention might deem proper to obtain redress of the numerous grievances under which the country now suffers."

That the said Convention was convened after due and ample public notice.

That the session of the said Convention occupied three days.

That the resolutions hereto annexed were passed at the said Convention.

That the undersigned were appointed by the said Convention to prepare and transmit to your Excellency an address in accordance with, and accompanied by, the said resolutions.

That therefore the undersigned, in the name and behalf of the said Convention, respectfully pray that your Excellency may be pleased to take into your favourable consideration the resolutions hereto annexed, and especially that your Excellency be pleased to take,—

1. Such measures as may determine, at the earliest possible period, whether this Colony can be admitted on such terms; and that if it cannot be admitted on such terms, to make public the reasons why such terms cannot be obtained, in order to quiet the public mind on the subject.

2. Such measures as may immediately establish Representative Institutions and Responsible Government in the Colony.

3. Such measures as may effect the most thorough retrenchment in the public service compatible with due and proper securities for the preservation of life and property.

4. Such measures as may induce Her Majesty's Government to open negotiations to obtain from the United States of America the privilege of allowing the raw productions of this Colony to be entered free of duty in the ports of the United States under the operation of a reciprocal commercial treaty.

Victoria, British Columbia,
9 October 1868.

Governor Seymour to Messrs. Wallace, De Cosmos, and others.

Gentlemen,

Victoria, 14 November 1868.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter, forwarding certain resolutions passed at a public meeting held at Yale. It will now be so soon that I shall have to communicate with the Legislative Council on all, or nearly all, the topics adverted to in the resolutions passed, that you will forgive me for not doing more at present than stating that I shall forward the resolutions enclosed to the Secretary of State, with perfectly respectful comments.

The Local Government is by no means indifferent to the very important and difficult subjects to which the Yale resolutions refer.

I have, &c.

MINUTES of a Preliminary Meeting of the Delegates, elected by the various Districts of British Columbia, convened at Yale, pursuant to the following call:

"YALE CONVENTION.

"THE Confederation League propose holding at Yale, on Monday, 14th September 1868, a Convention of Delegates, for the purpose of accelerating the admission of this Colony into the Dominion of Canada, upon equitable and beneficial terms; and also to devise means to secure Representative Institutions with Responsible Government for this Colony; and to take such other steps as the Convention may deem proper to obtain redress for the numerous grievances under which this country now suffers.

"The inhabitants of the respective districts of the Colony are invited to elect delegates without delay to represent their views in the above Convention.

"By order of the Executive Committee,
" Robert Beaven,
" Secretary."

The following gentlemen were present:

Messrs. Wallace, Robson, De Cosmos, Fisher, Barnard, Black, Evans, Norris, M'Millan, Thompson, Featherstone, Gibbs, Babbitt, Withrow, Armstrong, Miller, Smith, Holbrook, Rose, Nelson, Havelock, Fulton, M'Lardy, Brouse, King.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, seconded by Mr. Robson: That Mr. Wallace take the chair pro tem.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, seconded by Mr. Nelson: That Mr. Charles Evans be secretary pro tem.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos: That a committee on credentials, consisting of three, be appointed; which committee shall suggest what offices are necessary for the purposes of the Convention.—Seconded by Mr. M'Millan, and carried.

The chairman appointed as Committee on Credentials, Messrs. Barnard, Thompson, and Babbitt.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos, seconded by Dr. Black: That an intermission till the call of the chairman be allowed for the Committee on Credentials to report.—Carried.

On the chairman resuming his seat, the Committee on Credentials presented the following report, and asked leave to sit again:

The Committee appointed to examine credentials report the following gentlemen qualified to sit in this Convention:

Messrs. R. Wallace; Amor De Cosmos (Victoria); Brouse (Lake La Hache); Henry Holbrook; John Robson; A. W. S. Black; David Withrow (New Westminster City); Alex. Rose (Yale District); D. W. Miller (New Westminster District); R. Smith (Lytton District); Charles Evans; Adam M'Lardy; Henry Havelock (Yale); Jas. E. M'Millan; J. G. Norris (Victoria); M. W. Gibbs (Salt Spring Island); E. H. The committee recommended the election of the following officers for this Convention, viz.:

A Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, two Secretaries, a Sergeant-at-arms, a Standing Committee on Business, to consist of five members.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(signed) F. J. Barnard, Chairman.

Moved by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. De Cosmos: That report of Committee on Credentials be received.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos: That the Committee on Business be seven instead of five.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Robson: That so much of the report as related to a vice-chairman be rejected.—Carried.

The report of the Committee on Business was then adopted as amended.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, seconded by Mr. Norris: That Mr. Wallace be chairman of the Convention.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Thompson: That Messrs. Havelock and Evans act as secretaries.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, seconded by M^rLardy: That Mr. Barlow be engaged to act as sergeant-at-arms.—Carried.

The chairman then declared the Convention open for the transaction of business.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Havelock, Babbitt, De Cosmos, Robson, Thompson, M^rMillan, and the chairman, as Committee on Business.

Moved by Mr. Norris, seconded by M. Barnard: That the Convention adjourn till one p.m.

ADJOURNED MEETING.

Convention met at one p.m.

Mr. Wallace in the chair.

Present: Messrs. Robson, De Cosmos, Fisher, Black, Evans, Norris, M^rMillan, Thompson, Barnard, Featherstone, Gibbs, Babbitt, Withrow, Armstrong, Miller, Smith, Holbrook, Rose, Nelson, Havelock, Fulton, M^rLardy, King, Brouse.

The Committee on Business presented their report and asked leave to sit again.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, seconded by Mr. Norris: That the report of the Committee on Business be received.

Moved by Mr. Thompson, seconded by Mr. De Cosmos, "That this convention resolve itself into committee of the whole, for consideration of the report of the Committee on Business."—Carried.

The chairman then appointed Dr. Brouse as chairman of committee, and left the chair.

On the chairman resuming the chair, Dr. Brouse reported the following 15 resolutions:

"Whereas this convention, composed of delegates representing different constituencies, has, at the general popular desire, and after due and ample public notice, been convened at Yale, British Columbia, this 14th September 1868, by the call of the Confederate League, and by the authority of the people of British Columbia in the respective districts declared, to give a full, unprejudiced, and united expression of their views and feelings respecting the desirability of the admission of this Colony into the Dominion of Canada, the necessity for the immediate establishment of Representative Institutions with Responsible Government, and generally as to the state, wants, and wishes of the country:

"And whereas this convention is duly impressed with the high, responsible, and patriotic duties that their fellow-countrymen have called on them to discharge, and cherishes the most ardent and devoted loyalty to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and attachment to British institutions:

"And whereas it is expedient to resolve and declare what, in its opinion, is right and proper in the premises. This Convention therefore, in virtue of the trust reposed in it, and with an honest and patriotic desire to promote the public welfare, after due deliberation, resolves and declares as follows:

"I. That all governments should exist by the free and just consent of the governed, and that the government that does not exist by the free and just consent of the governed is a despotism. That the Government of British Columbia does not exist by the free and just consent of the governed, and is, therefore, a despotism. That it is unsuited to the free British subjects of this Colony. That it deprives the people of their rightful share in the Government, as no Statute or Order in Council exists which guarantees to the people the right to participate in the Government of the Colony; but in the Legislative and Executive Departments all are nominated, or may be rejected, suspended, or removed by the Governor of this Colony. That the ordinary consequences of such a form of government are manifest in this Colony in the disregard of public opinion, in the neglect of public interests, in the high taxation, in the annual deficits, in the annually-increased public debt, in expending large sums of public money in paying salaries disproportionate to the services rendered, and in maintaining an unnecessarily large number of officials, and in the tendency which the continuance of such political evils have to weaken the attachment of the people to the Crown and British connection. That to such an extent have the evils of misgovernment multiplied that profound, widespread, universal discontent prevails, and is expressed at the form of government, and at the manner in which the affairs of the Colony have been and are mismanaged; and that the people of British Columbia loudly demand a remedy.

"II. That the proper remedy for the present political condition of the Colony, and the one that commends itself as preferable to all others, being in harmony with Imperial policy and the legitimate aspirations and desires of the people of this Colony, is the immediate admission of British Columbia into the Dominion of Canada, on terms equitable, expedient, and beneficial, simultaneously with the establishment of Representative Institutions and Responsible Government; and that, whether admission into the Dominion of Canada shall occur or not, Representative Institutions and Responsible Government should be inaugurated forthwith in British Columbia.

"III. That the terms of admission into the Dominion of Canada that would be equitable, expedient, and beneficial to the Colony, in the opinion of this Convention, are chiefly expressed in the following 15 sections:

"1. The limits of British Columbia, on and after admission, to be the same as at present.

"2. The Dominion of Canada to become liable for the public debt of British Columbia, at the time of admission.

"3. The Dominion of Canada to pay annually out of her Consolidated Revenue Fund, in semi-annual advances to British Columbia, for the support of her local Government and Legislature, the sum of 110,000 dollars, and also an annual grant in aid of the local Government of British Columbia, equal to 80 cents per head of the population of British Columbia, the minimum number of said population, including Indians, not to be estimated at less than 40,000 at any time, and the increase of population after admission, to be the increase of population other than Indians, and the said increase of population to be determined by census or otherwise, as may from time to time be expedient.

"4. All Crown lands, mines, minerals, and royalties situate in British Columbia at the time of admission, and all sums of money then due or payable, or that may afterwards accrue, for such Crown lands, mines, minerals, and royalties to belong to British Columbia, and to be under the exclusive control of its Government and Legislature.

"5. All stocks, cash, bankers' balances, and securities for money belonging to British Columbia, at the time of admission, to be the property of British Columbia.

"6. All public works and property of British Columbia, at the time of admission, to belong to British Columbia, with the exception of such portions of the Grand Trunk road through British Columbia, or other roads then constructed, as may be used as a portion of the trans-continental road, which shall become the property of the Federal Government.

"7. The Dominion of Canada to construct, within three years after the admission of British Columbia, a good overland waggon road, extending from Lake Superior, Ontario, to the head of navigation on the lower Fraser river, British Columbia, and to commence the construction of the same through the Rocky Mountains, within one year after admission.

"8. The Imperial Government to guarantee a loan to construct the said overland road, if deemed expedient.

"9. If, at any time after admission, the Legislature of British Columbia shall pass an address to the Governor General of Canada, declaring that it is expedient to establish a free port on the Pacific, in order to advance the interests of British commerce in the North Pacific, the Parliament of the Dominion to make provision for the establishment of the same.

"10. British Columbia to be represented in the Senate by not less than two Members, and in the Commons by not less than three Members at any time.

"11. At the first election of representatives to the Commons and until otherwise provided by the Parliament of Canada, the Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia to proclaim what shall be the qualifications and disqualifications of representatives and electors, the boundaries of electoral districts and the laws governing such elections.

"12. At the time of admission the revenue laws of the Dominion of Canada to extend and apply to British Columbia, and thereupon the revenue laws of British Columbia thereby affected to be null and void, and all duties and revenues derived in and from British Columbia under the revenue laws of the Dominion of Canada to belong to Canada.

"13. The exclusive powers of provincial legislatures enumerated in the 92nd section of 'The British North America Act, 1867,' and all other provisions of the said Act that extend and apply generally to the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and that may be applicable to British Columbia, except as otherwise in these terms provided, to extend and apply to British Columbia, at and from the time of admission.

"14. Except as otherwise provided, all laws in force to British Columbia at the time of admission, admission, and all courts of civil and criminal jurisdiction, and all legal commissions, powers and authorities, and all officers, judicial, administrative, and ministerial, existing therein at the time of admission, to continue in British Columbia as if such admission had not taken place; subject, nevertheless, to be repealed, abolished, or altered by the Parliament of Canada or by the Legislature of British Columbia, according to the authority of the said Parliament or of the said Legislature, under 'The British North America Act, 1867,' and any subsequent Imperial Act.

"15. Until the Parliament of Canada provides otherwise, all officers of British Columbia, at and from the time of admission, having duties to discharge in relation to matters other than those coming within the classes of subjects assigned by 'The North America Act, 1867,' to the provinces, to be officers of Canada."

The convention adjourned till 10 a.m., 15th September.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Convention met at 10 a.m. on the 15th.

Moved by Mr. Babbitt, seconded by Mr. Smith: That the reading of the minutes of yesterday be deferred.—Carried.

The secretary presented the Report of the Committee on Business, and asked leave to sit again.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos and seconded by Mr. Robson: That report of Committee be received.—carried.

Moved by Mr. Barnard and seconded by Mr. Nelson: That the Convention go into committee of the whole to consider report of Business Committee.—Carried.

The chairman then appointed Dr. Brouse as chairman of the committee, and left the chair.

On the chairman resuming, Dr. Brouse reported the following resolutions:

"That this Convention further resolves and declares,—

"IV. That the people of British Columbia desire Representative Institutions with Responsible Government, and have the capacity to work those institutions successfully in the interest of the Colony; and that any representations that have been or that may be made to the contrary in England or elsewhere, would neither be in accordance with facts nor the views of the people of this Colony, the people being the best judges of their own affairs.

"V. That the establishment of Representative Institutions, without the simultaneous inauguration of Responsible Government, would be only a partial and very imperfect remedy for the evils produced by the present form of government; and that unless the Governor were required to govern in accordance with the advice and consent of an executive council holding seats in the Legislature, and commanding the confidence and support of a majority of the representatives of the people, there would never be that degree of harmony between the Executive and the representatives of the people that is essential to the successful working of the Government, and the rational contentment of the country.

"VI. That, whether admitted into the Dominion or not, the Legislature should consist of a Governor and one Chamber, called the Legislative Assembly: that the Members of the Assembly should be elected for a period of not more than four years: that the Sessions should be held annually: that members be paid their reasonable expenses for a period not exceeding 40 days in each Session. That the qualification for Members be as follows: Being a male British subject of full age, and possessing real or personal property, or both, of the value of 500 dollars. That the qualification of electors be as follows: 1. A male British subject or alien who has taken the oath of allegiance. 2. Residence in the Colony one year, and in the district in which the vote is cast, three months. 3. Possessed of real or personal property, or both, at the time of registration, to the value of 100 dollars. 4. Registered on the electoral roll of the district. That any male alien, who can read and write or speak the English language, and who has been five years in the Colony, and is possessed of real estate to the value of 100 dollars, and appears on the electoral roll, shall be entitled to vote.

"VII. That the Executive Council, as at present constituted, does not command public confidence nor represent the country in the Government, is irresponsible, or not accountable to the people for the administration of its respective departments, and under the present constitution of the Colony is but an echo of the Governor, and generally antagonistic to the well-being of the Colony, and that the substitution therefore of an executive council which holds office only while it commands the confidence and support of a majority of a representative legislature, would be hailed with delight by the country.

"VIII. That the nominative character and official elements of the Legislative Council render it unsuited to a Colony of free British subjects. That the Council may be composed of 23 members, or merely a quorum, as the Governor may decree. That the people have no right guaranteed to them by Statute or Order in Council by which they may send representatives to participate in the deliberations of the Council as they would have, were the Council a representative assembly, in the British sense of the term "representative," inasmuch as the election of a Member by the people does not insure him a seat in the Council. That the people have no constitutional power to pass good measures, nor to stop the passage of bad measures through the Council. That the Legislative Council violates a fundamental principle of the British constitution by imposing taxes on the people without representation.

representation. That it disregards public opinion, and neglects public interests. That it consents to the maintenance in office of more officials than the country can afford, or the public service requires. That it concurs with the Executive in an extravagant civil list, adding annually to the public debt. That the non-representative character of the Council, the non-existence of a representative assembly, combined with mal-administration, have (by the discontent produced), a tendency to alienate the affections of the people from the Crown. That the officials, the paid servants of the public, rule the people with irresponsible authority, and that it is their interest to resist reform to retain office. That the officials, who form a majority of the Council, vote as the Executive intimates whenever required, and that, consequently, the majority of the Council has no real independence, is a sham legislature, the Governor and Executive Council being virtually the Legislature of the Colony. That the Legislative Council does not represent the people of British Columbia, and, from its nominative and dependent character, can never gain popular confidence and support, and will always be productive of popular discontent. That the people have no confidence in the Council, and will never be satisfied with the constitution of the Legislature till a representative assembly is established.

" IX. That one of the reasons why union between Vancouver Island and British Columbia was sought was that a supreme court of appeal for the whole Colony could be economically created. That the Colonies were united two years ago, and yet no appellate court has been inaugurated. That, as a consequence of the continued separate existence of the Supreme Courts of Vancouver Island and British Columbia, confidence in those courts respectively has been materially impaired. That it is the prevailing opinion that such continued separation of the courts, and non-inauguration of a supreme court of appeal, has been due to more consideration for the personal interests of the judges than for the general interests of justice throughout the Colony.

" X. That by appointing stipendiary magistrates and gold commissioners to seats in the Legislative Council, they are withdrawn from their respective districts for long continuous periods, leaving such districts without any competent authority to aid in the protection of life and property, and thereby virtually declaring that such officers are not required.

" XI. That the salary, allowances, and perquisites of the Governor (exceeding the sum of 20,000 dollars) are unreasonable, and ought to be reduced to a figure proportionate to the ability of the Colony, and the services rendered. That, in addition to the above salary and perquisites, there is an annual interest of six per cent. on 45,000 dollars, making the approximate cost of residence in Victoria, 2,700 dollars. That the salary of the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario, Canada, with a population of 1,500,000 is only 8,000 dollars per annum; and that there is no good reason why the salary of the Governor of this Colony should exceed 10,000 dollars per annum, with a residence. That if the Governor's salary be reduced to that amount, and the allowances, perquisites, and extra assistance of 500 dollars be abolished, there would be an annual saving in the Governor's department of about 10,000 dollars.

" XII. That the salary of the Colonial Secretary, 3,880 dollars per year, is too high and ought to be reduced to a sum not exceeding 3,000 dollars per annum, thereby saving 880 dollars. That one clerk in the Colonial Secretary's department, at a salary of 1,800 dollars, is sufficient to meet the requirements of the public service. That an assistant printer, at 600 dollars per annum, is unnecessary. That the total saving by these reductions, without impairing the efficiency of the public service would be 3,540 dollars.

" XIII. That the office of Lands and Works is maintained at a great annual expense, amounting in 1868, for a Chief Commissioner and three clerks, to 8,490 dollars, and in former years to a far larger sum. That the greatest ignorance prevails in the department as to the lands in Vancouver Island and on the mainland, although a land office has been kept open in the former place 17 years, and in the latter for 10 years. That nothing is done by the department to assist in the sale and settlement of the public lands, except recording a few pre-emptions in Vancouver Island, and on the mainland the pre-emptions are recorded by the magistrates. That a few parcels of public lands are leased for the purposes of trade, agriculture, lumbering, and mining, and the rents collected for the same. That instalments on lands sold or pre-empted are collected. That a few maps are made or extended occasionally. That the above includes the total services performed by this department pertaining to land, and could all be transacted by one clerk. That the public works carried on by the department are confined to repairing roads, constructing some small bridges, cutting out or keeping open a trail, or repairing or enlarging a public building, and are either performed by contract or by temporary service. That the entire public works, including map-making, could be well attended to by one competent civil engineer. That two competent clerks or civil engineers to perform all the above services efficiently and satisfactorily, could be had for 1,500 dollars each, and thus a saving could be made in the permanent expenditure of the department, amounting to 5,490 dollars. That by connecting this department with that of the Colonial Secretary, one civil engineer would be sufficient to transact all the business. That, therefore, for purposes of economy, it is expedient to abolish the office of Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, and to reduce the permanent staff of the department to not more than two civil engineers, under the supervision of the Colonial Secretary.

" XIV. That the duties of the Treasury can be performed, under efficient checks, by two clerks; clerks; that, therefore, one clerk should be discharged, thereby saving 1,200 dollars per annum.

“XV. That the auditor's department is too expensively conducted. That two competent clerks can efficiently audit the public accounts, at a salary not exceeding 1,800 dollars and 1,500 dollars respectively, thereby saving in this department 1,750 dollars.

“XVI. That the office of Registrar General of Titles, at Victoria, is almost a sinecure. That the incumbent draws a salary of 2,440 dollars per year for a service that notoriously does not occupy him more than one hour a day, yet the Government refuses to reduce the salary; on the contrary, has raised it 485 dollars in 1868, and persists in keeping the office separate, instead of amalgamating it with some other, and thereby utilising the services of the incumbent. That reports are industriously published by the Government that the office is self-paying and ought, therefore, to be continued. But that is effected by imposing a high tariff of charges for registering documents, and thereby the office is made self-paying at the expense of those who register. That by affixing a salary to this office proportionate to the labour performed, the tariff of charges for registration could be reduced four-fifths; that the labour employed in the service is not worth more than 500 dollars per annum. That, by an alteration of local Statutes (if necessary at all), so that the office may be amalgamated with that of Registrar of the Supreme Court, Victoria, the whole time of the incumbent might be employed; and, at a salary of 1,800 dollars per annum, there would be saved in this department 700 dollars, and in the Supreme Court 1,500 dollars, making a total saving of 2,200 dollars per annum. That the office of Registrar of Titles might be amalgamated with one of two other offices, yet retain all its efficiency and secure economy in the expenditure. That the continuance of this officer, at the present salary, is a glaring public wrong.

“XVII. That the office of stipendiary magistrate for New Westminster should be abolished, and that the duties should be discharged by the Registrar General of British Columbia, in addition to the duties of postmaster general.

“XVIII. That the office of harbour master should be amalgamated with that of the Customs department; that a saving would thereby be effected of 1,800 dollars, without any public injury.

“XIX. That the salary of the Attorney General should be 1,500 dollars with practice, and that he be allowed a clerk at 1,000 dollars per year.

“XX. That reform in the office of sheriff is essentially necessary, as it is virtually a sinecure, without proper securities being filed by the sheriff, in case of errors or losses in civil suits. That a division of the shrievalty into two or more shrievalties, the incumbents giving bonds in a suitable amount for the faithful performance of their duty, is required both for efficiency and security of the public. That the paying out of public moneys as a bonus to the sheriff, under present circumstances, is a wasteful and wanton expenditure.

“XXI. That the office of chief inspector of police is not required, and therefore ought to be abolished.”

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos, and seconded by Mr. McMillan: That the Report be received.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos, and seconded by Mr. McMillan: That the Report be adopted.—Carried.

[Adjourned till 11 a.m., 16th September 1868.]

Pursuant to adjournment, Convention met at 11 a.m., on the 16th September.

The Secretary then read the minutes of 14th inst.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos, and seconded by Mr. Barnard: That the minutes of 14th inst., as read be adopted.—Carried.

The Secretary then read the minutes of the 15th inst.

Moved by Mr. Thompson, and seconded by Mr. McMillan: That the minutes of 15th inst., as read, be adopted.—Carried.

The Secretary then presented Report of Committee on Business, and asked leave to sit again.

Moved by Mr. De Cosmos, and seconded by Mr. Norris: That Report of Business Committee be received.—Carried.

The Convention then adjourned till two p.m.

Pursuant to adjournment, Convention met at two p.m.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, and seconded by Mr. Rose: That the Convention go into Committee of the whole, to consider the Report of the Committee on Business.

The Chairman then nominated Dr. Brouse as Chairman of Committee, and left the chair.

COLUMBIA.

On the chairman resuming, Dr. Brouse reported the following resolutions:—

“ XXII. That there is no public necessity for keeping five extra constables in Cariboo, at an annual expense of 3,500 dollars per year. That in the Lillooet-Clinton district a stipendiary magistrate is not required, thereby saving 2,400 dollars per annum. That at Nanaimo, a stipendiary magistrate is not required, and the duty of deputy collector of customs there, with that of postmaster could be performed satisfactorily for 1,000 dollars, saving thereby 1,000 dollars. That in Lillooet Clinton, and Nanaimo, honorary magistrates can discharge the duties of justice of the peace. That the retrenchment that might be made by the Executive under these heads is equal to 10,300 dollars per year.

“ XXIII. That the Supreme Court judges should discharge the duties of county court judges, holding court periodically in the different districts of the Colony.

“ XXIV. That the vote of 3 000 dollars in the Estimates for expenses of judge and registrar on circuit, on the mainland of the Colony, is exorbitant, and calls for revision.

“ XXV. That, including the reductions suggested, and others which might advantageously be adopted, a saving of about 60,000 dollars in the annual expenditure for civil establishments may be made, without impairing in the least degree the public service, or endangering in the least the securities for the preservation of life and property, or the maintenance of order throughout the Colony.

“ XXVI. That the people of British Colombia are willing to bear patiently the heavy financial burden imposed upon the country for the construction of public works, amounting to nearly 150,000 dollars annually; but they denounce the extravagant expenditure by which a deficit was created in 1866, amounting to about 170,000 dollars; and, in 1867, 130,000 dollars. That these deficits were effected in violation of the rule laid down by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, in a Despatch dated 30th April 1866, viz.: that the expenditure of the year must be reduced to such an amount as may be covered by the actual average receipts of the past two years; that the Estimates of 1868 violate this rule.

“ XXVII. That the system of dividing and sub-dividing the public service into departments, and placing such duties respectively in the hands of a single person, may be the proper mode to transact public business in a rich and populous country; but to a Colony such as British Columbia, where the population is very small, the financial resources proportionately limited, and the business to be transacted under each head but trifling, such a system is wholly unsuited, entailing too high an expenditure without increasing efficiency. That it is mainly by attempting to carry out this system, and by keeping too large a staff of officials at salaries disproportionate to the circumstances of the Colony, that the public expenditure is annually unnecessarily increased. That it is therefore to amalgamation of offices, reduction of the civil list, and lowering of salaries, that the people look for a reduction in the current expenditure for the support of establishments.

“ XXVIII. That the total population of British Columbia, exclusive of Indians, does not exceed 10,000; and that the number of Indians does not exceed 30,000. That the Indians, living chiefly by hunting and fishing, are not individually on the average large consumers of dutiable or taxable commodities. That the highest estimate that could be placed on the Indians as consumers is, that three Indians consume as much as one white or civilised person, and that, consequently, the total Indian population is only equal to 10,000 white consumers. That a more correct estimate would in all probability be that five Indians are equal to one white person, thereby making the total Indian inhabitants, as consumers, equal to 6,000 whites. That (taking the highest estimate of the Indians as consumers) the total number of consumers of dutiable and taxable commodities is 20,000. That in 1867, the revenue, without loans, was 475,250 dollars, and the average tax per head of the consumers 23 dollars 75 cents. That the expenditure, as reported to the Council as less than the actual expenditure was, in 1867, 560,159 dollars, or 28 dollars to each consumer. That out of the expenditure of 560,159 dollars in 1867, only 52,000 dollars were expended in public works. That the estimated revenue of 1868 is 576,000 dollars, or nearly 29 dollars to each consumer. That the estimated expenditure of 1868 is 572,553 dollars, or 28 dollars 60 cents to each consumer. That the total amount appropriated for public works out of the 572,553 dollars is 55,300 dollars. That out of the latter sum there has been about 12,000 dollars expended in unnecessary additions to the Governor's residence and the Land Office, whilst necessary improvements to roads and bridges, to advance the interests of farmers and settlement generally, are deferred. That the return made to the Legislative Council in 1868, by his Excellency the Governor, comparing the customs' tariffs of England, United States, Canada, and other colonies and countries is fallacious, if intended to show that British Colombia is not taxed higher than other countries. That the fallacy is apparent when it is observed that the average annual tax per head in Canada is only 3 dollars 50 cents, whilst the average tax to each consumer in British Columbia, in 1867, was 23 dollars 75 cents, and that proposed in 1868, is 29 dollars to each consumer. That home productions, other than gold, in this Colony are not so advanced as in the countries enumerated in the return, and that, consequently, there is a larger average consumption here of dutiable commodities, and a correspondingly higher tax paid by each consumer. That, with tariff, internal revenue dues, road tolls, &c., taxation is high and oppressive. That, after paying the interest and sinking fund on the public debt, nearly all the revenue is consumed non-productively. That retrenchment is therefore demanded by the united voice of the people of British Columbia.

“ XXIX. That

" XXIX. That it is the duty of the Executive to institute the most thorough retrenchment in the expenditure, and cause to be amended and repealed all statutes or ordinances that interfere with economy in the public service.

" XXX. That miners and capitalists during the last 10 years have been subject to the greatest inconvenience and delays in securing copper and silver bearing quartz veins, under such a tenure and with such facilities as would offer reasonable security for the investment of capital; that the non-existence of a general law on the subject, and the obstacles interposed by the Government, have tended to prevent the investment of capital in the country, and retarded the development of its mineral resources. That the enactment of a law under which a limited extent of any copper or silver-bearing quartz veins, free from royalties, onerous laws, and taxations, may be taken up and held by any one or more persons, under reasonable conditions of working, is absolutely essential to the investment of capital in such enterprises.

" XXXI. That religion, humanity, and public opinion demand that due and proper consideration be paid to the Indian population, with a view to their preservation, and the improvement of their moral, intellectual, and material condition. That beyond making reservations of land, Government has done nothing for them. That in many instances the Indian reserves are large and valuable tracts of agricultural land. That such lands, though situated in districts where they would be cultivated by settlers, remain unimproved by the Indians, except the occasional cultivation of a small patch. That settlers are prohibited occupying them. That such reserves are consequently neither properly utilised by the Indians nor by settlers. That it is incumbent, therefore, on the Government to establish such regulations as would utilise the Indian reserves, and appropriate the proceeds to the benefit of the Indians.

" XXXII. That the people of British Columbia, recognising the principle that it is the imperative duty of the State to provide for education, earnestly desire the immediate establishment of a national system of popular education, based upon broad non-sectarian principles, and that the non-existence of any recognised system of education applicable to the whole Colony, is discreditable to the Government.

" XXXIII. That while it is apparent to any disinterested person that retrenchment in the public service could be made by which about 60,000 dollars of the annual expenditure could be saved without impairing the efficiency of the public service, yet the Government persists in imposing road tolls on merchandise passing between Yale and Cariboo that amount to 60,000 dollars per annum. That the continuance of the road tolls, and the resistance offered to retrenchment by the Executive, are grave acts of misgovernment.

" XXXIV. That a reciprocal commercial treaty between the United States and England, by which the lumber, coal, fish, and other raw productions of British Columbia and the United States may be entered duty free for home consumption in the ports of the last-named countries respectively, would be a powerful stimulant to industry in this Colony. That it is, therefore, expedient to urge upon the attention of the local and Imperial Governments the desirability of taking immediate steps to secure such a commercial privilege, whilst the Reciprocity Treaty between Canada and the United States is under consideration.

" XXXV. That though there has always been a large staff of officials connected with the office of Lands and Works, and notwithstanding there are vast areas of good unoccupied agricultural and grazing lands in the Colony, the country but sparsely populated, the imports of agricultural produce and stock large, and the prices of agricultural productions highly remunerative, yet the Executive has never made any systematic and continuous effort to invite immigration, or induce people to engage in agriculture. That the apathy and indolence of the Government respecting the settlement of the public lands is therefore totally indefensible.

" XXXVI. That free grants of at least 320 acres of land ought to be offered to actual settlers upon the public lands, and that the Executive should spare no effort in inviting immigration and facilitating the settlement of the country.

" XXXVII. That the vote of the Legislative Council, refusing to pass an address to Her Majesty the Queen respecting the Confederation of this Colony with Canada, is not indorsed by the country; but is opposed to the well-understood wishes of the people of British Columbia.

" The Convention further resolved :

" 1. That an address be prepared and sent to Her Majesty the Queen, praying for the reforms enumerated in these resolutions.

" 2. That an address to the Governor General of Canada be prepared and transmitted, urging confederation on the terms proposed.

" 3. That an address be transmitted to his Excellency the Governor, accompanied by a copy of these resolutions, praying that the reforms therein contained may be initiated and perfected.

" 4. That a petition to the Imperial Parliament be prepared and circulated for signature throughout the Colony, and transmitted to some prominent Member of Parliament for presentation, accompanied by the resolutions of this Convention.

"5. That an Executive Committee be appointed, with full authority to call conventions, communicate with the Imperial, Canadian, and local Governments, to prepare and transmit the addresses and petitions above alluded to, and to take any measures they may deem expedient to secure the reforms enumerated in the resolutions of the Convention."

The following Committee was appointed to carry out the objects of the Convention:—Messrs. De Cosmos, McMillan, Wallace, and Norris, of Victoria; Havelock, of Yale; John Robson, of New Westminster; and F. J. Barnard.

Moved by Mr. Norris, and seconded by Mr. Robson: That the Report be received.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Norris, and seconded by Mr. Robson: That the Report of Business Committee be adopted.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Barnard, and seconded by Mr. Smith: That the following gentlemen be an Executive Committee in accordance with the 5th Resolution: Messrs. A. De Cosmos, R. Wallace, J. E. McMillan, J. G. Norris, John Robson, H. Havelock, and F. J. Barnard.

Moved by Mr. Norris, and seconded by Mr. Armstrong: That the thanks of the Convention be tendered to the steamboat owners and stage proprietor, and that the secretary be instructed to communicate the same.—Carried.

Three cheers were then proposed and given for the Queen.

Three cheers were then proposed and given for the Dominion.

Moved by Mr. Robson, and seconded by Mr. Barnard: That this Convention adjourn.—Carried.

(Answered, No. 30, 6 May 1869, page 29.)

My Lord,

WITH reference to my Despatches noted in the margin respecting the possibility of the union of this Colony with the Dominion of Canada, I have now the honour to forward copy of a Resolution passed by the Legislative Council on 17th February antagonistic to the immediate consummation of such a measure.

I have, &c.

RESOLUTION of Legislative Council, of 17 February 1869.

Resolved, "That this Council impressed with the conviction that, under existing circumstances, the confederation of this Colony with the Dominion of Canada would be undesirable, even if practicable, urges Her Majesty's Government not to take any decisive steps towards the present consummation of such union."

Sir,

Downing-street, 19 November 1867.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your two Despatches, No.
126,* and Separate,† of the 24th September, the first inclosing copy of a resolution passed by the Legislative Council in favour of negotiations being entered into for the union of British Columbia with the Eastern Provinces of North America; the second containing your remarks upon the subject.

Whatever might be the advantages which in course of time might result from the union of British North America under one government, it appears to me that the consideration of that question must at all events await the time when the intervening territory now under the control of the Hudson Bay Company shall have been incorporated with the Confederation.

COPY of a DESPATCH from the Earl Granville, K.G., to Governor Musgrave.

Sir,

Downing-street, 14 August 1869.

IN my Despatch of the 17th June, in which I communicated to you your appointment to the government of British Columbia, I informed you that I should probably have occasion to address you on the question, then in agitation, of the incorporation of that Colony with the Dominion of Canada.

You are aware that Her Majesty's Government have hitherto declined to entertain this question, mainly because it could not arise practically till the territory of the Hudson's Bay Company was annexed to the Dominion, but also, perhaps, in the expectation that the public opinion of British Columbia might have opportunity to form and declare itself.

I have now to inform you that the terms on which Rupert's Land and the North West Territory are to be united to Canada, have been agreed to by the parties concerned, and that the Queen will probably be advised before long to issue an Order in Council which will incorporate, in the Dominion of Canada, the whole of the British Possessions on the North American Continent, except the then contiguous Colony of British Columbia.

The question, therefore, presents itself whether this single Colony should be excluded from the great body politic which is thus forming itself. On this question the Colony itself does not appear to be unanimous. But as far as I can judge from the Despatches which have reached me, I should conjecture that the prevailing opinion was in favour of union. I have no hesitation in stating that such is also the opinion of Her Majesty's Government.

They believe that a Legislature selected from an extended area, and representing a diversity of interests, is likely to deal more comprehensively with large questions, more impartially with small questions, and more conclusively with both, than is possible when controversies are carried on and decided upon in the comparatively narrow circle in which they arise—questions of purely local interest will be more carefully and dispassionately considered when disengaged from the larger politics of the country, and at the same time will be more sagaciously considered by persons who have had this larger political education. Finally, they anticipate that the interest of every Province of British North America will be more advanced by enabling the wealth, credit, and intelligence of the whole to be brought to bear on every part, than by encouraging each in the contracted policy of taking care of itself, possibly at the expense of its neighbour. Most especially is this true in the case of internal transit. It is evident that the establishment of a British line of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans is far more feasible by the operations of a single Government responsible for the progress of both shores of the Continent, than by a bargain negotiated between separate—perhaps in some respects rival—Governments and Legislatures. The San Francisco of British North America would, under these circumstances, hold a greater commercial and political position than would be attainable by the capital of the isolated Colony of British Columbia. Her Majesty's Government are aware that the distance between Ottawa and Victoria presents a real difficulty in the way of immediate union. But that very difficulty will not be without its advantage if it renders easy communication indispensable, and forces onwards the operations which are to complete it. In any case it is an understood inconvenience, and a diminishing one, and it appears far better to accept it as a temporary drawback on the advantages of union, than to wait for those obstacles, often more intractable, which are sure to spring up after a neglected opportunity.

The constitutional connexion of Her Majesty's Government with the Colony of British Columbia is, as yet, closer than with any other part of North America; and and they are bound, on an occasion like the present, to give, for the consideration of the community and the guidance of Her Majesty's servants, a more unreserved expression of their wishes and judgment than might be elsewhere fitting.

You will, therefore, give publicity to this Despatch, a copy of which I have communicated to the Governor General of Canada; and you will hold yourself authorised, either in communication with Sir John Young, or otherwise, to take such steps as you properly and constitutionally can for promoting the favourable consideration of this question.

It will not escape you, that in acquainting you with the general views of the Government, I have avoided all matters of detail, on which the wishes of the people and the Legislature will of course be declared in due time. I think it necessary, however, to observe that the constitution of British Columbia will oblige the Governor to enter personally upon many questions—as the condition of Indian tribes and the future position of Government servants, with which, in the case of a negotiation between two Responsible Governments, he would not be bound to concern himself.

I have, &c.

My Lord Duke,

I HAVE the honour to transmit a joint Address to Her Majesty the Queen, from the Senate and House of Commons of the Dominion of Canada, praying that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to direct that an Order in Council may be passed in conformity with the provisions of the 146th section of the British North America Act, 1867, for annexing to the Dominion of Canada the Territory of Rupert's Land and the Red River Settlement

I have the honour to request that your Grace will lay this Address at the foot of the Throne.

Enclosure in No. 1.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Senate and Commons of the Dominion of Canada, in Parliament assembled, humbly approach your Majesty, for the purpose of representing :

That it would promote the prosperity of the Canadian people, and conduce to the advantage of the whole Empire if the Dominion of Canada, constituted under the provisions of the British North America Act of 1867, were extended westward to the shores of the Pacific Ocean ;

That the colonization of the fertile lands of the Saskatchewan, the Assiniboine, and the Red River districts, the development of the mineral wealth which abounds in the regions of the North West, and the extension of commercial intercourse through the British possessions in America from the Atlantic to the Pacific, are alike dependent upon the establishment of a stable Government for the maintenance of law and order in the North Western Territories ;

That the welfare of a sparse and widely-scattered population of British subjects of European origin, already inhabiting these remote and unorganised territories, would be materially materially enhanced by the formation therein of political institutions bearing analogy, as far as circumstances will admit, to those which exist in the several Provinces of this Dominion;

That the 146th section of the British North American Act of 1867 provides for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory, or either of them, into union with Canada, upon the terms and conditions to be expressed in Addresses from the Houses of Parliament of this Dominion to your Majesty, and which shall be approved of by your Majesty in Council;

That we do therefore most humbly pray that your Majesty will be graciously pleased, by and with the advice of your Most Honourable Privy Council, to unite Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory with this Dominion, and to grant to the Parliament of Canada authority to legislate for their future welfare and good government; and we most humbly beg to express to your Majesty that we are willing to assume the duties and obligations of Government and legislation as regards those territories;

That in the event of your Majesty's Government agreeing to transfer to Canada the jurisdiction and control over the said region, the Government and Parliament of Canada will be ready to provide that the legal rights of any corporation, company, or individual within the same shall be respected, and placed under the protection of courts of competent jurisdiction;

And furthermore, that upon the transference of the territories in question to the Canadian Government, the claims of the Indian tribes to compensation for lands required for purposes of settlement, will be considered and settled in conformity with the equitable principles which have uniformly governed the British Crown in its dealings with the aborigines.

All which we humbly pray your Majesty to take into your Majesty's most gracious and favourable consideration.

My Lord Duke,

REFERRING to my Despatch, No. 107,* of 21st December 1867, I have the honour to transmit to your Grace an approved Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, together with the Resolutions of both Houses, and the proceedings upon them respecting the proposed annexation of Prince Rupert's Land and the North West Territory to the Dominion of Canada.

I desire especially to call your Grace's attention to the eighth Resolution, adopted by both Houses, and which was not incorporated in the Address to Her Majesty.

If Her Majesty's Government should approve of the proposed incorporation with Canada of this territory on the terms contained in the Address to the Queen, and these Resolutions, it would be of great advantage to my Government if I could be informed of the decision, by telegraph, in order that all necessary steps may be taken for carrying the arrangement into effect.

I have, &c.

Encl. 1, in No. 2. COPY of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, dated 28th December 1867, approved by His Excellency the Governor General.

for the transfer of Rupert's Land and the North West Territory to Canada, and they respectfully advise that a copy of the same, when approved by your Excellency, be forwarded to his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies, as embodying the views of the Canadian Government on that important question.

Certified.

(signed) Wm. H. Lee, Clerk to the Privy Council.

THE undersigned has the honour to submit for the consideration of your Excellency in Council the following recommendations on the subject of the negotiation with the Imperial Government for the transfer of Rupert's Land and the North West Territory to Canada:—

1. That in addition to the joint Address of both Houses on the subject, your Excellency will be pleased to transmit to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Resolutions as they were finally adopted by the House of Commons and the Senate, with the votes and proceedings of both Houses thereon.

2. That the attention of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham be specially called to the eighth Resolution, which was not embodied in the Address, and was not intended by the Canadian Parliament to express a term or condition of the Order in Council authorised by the 146th section of the British North America Act.

3. That your Excellency will be pleased to express to his Grace, as the opinion of the Canadian Government, that it is highly expedient that the transfer which the Imperial Parliament has authorised, and the Canadian Parliament approved, should not be delayed by negotiations or correspondence with private or third parties, whose position, opinions, and claims have heretofore embarrassed both Governments in dealing with this question.

4. That in the opinion of the Canadian Government the terms of the Address cannot be materially altered or extended without causing injurious delay, and greatly embarrassing the people and Government of Canada in their efforts to open communication with the Territory, to encourage emigration and settlement, to establish law and order, and to provide for the speedy organisation of municipal and local governments therein.

5. That recent proposals in the Congress of the United States in reference to British America, the rapid advance of mining and agricultural settlements westward, and the avowed policy of the Washington Government to acquire territory from other Powers, by purchase or otherwise, admonish us that not a day is to be lost in determining and publishing to the world our policy in regard to these territories.

6. That your Excellency will be pleased to request his Grace to inform your Excellency by Atlantic cable (if the information can be so communicated) whether the Imperial Cabinet will at once advise Her Majesty to approve of the transfer on the terms of the Address, in order that the Canadian Government may be prepared to submit appropriate measures on the subject on the reassembling of Parliament in March next.

Respectfully submitted,

28 December 1867.

(signed) Wm. Mc Dougall.

RESOLUTIONS for the Incorporation of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory with Canada. Encl. 2, in No. 2.

The Honourable Mr. Fergusson Blair, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Campbell.

1. THAT it would promote the prosperity of the Canadian people, and conduce to the advantage of the whole Empire, if the Dominion of Canada, constituted under the provisions of the British North America Act of 1867, were extended westward, to the shores of the Pacific Ocean.

2. That the colonisation of the fertile lands of the Saskatchewan, the Assiniboine, and the Red River districts, the development of the mineral wealth which abounds in the regions of the North-West, and the extension of commercial intercourse through the British Possessions in America from the Atlantic to the Pacific, are alike dependent upon the establishment of a stable government, for the maintenance of law and order in the North Western Territories.

3. That the welfare of a sparse and widely-scattered population of British subjects of European origin already inhabiting these remote and unorganised territories, would be materially enhanced, by the formation therein of political institutions bearing analogy, so far as circumstances would admit, to those which exist in the several Provinces of this Dominion.

4. That

4. That the 146th section of the British North America Act, of 1867, provides for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory, or either of them, into Union with Canada, upon terms and conditions to be expressed on Address from the House of Parliament of this Dominion to Her Majesty, and which shall be approved of by the Queen in Council.

5. That it is accordingly expedient to address Her Majesty that she would be graciously pleased, by and with the advice of Her Most Honourable Privy Council, to unite Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory with the Dominion of Canada, and to grant to the Parliament of Canada authority to legislate for their future welfare and good government, and expressing the willingness of Canada to assume the duties and obligations of government and legislation.

6. That in the event of the Imperial Government agreeing to transfer to Canada the jurisdiction and control over this region, it would be expedient to provide that the legal rights of any corporation, company, or individual shall be respected and placed under the protection of courts of competent jurisdiction.

7. Than upon the transference of the territories in question to the Canadian Government the claims of the Indian tribes to compensation for lands required for purposes of settlement, would be considered and settled in conformity with the equitable principles which have uniformly governed the Crown in its dealings with the aborigines.

8. Resolved also, That in case any negotiation between the Canadian Government and the Hudson's Bay Company, for the termination of the rights of the latter entered into in accordance with the Despatch of the 17th June 1865, from the then Secretary of State for the Colonies to his Excellency the Governor General, should result in an agreement between them, it is hereby declared that such agreement must be submitted to, and sanctioned by the Parliament of Canada before the same shall have any force or effect whatever.

Encl. 1, in No. 7.

THE Committee have had under consideration a Memorandum, dated 30th September inst., from the Honourable Sir George E. Cartier, Bart., and the Honourable William M'Dougall, stating that they have received communication of the Minute in Council appointing them a delegation to England to arrange with the Imperial Government the terms upon which Canada may acquire Rupert's Land, and expressing their readiness to accept that mission.

They, however, bring under the notice of the Government the terms of the recent Act of the Imperial Parliament to enable Her Majesty "to accept a surrender upon terms of the lands, privileges, and rights" of the Hudson's Bay Company, which declares that "Rupert's Land," for the purposes of that Act, "shall include the whole of the lands and territories held or claimed to be held" by the Company.

They also call your Excellency's attention to the terms of the British North America Act, which provides for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North West Territory, or either of them, into the union; and they recommended that they be authorised to arrange with the Imperial Government for the admission of the North West Territory into union with Canada, either with or without Rupert's Land, as may be found practicable and expedient.

The Committee advise that the authority requested by the delegates be granted, and that a copy of this Minute, if approved by your Excellency, be transmitted to his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

My Lord,

AT the instance of the Ministers, I beg to forward the enclosed Humble Address to Her Majesty, and other documents, with regard to the Hudson's Bay Territory, which have been handed to me at the last moment before the departure of the mail.

2. The Ministers consider the matter one of great urgency. I have no time to make any comments on the subject, but the points of moment are stated in the accompanying Memorandum, to which I invite your Lordship's attention.

The Memorandum was drawn up by the Honourable A. Campbell, the Government leader in the Upper House.

(Translation.)

Enclosure in No. 8.

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Senate and Commons of the Dominion of Canada, in Parliament assembled, humbly approach your Majesty for the purpose of representing,

That during the first Session of the first Parliament of this Dominion, we adopted an address to your Majesty, praying that your Majesty would be graciously pleased, by and with the advice of your Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, under the provisions of the 146th section of "The British North America Act, 1867," and on the terms specified in that Address, to unite Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory with this Dominion, and to grant to the Parliament of Canada authority to legislate for their future welfare and good government, and assuring your Majesty of the willingness of the Parliament of Canada to assume the duties and obligations of government and legislation as regards those territories.

That our joint Address was duly laid at the foot of the Throne; and that your Majesty, by Despatch from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor General of Canada, under date of 23rd April 1868, signified your Majesty's willingness to comply with the prayer of the said Address, but that your Majesty was advised that the requisite powers of government and legislation could not consistently, with the existing Charter of the Hudson's Bay Company, be transferred to Canada, without an Act of Parliament, which Act was subsequently passed by the Imperial Parliament, and received your Majesty's Assent on the 31st July 1868.

That by a Despatch, dated 8th August 1868, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Governor General was informed, that in pursuance of the powers conferred by the Act for the surrender of the Hudson's Bay Territories to your Majesty, he proposed proposed to enter into negotiations with the Company as to the terms of such surrender; whereupon, under authority of an order of the Governor General in Council of the 1st October 1868, the Honourable Sir George E. Cartier, Baronet, and the Honourable William M'Dougall, C.B., were appointed a delegation to England, to arrange the terms for the acquisition by Canada of Rupert's Land; and by another Order in Council of the same date, were authorised to arrange for the admission of the North West Territory into union with Canada, either with or without Rupert's Land, as might be found practicable and expedient.

That the delegates proceeded on their mission to England, and entered into negotiations with his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, then Secretary of State for the Colonies; and afterwards with the Right Honourable Earl Granville, his successor in office, for the acquisition by Canada of the territorial and other rights claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company in Rupert's Land, and in any other part of British North America not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, or British Columbia. That terms of agreement were conditionally assented to by the delegates on behalf of the Dominion, and on their return to Canada were submitted, with a report, dated 8th May 1869, which was approved by his Excellency the Governor General in Council, on the 14th day of the same month.

That we humbly deem it expedient to accept the transfer of the territorial and other rights of the Hudson's Bay Company in Rupert's Land, and in any other part of British North America not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, or British Columbia, on the terms conditionally agreed to on behalf of the Government of Canada by the Honourable Sir George E. Cartier, Baronet, and the Honourable William M'Dougall, C.B.; and on behalf of the Hudson's Bay Company, by Sir Stafford H. Northcote, Governor of that Company, and approved by his Excellency in Council as aforesaid, which terms are set forth in a letter from Sir Frederic Rogers, under Secretary of State for the Colonies, of the 9th March 1869, communicated to the delegates by direction of Earl Granville; and in two subsequent Memorandums, dated respectively 22nd and 29th March 1869, containing a modification of such terms, and are in the words and figures following:

TERMS as stated in the LETTER from Sir Frederic Rogers, of 9th March 1869.

1. The Hudson's Bay Company to surrender to Her Majesty all the rights of government property, &c., in Rupert's Land, which are specified in 31 & 32 Vict. c. 105, s. 4; and also all similar rights in any other part of British North America, not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, or British Columbia.

2. Canada is to pay to the Company 300,000*l.* when Rupert's Land is transferred to the Dominion of Canada.

3. The Company may, within 12 months of the surrender, select a block of land adjoining each of its stations, within the limits specified in Article 1.

4. The size of the blocks is not to exceed acres in the Red River Territory, nor 3,000 acres beyond that territory, and the aggregate extent of the blocks is not to exceed 50,000 acres.

5. So far as the configuration of the country admits, the blocks are to be in the shape of parallelograms, of which the length is not more than double the breadth.

6. The Hudson's Bay Company may for 50 years after the surrender, claim in any township or district within the Fertile Belt in which land is set out for settlement, grants of land not exceeding 1-20th part of the land so set out. The blocks so granted to be determined by lot, and the Hudson's Bay Company to pay a rateable share of the survey expenses, not exceeding an acre.

7. For the purpose of the present agreement, the Fertile Belt is to be bounded as follows: on the south by the United States boundary; on the west by the Rocky Mountains; on the north by the northern branch of the Saskatchewan; on the east by Lake Winnipeg, the Lake of the Woods, and the waters connecting them.

8. All titles to land up to the 8th March 1869, conferred by the Company, are to be confirmed.

9. The Company is to be at liberty to carry on its trade without hindrance in its corporate capacity, and no exceptional tax is to be placed on the Company's land, trade, or servants, nor any import duty on goods introduced by them previous to the surrender.

10. Canada is to take over the materials of the electric telegraph at cost price, such price including transport, but not including interest for money, and subject to a deduction for ascertained deteriorations.

11. The Company's claim to land under agreement of Messrs. Vankoughnet & Hopkins to be withdrawn.

12. The details of this arrangement, including the filling up the blanks in Articles 4 and 6, to be settled at once by mutual agreement.

MEMORANDUM.

DETAILS of AGREEMENT between the Delegates of the Government of the Dominion and the Directors of the Hudson's Bay Company.

1. It is understood that in surrendering to Her Majesty all the rights, &c. of the Company in any part of British North America not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, or British Columbia, the Company are to retain the posts they actually occupy in the North West Territory.
2. It is understood that it will be a sufficient act of selection under Article 3, that the Company should, within 12 months, name the number of acres which they will require adjoining each post. The actual survey to be proceeded with, with all convenient speed.
3. It is understood that in the Red River Settlement the size of the blocks to be retained round Upper Fort Garry shall not exceed (10) acres; and that round Lower Fort Garry shall not exceed (300) acres.
4. It is understood that a list of the stations round which the Company will require blocks of land, with the size of the blocks they will require, shall be made out forthwith, and communicated to the Canadian Ministers.
5. It is understood that Article 5 shall be construed to mean that the blocks shall front the river or road, by which means of access are provided, and shall be approximately in the form of parallelograms, of which the frontage shall not be more than half the depth.
6. It is understood that the Company may defer the exercise of their right of claiming their proportion of each township for not more than 10 years after it is set out, but their claim must be limited to an allotment from the lands remaining unsold at the time they declare their intention to make it.
7. It is understood that the blank in Article 6. shall be filled up with eight cents. (Canadian).
8. It is understood that any claims of Indians to compensation for lands required for purposes of settlement shall be disposed of by the Canadian Government in communication with the Imperial Government, and that the Company shall be relieved of all responsibility in respect of them.

MEMORANDUM of a further AGREEMENT between Sir Geo. E. Cartier and Sir Stafford Northcote.

INASMUCH as the northern branch of the Saskatchewan River is the northern boundary of the Fertile Belt, and therefore any land on the northern bank is not within the territory of which the Company are to have one-twentieth part, it is understood that in forming the townships abutting on the northern bank the Company shall be at liberty to take their one-twentieth of any such townships, giving up to the Canadian Dominion an equal quantity of the portion of lands coming to them of townships established on the southern bank.

It is understood that the townships on the northern bank shall not, for the above purpose, extend more than five miles inland from the river. It is understood that in laying out any public roads, canals, &c., through any block of land reserved to the Company, the Canadian Government may take, without compensation, such land as is necessary for the purpose, not exceeding one twenty-fifth of the total acreage of the block, but if the Canadian Government require any land which is actually under cultivation, or which has been built upon, or which is necessary for giving the Company's servants access to any river or lake, or as a frontage to any river or lake, they shall pay the Company the fair value of the same, and shall make compensation for any injury done to the company or their servants.

It is understood that the whole of the land to be appropriated within the meaning of the last preceding clause shall be appropriated for public purposes.

MEMORANDUM by the Honourable Alexander Campbell.

1. To draw attention to the concluding paragraph of section 3, chapter 105, 31 & 32 Vict., which requires an Order in Council admitting the newly-acquired territory, under the name of Rupert's Land, into the Dominion of Canada within one month of the acceptance of the terms by Her Majesty.

2. To ask that the acceptance of the terms by the Government and Parliament of Canada be signified by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Hudson's Bay Company, as required by the resolution of the Company communicated to Sir Frederic Rogers in Sir Stafford Northcote's letter of the 10th of April 1869.

3. To move Her Majesty's Government to take steps during the present Session of Parliament to procure authority to give the guarantee of the Imperial Government for the sum to be paid by Canada to the company.

REPORT.

To His Excellency the Right Honourable Sir John Young, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G.,
Governor General of Canada.

May it please your Excellency,

WE have the honour to submit for your Excellency's consideration the following report of our negotiations with Her Majesty's Imperial Government for the transfer to the Dominion of Canada of Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory.

Under the authority of an Order in Council of the 1st October 1868, we were appointed a delegation to England to arrange the "terms for the acquisition by Canada of Rupert's Land," and by another Order in Council of the same date, we were authorised to arrange "for the admission of the North West Territory into union with Canada, either with or without Rupert's Land, as may be found practicable and expedient." We proceeded at once to execute the important mission confided to us, and on presenting ourselves at the Colonial Office, were invited by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, to visit him at Stowe, for the purpose of discussing freely and fully the numerous and difficult questions which were involved in the transfer of these these great territories to Canada. We found that his Grace had already made some progress in the preliminaries of a negotiation (under the Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 105) with the Hudson's Bay Company for the surrender to Her Majesty of the territorial and political rights which they claimed in Rupert's Land. We objected very earnestly to some of the demands of the Company which were communicated to us by his Grace; but after much consideration and important modifications of the Company's demands, we agreed that if they would surrender the territory on the conditions which his Grace proposed, we would recommend the acceptance of these conditions by the Canadian Government.

The Duke of Buckingham's proposals will be found in the letter of Mr. Adderley, of the 1st December 1868, addressed to the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Considerable delay in the negotiations was occasioned by the retirement from office of the Duke of Buckingham and his colleagues, and also by the resignation of Lord Kimberley, the then Governor of the Company.

On the 18th January 1869, Earl Granville, who had acceded to office as Secretary of State for the Colonies, transmitted to us the reply of the Company, declining the proposals of the Duke of Buckingham. His Lordship subsequently requested us to communicate to him any observations which we might desire to offer upon this reply of the Company, and upon certain counter proposals which it contained. We felt reluctant, as representatives of Canada, to engage in a controversy with the Company concerning matters of fact, as well as questions of law and policy, while the negotiations with them was being carried on by the Imperial Government in its own name and of its own authority. But we did not feel at liberty to decline Lord Granville's request, and on the 8th of February, stated at length our views upon the various points raised in the letter of Sir Stafford Northcote, the new Governor of the Company, in answer to the proposals of the Duke of Buckingham. We beg to refer your Excellency to the correspondence, for full information as to the positions taken and the opinions expressed by us at this stage of the negotiation.

Lord Granville, being of opinion that the rejection by the Company of the proposals of his predecessor had terminated the negotiations instituted by him, submitted for our consideration proposals of his own, based on a different principle from that which had been laid down by the Duke of Buckingham.

We felt it our duty to state to his Lordship, that these proposals would not be acceptable to the Canadian Government. They were subsequently modified, and in the form in which they appear in the letter of Sir Frederic Rogers of the 9th March, were conditionally accepted by us, subject to the approval of your Excellency in Council.

Certain details were left by Lord Granville to be settled between the representatives of the Company and ourselves, which led to interviews and discussions with them, and to a correspondence which is also submitted herewith.

During the progress of the negotiations, a formal complaint was made to the Colonial Secretary by the representatives of the Company against the Canadian Government for undertaking the construction of a road between Lake of the Woods and the Red River Settlement, without having first obtained the consent of the Company. The letter conveying this complaint was referred to us by Earl Granville for such explanations as we were able to offer. The correspondence on this subject is also respectfully submitted.

Your Excellency is aware that since our return to Canada, the Hudson's Bay Company have signified to Lord Granville their acceptance of the terms proposed by him for the surrender to Her Majesty of their territorial rights in Rupert's Land. We have, therefore, the honour to submit the same, with a memorandum of the "details" agreed to by us on behalf of the Canadian Government, for the approval of your Excellency, and for such action thereupon as your Excellency may be advised to take.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ottawa, 8 May 1869.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 18 January 1868.

I HAVE received your Despatch, No. 107,* of the 21st of December, accompanied by an Address to Her Majesty from both Houses of the Canadian Parliament, proposing the annexation of Prince Rupert's Land and the North West Territory to the Dominion of Canada. I have also received your Lordship's subsequent Despatch, No. 1,† of the 1st of January, enclosing Resolutions adopted by the two Houses, on the same subject, and an approved Minute of the Privy Council.

These proceedings will receive the early and serious attention of Her Majesty's Confidential Advisers.

The decision of Her Majesty's Government will be communicated as early as possible, but the consideration by them of so important a subject will necessarily occupy a short time.

COPY of a DESPATCH from His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to Governor General Viscount Monck.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 23 April 1868.

I HAVE already acknowledged, on the 18th of January, your Lordship's Despatch, No. 107,‡ of the 21st of December, transmitting a joint Address from the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, to Her Majesty, praying the annexation to Canada of Rupert's Land and the North West Territory. Your Lordship will have the goodness to inform the Senate and House of Commons that their Address has been duly laid before the Queen.

Her Majesty's Government will be willing to recommend a compliance with the prayer of the Address so soon as they shall be empowered to do so with a just regard to the rights and interests of Her Majesty's subjects interested in those territories. They are advised, however, that the requisite powers of Government and legislation cannot, consistently with the existing Charter of the Hudson's Bay Company, be transferred to Canada without an Act of Parliament. Before such an Act can be obtained, it is necessary to consider the position of the Hudson's Bay Company.

The Company have held their Charter, and exercised privileges conferred by it, for 200 years, including rights of government and legislation, together with the property of all the lands and precious metals; and various eminent law officers, consulted in succession, have all declared that the validity of this Charter cannot justly be disputed by the Crown.

I have, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, called upon the Company to state the terms on which they would be prepared to surrender to the Crown whatever rights they have over the lands and precious metals, including the rights of government, with the intimation that no present payment in money will be made to them, but that in the transference of their rights to Canada they might have a reservation made to them of defined portions of land, and of a share a share of the future proceeds of the lands and precious metals of the territory, up to a certain fixed amount.

I enclose copies of the letters which have passed, up to the present time, between the Company and this Department, upon this subject.

I purpose to introduce a Bill into the Imperial Parliament, with the view of authorising any arrangement which may be effected on the basis thus indicated; of defining the territory over which it extends, and authorising the subsequent transfer to the Canadian Government of the rights and powers to be acquired by the Crown in respect to Government and property, in accordance with the prayer of the Address.

With respect to the North West Territory, the same obstacles do not exist to the transfer of the greater part by the Crown to Canada at the present time, subject to proper reservations of the rights and property of Her Majesty's subjects now settled therein, and for the protection of Her Majesty's Native subjects; but I apprehend that while it remains separated from Canada by the Hudson's Bay Company's territory, still under the Company's government, it will not be the desire of Canada to undertake the government of this more remote country. A portion of the North West Territory immediately adjacent to British Columbia, I am of opinion that it will be necessary for the public advantage to retain in the possession of the Crown, with a view to its incorporation with British Columbia.

Sir,

Downing-street, 10 April 1869.

THE proprietors of the Hudson's Bay Company have considered, at a special meeting, the terms on which they have been invited to transfer their territorial rights to the Dominion of Canada, and I enclose the copy of a letter addressed to me by Sir S. Northcote, from which you will perceive that these terms have been acceded to.

Hudson's Bay Com-
page 47.

You will observe that the Governor and Committee of the Company are authorised to concur in all such measures as may be found necessary for effecting this transfer, and for securing to the Company all the rights and reservations to which they will be entitled, provided that the acceptance of the terms by the Government and Parliament of Canada is duly signified to them within six months.

I trust that this acceptance may be confidently anticipated, and that by it an opening will be made for extending the benefits of a regular Government to those British subjects who at present occupy the Company's territory, for settling the tracts of fertile land which lie in the centre of the Continent, and for the consolidation of British North America under one Central Government.

On one point, which has not been hitherto touched upon, I am anxious to express to you the expectations of Her Majesty's Government. They believe that whatever may have been the policy of the Company, and the effect of their chartered right upon the progress of settlement, the Indian tribes, who form the existing population of this part of America, have profited by the Company's rule. They have been protected from some of the vices of civilisation; they have been taught, to some appreciable extent, to respect the laws and rely on the justice of the white man, and they do not appear to have suffered from any causes of extinction beyond those which are inseparable from their habits and their climate. I am sure that your Government will not forget the care which is due to those who must soon be exposed to new dangers, and, in the course of settlement, be dispossessed of the lands which they are used to enjoy as their own, or be confined within unwontedly narrow limits.

This question had not escaped my notice while framing the proposals which I laid before the Canadian Delegates and the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company. I did not, however, then allude to it, because I felt the difficulty of insisting on any definite conditions without the possibility of foreseeing the circumstances under which these conditions would be applied, and because it appeared to me wiser and more expedient to rely on the sense of duty and responsibility belonging to the Government and people of such a country as Canada. That Government, I believe, has never sought to evade its obligations to those whose uncertain rights and rude means of living are contracted by the advance of civilised man. I am sure that they will not do so in the present case, but that the old inhabitants of the country will be treated with such forethought and consideration as may preserve them from the dangers of the approaching change, and satisfy them of the friendly interest which their new governors feel in their welfare.

With the expression of this hope, I will close my Despatch, merely repeating my sincere desire that the annexation of this great territory may be speedily accomplished, and may bring to the Dominion all the advantages which the statesmen of Canada not unreasonably anticipate.

I have, &c.

Head, Bart., K.C.B., to His Grace the Duke of Buck-

15 Jan. 1868.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Hon. Sir E. Head, Bart., K.C.B., to His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
15 January 1868.

My Lord Duke,

IN addressing this letter to your Grace on behalf of the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, I think that some apology is necessary for anticipating the official communication from the Colonial Office, of the resolutions passed in the Parliament of Canada, as well as the Address to be founded upon them; but as from the tone of the debate in the Canadian Parliament, and from the terms of the resolutions passed there, it is manifestly the object of that Parliament to have the power to establish in the Dominion of Canada, including the territory of Rupert's Land, courts which shall have jurisdiction in all matters arising in any part of British North America, and thus to give power to the tribunals so constituted, to determine upon the rights claimed by this Company under their Charter, a course of proceeding which this Committee consider to be so injurious to the interests of the Hudson's Bay Company, they are desirous to bring the matter before your Grace, and to submit their views upon the subject to Her Majesty's Government, before any assent is given, or determination come to, in reference to Her Majesty's approval of the proposed admission of Rupert's Land into the Union of British North America.

I beg to remind your Grace that the rights of this Company under their Charter have at various times been brought under the consideration of the Government, and that the result of those discussions has been a clear and distinct recognition, on the part of the Crown, that the general validity of the Charter cannot now be called in question, and in particular that the territorial ownership of the lands granted by the Charter, and the rights necessarily incidental thereto, must now be considered as valid.

It is true that questions have from time to time been raised in Canada as to the extent of the territory claimed by this Company under their Charter, and in some respects as to other rights which the Charter confers; but while Her Majesty's Government have at all times declined to be any party to proceedings on the subject, the opportunity has always been afforded to the authorities of Canada to bring any questions for adjudication before Her Majesty in Council — a course to which this Company have always been prepared to accede, and which appears to be the only legitimate mode of deciding their rights, if they are to be called in question.

The Canadians have altogether abstained from availing themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them, but it is now obviously the object of the Canadian Legislature to secure to tribunals of their own nomination the decision of those rights.

I may here state that, so far as the mere political powers granted by the Charter are concerned, such as the rights of government, taxation, or exclusive administration of justice, the Company have long since expressed their willingness that these powers should be vested in officers deriving their authority directly from the Crown; but before any such powers can with justice be transferred to the Colonial Government, I submit that the extent of the territorial rights of the Company should either be fully recognised, or that if the Canadian Government are desirous of procuring those rights for the benefit of Canada in general, they should, in the first instance, arrange with the Hudson's Bay Company the terms upon which they should be so acquired.

But should the Canadian Legislature still desire that any judicial investigation into the territorial rights of the Company should take place, such inquiry should be referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in accordance with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, given so long ago as July 1857, as the only tribunal to which ought to be delegated the construction of a Charter emanating from the Sovereign of Great Britain. This opinion your Grace will find at page 404 of the Report from the Select Committee on the Hudson's Bay Company, ordered, by the House of Commons, to be printed the 31st July and 11th August 1857.

of Buckingham

25 January 1868.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
25 January 1868.

My Lord Duke,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge Mr. Elliot's Letter, of the 18th instant, enclosing a copy of Address to the Queen, forwarded by the Governor General of Canada, and to thank your Grace for communicating these papers to the Hudson's Bay Company.

On this Address I beg to request your Grace's attention to the following observations on behalf of myself as Governor, and the Committee of the Company.

1. It seems necessary, in the first place, to distinguish the two classes of rights rights conferred on the Company by the Charter. Some of these are, no doubt, of a public or political character, such as belong to a proprietary Government; but others are practically of a private nature, such as might have been vested in any individual subject, or any private corporation, clothed with no public functions of any kind. Of these latter, it is only necessary at present to refer to the right of private property in the soil, and in the mines and minerals.

Report of 1857,
paragraph 2.

2. It may be that the public or political rights of the Company, are, in the Charter, ill-defined, and of doubtful expediency at any time. It may be, too, as the Law Officers in their letter of 1857 appear to hint, that for any effectual exercise they require the aid of the right of private property, as vested in the Company by the same instrument.

3. The Committee need scarcely remind your Grace that so far from opposing a resumption by the Crown of the political powers of the Company, almost the first important step taken by them in 1863, was the adoption of the following resolution;—

Sir E. Head to Sir
F. Rogers, 28 Aug.

“Resolved, that the time has come when, in the opinion of this Committee, it is expedient that the authority, executive and judicial, over the Red River Settlement, and the south-western portion of Rupert's Land, should be vested in officers deriving such authority directly from the Crown, and exercising it in the name of Her Majesty.

“That the Governor be empowered to communicate this Resolution to his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, and to discuss the subject with him, or with the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies; reporting from time to time to this Committee thereon.”

Mr. C. Fortescue
to Sir E. Head,
11 March 1864.

4. In the correspondence which ensued with the Colonial Office, it appears to be implied on the part of his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, that the fact of the right of private property in the soil being no longer possessed by the Crown, was one of the chief obstacles to a compliance with the suggestion made in the above Resolution. If this be so, the very fact of making this objection involves an admission in favour of the Company. Most assuredly, if the Crown had alienated its right of property in the soil and minerals of the Hudson's Bay Territory, it had granted it to no other party than the Hudson's Bay Company, and by no instrument other than the Charter of Charles II.

Paper.

5. In Mr. Fortescue's letter of 11th March 1864, an offer of a contingent money payment, as the consideration for the cession of the territorial rights of the Company, was distinctly made by the Secretary of State. The proviso inserted in the postscript to that letter will be adverted to afterwards, and had reference only to the supposed rights of Canada.

See post, paragraph 9.

6. It is unnecessary for the Committee to refer to the undisputed enjoyment of these rights, at any rate since the time of the Treaty of Utrecht.

Letter of the Law
Officers to Mr.
Merivale, Appendix to Report, 1857, p. 404, last
paragraph.

7. In addition to all this, it remains to quote the express words of the Law Officers, in their letter of 1857, already referred to. They say, “In our opinion the Crown could not now, with justice, raise the question of the general validity of the Charter; but that on every legal principle the Company's territorial ownership of the lands granted, and the rights necessarily incidental thereto, ought to be deemed to be valid.”

Moreover, in a passage alluded to above, the Law Officers imply indirectly their belief in the validity of this right of private property, when they say that “rights of Government, taxation, exclusive administration of justice, or exclusive trade, otherwise than as a consequence of the right of ownership of the land, could not legally be insisted on by the Company.” What other opinions of the Law Officers of the Crown may be found in the records of the Colonial Office it is not for us to say, but the evidence given by the Right Honourable Edward Ellice before the Committee of 1857, as to the opinions taken by him both for and against the Company, is well worth referring to.

tions 5823.

8. One other point is a mere technicality, no doubt, but it may be worth observing that the title of the Company to their land is an English title, since it is granted “to be holden as of the manor of East Greenwich, in our county of Kent, in free and common soccage.”

9. The Committee do not intend to impute to the Parliament or the Ministry of of Canada, any deliberate intention of violating such rights of the Hudson's Bay Company as they admit to exist, but it must be remembered that a theory has been started, and is referred to in the debate on this Address, by which the admissions of the English Government, and the opinion of the English Law Officers, as to the right of ownership in the soil, are directly negatived. It has been supposed, we believe, that France was in possession of these territories, or a large portion of them, when the Charter was granted; that they were therefore within the exception which that Charter contains with regard to territories belonging to any other Christian prince; and that this French title remained good, and was transferred to the English Crown, with Canada, at the final cession of that Province by France.

See postscript to letter, Mr. Forster to Sir E. Head, 11 March 1864, and letter, 5 April 1864.

10. This is not the place for entering on a discussion of the facts and law involved in this argument—an argument, as we have said, inconsistent with the continued recognition of the Company's rights in various ways by the English Government, and their legal advisers, for a long series of years; but if this objection to the Company's title shall be presented in a tangible form before a proper tribunal, the Hudson's Bay Company will be quite ready to meet it, and demonstrate its futility.

Pages 68 and 72 of this Paper.

11. The very existence, however, of such a theory in the minds of the Canadian Ministers, or the Canadian people, is a sufficient reason why, in justice to the Company, it should be set aside, or its truth or falsehood should be conclusively tested, before their rights of property, under the Great Seal of England, and, in fact, their future existence, are placed under the legislation and the absolute control of Canada.

12. The Committee cannot but feel that the Company has already had great reason to complain of the course pursued during the last few years. In 1865 the Canadian delegates sent to this country to promote the scheme of confederation solemnly "undertook" with Mr. Cardwell to negotiate with the Hudson's Bay Company. The answer given by the Committee was, that they would be ready to consider any proposal. The fact of this undertaking was recited again in a subsequent letter as a reason why no other step should be taken. No negotiation, however, was opened, and in 1866 the Canadian Council resolved that such negotiation must devolve on the Government of the confederation when constituted, rather than on the Government of Canada. This was confirmed by the resolutions of the delegates in England of 3rd April 1867. After all, when the Confederation is formed, and its Parliament has met, resolutions are passed, and an Address to the Queen is adopted, praying that the powers of legislation and Government over the Hudson's Bay Territory, and the North Western Territory, may be conveyed to Canada first, and that the judicial decisions or negotiations as to the Company's rights should take place afterwards.

Letter of Mr. Forster to Sir E. Head, 20 February 1866.

Minute, 22 June 1866. Letter from Sir F. Rogers to Sir E. Head, 31 July 1866.

Mr. Elliot to Sir E. Head, 15 April 1867.

13. We desire in the first place to remark, that this inversion of the order of proceeding is entirely contrary to the expectation raised by the acts of the delegates, and by the communications from the Colonial Office to us. We may have erred in thinking so, but certainly we conceived that the negotiations, which the delegates in 1865 undertook to initiate, were intended under the Act of last Session to form the preliminary step for transferring the supreme control to Canada—not to follow after such transfer, with all the disadvantages to the Company which must thus ensue from the change of the relative position of the parties. It would appear, too, from a passage in a speech of the Honourable Mr. Holton in the Canadian Parliament, as reported in the "Canadian News," as per extract herewith, that the Committee were not the only parties who supposed this to be the intention of Government.

Extract, No. 1, enclosed.

The Committee moreover thought that it was expressly in anticipation of this original undertaking to negotiate being thus carried out, that the Secretary of State for the Colonies intimated his wish in the following terms, that the Company should abstain from any other arrangements likely to interfere with the views then entertained.

"It is of course for the Hudson's Bay Company to consider for themselves what course is most proper and conducive to their own interests. But it appears to Lord Carnarvon that any effective negotiation being for the moment impossible, it is for the interest of both parties that the question should remain open for arrangement so soon as an authority exists capable of dealing with it on the part of the Colony or Colonies interested. He would therefore regret to learn that the Company contemplate any immediate action which was calculated to embarrass the negotiations, which would then become possible, and which in the opinion of the executive council it would be the duty of the Confederate Government to open.

30 & 31 Vict. c. 3,

14. The Committee felt no anxiety respecting the wide powers of transfer conferred on the Crown by the Act of last Session, because they did not believe that their rights of ownership in the soil and minerals could be affected by it; and because after the undertaking to negotiate formally communicated to them, and the correspondence relating to it, they relied, as they continue to rely, on the honour and good faith of the English Government.

15. But the case assumes a very different aspect, if the plan of giving to the Canadian Parliament and Government legislative and administrative control over these territories, without defining and providing for the rights and interests of the Company as a condition precedent, should be carried out. So far as we now see, no security of any kind would exist against such a use of this control in taxation and other matters as might be thought best fitted for compelling the Company to accept any terms, however disadvantageous. No specific guarantee, it seems, is proposed to be given as to the legislation which might take place before these claims were finally disposed of, or as to the impartiality and competency of the courts before which the Company, if aggrieved, would have to seek redress. At any rate the relative position of the two parties to any such suit or discussion respecting these rights would, after the transfer of the legislative and administrative control, be one which must leave the Company, as defendant, more or less at the mercy of the plaintiff, and would, to say the least, taint the voluntary character of any agreement to be subsequently arrived at. The only reliance of the Company would be on the honesty and the considerate disinterestedness of the Canadian Parliament and people.

(enclosed), 2.

The Committee, moreover, venture to think that their apprehensions on this score are reasonably increased, rather than diminished, by all that is reported to have passed in the debates, and especially by the extract of the accompanying report of the speech of Sir John A. Macdonald, K.C.B., the Canadian Premier. The report is taken from the "Canadian News." It is probably condensed, and as a matter of course it may be more or less inaccurate.

c. 3, s. 146.

16. The Act of last Session provides that the incorporation of Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory with Canada may be made by the Queen "on such terms and conditions in each case as are in the Addresses expressed, and as the Queen thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of this Act; and the provisions of any Order in Council in that behalf shall have effect as if they had been enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Now, looking to the previous correspondence between the Hudson's Bay Company and the Colonial Office, it is not unreasonable to suppose that so far as regards the territory of the Company, the Act contemplated the insertion of certain terms and conditions in any Address relating to the transfer of such territory.

But the Address, a copy of which your Grace has had the goodness to transmit to us, contains no "terms and conditions" whatever, except a vague assurance "that the Parliament of Canada will be ready to provide that the legal rights of any corporation, company, or individual within the same shall be respected, and placed under the protection of courts of competent jurisdiction."

Such an assurance is of little value when the party making it disputes the very existence of the rights in question, and at any rate it amounts to no more than a statement, that British subjects on British soil shall be entitled to the protection of a court of law of some kind, hereafter to be established by the act of one of the parties.

It might be presumed that redress before a competent tribunal would be the right of any one who was wronged; and such an assurance can hardly be deemed a "term" or "condition" of the kind, which the Statute intended to be set out specifically in the Address from the Legislature.

17. The Committee trust it may not for one moment be supposed that they arrogate to themselves any right, or entertain the smallest desire to impede, or

or even comment on the general policy of transferring the government of the North Western Territory, and of the Hudson's Bay territory, to the Confederate Government of Canada. In this, as in everything else, they would bow with submission to the authority of the Crown, and rejoice in any measure which was really calculated to strengthen loyalty, and promote union in British North America.

18. What is asked for as a matter of justice to a proprietary, consisting of upwards of 1,700 shareholders, who have paid a very large sum on the faith of our Charter, and of the protection of their rights of property in the soil by English law, is the adoption by Her Majesty's Government of one of the following alternatives:—

1st. That some conclusive agreement as to the extent, value, and compensation to be made for the claims of the Company, as owners of the soil and minerals of the Hudson's Bay Territory, and some arrangement by which burthens assumed by them in their political capacity, such as the endowment of the bishopric, may, when that capacity ceases, be transferred to others, should be completed before, not after, the transfer of the government of the North Western Territory, or Hudson's Bay Territory to Canada.

2nd. That before any incorporation of Rupert's Land, or the North Western Territory with Canada, the rights of private property vested in the Company, and the exact limits of such rights, should be ascertained, acknowledged, and efficiently protected by law, in a manner binding on any Colonial Government, so that they should not be at any time hereafter impeached or violated without proper compensation.

Enclosure 1, in No. 4.

EXTRACT from a SPEECH of the Honourable Mr. Holton, in the Canadian Parliament, as Encl. 1, in No. 4. reported in the "Canadian News," 2nd January 1868, page 7.

"It struck him, too, that what was in contemplation in the Union Act was, that the Address to Her Majesty should follow the negotiations, and that the Address should set forth, clearly and distinctly, the terms on which we were prepared to unite that territory with Canada."

Enclosure 2, in No. 4.

EXTRACT from a SPEECH of Sir John A. Macdonald, K. C. B., in the Canadian Parliament, Encl. 2, in No. 4. reported as above.

"It had been said, by the Member for West Durham, that this was a worse proposition than the proposition of 1865. It was precisely the same; it was simply that we wished to take possession of this territory, and would undertake to legislate for it and to govern it, leaving the Hudson's Bay Company no right except the right of asserting their title in the best way they could in courts of competent jurisdiction. And what would their title be worth the moment it was known that the country belonged to Canada, and that the Canadian Government and Canadian Courts had jurisdiction there, and that the chief protection of the Hudson's Bay Company, and the value of their property, namely, their exclusive right of trading in those regions, were gone for ever? The Company would only be too glad that the country should be handed over to Canada, and would be ready to enter into any reasonable arrangement.

"The value of the Company's interest would be determined by the value of their stock; and what would that be worth when the whole country belonged to Canada?"

Sir Curtis Lampson, Bart.

Sir,

Downing-street, 23 April 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to acquaint you that he has had under his consideration the Address from the Parliament of Canada to Her Majesty, praying that Rupert's Land and the North West Territory may be united with the Dominion of Canada, and placed under the authority of the Canadian Parliament, and the letter from the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, dated the 25th January,* on that subject.

Her Majesty's Government think that it will be right to comply, under proper conditions, with the wish expressed by the Parliament of Canada, and they propose to introduce a Bill for the purpose into the Imperial Parliament. They desire, however, to pay due regard to the interests of Her Majesty's subjects already concerned in the territory; and with that view they will be prepared to make provision for any reasonable terms which may be agreed upon with the Hudson's Bay Company.

I am desired to call your attention to the negotiations which took place in 1864, between the Secretary of State and the Company, as recorded in the correspondence referred to in the margin, and I am to request that you will state what are the terms which the Company would be prepared to accept, proceeding on the principles then adopted, namely, that the compensation should be derived from the future proceeds of the lands, and of any gold which may be discovered in Rupert's Land, coupled with reservations of defined portions of land to the Company.

I am, &c.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London,
24 April 1868.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd instant, addressed to the Deputy Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, and to inform you that the subject-matter of this communication will be taken into consideration by the Committee, and a reply made thereto at an early date.

I take this opportunity to inform you, that I have this day been elected Governor of the Company, in the room of the late Sir Edmund Head, Bart.

I am, &c.

COPY of a LETTER from the Earl of Kimberley to the Right Honourable
C. B. Adderley, M.P.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London,
13 May 1868.

Your letter of the 23rd ultimo, which I have already had the honour to acknowledge, has been carefully considered by the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, and I am authorised by the Committee to make the following reply.

The

The Committee wish in the first place to express the satisfaction with which they have learnt that Her Majesty's Government, whilst thinking it right to comply, under proper provisions, with the prayer of the Address to the Queen from the Parliament of Canada, that Rupert's Land and the North West Territory may be united with the Dominion of Canada, desire to pay due regard to the interests of Her Majesty's subjects already concerned in the territory, and with that view will be prepared to make provision for any reasonable terms which may be agreed upon with the Hudson's Bay Company.

Before proceeding to state the conditions which they would undertake to recommend the proprietors to accept, the Committee think it necessary to point out the important difference in the basis of the negotiations between the Secretary of State for the Colonies in 1864, to which you refer in your letter, from that of the negotiations into which his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos now invites the Company to enter.

In the letter of Mr. Fortescue of 11th March 1864, the first condition proposed by the Duke of Newcastle was —

“That within certain geographical limits (coinciding more or less with those laid down in your letter), the territorial rights of the Company should be surrendered to the Crown.”

These geographical limits are defined in the letter of Sir Edmund Head of 13th* November 1863, as follows:—

Printed as Appendix III.
p. 66.

* Query 11th.

“With regard to the extent of the proposed Colony, of which the seat of Government would be Red River or Fort Garry, the Committee presume that his Grace would wish it to include the whole country from the frontier of the United States to the north branch of the Saskatchewan, and to extend eastward towards Lake Superior, as far as the frontier of Canada, wherever the precise line of that frontier may be found. Perhaps the most convenient limit for the northern boundary would be either the Saskatchewan itself, or a line running from the Rocky Mountains eastward through Edmonton House and Fort Cumberland, and from the latter following the Saskatchewan down to Lake Winnipeg. Nothing would be gained by going further to the northward, nor by including the eastern side of Lake Winnipeg; but from the mouth of the Winnipeg river, where it enters the lake, the line of demarcation might be run eastward until it cut the Canadian frontier somewhere north of Lake Superior or Lake Huron.”

From this quotation his Grace will see that the terms to which Sir Edmund Head stated in his letter of 13th April 1864, that the Committee were willing to agree, referred only to a portion of the territory held by the Company, being that portion which it is supposed may be capable of settlement.

Now, on the other hand, it is proposed, as the Committee understand your letter, to extinguish the Company's territorial rights in the whole of Rupert's Land, and to place the whole of Rupert's Land, together with the North Western Territory, under the Government of Canada.

The Committee have invariably expressed their anxiety to offer no obstacle to any arrangements for facilitating the colonisation of all such parts of Rupert's Land as can possibly be settled; they have only asked that reasonable compensation be secured to the Company for its territorial rights; and in the letter of Sir E. Head of the 25th of January last,* they disclaimed all desire to impede the general policy of transferring the Government of the North West Territory and of the Hudson's Bay Territory to the Government of Canada; but his Grace will not fail to perceive that there is a wide difference between the terms assented to by the Committee in their correspondence with the Duke of Newcastle, under which the Company would have retained the exclusive control over that part of the territory where their fur trade is principally carried on, and the surrender of the whole of their territorial rights; and it becomes, therefore, of the utmost consequence to the Company that such provisions shall be made as will enable them to carry on their fur trade without interruption.

Bearing these considerations in mind, the Committee are prepared to recommend the proprietors to accept the following terms, which, as his Grace will perceive, are based upon the terms proposed in Sir Edmund Head's letter of 13th

April 1864, with such additions as the altered state of the case seems to them to require.

1. That the Company shall surrender all the territory which they hold under their Charter, with the reservation of all their posts and stations, with an area of 6,000 acres round each such post or station; this reservation of 6,000 acres, however, not to apply to the Red River Settlement.

2. That the Company shall be entitled to receive one shilling for every acre of the land surrendered, which shall be disposed of by the Government, whether by sale, lease, or free grant, or parted with in any other manner.

3. That one quarter of the sum received by the Government as an export duty for gold and silver, or on leases of gold and silver mines, or for licenses for gold and silver mining, shall be paid to the Company; the amount to be received under this and the preceding Article being limited to a total sum conjointly of one million sterling.

4. That the Canadian Government shall confirm all titles to land that has been alienated by the Company at Red River or elsewhere.

5. That whenever the Government shall have sold, leased, granted, or otherwise parted with 50,000 acres, the Company shall be entitled, for every such 50,000 acres, to a free grant of 5,000 acres of wild land, to be selected by them.

6. That no tax shall be imposed upon any land belonging to the Company not under cultivation, and no exceptional tax shall be imposed upon the Company's other lands or property, or upon the Company's servants.

7. That the disputed matter of the Company's lands in Canada be settled by issuing grants on the footing formerly agreed upon by Mr. Vankoughnet and Mr. Hopkins.

8. That the Canadian Government shall take over from the Company all the materials for the construction of the telegraph now in Rupert's Land and the North West Territory, on payment of the cost price and the expenses already incurred, with interest.

9. That full liberty to carry on their trade shall be secured to the Company free from any special or exceptional taxation.

10. That until the million sterling stipulated by Articles 2 and 3 shall be paid to the Company, no export duties shall be levied by Canada upon furs exported by the Company; and no import duties shall be levied upon articles imported by the Company into the North Western Territory, and into that part of Rupert's Land which is not included within the geographical limits laid down in Sir E. Head's letter of 13th November 1863; the Company to be further entitled to import goods in bond, free of duty, through any part of the surrendered territory into the North Western Territory and the aforesaid part of Rupert's Land.¹

Lastly, that in order to afford to the Company a guarantee for the due fulfilment of these provisions by the Canadian Government, power shall be given to the Company to bring before the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council for decision any matters connected with the carrying into effect the foregoing provisions, in respect of which they may consider themselves aggrieved.

The Committee assume that all charges of a public character which now fall on the Company will be transferred to the Canadian Government, and that in order to prevent any dispute with Canada hereafter as to the limits of the territory to which the conditions to be agreed upon shall apply, the boundary line between the territory surrendered by the Company and the present Dominion of Canada, will be precisely defined before the cession is completed.

The Committee desire me, in conclusion, to refer to the letter of Sir E. Head of the 25th of January last, and especially to the last paragraph of that letter. They feel confident that they will not be deemed unreasonable in asking that, in transferring the North West Territory to Canada, such provisions shall be made as may secure to the Company full liberty to trade as at present, as well as the unmolested possession of their posts, stations, and other property, free from any exceptional duties on their property or servants.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 7 August 1868.

A BILL having now passed through both Houses of Parliament, conferring the necessary power for the surrender to Her Majesty by the Hudson's Bay Company of their territories and privileges, on such terms as may be agreed upon, I am directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to transmit to you a copy of the Act.

In your Lordship's letter, dated the 13th of May last,* there are certain points in the terms set forth which the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos would not feel at liberty to agree in their present shape. His Grace believes that the best prospect of arriving at an agreement satisfactory to both parties will probably be afforded by personal consultation. He would propose, therefore, to meet your Lordship, at such time as may be convenient for the purpose to your Lordship, and to any members of the Company whose assistance you would desire. Some time in the ensuing month will, probably, be suitable.

Sir,

Kimberley House, 16 August 1868.

I BEG leave to acknowledge and thank you for your letter of the 7th instant.

I request you will have the goodness to inform his Grace the Duke of Buckingham that I shall gladly avail myself of his suggestion that I should have an interview with him next month to discuss the terms proposed in my letter of the 13th of May last;† and I will, when the time approaches, take an opportunity of communicating with his Grace as to the day and hour when it will be convenient to him to receive me and such other members of the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company as may accompany me.

C. B. Adderley, M.P.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London,
27 October 1868.

THE Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company have received from Sir C. Lampson and myself reports of the interviews which we have had the honour to have with his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, on the subject of the proposed cession to Canada of the Company's territorial rights; and they have anxiously considered how far they would be justified in altering the terms proposed

No. 10.

Kimberley to the Right Hon. C. B.
Adderley, M.P.

proposed in my letter of May 13th, with a view to meet the objections which have been raised to them.

They understand his Grace to suggest that, instead of the Company being entitled to a free grant of 5,000 acres, to be selected by them, for every 50,000 acres which shall be alienated by the Government, the whole territory should be at once divided into sections on the map, and that a certain portion of each section should be allotted to the Company, by a fixed geographical rule, the Company taking its chance as to the value of the land which might fall to its share; and further, that, in order to meet the evils which might arise from the existence of so many blocks of wild land free from taxation, the exemption of the Company's wild land from taxes should continue only for a limited period, say, for example, 20 years.

The Committee regret that they are unable to agree to this mode of allotment. One of the chief inducements to their shareholders to accept the proposed arrangements would be, that according to the plan of the Committee, if, as it is hoped, the colonisation of the country proceeded rapidly under the new Government, the Company would receive blocks of land of moderate size, in the vicinity of the new settlements, which would possess an actual value in the market. But if the plan suggested by the Duke of Buckingham were adopted, instead of the grants to the Company proceeding equally with the progress of colonisation, the whole country would be dotted over with isolated tracts of wild land belonging to the Company, many of which, even if ultimately available for settlement, must necessarily remain entirely valueless until long after the expiration of the 20 years, and, if taxed, would be a heavy burden instead of a source of profit to the Company.

The Committee are willing, however, to agree that the exemption from taxes on the Company's wild land shall only apply to each block of 5,000 acres, which they may be entitled from time to time to select, for a period of 20 years from the date of selection. This would give the Company a reasonable time within which to turn each block to profitable account, and at the same time the ultimate liability to taxation would prevent these lands from becoming an obstruction to the free progress of settlement. The Committee think it right to add that they do not propose that land purchased by the Company should be reckoned in the 50,000 acres, and that the selection of the land by the Company naturally implies that the Company shall bear the cost of such a survey as may be necessary to define the land selected, it being understood that the Company shall have the option of making the survey by means of their own officers.

The Committee are also quite willing that land granted for such purposes as roads, churches, or schools, shall not be liable to the payment of 1 s. per acre to the Company, provided that the exemption is restricted to the land actually used in the construction of the work, and that the exceptions are specified in the agreement with the Government for the cession of the Company's rights.

They also admit that it is proper that a similar exemption should apply to land set apart as Indian reserves, on the understanding that these reserves will be made by Her Majesty's Government, as they are informed it is his Grace's intention they shall be, before the Company's territory is transferred to Canada; and that if, at any time before the million sterling is paid to the Company, such land shall be used or granted for other purposes, it shall become liable to the payment of 1 s. an acre, in common with other land.

With respect to the land which the Committee have asked that the Company may retain as private property round their posts and stations, if 6,000 acres are thought to be too much in that part of Rupert's Land which is suited for settlement, the Committee will consent that the 6,000 acres shall only apply to posts which do not lie within the limits referred to under Article 10, in my letter of 13th May, as laid down in Sir E. Head's letter of 13th November 1863, and that within those limits the extent of land to be retained round each post shall not exceed 3,000 acres; all the lands retained to be free from taxation, except when reclaimed from a wild state. Lastly, the Committee cannot deny that the stipulation that the Company shall have power to bring before the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council matters in dispute, is open to the objection that the Privy Council acts only as a court of appeal; and as they presume that the Company would be entitled to appeal from the local courts to the Privy Council, they do not think it indispensable to insist on this demand.

The

The Committee, in declaring their willingness to make these alterations in the terms which they proposed, are actuated by a sincere desire to arrive at an agreement with Her Majesty's Government; but they are conscious that they would be wanting in their duty if they did not add, that at the half-yearly meeting of their shareholders, held since my letter of 13th May was written, opinions were expressed strongly adverse to any arrangement for the cession of the Company's territorial rights, which did not secure the payment, as compensation, of a sum of hard money.

Sir E. Head, in the concluding paragraphs of his letter of 13th April 1864,* in which terms were proposed similar to those now under discussion, but involving the cession of a part only of the Company's territory, avowed to the Duke of Newcastle the apprehensions of the Committee that it might be difficult to convince the shareholders that the offers then made were to their advantage; and although the Committee have felt bound not to recede from the terms contained in my letter of 13th May,† which were based on their former offers, they cannot conceal from his Grace that they anticipate a very serious opposition on the part of their shareholders to any such arrangement as that which they have put forward. * Vide Appendix III., page 72.

His Grace will recollect that, at our first interview, before the Canadian delegates had started for England, Sir C. Lampson and I strongly insisted upon this point, and that we suggested that if Canada would agree to pay to the Company one million sterling, in bonds, such a settlement might be acceptable to our proprietors. † Page 22.

The Committee entirely share this view. The more they consider the very complicated arrangements which have been devised as a substitute for the payment of a sum of money at once, the more they are convinced that it is as much for the interest of Canada as of the Company that the claims of the Company should be provided for by a direct compensation, and not by contingent payments extending over a long series of years, and by grants of land under stipulations which, although indispensable to protect the Company from spoliation, would be invidious in the eyes of the future settlers, and embarrassing to the Colonial Government.

At the same time the Committee desire me to assure his Grace that if their terms, as now modified, are agreed to by Her Majesty's Government, the Committee will use all their influence to induce the proprietors to confirm them.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Hon. C. B. Adderley, M.P., to the Earl of Kimberley.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 1 December 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of the 27th October,‡ and to express his Grace's regret that the serious illness of Mr. McDougall, one of the two delegates sent from Canada, which prevented his Grace from communicating with him, should have caused so long a delay in the answer.

His Grace regrets to perceive that the letter under reply does not afford much prospect of an arrangement being come to.

Her Majesty's Government, in the letter of Mr. Adderley of 23rd April§ to Sir Curtis Lampson, referring to the negotiations which took place in 1864, requested to be informed "what terms the Company would be prepared to accept, proceeding on the principles then adopted, namely, that the compensation should be derived from the future proceeds of the lands, and of any gold which may be discovered in Rupert's Land, coupled with reservations of defined portions of land to the Company." § Page 22.

To this your Lordship replied that the Committee were prepared to recommend—

1. That the Company shall surrender all the territory which they hold under their Charter, with the reservation of all their posts and stations, with an area of 6,000 acres round each such post or station; this reservation of 6,000 acres, however, not to apply to the Red River Settlement.

2. That the Company shall be entitled to receive 1*s.* for every acre of the land surrendered, which shall be disposed of by the Government, whether by sale, lease, or free grant, or parted with in any other manner.

3. That one quarter of the sum received by the Government as an export duty for gold and silver, or on leases of gold and silver mines, or for licenses for gold and silver mining, shall be paid to the Company; the amount to be received under this and the preceding article being limited to a total sum conjointly of 1,000,000 l. sterling.

4. That the Canadian Government shall confirm all titles to land that have been alienated by the Company at Red River or elsewhere.

5. That whenever the Government shall have sold, leased, granted, or otherwise parted with 50,000 acres, the Company shall be entitled for every such 50,000 acres to a free grant of 5,000 acres of wild land, to be selected by them.

6. That no tax shall be imposed upon any land belonging to the Company not under cultivation, and no exceptional tax shall be imposed upon the Company's other lands or property, or upon the Company's servants.

7. That the disputed matter of the Company's lands in Canada be settled by issuing grants on the footing formerly agreed upon by Mr. Vankoughnet and Mr. Hopkins.

8. That the Canadian Government shall take over from the Company all the materials for the construction of the telegraph now in Rupert's Land, and the North West Territory, on payment of the cost price, and the expenses already incurred with interest.

9. That full liberty to carry on their trade shall be secured to the Company free from any special or exceptional taxation.

10. That until 1,000,000 l. sterling, stipulated by Articles 2 and 3, shall be paid to the Company, no export duties shall be levied by Canada upon furs exported by the Company, and no import duties shall be levied upon articles imported by the Company into the North Western Territory, and into that part of Rupert's Land which is not included within the geographical limits laid down in Sir E. Head's letter of 13th November 1863; the Company to be further entitled to import goods in bond, free of duty, through any part of the surrendered territory into the North Western Territory, and the aforesaid part of Rupert's Land.

Lastly. That in order to afford to the Company a guarantee for the due fulfilment of these provisions by the Canadian Government, power shall be given to the Company to bring before the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council for decision any matters connected with the carrying into effect the foregoing provisions, in respect of which they may consider themselves aggrieved.

His Grace intimated in reply that there were "certain points in the terms set forth to which he would not feel at liberty to agree in their present shape"; and at the meetings which ensued, his Grace expressed his strong objections to the principle of the proposals of the Company respecting reserves of land to be selected from time to time at the discretion of the Company, and to the principle of special exemption from taxation in their favour, and expressed his opinion that there were many points in the other proposals requiring material modification.

Your Lordship's present letter intimates that the Company are unable to agree to certain modifications which suggested themselves during the discussions as modes of avoiding the objections entertained by his Grace, and proceeds to state the changes which the Company are willing to agree to, and which his Grace understands to be as follows:—

1st. That the exemption from taxes on the Company's wild lands shall only last for a period of 20 years from the date of selection.

2ndly. That 2ndly. That any lands purchased by the Company shall not reckon in the quantities of 50,000 acres in respect of which the Company should be entitled to select 5,000 acres.

3rdly. That the Company shall bear the expense of surveying their blocks of 5,000 acres.

4thly. That lands granted for such purposes as roads, churches, or schools shall not be liable to the payment of one shilling per acre to the Company.

5thly. That the same exception shall apply to lands set apart by Her Majesty's Government as Indian reserves, before the Company's territory is transferred to Canada.

6thly. That with regard to land around posts beyond what is designated the Fertile Belt, 6,000 acres shall be granted, and that only 3,000 acres shall be the quantity within that belt.

7thly. That the proposed recourse to the Privy Council as a Court of First Instance shall be abandoned.

His Grace is unable to recommend the adoption by Her Majesty's Government of such terms for the surrender of the territorial rights of the Company. Whatever be the future government of the territory, whether by the Hudson's Bay Company or by Canada, or by any other authority, very considerable annual outlay will have, as in all other unsettled countries, to be incurred in clearing roads, maintenance and opening of navigation, &c., and surveying.

For these charges the produce of the early sales of land is the natural resource. But by the Company's proposals they would deprive the future Government of any prospect, for a long time at least, of receiving any income.

1st. They first stipulate, not for a share of the receipts from land, but for a definite sum per acre, a sum in all probability far in excess of what is likely in practice to be obtained for the greater portion.

2ndly. They stipulate that they shall retain certain reserves around their posts, amounting, therefore, according to the lists of posts handed in by Sir C. Lampson, to upwards of 500,000 acres of the land most likely to be made available for settlement and sale, as being the land surrounding the established posts of the Company, which they have after long experience retained as the most advantageous positions for trade and occupation, and of which nearly 100,000 acres surround the posts in what is called the Fertile Belt of the territory.

3rdly. And that they shall also receive a share of mineral rights and confirmation of all titles.

4thly. They proceed to stipulate for a further reserve of one-tenth of the whole territory, and that the Company shall have this tenth in blocks of 5,000 acres, to be selected as each successive 50,000 is alienated, and not merely to select in the same locality, but anywhere; so that, for instance, if land is alienated in the higher parts of the Rocky Mountains, at Jasper House, for example, in consequence of the mining operations in that district; or for fishing stations or mining purposes on the coast of Hudson's Bay or Labrador, the Company should be entitled to select the proportionate reserve in such part of the most fertile region as they may consider will realize the utmost profit to them, whether by its cultivation or development, or by its power of obstruction to others.

These lands, moreover, are to be exempt from taxation for a period of 20 years from selection, and the lands retained round the posts to be entirely free from taxation unless reclaimed.

These conditions his Grace cannot accede to; his Grace would, however, recommend Her Majesty's Government to agree to a surrender on the following conditions:—

1st. That the land to be retained by the Company in the neighbourhood of their posts shall vary according to the importance of the post, in no case whatever exceeding 6,000 acres in all for any one post, including the cultivated or reclaimed land now occupied; and in no case exceeding 3,000 acres within the Fertile Belt for principal posts, and 500 acres for minor posts; the additional additional land retained to be set out, so as not to include frontage to rivers, or tracks, roads, or portages.

2nd. The Company to receive one-fourth share of all receipt from land. If any free grants of land be made for other than public purposes, such land shall be deemed to have been sold at 1s. per acre.

3rd. That one quarter of the sum received by the Government as an export duty for gold and silver, or on leases of gold and silver mines, or for licenses for gold and silver mining, shall be paid to the Company; the amount to be received under this and the preceding article being limited to a total sum conjointly of 1,000,000 £. sterling.

4th. That the Imperial Government shall confirm all titles to land that has been alienated by the Company at Red River or elsewhere.

5th. That the Company shall have the option of selecting five lots of not less than 200 acres each in each township, whenever it is set out, on payment of rateable cost of survey.

6th. That no exceptional tax shall be imposed upon the Company's lands, trade, or servants.

7th. That full liberty to carry on their trade shall be secured to the Company.

8th. The Company to have similar reserves granted them in connection with their posts in the North West Territory.

9th. The boundary lines between Hudson's Bay and Canada to be defined, and between Hudson's Bay and North West Territory to be defined, by a natural or geographical boundary, agreed on.

10th. No wild lands to be taxable until surveyed and marked.

11th. That whenever the payment of 1,000,000 £. sterling, under Article 3, shall have been made as therein provided, in cash, or otherwise extinguished, by any payment or commutation, by Canada, to the satisfaction of the Company, the rights of the Company to further selections of lots, to royalties and share of land receipts, shall cease.

12th. Such lands as Her Majesty's Government shall deem necessary to be set aside for the use of the native Indian population shall be reserved altogether from this arrangement, and the Company shall not be entitled to the payment of any share of receipts, or any royalty therefrom, or right of selection in respect thereof, under previous articles, unless for such part, if any, of these lands as may be appropriated, with the consent of the Crown, to any other purpose than that of the benefit of the Indian natives.

If these terms are approved, Her Majesty's Government will be prepared to conclude an arrangement, and to submit it to the Canadian Government for their favourable consideration; but if the Company shall not assent to these conditions, Her Majesty's Government will consider themselves unpledged by any of the offers that have been made.

COPY of a LETTER from Sir Curtis Lampson, Bart., to Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
22 December 1868.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to enclose, for the information of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, extracts of letters recently received from Governor Mactavish, dated Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, 10th October and 11th November, from which it will be seen that the Canadian Government have intimated, through an agent sent to Red River by the direction of the Canadian Commissioner for Public Works, their intention to construct a road from Fort Garry to the Lake of the Woods, through the territory of the Company. A trespass upon the freehold territory of the Company must be committed in order to carry out this intention.

The Committee cannot but look upon this proceeding as a most unusual and improper one, especially as negotiations are at present pending for the transfer of the territory of the Company to Canada. This trespass will be an actual encroachment on the soil of the Company, and that too by a Government which has constantly, up to this time, and still disputes the right of this Company over that soil.

The Committee therefore ask for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government, but at the same time they beg leave to say that any application by Her Majesty's Government, or the Canadian Government, for permission to make this road will be favourably entertained.

Enclosure in No. 14.

EXTRACTS of Letters from Governor Mactavish to W. G. Smith, Esq., Secretary, dated, respectively, Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, the 10th October and 11th November 1868.

10th October.—“ I AM informed that the Canadian Government have forwarded, in charge of a Mr. Snow, a quantity of provisions, which Mr. Snow has written to one of the merchants here to provide freight for from Georgetown, and appointed the 15th instant as the date on which the supplies will be at Georgetown. Mr. Snow himself says nothing on the subject, but it is rumoured here that he comes up for the purpose of superintending the making of a cart-road from this place to the Lake of the Woods, and that the provisions he is bringing are to be used in payment of labour on the above road.”

11th November.—“ Mr. Snow, who I before advised you was expected here to superintend in making a road from this settlement to the Lake of the Woods, with a view to opening direct communication with Canada, arrived some time ago, and is now on the eve of commencing operations. He has brought in with him some provisions, with which he purposes paying for labour on the road. On his arrival here, he called on me to show his instructions from the Commissioner of Public Works. These contained nothing of any consequence beyond the expression of a hope on the part of the Commissioner that the Company's agent here would offer no opposition to Mr. Snow's operations, but would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Imperial Government, which, as generally people here regard Mr. Snow's arrival as opportune, on account of the scarcity of provisions, I agreed to do; and without instructions to protest against Mr. Snow's action, I did not think it politic to do so.

Sir,

Downing-street, 4 January 1869.

I AM directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 22nd ultimo,* stating that the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company propose to postpone sending in their answer to Mr. Adderley's letter of 1st December, until after the election of a new Governor, in the room of the Right Hon. the Earl of Kimberley, for which purpose a General Court of the Proprietors has been summoned for Tuesday, the 5th inst.

I am to express Lord Granville's hope that the Committee will not allow any unnecessary delay to take place in coming to a decision upon the proposals contained in Mr. Adderley's letter.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, Bart., to Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London,
13 January 1869.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you, for the information of Earl Granville, that I was elected by the shareholders of this Company, on Tuesday the 5th instant, to the office of Governor, vacant by the resignation of the Earl of Kimberley.

It now becomes my duty to address you in reply to Mr. Adderley's letter, dated the 1st December 1868,† which was received by my predecessor on the eve of his resignation, and to which, in consequence of that event, the Committee have not been able to send an earlier answer.

Before making any observations upon the particular topics discussed in Mr. Adderley's letter, I am desired by the Committee to assure Lord Granville that they continue sincerely anxious to promote the object, with a view to which this Company was reconstructed five-and-a-half years ago, viz., the gradual settlement of such portions of their territory as admit of colonisation; that they adhere to the opinion expressed in their resolution of the 28th August 1863, viz.: that the time has come when it is expedient that the authority, executive and judicial, over the Red River Settlement, and the south-western portion of Rupert's Land should be vested in officers deriving such authority directly from the Crown; and that they cheerfully accept the decision of Her Majesty's Government, communicated to them in Mr. Adderley's letter of the 23rd April 1868,‡ viz., that the whole of the Company's territory should, under proper conditions, be united with the Dominion of Canada, and placed under the authority of the Canadian Parliament.

Acting in accordance with the wish of Her Majesty's Government, as conveyed to them in Mr. Elliot's letter of the 23rd January 1867,* the Committee have declined to encourage overtures which have been made to them by private persons for the purchase of portions of the Company's territory, with a view to their colonisation, and have kept the whole question in abeyance during the time that the negotiations, which have led to the Confederation of the British Provinces constituting the Dominion of Canada, were proceeding. In the whole of that time they have taken no step which could give rise to fresh complications, or could place any new difficulty in the way of the admission of their territory into the Confederation when the proper moment should arrive; and when they were informed by Mr. Adderley's letter of the 23rd of April that the Parliament of Canada had addressed Her Majesty upon the subject, and were requested to state the terms which the Company would be prepared to accept, proceeding on the principle adopted in the interrupted negotiation of 1864, they unhesitatingly complied with the desire of the Government.

* Printed in Appendix III., page 76.

It is therefore with surprise, as well as with regret, that they have learnt from the letter now under reply, that the terms proposed by them, even when most strictly in conformity with the principles adopted in 1864, are considered by Her Majesty's Government to be inadmissible, and not to afford much prospect of an arrangement being come to. They find, for instance, that the stipulation that the Company should receive one shilling per acre on lands hereafter sold, which was originally suggested to the Committee by his Grace the late Duke of Newcastle, in Mr. Fortescue's letter of 11th March 1864,† and which has never hitherto been called in question, is the first point to which exception is now taken. Objections are also raised against several other proposals which have been long before the Government, while no notice at all is taken of some which have been made for the first time with a view to the protection of the Company's trade, and with regard to which the Committee are left in ignorance whether they are considered admissible or not.

The Committee, although somewhat embarrassed by this apparent change in the spirit of the correspondence, desire me, however, to make the following observations upon some of the remarks contained in Mr. Adderley's letter, in order that there may be no misapprehension as to the bearing of their proposals.

The Committee are aware that, as is stated in Mr. Adderley's letter, in order to prepare the country for settlement, very considerable annual outlay will have to be incurred, and that for this charge the produce of the early sales of land is the natural resource; but they are at a loss to understand upon what ground it is alleged that their proposals would deprive the future Government of the ceded territory of "any prospect, for a long time at least, of receiving any income." The only part of the territory in which it is probable that any early or extensive settlement will take place is the part known as the Fertile Belt. It has been confidently asserted by independent persons who have travelled through the country that a great part of this land is not inferior in quality, or in advantages of climate, to the adjoining United States territory, now forming the State of Minnesota; and it has been justly pointed out that, being prairie land, it does not require much labour to render it fit for cultivation. But the price of land in Minnesota ranges, as the Committee are informed, from 5 s. to 1 l. per acre. The Committee think, therefore, that the fixed payment of 1 s. per acre, proposed by the Duke of Newcastle, and accepted by them as a basis of compensation, cannot be deemed to be unreasonable in so far as relates to land sold within the limits set forth in Sir Edmund Head's letter of the 11th November 1863.‡

As regards any portions of land lying outside those limits which may possibly be sold, the Committee think it very improbable that such sales will take place except for mining purposes, in which case the payment of 1 s. an acre could hardly be deemed excessive. In order to save trouble and to obviate disputes, therefore, the Committee proposed the fixed payment of 1 s. per acre in respect of all sales, wherever they may take place; and they believe that the arrangement would have been, on the whole, more favourable to Canada than that suggested by Mr. Adderley.

Mr. Adderley proceeds to remark, with reference to Lord Kimberley's proposal, that the Company should retain certain reserves around their posts, that the reservations would amount to upwards of 500,000 acres. It was, however, stated by Lord Kimberley and the Deputy Governor, at an interview with the

Duke of Buckingham upon this subject, that the Committee were willing to confine their claim for reserves to the limits defined by Sir Edmund Head's letter of the 11th November 1863; that they were prepared to agree that such reservations should be measured by the importance of the posts to which they were to be attached, and should in no case exceed 3,000 acres. The total quantity of land to be retained by the Company under this arrangement would not exceed 50,000 acres. The Committee cannot agree to the absolute exclusion of these reserves from all frontage "to rivers or tracks, roads, or portages," which would render them entirely valueless, though they would have been ready to consider any reasonable limitation of these special advantages.

As regards the right of selecting lands for the Company in proportion to the quantities sold from time to time by the Government, the Committee desire to call Lord Granville's attention to the reasons given in Sir E. Head's letter of the 13th April 1864 for adopting this mode of reservation in preference to that of "setting apart beforehand a number of isolated tracts of wild land dotted over the surface of the Colony, and calculated to impede the free flow of settlement in the territory."

Their proposal was framed with reference to sales in the Fertile Belt only, and it never entered into their minds to contemplate such contingencies as those suggested in Mr. Adderley's letter. In order, however, to obviate all cavil upon this point, they would have been quite willing to limit the Company's right of selection to the case of lands sold or alienated within Sir E. Head's limits, provided that it were agreed that no alienations should take place beyond those limits, except either for distinctly public purposes, or for the bond fide carrying on of agricultural or mining operations. As regards Mr. Adderley's proposal, that the right of selection should be confined to five lots of 200 acres each, in each township as it is set out, the Committee can only remark that the character of this proposal must depend upon the size of the township, of which no indication has been given.

The Committee still adhere to the opinion, that under the peculiar circumstances of the proposed transfer of their territory, it would be reasonable that their wild lands should, for a limited time, be exempt from taxation, in order to allow them a fair opportunity of bringing them into profitable cultivation.

They observe that Mr. Adderley makes no reference to the 10th stipulation contained in Lord Kimberley's letter of the 13th May;† viz., that until the stipulated sum of 1,000,000 £ sterling has been paid to the Company, no export duties shall be levied by Canada upon furs exported by the Company, nor any import duties on articles imported by them into the North Western Territory, and into that part of Rupert's Land which is not included within the geographical limits laid down in Sir Edmund Head's letter of 11th November 1863. This is a point to which the Committee attached very great importance. If it had been proposed by the Canadian Government to make a direct purchase of the Company's territory, and to pay the price for it at once, the Company would of course have accepted their fair share of the burdens which annexation might be expected to involve. But if the purchase-money is to be withheld until the Canadian Government have sold off 20,000,000 acres of the land, or have realised a considerable sum by the produce of mining operations, it is reasonable that the pressure of the fiscal burdens, which would fall almost exclusively upon the Company's trade should be suspended also. Otherwise it might happen that, in consequence of the neglect or the inability of the Canadian Government to proceed with the settlement of the territory, the Company would be subjected to very heavy contributions to the Colonial Treasury without receiving the smallest benefit in return. As an illustration of the extent to which they might thus be injured, were no limitation placed upon the Colonial power of taxation, I may observe that, according to the present Canadian tariff, the duty upon the value of the Company's imports alone would amount to about 20,000 £ a-year; while any export duty that might be laid upon their furs would operate still further to their disadvantage. The Committee feel confident that Lord Granville will acknowledge the reasonableness of their taking precautions against such a contingency.

The Committee have desired me to offer to Lord Granville these explanations of their proposals, in order to show that they have done their best to comply with the desire of Her Majesty's Government, that they should submit a scheme founded on the principles of the negotiations of 1864. They have not, however, failed to perceive, from an early period of the lengthened correspondence which has taken place between them and the Government, that those principles necessarily gave rise to many difficulties; and they have felt this the more strongly since the negotiations, originally commenced between the Company and Her Majesty's Government, have virtually become negotiations between the Company and the Government of Canada. They cannot disguise from themselves the danger which exists that arrangements so complicated, and involving so many topics for future discussion, are likely to lead to the Company's being placed in a position of antagonism to the Government of Canada, and to the creation of a state of things injurious not only to their own interests but to the welfare of the country itself.

They are sincerely anxious to co-operate with the Canadian Government in the settlement, development, and improvement of the territories with which they have been so long connected, and they believe that if the arrangements between them can be placed on a satisfactory footing, it will be in their power to render material assistance to the Colonial authorities in this respect. They believe that if a simpler arrangement than that which has recently been under discussion could be adopted, and if the Canadian Government were prepared to complete the purchase of the territory at once, by the payment of a sum of money or by the delivery of bonds, it would conduce to a more satisfactory result than the prolongation of a controversy as to the minute points of such a scheme as has been under consideration.

Should Lord Granville be of this opinion, and should his Lordship think it desirable to recommend any proposal of the kind to the Canadian delegates, this Committee will gladly place themselves in fuller communication with him on the subject.

I LAID before Earl Granville your letter of the 22nd* ultimo, relating to an invasion of the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, apprehended by them from certain steps taken under the authority of the Canadian Government.

A copy of your letter was, by his Lordship's direction, forwarded to Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall, with a request that they would furnish any explanation it might be in their power to afford respecting the proceedings of the Canadian Government that were referred to; and I am desired to transmit to you, for the information of the Hudson's Bay Company, a copy of the letter which has been received from those gentlemen in reply.

Right Hon. Sir
Stafford H. Northcote, Bart., M.P., to Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London,
2 February 1869.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 28th January, addressed to the Deputy Governor of this Company, enclosing a communication from Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall on the subject of the recent proceedings of the Canadian Government in the matter of the construction of a road through the Company's territory, between Fort Garry and the Lake of the Woods.

After the distinct statement contained in Sir Curtis Lampson's letter of the 22nd December, that the Company, while protesting against a trespass on their land, land, were prepared favourably to entertain any application for permission to make such a road, either on the part of the Imperial, or of the Canadian Government, the Committee think it unnecessary to discuss the greater portion of the letter of the Canadian Ministers. Their objection is not to the road being made, but to its being undertaken by the Canadian Government as a matter of right, as though the territory through which it is to pass were Canadian. Such a step, taken at a moment when negotiations are in progress for the transfer of the Company's possessions to Canada, and taken by a Government which openly disputes their title to this portion of them, could not have been allowed to pass unchallenged without derogating from the Company's rights. The Canadian Government themselves seem to have been alive to this. Mr. Mactavish states that the agent of that Government (Mr. Snow), on arriving at the Red River, communicated to him his instructions from the Commissioner of Public Works in Canada, containing the expression of "a hope on the part of the Commissioner that the Company's agent here would offer no opposition to Mr. Snow's operations, but would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Imperial Government." Governor Mactavish, upon this, very properly allowed Mr. Snow to commence his operations; and so far as this Company is concerned, no impediment has been, or will be, offered to the prosecution of the work.

If it were worth while to discuss that part of the letter of the Canadian Ministers which refers to the circumstances under which the construction of the road was ordered, the Committee would be able to show that the Company had in no way failed in their duty to the Colony, but that they had promptly taken measures for the relief of its inhabitants, and had supplied large sums, both by direct grants and by subscriptions raised under their auspices for that purpose, at a period anterior to the appropriation of the Canadian Road Grant. They would also be able to point out how the delay which has occurred in opening up communications, and otherwise developing the resources of the Red River Settlement, is due to the restraint which has been imposed upon them by Her Majesty's Government at the request of Canada, and not to any negligence or indifference of their own.

But the Committee desire to avoid the raising of a false issue, and they accordingly instruct me to re-state to Earl Granville the precise complaint which they have to make. It is this: That while negotiations are going on for the acquisition of their territory by Canada, the Canadian Government are endeavouring to exercise rights of ownership over a portion of that territory to the exclusion of the Company, and to the prejudice of their title. This they are doing by virtue of an old claim which they have repeatedly advanced, which the Company have invariably disputed and have declared themselves ready to contest before a court of law, and which Her Majesty's Government, acting under the advice of various Law Officers of the Crown, have declined to endorse. The Canadian Government have hitherto shown no inclination to bring their claim to the test of a judicial decision, and in the absence of any such decision, the Committee consider it not unreasonable to ask that due respect should be paid to the Company's uninterrupted possession of the territory for two centuries, and to the numerous and weighty legal opinions which have from time to time been given in their favour.

In appealing to Earl Granville for support in this matter, instead of entering into a controversy with Canada, or taking legal steps to enforce the Company's rights, the Committee have been actuated by a desire to proceed as far as possible in accordance with the views and wishes of Her Majesty's Government, as they have endeavoured to do throughout the pending negotiations for the establishment of a settled form of government at the Red River. They desire now respectfully but confidently to claim the support and protection of the Colonial Minister against any invasion of the Company's rights which may have been prompted or facilitated by the policy which they have adopted in order to meet the wishes of the Colonial Office.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Downing-street, 22 February 1869.

I AM directed by Earl Granville to enclose, for the information of the Directors of the Hudson's Bay Company, the copy of a letter which his Lordship has received from Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall. As the greater part of that letter relates to matters on which the Company and the Colony cannot be expected to agree, and on which Her Majesty's Government has no authority to decide their differences, Lord Granville has felt some doubt whether the settlement of the question would be advanced by forwarding this letter. He considers it, however, necessary to do so, and in doing so to explain clearly the position which he considers himself to occupy.

It appears that his Lordship's predecessor entertained the hope that he would be able to arrange the terms of a compromise, under which, with consent of both parties, the sovereignty of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territory would be transferred to the Dominion of Canada.

With this view his Grace made to the Company a proposal, respecting which Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall write as follows:—

"The proposals submitted to the Company by the late Government in the letter of Mr. Adderley of the 1st December last,* were not made at our suggestion, although we were disposed to think (and so informed his Grace) that if the Company accepted them, the Canadian Parliament might be persuaded to undertake the duties of legislation and government in the territories, on the conditions specified."

* Page 27.

Your letter of the 13th ultimo† may be considered as a rejection of those proposals, and as thus terminating the negotiations instituted by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos. But in your letter you propose that the matter should be settled by the immediate payment of a fixed sum of money, or by the delivery of bonds, and you express yourself prepared to enter into fuller communication with Lord Granville on this subject.

It is, of course, obvious that this negotiation for the purchase of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territory is really between the seller and the buyer, the Company and the Colony; and Lord Granville is of opinion that if the negotiation is revived on this or any other basis, Her Majesty's Government can at present do no good by assuming to frame or suggest terms of accommodation, but can merely offer to act as a channel of communication between these two real parties to the transaction, using its best endeavours to remove any difficulties not inherent in the nature of the case.

Acting on this view, Lord Granville communicated to Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall a copy of your letter of the 13th. The enclosure to this letter is the answer which he has received.‡

The material sentences, for the present purpose, are those with which the letter concludes.

You will observe that the representatives of the Colony state the principles on which they consider the cost of the territory should be calculated, indicating the opinion that the sum of 106,431 £. is the highest which could on any hypothesis properly be demanded by the Company, and express their strong conviction that no money offer which either the Imperial or Canadian Government would deem reasonable would be accepted by the Company. Assuming this to be the case, they ask, on the part of the Dominion Government, either the immediate transfer of the sovereignty of the whole territory, subject to the rights of the Company, or a transfer of the sovereignty and property of all the territory not heretofore validly granted to, and now held by, the Company under its charter.

Under these circumstances, Earl Granville directs me to communicate to you the enclosed letter, which, taken in connection with previous correspondence, appears to him to leave little present hope of bringing matters to a settlement by way of compensation. If the Directors of the Company should still think any such arrangement possible, his Lordship will, of course, be prepared to transmit to the Canadian representatives any modified proposal on the part of the Company.

pany. Failing this, he thinks it proper to invite from the Directors, not any argument respecting the true nature and extent of the Company's claims, from which, as not being before a court of law, he could anticipate no result, but a statement of any objections they may have, whether of principle or detail, to the two counter-proposals now made by Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall on behalf of the Canadian Dominion.

And it might not be immaterial to add what course the Company would propose to take for securing that life and property are adequately protected and international obligations duly performed in their territory, so long as they remain responsible for its government.

I am, &c.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Honourable Sir Stafford H. Northcote, M.P., to Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
26 February 1869.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 22nd instant,* transmitting by Earl Granville's direction, a copy of a letter addressed to his Lordship by Sir George Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall, on the subject of my letter to yourself, dated the 13th ultimo.†

The Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, understand from your letter, that it is not Earl Granville's wish that they should enter into a discussion of the communication from the Canadian delegates, and they therefore refrain from making any comments upon its tone, or criticising and correcting its assertions. If there are any of those assertions to which Earl Granville, himself, attaches weight, the committee will gladly, on their being pointed out to them, offer such observations upon them as may appear to be necessary.

As regards the manner in which the Canadian delegates treat the suggestion contained in my letter of the 13th ultimo, that the Canadian Government should complete the purchase of the Company's territory at once, by the payment of a sum of money, or by the delivery of bonds, the Committee desire me to observe, that they might have had some difficulty in gathering from the terms in which the delegates express themselves, whether they were or were not prepared to entertain that suggestion, and to open a negotiation with this Company. But as Earl Granville, who has had personal communication with the delegates, is of opinion that their letter, taken in connection with previous correspondence, leaves little present hope of bringing matters to a settlement by way of compensation, the Committee are forced to adopt the conclusion, that it is intended as a virtual refusal on the part of the delegates to entertain the question in a serious spirit.

Should Earl Granville come to the conclusion, that it is desirable that the Committee should renew the offer of communicating fully with him on the subject of a money sale, which they made in my letter of January 13th, they will hold themselves prepared to do so. For the present, and in accordance with what they gather to be his Lordship's views, they consider this matter at an end.

It becomes my duty, then, to answer Earl Granville's question (1), whether the Committee have any objections, either of principle or of detail, to make to the "counter-proposals" of Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall, and (2), what course the Company would propose to take for securing that life and property are adequately protected, and international obligations duly performed in their territory, so long as they remain responsible for its government.

With regard to the first of the two counter-proposals, viz., that the sovereignty of the whole of the territory in question should be immediately transferred to the Dominion Government, "subject to the rights of the Company," the committee desire to ask whether it is intended that the rights of the Company should be ascertained and defined before the transfer takes place, or after it. If the former be Earl Granville's intention, the Committee have no kind of objection to offer to the proposal; but if it be meant that the transfer should take place first, and that the rights of the Company should then be made the subject of litigation in Canada, with a right of appeal to the courts of this country; I must remark that such a course is likely to lead to much inconvenience, expense, and annoyance to all parties concerned, as well as to prove detrimental to the interests of the settlement itself, by the prolongation of an irritating and disturbing controversy. As regards the injustice to this Company involved in such a proposal, I beg leave to refer Earl Granville to Sir E. Head's letter of the 25th January 1868,* to the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, in which a similar proposal is very ably discussed, and to which, and to the extracts from speeches delivered in the Canadian Parliament, which it encloses, the Committee desire to invite Earl Granville's particular attention.

The second counter-proposal is, for a transfer to the Dominion Government of both the sovereignty and the property of "all the territory not heretofore validly granted to, and now properly held by the Company under its Charter." Upon this proposal also, the Committee desire respectfully to ask whether the limits of the territory so to be transferred, are to be distinctly set out in the instrument of transfer, so that there may be no room for disputes as to the limits of the respective jurisdictions. Even with the utmost care in this respect, the Committee cannot but feel apprehensive that difficulties will arise in dealings with the Indians, and with the various classes of hunters and traders frequenting those distant regions, if two different systems of administration are introduced into those portions of the extreme North Western Territory, which would be affected by the proposed transfer; especially as the great distance of that territory from Canada, and the difficulty of the communications, will render its administration by the Dominion Government very troublesome. Should, however, Her Majesty's Government decide on this measure, the Committee will do all in their power to arrive at a good understanding with the Dominion Government as to the details of the arrangements which should be made in the two portions of the now united territory, and to facilitate the establishment of a strong administrative system in both.

As regards any transfer of the sovereignty without a distinct definition of the limits to be assigned to it, and by virtue merely of vague general words, the Committee feel that they need not point out to Earl Granville that such a step would not only be open to the objections which I have already mentioned in the case of the former counter-proposal, but to the further and very serious one that it must lead to constant conflicts of authority, and to frequent political embarrassments.

The Company can hardly be expected to provide for the security of life and property, and the due performance of international obligations, if their boundary is left unsettled, and their title to important parts of their territory unrecognised. It is, probably, unnecessary for me to pursue this argument at any length.

I have now to advert to the last question put by Earl Granville—that relating to the course which the Company would propose to take for the government of their territory so long as they remain responsible for it. The Committee desire me in the first place to remind his Lordship that they have no authority to give a pledge on the part of the shareholders of the Company, and that they can only undertake to submit certain proposals to them, and to use their own influence to secure their adoption.

Subject to this reservation, the Committee are prepared to enter at once into free communication with Earl Granville as to the measures which should be adopted for the purpose to which he adverts. As his Lordship is aware, a resolution was agreed to by this Committee, as long ago as in August 1863, to the effect that, in the opinion of the directors, it was expedient that the authority, executive and judicial, over the Red River Settlement and the south-western portion of Rupert's Land should be vested in officers deriving such authority directly from the Crown, and exercising it in the name of Her Majesty.

In adopting this resolution, the Committee intended to indicate their desire for the establishment of a Crown Colony in this portion of their territory. They still believe that this would be the most satisfactory plan that could be pursued, and they are prepared to discuss it with Her Majesty's Government if they are encouraged to do so.

I am to state that the Committee would be willing either to advise the surrender render of such proportion of the Company's proprietary rights as might be found to be a fair equivalent for the charge which the establishment of a Crown Colony would throw upon the Imperial Exchequer, or to recommend the Company, retaining its proprietary rights, to take upon itself the whole of the pecuniary burden. The Committee are satisfied that a territory which, in the present undeveloped state of its communications, supports a trade of the annual value of more than 400,000 l., and which possesses a large amount of highly fertile soil, requiring no great expenditure for its clearance and cultivation, is perfectly capable of supporting the expense of any government that it may be required to maintain; and they have little doubt that, if the state of the case were fairly laid before the shareholders, and if the moral support of the Imperial Government were distinctly assured to them, the necessary funds would readily be forthcoming.

Of course if Her Majesty's Government should be of opinion that the great objects in view could be equally well attained by the exercise of the powers actually possessed by, or which might be granted to, the Company, and should consider that it would be preferable to adopt this method of government rather than to erect the territory into a Crown Colony, the Committee would at once fall in with such a suggestion, and would request Earl Granville to state to them what establishments would, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, be sufficient to meet the necessities of the case.

It can hardly be necessary for me to add that in the event of such an arrangement being made, the Company would rely upon the cordial co-operation of the Government in submitting any needful measure to Parliament, and in protecting the Settlement from any trespass or interference on the part of Canada.

In conclusion, I am to observe that it is on many accounts important that the directors of this Company should soon communicate to the shareholders the progress of this negotiation, and should lay the correspondence before them. They trust that Earl Granville will have no objection to their doing so.

9 March 1869.

COPY of a LETTER from Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart., to the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, M.P.

Sir,

Downing-street, 9 March 1869.

EARL GRANVILLE has had under review the correspondence which has passed respecting the proposed transfer to Canada of the jurisdiction and territorial rights of the Hudson's Bay Company in North America.

It is, in Lord Granville's opinion, of very great importance that this question should be settled on a permanent footing, and with little delay. He does not disguise the interest which Her Majesty's Government have in this Settlement. It is not creditable to this country that any inhabited part of Her Majesty's dominions should be without a recognised government, capable of enforcing the law, and responsible to neighbouring countries for the performance of international obligations. The toleration of such a state of things in parts of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territory, is unjust to the inhabitants of that territory, and is not without danger to the peaceful relations between this country and the United States, and this danger and injustice are likely to increase in proportion as the mining and agricultural capabilities of what is called the "Fertile Belt," begin to attract settlers from the east and south.

To Canada the settlement of the question is not less important, as removing a cause of irritation between it and its neighbours, and even with the mother country itself, as destroying an obstacle to that which has been looked upon as the natural growth of the Dominion, as likely to open an indefinite prospect of employment to Canadian labour and enterprise, and lastly as enlarging the inducements which Canada is able to offer to the British immigrant. It is no small matter that it would enable Her Majesty's Government at once to annex to the Dominion, the whole of British North America proper, except the colony of British Columbia.

To the Hudson's Bay Company, it may almost be said to be necessary. At present the very foundations of the Company's title are not undisputed. The boundaries of its territory are open to questions of which it is impossible to ignore the importance. Its legal rights, whatever those may be, are liable to be invaded without law, by a mass of Canadian and American settlers, whose occupation of the country on any terms they will be little able to resist, while it can hardly be alleged that either the terms of the Charter, or their internal constitution are such as to qualify them under all these disadvantages, for maintaining order, and performing the internal and external duties of government.

The prejudicial effect that all these uncertainties must have on the value of the Company's property is but too evident.

The interest of all parties thus evidently pointed towards an immediate and definite adjustment, Lord Granville has been most unwilling to abandon the hope of bringing it about, by way of amicable compromise. He is fully alive to the difficulties of such a compromise. He does not conceal from himself that the estimate which the Company form of the nature and value of their rights, is widely different from that which is formed by the gentlemen who represent Canada. Nor can he undertake to express any opinion whatever, as to the relative correctness of those estimates. Indeed it would be impossible to do so without knowing to what extent the claims of the Company would be supported by the judgment of a court of law.

But after repeated communications with both parties his Lordship is convinced that he will be serving the interests of the Dominion, of the Company, and of this country, by laying before the Canadian representatives and the directors of the Company a distinct proposal which, as it appears to be, it is for the interest of both parties to accept, and in support of which Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to use all the influence which they could legitimately exercise.

If the proposal is really an impartial one, Lord Granville cannot expect that it will be otherwise than unacceptable to both of the parties concerned. But he is not without hope that both may find, on consideration, that if it does not give them all that they conceive to be their due, it secures to them what is politically or commercially necessary, and places them at once in a position of greater advantage with reference to their peculiar objects than that which they at present occupy.

The terms which his Lordship now proposes, are as follows :—

1. The Hudson's Bay Company to surrender to Her Majesty all the rights of government, property, &c., in Rupert's Land, which are specified in 31 & 32 Vict. c. 105, s. 4, and also all similar rights in any other part of British North America, not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, or British Columbia.

2. Canada is to pay to the Company 300,000 l. when Rupert's Land is transferred to the Dominion of Canada.

3. The Company may, within 12 months of the surrender, select a block of land adjoining each of its stations, within the limits specified in Article 1.

4. The size of the blocks is not to exceed acres in the Red River Territory, nor 3,000 acres beyond that territory, and the aggregate extent of the blocks is not to exceed 50,000 acres.

5. So far as the configuration of the country admits, the blocks are to be in the shape of parallelograms, of which the length is not more than double the breadth.

6. The Hudson's Bay Company may, for 50 years after the surrender, claim in any township or district within the Fertile Belt, in which land is set out for settlement, grants of land not exceeding one-twentieth part of the land so set out. The blocks so granted, to be determined by lot, and the Hudson's Bay Company to pay a rateable share of the survey expenses not exceeding an acre.

7. For the purpose of the present agreement, the Fertile Belt is to be bounded as follows:—On the south by the United States boundary, on the west by the Rocky Mountains, on the north by the northern branch of the Saskatchewan, on the east by Lake Winnipeg, the Lake of Woods, and the waters connecting them.

8. All titles to land, up to the 8th March 1869, conferred by the Company, are to be confirmed.

9. The Company is to be at liberty to carry on its trade without hindrance in its corporate capacity, and no exceptional tax is to be placed on the Company's land, trade, or servants, nor any impost duty on goods introduced by them previous to the surrender.

10. Canada is to take over the materials of the electric telegraph at cost price; such price including transport, but not including interest for money, and subject to a deduction for ascertained deterioration.

11. The Company's claim to land under agreement of Messrs. Vankoughnet & Hopkins to be withdrawn.

12. The details of this arrangement, including the filling up the blanks in Articles 4 and 6, to be settled at once by mutual agreement.

It is due both to the representatives of Canada and to the Company to add, that these terms are not intended by Lord Granville as the basis of further negotiation, but a final effort to effect that amicable accommodation, of which he has almost despaired, but which he believes will be for the ultimate interest of all parties.

If this be rejected, either on behalf of the Company or on behalf of the Dominion, his Lordship considers that his next step must be to procure an authoritative decision as to the rights of the Crown and the Company, and with this object he will recommend Her Majesty to refer their rights for examination to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, whose decision will form a basis for any future legislative or executive action which Her Majesty's Government may find necessary.

Whatever may be the result of this proposal, his Lordship desires to express his sense of the openness and courtesy which he has experienced throughout these negotiations, both from the representatives of Canada and from the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Company, and the patience with which they have entertained proposals which, from their point of view, must no doubt have appeared inadequate.

Lord Granville is aware that a proposal of this kind will require consideration, but he hopes that you will lose no time beyond what is necessary in acquainting him with your decision.

Sir,

22 March 1869.

IN reply to your letter of the 9th instant,* transmitting the terms of a proposal which Earl Granville recommends for the adoption of this Company, and of the Canadian representatives, I have the honour to inform you that the Committee have given their most careful consideration to that proposal, and that they have been in communication with the Canadian Ministers on some points connected with it, and I am to transmit to you a copy of the correspondence which has taken place with them.

The Committee have summoned a special general court of the proprietors on Wednesday next to consider the proposed terms, and they have come to a resolution that they will recommend the court to adopt the proposal.

I am desired by the Committee to invite Earl Granville's attention to the 6th of the resolutions adopted at their meeting on the 12th instant, relating to the salary of the Bishop of Rupert's Land, and to the observations of the Canadian representatives thereon.

The Committee, while acknowledging the force of the objections urged by the Canadian Ministers to the endowment, out of the public revenues of Canada, of an Anglican Bishopric of Rupert's Land, desire to point out to Earl Granville that the Hudson's Bay Company have entered into a legal contract, in their capacity of owners of the territory which is now to be transferred to Canada, by which they are bound to continue this endowment in perpetuity. It is manifestly reasonable that on ceding the territory they should be relieved of this obligation; and the Committee desire me to suggest for Earl Granville's consideration, that the object might be attained in the simplest manner, by Canada consenting to pay to the Company a fixed sum, as a compensation for vested interests, or under any other name that might be preferred, which sum the Company would invest for the support of the bishopric.

Enclosure in No. 22.

My dear Sir George Cartier,

86, Harley-street, 11 March 1869.

THE directors of the Hudson's Bay Company have held a meeting to-day to consider Lord Granville's letter. Before, however, they can form a judgment on his proposals, they are anxious to have some explanation on points which do not appear very clear to them. Encl. in No. 22.

Without entering into the question of the value of their territory for purposes of colonisation, they feel that its possession is of very great value to the Company as a basis for the promotion of their trade, and they are anxious to satisfy themselves that, if it is surrendered, some adequate security will be afforded for their trading interests.

The two points upon which we are anxious for information are these: first, what will be the position of the Company with reference to the territory lying outside the Fertile Belt; and, secondly, what will be the nature and probable limit of the burdens which will be laid upon our property within that district.

Regarding the country lying outside the Fertile Belt as a hunting ground alone, we presume: 1st. That we shall be at liberty to hunt over it freely, and without being subjected to any license, tax, or other similar impost; 2nd. That we shall be granted a title to our posts, and to such adjoining land as may be necessary for their maintenance, and for supplying pasture and wood; 3rd. That we shall be allowed to cut such wood as we may require in any part of the territory.

In addition to these rights, we should much like to suggest that it would be for the interest of the Company, and still more for that of Canada, that Canada should give us for a limited period some special control over the importations into the hunting country, so as to enable us to keep spirits from the Indians.

With regard to the taxes which may be laid on our lands within the Fertile Belt, we presume that with respect to their wild and unsold lands, the Company will stand on the same footing as the Canadian Government, that is to say, on the footing of a proprietor and not of an alienee, and will therefore not be subject to taxation until the land is sold or brought into cultivation.

Can you let me have an answer to this letter before 12 o'clock to-morrow, as we are to hold a meeting at two to consider the question further?

I remain, &c.

Dear Sir George Cartier,

Hudson's Bay House, 12 March 1869.

I AM desired by the Committee of this Company to forward to you a copy of the inclosed resolutions, which have been adopted at our meeting to-day, and to request that you will favour me with an answer, which I may lay before the Committee at their meeting on Tuesday next.

I remain, &c.

At a Special Committee held on the 12th of March 1869, at the Hudson's Bay House, to reconsider Letter from Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart., dated Downing-street, 9th March 1869:

The Governor reported that Sir G. Cartier and Mr. M'Dougall had explained to him the system of municipal taxation to which the Company would be subject in respect of their lands.

Resolved,—That this Committee will recommend the shareholders to accept the proposal of Lord Granville, if the Canadian Ministers will agree to the following modifications:

1. That Canada will lay no export duty on furs.
2. That the 6th Article be modified so as to allow the Company to defer exercising their right of claiming their proportion of each township for not more than 10 years after it is set up.
3. That no charge be made upon the Company for the expenses of survey.
4. That the proportion of land which they are allowed to claim be increased from one-twentieth to one-tenth.
5. That York and Moose factories be retained as ports of entry.
6. That Canada undertakes to pay the 300 £. a year now paid to the Bishop of Rupert's Land, and other charges of a public character now borne by the Company.
7. That some provision be made for referring to arbitration any question which may arise out of the agreement.

To Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P., Governor.

Westminster Palace Hotel, London,
15 March 1869.

Sir,

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of certain resolutions adopted by the Governor and Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company on the 12th instant, suggesting important modifications of the proposal of Lord Granville for the transfer of Rupert's Land to Canada.

We beg you will inform the Committee that in our opinion the proposal of Lord Granville is much more favourable to the Hudson's Bay Company than any previous proposal of the Imperial Government, and much more onerous to Canada than its Government and people have been led to expect. With great reluctance, we have consented to recommend Lord Granville's proposal, if accepted by the Company pure et simple, but not otherwise, to the favourable consideration of the Canadian Government. The modifications and additions proposed by the Committee are not, in our judgment, "details" within the purview of the 12th Article of Lord Granville's proposal, but substantive and material changes, affecting the very basis of the arrangement. We cannot, therefore, assent to them, or undertake to recommend their acceptance by the Canadian Government.

We have further to observe that, in making these demands upon us, the Committee assume that the changes they propose will be accepted or approved by the Imperial Government. If we are correctly advised, the Committee are not warranted to make that assumption. In the letter of Sir Frederic Rogers, communicating to us a copy of Lord Granville's proposal, we are assured that it conveys "the views of Her Majesty's Government," and in the letter conveying these views to the Company, it is stated that "these terms are not intended by Lord Granville as the basis of further negotiations." It follows, we think, that Lord Granville's proposal is to be regarded as the ultimatum of the Imperial Government, and must be accepted or rejected in its entirety. The Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 105 (which was not introduced at the instance, or passed in the interest of the Canadian Government), placed the negotiation of the terms of surrender by the Company to the Crown in the hands of Her Majesty's Imperial Government, where, until the Act is repealed or the negotiation fails, we are of opinion it must remain.

We shall be glad to confer with you upon all questions of "detail" which, by the terms of Lord Granville's proposal, are left to be adjusted between the Canadian Government and the Hudson's Bay Company.

We have, &c.

To Sir G. E. Cartier, Bart., and the Hon. William McDougall, C.B.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
16 March 1869.

Gentlemen,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, in reply to my letter to Sir G. Cartier, in which I enclosed to you a copy of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company on the 12th inst.

It is unnecessary for me to enter into the question you raise as to whether Earl Granville would or would not accept any modifications of the terms set forth in his Lordship's recent communication to this Committee, if they should be agreed to by this Committee on the one hand, and by yourselves on the other. While stating that he regarded those terms as not being intended as the basis of further negotiations, Lord Granville added that he left the details of the arrangement to be settled by mutual consent. The greater part of the resolutions transmitted to you in my letter of the 12th, were resolutions intended to lead to a settlement of certain details, on which it will be necessary for the Committee to offer full explanation to the shareholders of the Company, if they decide on submitting Earl Granville's proposals to a general meeting.

If, in your opinion, any of them go further than this, the Committee will be ready to reconsider them, and to confer with you upon them.

As regards the resolution, by which the Committee proposed that the amount of land to be left to the Company should be one-tenth instead of one-twentieth, I am to state that the Committee have rescinded that resolution.

They will await a communication from you with regard to the other resolutions, before coming to a conclusion as to the course they should adopt.

I am, &c.
(signed) Stafford H. Northcote.

To the Right Honourable Sir Stafford Northcote, Bart.

Sir,

Westminster Palace Hotel, 18 March 1869.

WE have the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 16th inst., in which you inform us that the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company have rescinded the resolution adopted on the 12th inst., asking for one-tenth instead of one-twentieth, as proposed by Lord Granville, of the land which may be surveyed for settlement in the surrendered territory. You further state that if the other resolutions go further than the "details of the arrangement" left by Lord Granville to be "settled by mutual consent," the Committee are ready to reconsider them.

1. With reference to the first resolution, "That Canada will lay no export duty on furs," we beg you will inform the Committee that it is not the policy or the practice of the Canadian Government to resort to export duties as a source of revenue. We feel no hesitation in stating our firm belief that no such duties as the Committee wish to prohibit will be levied, but it would obviously be improper for us to consent to any arrangement that would fetter the free action of the Canadian Parliament in respect to modifications of the tariff which the future exigencies of the country may render necessary.

2. The proposal to modify the 6th Article, so as to permit the Company to defer the exercise of the right of claiming their proportion of lands in any township for a period of 10 years after survey, might, we think, be agreed to, on condition that they limit their claim to allotment from the lands which may be unsold at the time they declare their intention to take their proportion in that township.

3. The demand to be relieved from the expenses of survey, which Lord Granville proposed the Company should bear, is not, we think, a "detail" within the meaning of the 12th Article. But if it will remove the apprehension that charges under this stipulation may become excessive, we see no objection to a proviso that the expense to the Company for the survey of the lands allotted to them shall in no case exceed 10 cents per acre.

4. We have no doubt that York and Moose factories will be retained as ports of entry, if goods continue to be imported there. But if, by the opening of interior communications, the trade should be diverted to other ports, it would not seem reasonable that the Government should be bound to maintain customs establishments at Hudson's Bay. The practice of the Canadian Government is to establish ports of entry wherever the interests of trade and commerce require them, and we do not therefore think it either necessary or expedient to make any stipulation on the subject.

5. The demand that the salary of the Anglican Bishop of Rupert's Land should hereafter be charged upon the Canadian Treasury, cannot be regarded as a "detail" within the 12th Article of Lord Granville's proposal. The surrender of the rights and powers of government by the Company will necessarily involve the assumption of "all charges of a public character" in the new government. But an agreement to continue the charges "now borne by the Company," eo nomine, would so far perpetuate a system, which the transfer of the territory to Canada is intended to supersede.

6. The

6. The last proposal of the Committee is open to very serious objections. The surrender of the powers of government and of territorial jurisdiction by the Company to the Crown, and the transfer of these powers to the Canadian Government, are acts of State, authorised by Imperial Statute, and will have all the force and permanence of fundamental law. The proposal to refer all questions which may arise under this law to some extra-constitutional tribunal is not warranted by the British North America Act, and would, we fear, if adopted, create confusion and embarrassment, and postpone indefinitely the establishment of a satisfactory government in Rupert's Land.

We must decline to admit, even by implication, that the judicial tribunals, and the general and local authorities of the Dominion, will fail to understand, or hesitate to respect and carry out in good faith, all the terms and conditions of the proposed arrangement

8 July 1869.

My Lord,

The Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company having informed me that a surrender of the Company's territory is about to be made, I have forwarded to them a protest and notice (copy of which I enclose), and in order that Her Majesty's Government may be aware of the facts, and may have notice that the sale and surrender is objected to, and cannot legally be made, I beg to state as follows:—

I object to the sale, except at the price of 500,000 £, which is half the amount the territories were valued at.

That the Committee had no authority to negotiate a sale except upon such terms, or better, and that as they acted without the sanction of the proprietors, any agreement made by them is not binding.

That no sale of the territories of the Company can be made without the sanction of each and every proprietor, and that the Act of Parliament enabling a surrender does not avoid this necessity.

That if the Committee have stated that the majority of proprietors have agreed to the terms proposed, they have stated that which is incorrect.

1st. Because no legal meeting has been held.

2nd. Because the chairman neglected to put an amendment of mine to his own motion.

3rd. Because the vote was taken by a show of hands, though a ballot was duly demanded.

4th. Because the vote was not by persons who had held their stock six months, as required by the 7 Geo. 3, c. 48.

A protest setting forth all these objections was entered with the chairman at the meeting.

I also submit that no valid surrender can be made, because Earl Kimberley is the Governor, and not Sir Stafford Northcote, the former having been elected for the year 1869, and there being no power of resignation or re-election contained in the Charter.

I should have forwarded this letter sooner, but awaited the reply of the Canadian Parliament.

I have, &c.

Secretary for the Colonies.

To the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Gentlemen,

As the chairman informed the proprietors on the second instant that the Canadian Parliament had addressed Her Majesty on the subject of the acquisition of the Hudson's Bay Territories, I beg to give the Committee notice, that as a proprietor of stock in the said Company, I protest against the sale of the territorial rights of the Company, and against the Committee affixing, or causing to be affixed, the seal of the Corporation to any surrender, or other conveyance or document purporting to surrender the said territories, and that I shall hold the Committee, and each and every of them, responsible for any attempted surrender of the said territories, and for all loss, costs, damages, and expenses which may accrue, or to which I may be put, by reason of such surrender.

The grounds of my objection to such sale and surrender are as follows:—

1. Because the price is wholly inadequate.

2. Because

PAPERS RELATING TO RUPERT'S LAND.

2. Because the then Governor and Committee, who were trustees for the proprietors, had to authority to negotiate for the sale of the said territory, and were guilty of a breach of trust in asking a sum of money much smaller in amount than the proprietors required, and in keeping this fact from the knowledge of the proprietors.

3. Because the proprietors of stock in a chartered company such as the Hudson's Bay, even if unanimous, have no power to dispose of their territories except by authority of Parliament.

4. Because the Act of Parliament enabling Her Majesty to accept a surrender of the territories in question, is merely permissive, and not obligatory on the Company, and expressly requires the assent, not of a majority, or of a portion of the proprietors, but of the whole body, "upon such terms and conditions as shall be agreed upon by the Governor and Company," are the words of the Act.

5. Because the Act of Parliament has not been complied with, inasmuch as the whole body of proprietors have not agreed to the terms, but, on the contrary, it is believed a large majority dissented therefrom.

6. Because, even supposing the majority could bind the minority, such majority of duly qualified voters has never been legally, or in fact obtained, inasmuch as the meeting at which the vote was taken was illegally convened and held; the pretended vote was by a show of hands, notwithstanding a ballot was demanded, as required under the Charter, nor was there any evidence that the parties holding up their hands were proprietors of stock, or, if proprietors, that they had held such stock for six calendar months prior to such vote, as required by the Act in such case made and provided, thus rendering the vote so taken void.

7. Because Sir Stafford Northcote is not the duly qualified Governor of the said Company, and any act done or performed by him, and the said Committee, on behalf of the said Company, is null and void, inasmuch as Earl Kimberley (if any) is the duly qualified Governor of the said Company for the present year 1869.

Westminster Palace Hotel, London,
16 January 1869.

Sir,

WE have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 30th ultimo (with its enclosure), stating that you were directed by Earl Granville to transmit to us a copy of a letter, which his Lordship had received from the Deputy Chairman of the Hudson Bay Company, relating to some steps which have been taken under the authority of the Canadian Government, and from which the Company apprehend some invasion of their territorial rights.

You inform us that his Lordship will be glad to receive from us any explanation which we may be able to furnish him of the steps taken by the Canadian Government.

We have read the letter of the deputy chairman, and extracts from the letters of Governor McTavish, and have much pleasure in being able to furnish his Lordship with what we hope will prove satisfactory information, on the subject of the Hudson Bay Company's complaint.

1. In the month of September last, very precise information reached the Canadian Government, that in consequence of the complete destruction of their crops by locusts, the people of the Red River Settlement, numbering probably from 12,000 to 15,000 souls, were in imminent danger of starvation during the winter about to set in.

2. Numerous and earnest appeals for aid had already been made to the Canadian public by writers in the newspapers, and by clergymen and others acquainted with the country. The Right Rev. Robert Machray, Lord Bishop of Rupert's Land, a member of the Council of Assinaboia, and so far a representative of the Company, visited Ottawa, and urged upon members of the Canadian Government the duty of prompt assistance to avert the threatened calamity.

3. No steps had then been taken (so far as the Government could learn) by the Hudson Bay Company to provide supplies, and aware that a few days delay at that season might render it impossible to get provisions to Red River in time to afford relief, the Canadian Government appropriated the sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) towards the construction of a road from Lake of the Woods to Fort Garry. The Minister of Public Works (one of the undersigned) was directed to expend the principal part of this sum in the purchase of provisions, which were to be forwarded with all possible dispatch to the Red River Settlement, and offered to the settlers, not as alms, but in exchange for their labour on a public work in their own vicinity, and of the highest utility to their Settlement.

4. A confidential and experienced agent proceeded at once to Saint Paul's, Minnesota, and succeeded in forwarding a considerable supply of provisions before the close of navigation; a further quantity has reached Fort Abercrombie, an American post in Dakota Territory, from which point it can be sent to the Settlement early in the spring.

5. Information has reached the undersigned since their arrival in England, that the Government agent had, in accordance with his instructions, conferred with the local authorities on his arrival at Fort Garry, that he had received their approval and promise of assistance, that his timely aid was a cause of much joy and thankfulness in the Settlement, and that he had proceeded with a large force of labourers to the limit of the prairie country, some 30 miles from Fort Garry towards Lake of the Woods, and there commenced the construction of the road.

6. The immediate object of the Canadian Government in taking the steps complained of, was to supply food to a starving community, about to be imprisoned for six months in the heart of a great wilderness, without roads or means of communication with their fellow subjects, and to supply it in the way most acceptable to a high spirited people, viz., in exchange for their labour. It was thought that even the Hudson Bay Company might look with favour upon a public work, which, when completed, will prove a valuable protection to those under their government, against similar dangers in the future. On behalf of the Canadian Government, we deny that a "trespass" has been committed, or that our action in this matter was intended to forestal or embarrass negotiations which the Imperial Parliament had directed to be undertaken for the transfer of the North Western Territory and Rupert's Land to the Dominion of Canada.

The foregoing explanation may, perhaps, be deemed sufficient to enable Earl Granville to answer the complaint of the Hudson Bay Company against the Canadian Government, but the undersigned beg leave to add one or two observations, which, in their opinion, this extraordinary demand for "the intervention of Her Majesty's Government," both invites and justifies. If the Hudson Bay Company, who claim the right to hold and govern the territory in which the alleged "trespass" has taken place, had performed the first duty of a Government towards its people, by providing them with easy means of communication with the outer world; or, if they had shown themselves either able, or willing, to meet the threatened calamity by a prompt effort to forward sufficient supplies to the Settlement before the close of navigation, the Canadian Government would have rested happy in the belief that neither humanity, nor public policy, required or justified their interference.

The assertion of the Deputy Governor of the Hudson Bay Company, that the country between Lake of the Woods and Red River is "the freehold territory of the Company," and that the so-called "trespass" of the Canadian Government in sending provisions to the starving settlers and assisting them to make a road for their own convenience and safety hereafter, is "an actual encroachment on the soil of the Company," might, if unnoticed by us, be claimed as another proof or admission of the rights of the Company in that part of the continent; we, therefore, beg to remind his Lordship that the boundaries of Upper Canada, on the north and west, were declared, under the authority of the Constitutional Act of 1791, to include "all the territory to the westward and southward" of the "boundary line of Hudson's Bay," "to the utmost extent of the country commonly called or known by the name of Canada." Whatever doubt may exist as to the "utmost extent" of Old or French Canada, no impartial investigator of the evidence in the case can doubt that it extended to, and included, the country between Lake of the Woods and Red River.

The Government of Canada, therefore, does not admit, but on the contrary denies, and has always denied, the pretensions of the Hudson's Bay Company to any right of soil, beyond that of squatters, in the territory through which the road complained of is being constructed.

We have, &c.

Sir,

Westminster Palace Hotel, 9 February 1869.

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th ultimo, enclosing a copy of Sir Stafford Northcote's letter of the 13th ultimo, in reply to proposals made to the Hudson's Bay Company for the cession to the Crown of their territorial rights in British America, by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, in the letter of Mr. Adderley of the 1st December last.

You state that Earl Granville directed you to transmit this document to us for any observations which we may wish to offer upon it. His Lordship's courtesy and consideration in sending us a copy of Sir Stafford Northcote's letter, and inviting us to express our views upon it, are gratefully acknowledged, but upon reflection, we thought it would be expedient to refrain from any formal expression of our opinion on new and indefinite propositions, until we had received some intimation of the view which his Lordship was likely himself to take of them, or of the policy in respect to the general question, which Her Majesty's present advisers intend to adopt.

At an interview with which we were favoured by Earl Granville on the 26th ultimo, he expressed his preference for a less complicated mode of dealing with the Hudson's Bay question than that proposed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, and requested us to communicate to him our observations on the reply of Sir Stafford Northcote, and especially on the proposition with which his letter concludes, viz., that the Canadian Government should "complete the purchase of the territory at once, by the payment of a sum of money, or by the delivery of bonds."

As we have had but few opportunities to confer with his Lordship since his accession to office, it may be proper, before considering Sir Stafford Northcote's letter, to state the position of the Canadian Government, as we apprehend it, in this negotiation.

The British North America Act, 1867, affirmed the policy of uniting under one Government, all the Colonies, Provinces, and Territories of British North America. Three Provinces were united at once, and provision was made by the 146th section, for the admission into the union of the remaining colonies, on Address to Her Majesty by their respective Legislatures, and the Parliament of Canada. The North West Territories and Rupert's Land, or either of them, are to be admitted on the Address of the Parliament of Canada alone, and on such terms and conditions as the Canadian Parliament may in its Address express, and Her Majesty approve.

In pursuance of the policy of the Imperial Parliament thus distinctly affirmed, the Canadian Parliament at its first Session, under the new constitution, adopted an Address to Her Majesty for the incorporation of the North West Territory and Rupert's Land with the Dominion of Canada. The terms and conditions expressed in the Address were,—

1st. That Canada should undertake the duties and obligations of Government and Legislation in respect of those territories.

2nd. That the legal rights of any corporation, company, or individual within the territories should be respected, and that provision should be made for that purpose by placing those rights under the protection of Courts of competent jurisdiction.

3rd. That the claims of the Indian tribes to compensation for lands required for purposes of settlement, should be considered and settled in conformity with the equitable principles which have uniformly governed the British Crown in its dealings with the Aborigines.

The above were the only terms and conditions which, in the opinion of the Canadian Parliament, it was expedient to insert in the Order in Council, authorised by the 146th section.

His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, on receiving the Address of the Canadian Parliament, consulted the Law Officers of the Crown, who advised, among other things, that "there would be much difficulty created by the existence of the Charter" of the Hudson's Bay Company "to putting into execution the powers of the 140th (146th) section of the British America Act, 1867, assuming that the Hudson's Bay Company were adverse to the union."

A Bill was thereupon carried through the Imperial Parliament apparently to remove the "difficulties" which the Law Officers had discovered. It reverses the order of procedure contemplated by the Act of 1867, and observed by the Canadian Parliament in its Address, and makes the assent of the Company a condition precedent to the transfer.

The Canadian Government were not consulted as to the terms of this Act; they could not understand why it was necessary, and greatly doubted the expediency of passing it.

The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos having opened negotiations with the Hudson's Bay Company under the authority of the Act last mentioned, invited a delegation from the Canadian Government to confer with him in this country.

The undersigned, duly commissioned for that purpose, repaired to London in October last, and had frequent interviews with his Grace before his retirement from office.

The proposals submitted to the Company by the late Government in the letter of Mr. Adderley of the 1st December last,* were not made at our suggestion, although we were disposed to think (and so informed his Grace), that if the Company accepted them, the Canadian Parliament might be persuaded to undertake the duties of legislation and government in the territories, on the conditions specified.

The Company, through Sir Stafford Northcote, have declined to accept either the principle or the mode of settlement proposed by the late Government, but suggest a new and summary method of closing the negotiations, by demanding that the Canadian Government should, by a payment in cash or bonds, "complete the purchase of the territory at once." No sum is mentioned, and no date given from which it can be inferred.

Under these circumstances we are asked, as representatives of the Canadian Government, to communicate to Earl Granville any observations we may wish to offer on this reply and proposition of the Company.

His Lordship will readily perceive from the foregoing recital, that as representatives of the Canadian Government, we are in the position of spectators of a negotiation, begun and carried on upon principles and under conditions to which we are strangers, rather than that of assenting principals, responsible for its initiation, and bound by its results.

Without undertaking, therefore, that our views on every point will be approved by the Canadian Government, we proceed most respectfully to offer a few observations on Sir Stafford Northcote's reply to the recent proposals of the Imperial Government.

It will be observed that two things are assumed in these proposals to the Company, which the Canadian Government has always disputed :—

1st. That the Charter of Charles II. is still valid, and grants the right of soil or freehold of Rupert's Land to the Company.

2nd. That Rupert's Land includes the so-called "Fertile Belt," extending from the Lake of the Woods to the Rocky Mountains.

The Law Officers of the Crown in England have, on two or three occasions, given their opinion in favour of the first assumption, but never, so far as we are aware, in favour of the second. The report of the Law Officers in 1857, admits that the geographical extent of the territory granted must be determined by excluding the country that "could have been rightfully claimed by the French "as falling within the boundaries of Canada" (which the Charter itself excludes by express words) and states that "the assertion of ownership on important public occasions, as at the Treaties of Ryswick and Utrecht" should be considered, and also "the effect of the Acts of 1774 and 1791." The most recent opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, which we have seen (6th January 1868), as to the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, does not even by implication, support their present claim to the fee-simple of nearly one-third of the American continent. On the contrary, Sir John Karslake and his colleagues, conclude their report with the emphatic statement, that it is "very necessary before any union of Rupert's Land with Canada is effected, that the true limits of the territory "and possessions held under the Charter should be accurately defined." An assumption, therefore, which covers so much ground, and is unsupported by any competent legal authority, which ignores the repeated protests and claims of Canada, and seeks to supply a basis upon which a surrender for valuable consideration may be made, is, to say the least, a most favourable assumption for the Company. We notice these points in Mr. Adderley's letter before remarking on Sir Stafford Northcote's reply to prevent the possible inference that we have acquiesced in them.

Sir Stafford Northcote assures Lord Granville that the Company "continue "sincerely anxious to promote the object, with a view to which the Company "was re-constructed five-and-a-half years ago, viz., the gradual settlement of such "portions of their territory as admit of colonisation." It would be tedious to quote the numerous and positive averments by members and governors of the Hudson's Bay Company in the course of official enquiries during the last 50 years, that their territories (in which they include the Red River and the Saskatchewan districts) are totally unfit for colonisation. The evidence of Sir George Simpson before the House of Commons' Committee of 1857, is a fair sample of the views heretofore entertained and avowed by the representatives of the Company (see Commons' Report 1857, questions 716, 718, 719, &c.). Mr. Ellice, for many years the ruling spirit of the Company, declared before the same Committee, that the Red River Settlement was an "unwise speculation," and "had failed;" that "the climate is not favourable;" that the Saskatchewan is a country capable of settlement only when "the population of America becomes so "dense that they are forced into situations less fit for settlement than those they "occupy now;" that the winters are "rigorous," and the country badly off for "fuel," &c.

With such views of the unfitness of the country for settlement, and avowing their belief that colonisation and the fur trade could not exist together, it is not surprising that the Company have always cherished the latter, which was profitable, and discouraged, and as far as possible prevented the former, which had proved an "unwise speculation." It is true that the Company was "reconstructed" in 1863, with loud promises of a new policy. A great road across the Continent was to be made; a telegraph line was to be put up, and emigration and colonisation developed on a large scale. The Duke of Newcastle, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, was so much impressed by the zeal and public public spirit of the gentlemen who effected the re-construction, that he wrote Despatches to the Canadian Government on their behalf, and evidently believed that a new era was about to open in the North West, and the wild animals and fur traders retreat before the march of "European" settlers. The stock of the old Company, worth in the market about 1,000,000 £., was bought up, and by some process which we are unable to describe, became 2,000,000 £. A show of anxiety to open postal and telegraphic communication was made, and "Heads of proposals" were submitted to the Governments of Canada and British Columbia, which, on examination, were found to embrace a line of telegraph only, with the modest suggestion that the two Governments should guarantee the Company a profit of not less than four per cent. on their expenditure; a proposal so absurd could only have been made to be rejected, and it was rejected accordingly. The surplus capital of the re-constructed Company which was called up for the avowed purpose of opening their territories to "European colonisation under a liberal and systematic scheme of land settlement," has never been applied to that purpose. Five and a half years have passed since the grand scheme was announced to the world, but no European emigrants have been sent out, no attempts to colonise have been made. Sir Stafford Northcote was not probably aware, when he vouched for the bona fides of the Hudson's Bay Company as promoters of colonisation, that a solemn vote of the shareholders was taken in the month of November 1866, which condemned and rejected the policy of colonisation absolutely and definitively.

While unable, for the reasons stated, to concur in Sir Stafford Northcote's assurance that the Hudson's Bay Company are anxious to promote colonisation, we are gratified to learn that they "adhere" to the resolution of 28th August 1863, that the time has come when it is expedient that "the authority, executive and judicial, over the Red River Settlement, and the south-western portion of Rupert's Land should be vested in officers deriving such authority directly from the Crown."

The first remark we have to make upon this reference to the resolution of 1863 is, that it admits the continued incapacity of the Company as a governing power; the second, that if this was true in 1863, if at that time it had become expedient to substitute the authority of the Crown for that of the Company, it is much more expedient, if not absolutely necessary now; the third, that if the Company are to be relieved of the duty and cost of government which their Charter imposes, and which they admit they do not and cannot properly discharge, "compensation" should be made, not to the Company, as is claimed, but by the Company to those who take the burden off their shoulders.

We confess we have failed to discover any evidence, and therefore cannot believe, that the Company has "cheerfully" accepted the decision of Her Majesty's Government, "that the whole of the Company's territory should, under proper conditions, be united with Canada." A brief notice of the acts in contrast with the professions of the Company will, we think, account for the ill-success of our researches, and justify our incredulity.

The representatives of the Company, while declaring before the House of Commons' Committee in 1857 (as we have already shown), that their territories were "unfit for settlement," professed their readiness to surrender any portion of them that might be desired by the Imperial or Canadian Government for that purpose. Mr. Ellice declared, in the most unqualified terms, not only that the Company was willing to surrender, but that it was the duty of Government to see that no mere trading corporation obstructed "for one moment," nor to the extent of "one acre of land fit for settlement," the "dominion of the actual settlers." (Commons' Report, 1857, questions 5859, 5860, and 5933.)

The Governor of the Company informed the Colonial Secretary (18th July 1857) that an inquiry into the "geographical extent of the territory granted by their Charter," which the Law Officers had recommended, was of little importance, because, if the object of the inquiry was "to obtain from Canada land fit for cultivation and the establishment of agricultural settlers, the Directors are already prepared to recommend to the shareholders of the Company to cede any lands which may be required for that purpose." "The terms of such cession," he assured Mr. Labouchere, "would be a matter of no difficulty between Her Majesty's Government and the Company."

Mr. Ellice had previously told the House of Commons' Committee that the question of boundary was "of no importance at all," because if the "Province

"of Canada requires any part of the territory, or the whole of it, for purposes of settlement, it ought not to be permitted for one moment to remain in the hands of the Hudson's Bay Company." He added that "less money than would be spent in a litigation upon the subject would be sufficient to indemnify the Hudson's Bay Company for any claim which they could have on giving up any disputed part of their territory."

These assurances induced the Committee to negative propositions for ascertaining, by a judicial inquiry, the validity of the Charter or the position of boundaries, and to report in favour of annexing to Canada "such portion of the land in her neighbourhood as may be available to her for the purposes of settlement, with which she is willing to open and maintain communication, and for which she will provide the means of local administration." The Committee "trusted" that there would be "no difficulty in effecting arrangements as between Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company" for ceding the territory on "equitable principles."

It may be proper to remind Earl Granville that leading members of the Committee of 1857, taking the offers of the Company on the subject of colonisation to mean what the language of their representatives imported, strongly opposed the recommendation to leave the question open for "amicable adjustment," upon "equitable principles," with the certainty of protracted negotiation and a chance of ultimate disagreement; Mr. Gladstone accordingly submitted a resolution for a prompt and definitive settlement of the whole question. He proposed—

1st. "That the country capable of colonisation should be withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company."

2nd. "That the country incapable of colonisation should remain within their jurisdiction."

He proposed that in the country remaining within their jurisdiction power should be reserved to Her Majesty's Government to make grants "for the purposes of mines and fisheries, but with due regard to the immunities and trade of the Company." No "immunities" were even suggested, with respect to the country which was to be withdrawn for colonisation. He proposed to ignore the Charter by declaring that the jurisdiction of the Company "should rest, henceforth, upon the basis of statute." He quoted the Governor's letter above referred to "as an expression of the willingness of the Company to accept, in principle, the arrangement" he proposed, and ended with the suggestion that, "as the Company had tendered concessions which may prove sufficient to meet the case," no decision seemed necessary as to the question of raising "a judicial issue, with the view of ascertaining the legal rights of the Company." The propositions of Mr. Gladstone were only lost in the Committee by the casting vote of the Chairman.

Twelve years have passed since these offers were made by the Company, and accepted by a Committee of Parliament. Every Colonial Secretary from 1858 to the present moment has attempted to carry out the recommendation of the Committee, with the assent of the Company, but without success. Two Acts of the Imperial Parliament have been passed, with provisions to facilitate the arrangement, but are yet without fruit. Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer characterised the offers of the Company during his administration as "illusory," and declared that they "by no means met the exigencies of the case." He expressed his regret at a determination on their part which "retains the very difficulty in the way of speedy and amicable settlement, which he had sought to remove," and stated that if Canada declined to resort to "legal proceedings" (which he had recommended), "it would be his duty" to consider "whether negotiations with the Company can be resumed, or whether, in the last resort, Her Majesty's Government must take the matter into their own hands, and proceed on their own account" (Mr. Merivale's letter to H. H. Berens, 9th March 1859). Sir Edward remained in office long enough to put an end to the Company's license of exclusive trade in British Columbia and the Indian territories, but not long enough to carry out his policy of "connecting the two sides of British North America, without the obstacle interposed by a proprietary jurisdiction between them."

The Duke of Newcastle opened negotiations with the Company in 1863-4 with much vigour; but after various proposals and counter-proposals, including the the "reconstruction" of the Company, he was obliged to treat their propositions as "inadmissible."

Mr. Cardwell, during his administration, could not accept their proposals "without considerable modifications."

The Duke of Buckingham, after many discussions with the representatives of the Company, regretted to perceive that their proposals "did not afford much prospect of an arrangement being come to," and in the communication, to which the letter of Sir Stafford Northcote is a reply, declared himself "unable to recommend the adoption" of the terms demanded by the Company.

Our notice of what, in Sir Stafford Northcote's opinion, constitutes a "cheerful" acceptance of the decision of Her Majesty's Government, would be incomplete, if we did not remind Earl Granville that the Company's "proper conditions" for the surrender of that portion of the North Western Territories, for which they can show no title, but such as may be derived from the possession of a few trading posts, established there within the last 50 years, rose from a question of "no importance at all" in 1857, or at most, to "less money than would be spent in a litigation on the subject" (House of Commons' Report, question 5834), to the retention, in 1863, in fee-simple of half the lands proposed to be surrendered, with various other conditions, including a guarantee by the Governments of Canada and British Columbia, of an annual profit on their own expenditures, for improvements on their own property. In 1864 these conditions took the form of a demand, first, to be paid 1,000,000 l. sterling from sales of lands and mines, with large reservations "to be selected by them," &c., and secondly, to be paid 1,000,000 l. sterling in cash, with other terms and reservations favourable to the Company. In 1868, these conditions for the surrender of territorial and governing rights over the whole territory remained at 1,000,000 l. as in the first proposition of 1864, with large reservations of land, at "selected" points, exempted from taxation, and with full liberty to carry on their trade, free from the export and import duties, to which all other subjects of Her Majesty in that country would be exposed.

In 1869, these various proposals, which no Secretary of State could possibly entertain, have all been apparently merged in one grand proposition to sell out "the territory at once for a sum of money" in cash, or bonds, the amount of which is not stated.

We content ourselves, under this head, with the observation, that whatever others may be able to see in all these transactions, we are utterly unable to discover, either a cheerful acceptance of the decision of any Government, or an honest disposition to fulfil the solemn pledges made to Parliament in 1857, on the faith of which the Company was unquestionably saved from judicial or legislative extinction.

Sir Stafford Northcote claims credit for the Company, because they have "declined to encourage overtures which have been made to them by private persons for the purchase of portions of the Company's territory with a view to their colonisation." Our information is (and we can give Earl Granville names and dates, if the point is deemed of any importance), that the only "overtures" of the kind mentioned, which the Company have received, were not merely "encouraged," but suggested and concocted, by prominent members of the Company, for the purpose of producing an impression on the Government, and with a view, not to colonisation, but to negotiation and the stock market.

We are not sure that we understand the statement of Sir Stafford Northcote, that the Company "have taken no step which could give rise to fresh complications, or place any new difficulty in the way of the admission of their territory into the confederation."

The sale of land to private parties for colonisation (assuming that bonâ fide offers have been received from such parties) could not give rise to much complication, except in the affairs of the Company. If Sir Stafford hints at the negotiations which were lately reported to be going on with certain American speculators in London, for denationalising and Americanising the Company, with a view to the "admission of their territory" into the United States instead of the Confederation, we respectfully submit that while such a difficulty might indeed be "new," the proper person to solve it would be Her Majesty's Attorney General, with the aid of a court and jury of competent jurisdiction. We do not understand that Earl Granville expects us to defend in detail the Duke of Buckingham's proposals, or to answer all the objections made to them by Sir Stafford Northcote.

The Government of Canada, as we have already reminded his Lordship, neither suggested the Act of Parliament, nor the terms of the negotiation which the late Secretary of State for the Colonies attempted to carry out under its authority. The Canadian plan of dealing with the question of the North Western Territory and Rupert's Land is set forth in the Address of the Canadian Parliament to Her Most Gracious Majesty, and we do not feel at liberty, as representatives, to suggest any other mode until we are informed by Her Majesty's Government that the one proposed is deemed impracticable.

Sir Stafford Northcote's suggestion, that "the payment of a sum of money" for the purchase of the territory would conduce to a more satisfactory result, is, we believe, the point upon which Earl Granville specially desires to have our views. Assuming that by "territory" he means the whole territory to which the Company lay claim, and that they are to continue as a trading corporation, retaining their posts, and allotments of land in their neighbourhood, as he states was agreed upon between the Duke of Buckingham and Lord Kimberley, we have to observe—

1. This proposition involves an abandonment of the principle, which two Secretaries of State (and it must be presumed two successive administrations) declared, after much consideration, and in view of the transactions of 1857, was properly and justly applicable to this case, viz., that the compensation should be derived from the future revenue of the territory itself, and payable only as it came into the hands of Government. This principle was also accepted by the Company in their communication of 13th April 1864.

2. On the other hand, the principle of ascertaining and fixing a money value upon the territorial rights of the Company "in the British territory east of the "Rocky Mountains and north of the American and Canadian lines," and of extinguishing those rights by a payment "at once," was suggested in 1865, by a delegation from the Canadian Government of that day, and assented to by Mr. Cardwell, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, and his colleagues.

If the latter principle or mode of settlement is now to be adopted, it is obvious that the first question is—What is the nature of these "rights," and what territories do they affect? and the second—What are the rights separated from the duties and burdens attached to them by the Charter fairly worth?

We shall not attempt to answer these questions fully in the present communication, but we venture to submit, for Earl Granville's consideration, a few facts and inferences which cannot, we believe, be disputed, and which are essential elements in any calculation which may be attempted on the basis of a money purchase.

1st. The Charter of Charles II. (and for the present we raise no question as to its validity) could not, and did not, grant to the Hudson's Bay Company any territory in America which was not then subject to the Crown of England.

2. The Charter expressly excluded all lands, &c., then "possessed by the "subjects of any other Christian prince or State."

3. By the Treaty of St. Germain's-en-Laye, 1632, the King of England resigned to the King of France the sovereignty of Acadia, New France, and Canada generally, and without limits.

4. "La Nouvelle France" was then understood to include the whole region of Hudson's Bay, as the maps and histories of the time, English and French, abundantly prove.

5. At the Treaty of Ryswick (1697), 27 years after the date of the Charter, the right of the French to "places situated in Hudson's Bay" was distinctly admitted, and although Commissioners were appointed (but never came to an agreement) to "examine and determine the pretensions which either of the said kings hath "to the places situated in Hudson's Bay," and with "authority for settling the "limits and confines of the lands to be restored on either side," the places taken from the English (i. e., from the Hudson's Bay Company) by the French, previous to the war, and "re-taken by the English during this war, shall be left to the "French by virtue of the foregoing (the 7th) Article." In other words, the forts and factories of the Hudson's Bay Company, established in Hudson's Bay under pretence of their Charter, and taken possession of by the French in time of peace, on the ground that they were an invasion of French territory, were restored, by the Treaty of Ryswick, to the French, and not to the Company.

6. By the Treaty of Utrecht, 1714, "the Bay and Straits of Hudson, together "with all lands, seas, sea-coasts, rivers, and places situate in the Bay and Straits. "and which belong thereto," were finally ceded to Great Britain.

7. As no definite boundary was ever established between the possessions of the French in the interior, and the English at Hudson's Bay, down to the Treaty of Paris (1763), when the whole of Canada was ceded to Great Britain, the extent of the actual possession by the two nations for some period, say from the Treaty of Utrecht to the Treaty of Paris, affords the only rational and true basis for ascertaining that boundary.

8. The evidence is abundant and conclusive to prove that the French traded over, and possessed, the whole of the country known as the Winnipeg Basin, and "Fertile Belt," from its discovery by Europeans, down to the Treaty of Paris, and that the Hudson's Bay Company neither traded, nor established posts, to the south or west of Lake Winnipeg, until many years after the cession of Canada to England.

9. No other, or subsequent, grant to the Company was ever made, which could possibly extend their territorial rights under their Charter. The license to trade in "the Indian territories" which they obtained in 1821, was revoked in 1858, and has not been renewed.

10. The country which, in view of these facts, must be excluded from the operation of the Charter, includes all the lands fit for cultivation and settlement in that part of British America.

It will be for Earl Granville to consider whether this Company is entitled to demand any payment whatever for surrendering to the Crown that which already belongs to it. We confess our utter inability, upon any principle of law or justice, or public policy, with which we are acquainted, to estimate the amount which ought to be paid under such circumstances. The only basis of computation we can discover, applicable to such a case, is the cost of the legal proceedings necessary, if any be necessary, to recover possession. A person has taken possession of a part of your domain under the pretence that it is included in a deed which you gave him for some adjoining property, before you purchased the domain; you want to get rid of him, but will be compelled to bring an action. He is artful, stubborn, wealthy, and influential. He will be able to worry you with a tedious litigation. How many acres will you allow him to "reserve," and how much will you pay to save yourself the cost and trouble of a law suit? Compromises of this kind are not unknown in private life, and the motives and calculations which govern them, may be applicable to the present case. We recommend this mode of computing the amount of the payment to be made for the surrender of the North West Territory, as distinguished from Rupert's Land, with all the more confidence, because it has already been suggested by one of the ablest and most trusted of the representatives of the Company (see Evidence of Right Honourable E. Ellice, House of Commons' Report, 1857, question 5834).

With respect to Rupert's Land, or "the lands and territories" upon the coasts and confines of the seas, bays, &c. "that lie within the entrance of the Straits, "commonly called Hudson's Straits," "not possessed by the subjects of any other "Christian prince or State," a different rule, we admit, may be held to apply. Giving to the words of grant the widest construction, territorially, that could possibly be admitted by any judicial body, with the facts of the case in evidence before it, or giving to these words the construction which the Company themselves applied for a hundred years from the date of their Charter, the "rights" they propose to sell are of little commercial value. No revenue, we feel assured, will ever be derived from them. The fur trade is the only industry the country offers, as a source of profit, and this, if we rightly understand Sir Stafford Northcote's suggestion, the Company wish to retain.

It has never been alleged, even by the most sanguine advocates of the new theory of the Company respecting land sales, that any revenue can be derived from that source within the limits which we have assigned to Rupert's Land. The cost of Government there, inconsiderable though it may be, will always exceed any possible revenue. We are thus led to the same conclusion as in the case of the territory claimed, but not owned by the Company, viz., that what they propose to sell has no pecuniary or commercial value. They are there, however, by at least a show of right; being there they obstruct the progress of Imperial and Colonial policy, and put in jeopardy the sovereign rights of the Crown over one-third (and, as some think, even a larger portion) of the North American continent. "What is it worth to have this obstruction quietly removed?" This is, perhaps, the true question, but the answer, we submit, belongs rather to Her Majesty's Government, which has the power, in the event of resistance, to remove the evil by a summary process, than to those who are little more than spectators of the negotiation.

Earl Granville is aware that several attempts have been made since 1857, to arrive at a definite agreement on the subject of compensation. The suggestions and proposals on each side, together with the actual market value of the Company's stock at different periods, supply data, which his Lordship may deem of importance, and we therefore respectfully submit our views as to the conclusions which may be deduced from them.

The first attempt of the Imperial Government to estimate and express in pounds sterling, the compensation which it would be reasonable to offer to the Company, was made by the Duke of Newcastle in 1864. The greatest sum which after "very grave consideration," his Grace felt himself able to propose for the surrender of the country west of Lake Winnipeg, was 250,000 l.; but the payment was subject to the following conditions:—

1. £. 150,000 was to be derived from the sale of lands by Government within the territory. The payment was to be made at the rate of 1 s. per acre sold, but to be entirely dependent on the Government receipts.

2. Payments were to cease whenever they reached 150,000 l., and absolutely at the end of 50 years.

3. The Company was to be paid one-fourth of the sum received by Government for export duty on gold, or for mining licenses, or leases for gold mining in the territory, for 50 years, or until the aggregate amounted to 1,000,000 l.

4. The payment of any part of the 250,000 l. was contingent on the ability of the Company to place Her Majesty's Government in possession of an "indisputable title" to the territory ceded by them, as against the claims of Canada.

The last condition was objected to by the Company on the ground that they could only give such title as they had, which they contended "must be taken for better for worse." The Duke of Newcastle renewed his offer, modifying the last condition into a stipulation that, in case it should be found advisable, the territory, eastward of a line passing through Lake Winnipeg and Lake of the Woods, might be ceded or annexed to Canada, in which case, nothing would be payable to the Company in respect of that territory.

The present value, in cash, of such an offer, subject to the conditions and contingencies specified, would be very difficult to ascertain. The revenue from export duty on gold, and for licenses, would probably be nil. The revenue from land sales, if the cost of survey, management, and necessary roads, were deducted, would be nil also. It is very doubtful whether, if these deductions be made, the revenue from land sales in the Provinces of Canada, from 1763 to the present time, would show a surplus.

Sir Stafford Northcote quotes the price of land in Minnesota, and thence infers the value of lands on the Red River and Saskatchewan districts, which lie from five to ten degrees further north, and are still in the possession of the wild Indians of the plain; but we think it will be found that the lands in Minnesota, which sell for "one pound per acre," are either private lands, in the neighbourhood of towns, or the property of railway companies, on or near which millions of dollars have been expended to make them saleable; they are certainly not public lands, unimproved by public expenditure. Sir Stafford ought to have mentioned, at the same time, a fact which we believe is known to every emigrant who leaves the British Isles for America, that in the western states of the Union, and in the Provinces of Canada, wild lands are now given to settlers as "free grants," and we may add that this policy is more likely to be extended than reversed. To talk of the value of public lands as a source of revenue, distant from one to two thousand miles from available markets, and and without roads or navigable waters by which to approach them, is to contradict all experience, or to assume that the cost of surveys and management, and of canals, roads, and other improvements for their development and settlement, will be supplied by those who do not own them, for the benefit of those who do; but in order to arrive at some result that can be expressed in figures, let us assume that the sum ascertained by the Duke of Newcastle to be a sufficient "compensation," would, under his proposition, have been paid within 50 years and at an average rate per annum,—we thus give the Company the benefit of all the doubts in the case, and reduce the question to a simple problem in arithmetic. What is the present value of an annuity of 5,000 l. for 50 years?

That value, we submit, is the highest amount in cash which can be claimed as an equivalent for the offer made to the Company in 1864, by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle.

The next offer of the Imperial Government, which mentions a specific sum, is that made by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, on the 1st of December last. It differs from the previous offer in several important particulars.

1. It embraces the whole of the territory claimed by the Company.
2. It proposes to allow the Company to retain their "posts" and certain allotments of land in their vicinity, with a small reservation in each township, as it is surveyed.
3. It proposes to allow the Company one quarter of the receipts from land (free grants being treated as sales at 1 s. per acre) and one-fourth of the sum received by Government as an export duty for gold and silver, or for licenses for mining for gold or silver.
4. It limits the amount to be received under these heads conjointly, at 1,000,000 l. sterling.

The other stipulations are unimportant for the purpose of ascertaining the cash equivalent of the proposition.

It is evident that the "unknown quantities" in this equation are as difficult to find as in the first. We know the total sum to be paid and the proportion of the receipts from lands and mines applicable for its payment, but we do not know the average annual sum likely to be realised from their sale. The minimum price is fixed at 1 s. per acre and it is doubtful if, under the proposed arrangement, the price would ever be found to exceed that sum. There is one term still to be ascertained, the average number of acres per annum likely to be sold and granted; a crude guess is all that the case admits of. If we take Upper Canada, possessing many advantages for early and rapid settlement, of which unfortunately the remote territories of the North West are deprived, we find that from its erection into a separate Province down to 1868, about 22,000,000 of acres had been disposed of by sale and grant, or an average of about 286,000 acres per annum.

Assuming that the same rate of sale, &c., is maintained in the North-West Territories (which all the old Hudson Bay authorities who know the country would pronounce a bold assumption), we have reduced the question to a simple reference to the Annuity Tables, as before, viz.: What is the present value of an annuity of 3,575 l. per annum for 280 years?

We have omitted from the last term the one-fourth of the Government receipts from gold and silver, for two reasons: first, it has not been shown that there are any gold or silver mines in the territory that will pay for working; second, all the attempts heretofore made to obtain a revenue from such sources in Canada have failed, and public opinion has forced the local Governments to adopt the policy of what may be called "free mining," or cheap lands for miners, and abolition of royalties and imposts, except to meet the cost of preserving the peace, and of surveys and necessary supervision.

There is another proposition on the Government side, which bears on the question of "compensation:" it results from the agreement between the representatives of the Government of Canada and Her Majesty's Government in 1865, and containing fewer elements of uncertainty than propositions which involve questions of Government policy, emigration, land, sales, &c., it can be reduced to a cash value with greater exactitude.

Mr. Cardwell describes the agreement as follows: "On the fourth point, the subject of the North-Western Territory, the Canadian Ministers desired that that territory should be made over to Canada, and undertook to negotiate with the Hudson's Bay Company for the termination of their rights, on condition that the indemnity, if any, should be paid by a loan, to be raised by Canada, under the Imperial guarantee, with the sanction of the Cabinet; we assented to this proposal, undertaking that, if the negotiation should be successful, we, on the part of the Crown, being satisfied that the amount of the indemnity was reasonable and the security sufficient, would apply to the Imperial Parliament to sanction the agreement and to guarantee the amount."

The Canadian delegates reported on the subject with a little more detail. "We accordingly proposed to the Imperial Ministers that the whole British territory east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the American or Canadian lines should be made over to Canada, subject to such rights as the Hudson's Bay Company might be able to establish, and that the compensation to that Company (if any were found to be due) should be met by a loan guaranteed by Great Britain. The Imperial Government consented to this, and a careful investigation of the case satisfies us that the compensation to the Hudson's Bay Company cannot, under any circumstances, be onerous. It is but two years since the present Hudson's Bay Company purchased the entire property of the old Company; they paid 1,500,000 £. for the entire property and assets, in which was included a large sum of cash on hand, large landed properties in British Columbia and elsewhere, not included in our arrangement; a very large claim against the United States Government, under the Oregon Treaty; and ships, goods, pelts, and business premises in England and Canada, valued at 1,023,569 £. The value of the territorial rights of the Company, therefore, in the estimation of the Company itself, will be easily arrived at."

The principle which this agreement between the two Governments recognises as applicable to the case appears to be, compensation in money for the ascertained rights of the Company, after deducting the value of the property retained by them. The words "if any," and "if any were found to be due," import that, in the opinion of both parties, it was possible, if not probable, that after making the deductions, no compensation would be "due."

The basis of the calculation which seems to have been made, or agreed upon, is very simple. The old Hudson Bay Company had recently sold all the rights and property of the Company, of every description, for the sum of 1,500,000 £. An inventory agreed to by both sellers and purchasers set down the assets, exclusive of "territorial" rights, as follows:

1. "The assets (exclusive of Nos. 2 and 3) of the Hudson Bay Company, recently and specially valued	£.	s.	d.
"by competent valuers, at - - - - -	1,023,569	-	-
2. "The Landed Territory (not valued) - - - - -		-	-
3. "A cash balance of - - - - -	370,000	-	-
TOTAL - - - - £.	1,393,569	-	-

On the face of their own statement, 1,500,000 £., less the above sum, or 106,431 £., was the amount which the new purchasers actually paid for the "landed territory." Under the agreement of 1865, this seems to be the highest sum which Mr. Cardwell and the representatives of the Canadian Government thought could, in any event, be demanded by the Company, as indemnity or compensation for the surrender of the rights they "would be able to establish."

We have thus attempted to convert into their equivalents in cash the two offers made to the Company since 1857 by the Imperial Government, and to ascertain the amount of the indemnity contemplated by Mr. Cardwell and the Canadian delegates, in the arrangements of 1865. To arrive at any result, we have had to assume figures which, according to our experience, the facts of a new country will be more likely to reduce than to increase. We have also omitted conditions, either implied or expressed, in the proposals of 1864 and 1868, which we believe would have imposed considerable expense upon the Company.

There

There is another mode of estimating the amount to be paid on the principle of compensation for actual loss only, which remains to be considered. The stock of the Company has, for some time, been quoted at an average of 13½. The capital is, nominally 2,000,000 l., and the shares 20 l. The value of the stock, therefore, in cash, assuming that the whole of it could be sold at the market rate, is 1,350,000 l., or 43,569 l. less than the value, according to their own estimate in 1863 of the Company's assets, exclusive of the "landed territory."

The money obtained from the public for shares, beyond the 1,500,000 l. paid to the old shareholders, will no doubt be amply sufficient to make good any deficiency in the valuation of 1863.

From a consideration of these data, we submit that if the validity of the Charter is not now to be questioned; if the territorial extent of the country affected by it is not to be defined; if the claim of Canada to include within her boundaries a large portion, if not the whole, of the country occupied by the French at the time of the cession in 1763, is not to be investigated, and finally determined; if the admitted incapacity and the notorious neglect of the Company to perform the duties of Government (which were part of the consideration for the rights conceded by the Charter) are not to be taken as sufficient on public grounds to justify cancellation and re-entry by the Crown; then the very highest indemnity, which ought to be paid in cash, for a surrender of the territorial claims of the Company, with the reservations and other privileges offered by His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, is the sum indicated by the foregoing computations.

We must, in conclusion, express to Earl Granville our strong conviction that no money offer, which either the Imperial or the Canadian Government would deem reasonable, will be accepted by the Company, and that to delay the organisation of constitutional government in the North-West Territory until the Hudson's Bay Company consent to reasonable terms of surrender is to hinder the success of Confederation in British America, and to imperil the interests and authority of the British Crown in the territories now ruled by the Company.

We therefore respectfully submit for Earl Granville's consideration, whether it is not expedient that the Address of the Canadian Parliament be at once acted upon, under the authority of the Imperial Act of 1867.

But if his Lordship should see any sufficient legal or other objection to that course, then we ask, on behalf of the Dominion Government, for the immediate transfer to that Government of the "North-West Territory," or all that part of British North America from Canada on the east, to British Columbia, Alaska, and the Arctic Ocean on the west and north, not heretofore validly granted to and now held by "the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England "trading into Hudson's Bay," by virtue of a charter of King Charles the Second, issued about the year 1670.

Gentlemen,

Downing-street, 9 March 1869.

LORD GRANVILLE transmitted to the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company a copy of your Letter of the 9th February,* and I enclose, by his Lordship's directions, a copy of the answer which he has received.

The conclusions to which he has been led, after a careful consideration both of the correspondence which has passed and of the various representations made orally to him by yourselves and by the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Company, are embodied in the enclosed Letter, which he has directed me to address

Canada Conference.

His Lordship desires me to add, that in case the terms suggested in this letter should be accepted by the parties concerned, Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to fulfil the expectations held out in Mr. Cardwell's Despatch of 17th June 1865, and to propose to Parliament that the Imperial guarantee should be given to a loan of 300,000 £, the sum which is proposed to be paid over by Canada to the Company on the transfer of the Company's rights.

As this is a matter in which the Company has no interest, it is not adverted to in my letter to Sir Stafford Northcote.

Sir,

YOUR Letter of the 9th instant,* enclosing a copy of the proposals made by Lord Granville to the Hudson Bay Company in your Letter to Sir Stafford Northcote of the same date, has not been formally acknowledged by us in consequence of a doubt, not yet removed, as to the acceptance of those proposals by the Company. We stated verbally to Lord Granville our objections to his proposals, but finally consented to recommend them to the Canadian Government on condition that the Company first signified their acceptance of them.

Sir Stafford Northcote has since opened communication with us directly, and proposed important modifications of Lord Granville's terms, to which we could not assent. On some points of detail we agreed that the terms might be varied or qualified, if such variation or qualification would be likely to make the arrangements, as a whole, more acceptable to the shareholders of the Company. We understand Sir Stafford Northcote has acquainted Lord Granville with the correspondence which has passed between us on this subject.

The Company having, at their meeting of the 24th instant, postponed for a fortnight the question of accepting Lord Granville's proposals, we regret that we are unable to await their decision. Our public duties require that we should immediately return to Canada, and we have now the honour to repeat the request contained in our letter of the 9th February, viz., that immediate action may be taken by the Imperial Government upon the Address of the Canadian Parliament of December 1867, or that, pending the negotiations for the transfer of Rupert's Land, "the North Western Territory," or all that part of British North America from Canada on the east, to British Columbia, Alaska, and the Arctic Ocean on the west and north, not heretofore validly granted to and now held by "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay," may be immediately transferred to the Dominion of Canada, under the authority of the British North America Act of 1867.

We have, &c.

APPENDIX I.

CLAUSE 146 of the BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT, 1867.

XI.—ADMISSION OF OTHER COLONIES.

146. It shall be lawful for the Queen, by and with the Advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, on Addresses from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, and from the Houses of the respective Legislatures of the Colonies or Provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, and British Columbia, to admit those Colonies or Provinces, or any of them, into the Union, and on Address from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada to admit Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory, or either of them, into the Union, on such terms and conditions in each case as are in the Addresses expressed and as the Queen thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of this Act; and the provisions of any Order in Council in that behalf shall have effect as if they had been enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Power to admit Newfoundland, &c. into the Union.

APPENDIX II.

ANNO TRICESIMO PRIMO et TRICESIMO SECUNDO VICTORIÆ REGINÆ.

CAP. CV.

AN ACT for enabling Her Majesty to accept a Surrender upon Terms of the Lands, Privileges, and Rights of "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay," and for admitting the same into the Dominion of Canada. [31st July 1868.]

WHEREAS by certain Letters Patent granted by His late Majesty King Charles the Second, in the twenty-second year of His reign certain persons therein named were incorporated by the name of "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay," and certain lands and territories, rights of government, and other rights, privileges, liberties, franchises, powers and authorities were thereby granted or purported to be granted to the said Governor and Company in His Majesty's Dominions in North America:

And whereas, by the British North America Act, 1867, it was (amongst other things) enacted that it should be lawful for Her Majesty, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, on Address from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, to admit Rupert's Land and the North Western Territory, or either of them, into the Union on such terms and conditions as are in the Address expressed, and as Her Majesty thinks fit to approve, subject to the provisions of the said Act:

And whereas, for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the said British North America Act, 1867, and of admitting Rupert's Land into the said Dominion as aforesaid, upon such terms as Her Majesty thinks fit to approve, it is expedient that the said lands, territories, rights, privileges, liberties, franchises, powers and authorities, so far as the same have been lawfully granted to the said Company, should be surrendered to Her Majesty, Her heirs and successors, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company as hereinafter mentioned:

Recital of agreement of surrender.

Be it therefore enacted, by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "Rupert's Land Act, 1868."

Short Title.

2. For the purposes of this Act the term "Rupert's Land" shall include the whole of the lands and territories held or claimed to be held by the said Governor and Company.

Definition of "Rupert's Land."

3. It shall be competent for the said Governor and Company to surrender to Her Majesty, and for Her Majesty by any instrument under Her sign-manual and signet to accept a surrender of all or any of the lands, territories, rights, privileges, liberties, franchises, powers and authorities whatsoever granted or purported to be granted by the said Letters Patent to the said Governor and Company within Rupert's Land, upon such terms and conditions as shall be agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company; provided, however, that such surrender shall not be accepted by Her Majesty until Power to Her Majesty to accept surrender of lands, &c. of the Company upon certain terms.

Appendix.

until the terms and conditions upon which Rupert's Land shall be admitted into the said dominion of Canada shall have been approved of by Her Majesty, and embodied in an Address to Her Majesty from both the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, in pursuance of the one hundred and forty-sixth section of the British North America Act, 1867; and that the said surrender and acceptance thereof shall be null and void unless within a month from the date of such acceptance Her Majesty does by Order in Council under the provisions of the said last-recited Act admit Rupert's Land into the said Dominion; provided further, that no charge shall be imposed by such terms upon the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom.

Extinguishment of all rights of the Company.

4. Upon the acceptance by Her Majesty of such surrender all rights of government and proprietary rights, and all other privileges, liberties, franchises, powers, and authorities whatsoever, granted or purported to be granted by the said Letters Patent to the said Governor and Company within Rupert's Land, and which shall have been so surrendered, shall be absolutely extinguished; provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the said Governor and Company from continuing to carry on in Rupert's Land or elsewhere trade and commerce.

Power to Her Majesty by Order in Council to admit Rupert's Land into and form part of the Dominion of Canada.

5. It shall be competent to Her Majesty, by any such Order or Orders in Council as aforesaid, on Address from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, to declare that Rupert's Land shall, from a date to be therein mentioned, be admitted into and become part of the Dominion of Canada; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the Parliament of Canada, from the date aforesaid, to make, ordain, and establish within the land and territory so admitted as aforesaid, all such laws, institutions, and ordinances, and to constitute such courts and officers as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others therein: provided, that until otherwise enacted by the said Parliament of Canada, all the powers, authorities and jurisdiction of the several courts of justice now established in Rupert's Land, and of the several officers thereof, and of all magistrates and justices now acting within the said limits, shall continue in full force and effect therein.

APPENDIX III.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Hon. Sir Edmund Head, Bart., K.C.B., to Sir F. Rogers, Bart.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London, 11 November 1863.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 9th ultimo, in which you state that his Grace the Duke of Newcastle will be ready to consider any proposal submitted to him by the Hudson's Bay Company with reference to the introduction of the direct authority of Her Majesty's Government in Rupert's Land. It is gratifying to myself and the Committee to find that an opening is thus afforded for discussing plans which, to us, appear to have an important bearing on the future welfare of British North America.

At the same time, in order to avoid all misapprehension, it may be right to observe that it is not precisely as a boon to themselves that the Hudson's Bay Company have called his Grace's attention to the establishment of a colony at Red River. Probably their commercial interest would be equally served if things remained as they are, and if their trade were carried on as it has been. It is not, at any rate, with a view to immediate pecuniary profit that they have raised this question, and it is likely, for the present at least, that they would lose fully as much as they would gain by the increase of settlement in the chartered territory. Such appears to have been the unvarying opinion of this Committee before the change made in July last.

It may, no doubt, be said that the Hudson's Bay Company are merely endeavouring to escape from the troublesome responsibility of governing the Red River Settlement and the adjacent district.

In answer to this, I would observe that the responsibility, whatever it may be, which is imposed by the charter on the Company must be correlative with the rights and powers vested in them for the purpose of discharging that duty. What these rights and powers are not, is pretty clear from the following passage in the letter of the Law Officers of the Crown, dated 1st July 1857 (Appendix to Report of Committee, page 404). These gentlemen say:—

"But with respect to any right of Government taxation, exclusive administration of justice, or exclusive trade, otherwise than as a consequence of the right of ownership of the land, such right could not be legally insisted on by the Hudson's Bay Company as having been legally granted to them by the Crown."

The power of taxation may be thought to be the first and necessary condition of all effective powers of Government; but if this first condition is wanting, it would seem to follow that the powers vested in the Company of governing others than their own servants and dependants must be of a very limited character; and if the power is limited, so also must the responsibility be limited.

The Company are fully competent to manage their own people, and they believe that they have proved themselves more competent to manage the Indians than any Government or

Association

Association which has yet tried its hand at this work in North America. They have preserved peace and good-will on one side of a frontier when war and savage hatred have raged on the other. They have done so, no doubt, from interested motives, but the motives of those who failed in accomplishing the same task, have perhaps not been more pure.

In the present case the question at issue is not the Government of the Hudson's Bay officers and servants, or of the Indians, but the exercise of proper authority and protection over those subjects of her Majesty, mostly unconnected with the Company, who have chosen to settle at Red River, or who may hereafter settle in the adjoining territory. These considerations then, and the future position of British interests in North America (in which, no doubt, the Hudson's Bay Company are deeply interested), not the hope of immediate advantage, have induced the present Committee to express, as they have done in their resolution of the 28th August last, the conviction that the time had arrived for introducing into these regions the direct authority of the Crown.

I have to assure his Grace, that the Committee will esteem themselves fortunate if they are able to co-operate with him in the establishment there of such a Government as he may deem fitted for the wants of the people and the circumstances of the time.

I have had the honour of several conversations with you on this subject, from which I infer that the Secretary of State is unwilling to deal with the question of establishing a Colonial Government in Rupert's Land, so long as the Company maintain, unimpaired, their claim to the exclusive ownership of the soil within that territory. It is not for me, or the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, to discuss the reason for such a view. We certainly assume that the Company are proprietors of the land under the charter, and we think that this primâ facie title is impliedly recognised in the letter of the Law Officers of July 1st, 1857, already quoted. No one has contested in a court of any kind a possession which has existed for 200 years; and the Committee do not, themselves, clearly see why the exercise of this private right of ownership of the soil, by individuals, or by a corporate body, should be deemed incompatible with the exercise of the Queen's public authority in matters of government. They do not see why that which is the normal state of things in most other colonies should be inadmissible in this particular portion of British North America; but it is not their business to enter into this question. They are anxious to do all they can to smooth over difficulties rather than raise them, and I will, therefore, proceed to consider what would probably be the nature of the territory to be included in any such Colony, and what are the measures which the Hudson's Bay Company would be prepared to take in order to facilitate its establishment. It will be for his Grace the Duke of Newcastle to decide whether the sacrifices they are ready to make are of a nature to warrant any action on the part of the Crown.

With regard to the extent of the proposed Colony, of which the seat of Government would be Red River (or Fort Garry), the Committee presume that his Grace would wish it to include the whole country from the frontier of the United States, to the north branch of the Saskatchewan, and to extend eastward towards Lake Superior as far as the frontier of Canada, wherever the precise line of that frontier may be found. Perhaps the most convenient limit for the northern boundary would be either the Saskatchewan itself, or a line running from the Rocky Mountains eastward through Edmonton House and Fort Cumberland, and from the latter following the Saskatchewan down to Lake Winnipeg. Nothing would be gained by going farther to the northward, nor by including the eastern side of Lake Winnipeg, but from the mouth of the Winnipeg River where it enters the lake, the line of demarcation might be run eastward until it cut the Canadian frontier somewhere north of Lake Superior or Lake Huron.

Of this large tract, Assinaboia, or the district round Red River, forms but a small portion, although it includes a good deal of the land which is probably fittest for settlement. In 1834 the Hudson's Bay Company repurchased this district from Lord Selkirk for a consideration amounting to upwards of 80,000 £. This fact alone makes it clear that it would be impossible for the Committee, as Trustees for the Company, to entertain the question of ceding the ownership of the soil without compensation or equivalent of some kind.

The most obvious, simple, and satisfactory settlement of the question of transfer would of course be that the Crown should compensate the Company for their property by a sum of money paid either at once or in a series of annual payments; but to the supposed value of the soil would have to be added the price of the Company's interest of all mines of gold and silver which are by express words given in the Charter. It is clear that the recent discovery of gold in the territory would cause the proprietary to reject any bargain which implied the gratuitous cession of these rights. The Committee would be quite willing that the exact amount to be paid to the Hudson's Bay Company for the land should be calculated on the principle of what they themselves paid to Lord Selkirk for a portion of it, and they would be prepared to discuss the fair worth both of territory and mining rights, or to submit the assessment of their value to impartial arbitrators.

But the Committee also know that the Secretary of State may find difficulties in the way of a large money payment of any kind, and in order, as far as they can, to remove all obstacles to this negotiation they have authorised me to propose another alternative as a middle course, which they think would be admissible, although far from welcome to many of their own proprietors.

This alternative is as follows, viz., that, subject to certain special stipulations to be stated hereafter, the Company should retain the ownership in fee simple of one-half of the lands in the Colony and the other half should be conveyed by the Company to the Crown. The actual division should be one based on considerations of the extent and value of different sections, derived from soil, situation and climate. The details might be settled afterwards if the principle were once admitted. In the portion fitted for settlement and along the frontier the division might be made at once in alternate blocks of so many thousand acres, or so many square miles. In the unsettled and remote portion of the country the division might stand over indefinitely, provided a power was given to either party to initiate proceedings against squatters and trespassers. The undivided lands might be managed by a board of commissioners.

The stipulations of which I have spoken, and which it appears to the Committee would be reasonable, are as follows :

1st. The Hudson's Bay Company should have the sole right to erect, and should bind themselves to complete, within five years, an electric telegraph to connect British Columbia and Canada. The line for this telegraph should be approved by the Secretary of State, and it should be maintained by the Company, who would of course engage to convey the messages of the Imperial and Colonial Governments at a fixed and moderate rate.

It would be necessary as a condition precedent to the erection of the telegraph,—

(A.) That the Governments of British Columbia and Canada should pledge their faith respectively to the Secretary of State to pay the yearly sum set forth in the enclosures to the Despatch of 31st July 1862, with all the advantages as to lands to be granted by Her Majesty's Government, and other terms therein specified.

(B.) That a road should be laid out along the line of telegraph, but the soil on which the telegraph stands, and the space (say one mile in width on one side of its course) should belong to the Hudson's Bay Company, to be reckoned as part of the half of the land which they would retain. The other side of the road might be included in the half belonging to the Crown.

(C.) That the Company, in constructing the telegraph, should be entitled to use wood or other materials taken from ungranted land.

2nd. The Crown shall resume the grant of mines and diggings of gold and silver throughout the Colony on condition of paying to the Hudson's Bay Company one-third of the receipts of all dues, royalties, rents, &c. from such mines or diggings, whether raised by way of export duty or otherwise ; but the Company should not be liable for expenses of collection or escort.

3rd. The buildings required for military or Government purposes at Fort Garry or Red River should be valued and purchased of the Company.

4th. The Company should retain, as a portion of their half of the lands, all lots already laid out and surveyed, as well as 5,000 acres round each of their forts or posts.

The Committee trust that the Duke of Newcastle will view these proposals of theirs as an evidence of an anxious desire to meet His Grace's wishes.

While suggesting a plan which involves the cession of the Company's right of property over one-half of a vast tract of British North America, the Committee simply ask that the Crown will exercise on British soil, in favour of British subjects, that amount of control and protection which the Queen's prerogative can alone afford ; a protection, in other cases, at least, deemed perfectly consistent with the unimpaired enjoyment of existing rights of private property, and which, in fact, is commonly thought to be directed specially to the maintenance of those very rights against wrong and violence of any kind.

COPY of a LETTER from Chichester Fortescue, Esq., M.P., to the Right Honourable Sir Edmund Head, Bart., K.C.B.

Sir,

Downing-street, 11 March 1864.

THE Duke of Newcastle has considered, with the care which their importance requires, the proposals contained in your letter of the 11th November last, respecting the introduction of the direct authority of Her Majesty's Government into Rupert's Land.

The first of these proposals is as follows :—It appears that in 1834 the Company purchased from Lord Selkirk the tract of land called Assinaboia, on which the Red River Settlement now stands, for a consideration amounting to upwards of 80,000 £. You propose to cede to the Government that territory, together with a far larger tract described in your letter, on receiving :

1. £. 80,000. for the district of Assinaboia.
2. A payment for the rest of the land calculated on the principle of what the Company paid to Lord Selkirk, and
3. The price of the Company's right to all mines of gold and silver.

His

His Grace infers from the tenour of your letter that the payment made to Lord Selkirk was an actual payment of 80,000 £. in money, and not a mere share in the profits of the Company, to some amount supposed to be equal to 80,000 £. But, however the payment was made, he apprehends that it formed part of a large arrangement by which the two companies, which are now combined in the Hudson's Bay Company, put an end to a competition which was becoming ruinous to both of them, and had to be stopped at all hazards. If this is the case, the terms of purchase afford no safe grounds for conjecturing whether 80,000 £. was really a fair market price for the land at the time of the purchase. But his Grace cannot consider this statement to have any bearing on the present negotiation. It appears to him that in making a purchase of land there are really only two questions to be considered, first, what the land is worth to the vendor, and, secondly, what it is worth to the purchaser. It is plain that neither of these questions is even remotely affected by the price which (wisely or unwisely) may have been paid for it to Lord Selkirk in 1834. And his Grace is unable therefore to adopt the proposed principle of valuation.

Nor could he consent to pay the assessed value of the gold and silver which is or may be found in the Company's territory. On this subject a good deal of experience has already accumulated. Judging from this experience, it is very doubtful whether the Crown could raise a revenue from the gold miners more than sufficient to meet the expenses which they entail, and very probable that the revenue so raised might be insufficient for its purpose. That a private corporation should succeed in compelling this class of persons to pay any considerable revenue to be expended, not for the digger's own benefit, nor even for the benefit of the general community, but for the benefit of the corporation, his Grace holds to be absolutely impossible.

He does not consider therefore that the interests of the company in the unascertained and unavailable source of profit is a matter capable of assessment.

Thus much as to the principle of valuation. Passing to the mode of payment, his Grace observes that you are alive to the difficulty of applying to Parliament for a grant of money from the Imperial Treasury. But he thinks it necessary to state clearly that the difficulty is, in his opinion, insuperable, and that having reference to the position of the Company and the views on Colonial expenditure, which are prevalent in and out of the Legislature, any appropriation of Imperial funds by vote of Parliament to the compensation of the Company must be considered as out of the question.

It follows to consider the second alternative proposed on the part of the Company; but before doing so, I am directed to notice your observation that the exercise of the private right of ownership of the soil by individuals, or by a corporate body, need not be deemed incompatible with the exercise of the Queen's authority in matters of government, and you point out in support of your opinion that this is in fact the normal state of things in most other Colonies. This the Duke of Newcastle fully admits. He would even add that it is also the normal state of things in the United Kingdom and in most other settled countries.

The obvious distinction lies in the fact that these colonies and countries are settled. From this fact it follows first that there is a large amount of property, independent of any proceeds derivable from the sale of land, which is applicable to the government and improvement of the country, and next that it is not a matter of public policy to attract immigration by a wise disposal of the public lands. In an unsettled colony there is no effectual mode of taxation for purposes of government and improvement, and the whole progress of the Colony depends on the liberal and prudent disposal of its land. These considerations afford decisive reasons against leaving that land in the possession of a corporation; and I am to observe that these objections, conclusive in any case, are greatly enhanced in the case of the Hudson's Bay Company, as I learn from your letter that it has been "the unvarying opinion" of the committee, on whose behalf you speak, that the Company would "lose fully as much as they would gain by the increase of settlement in the chartered territory." It is therefore (to say the least) a question whether the Company would not be under a direct inducement to use their proprietary rights to thwart the colonizing efforts of the Government.

It is true that in former times the whole soil of a settlement was frequently conveyed to a proprietary body; but in these cases the responsibilities of Government followed the grant of property. Those who were invested with extensive corporate rights of possession bore (like the East India Company in its earlier days) the whole expense both of civil government and of military defence.

In Prince Edward Island the right of property was more recently disjoined from that of Government, but the result has not been such as to invite imitation.

The second alternative proposed in your letter, then, is this; that the whole territory which it is proposed to bring under the authority of the Crown should be divided into large blocks or tracts of land, which shall be assigned alternately to the Crown and to the Company. Waste lands, till so assigned, being managed by a board in which both parties should be represented.

To this proposal his Grace feels himself unable to assent. The difficulties of management which might be expected to arise in working such a plan, would in themselves be sufficiently formidable. The expense, delay, and controversy which might arise in defining and maintaining the boundaries of Crown lands, and the improbability that a cordial agreement would continue between the persons representing different and often conflicting interests in the proposed land board, are serious dangers. But the conclusive objection to the scheme is that it would reproduce in a gigantic shape the inconveniences which on a far smaller scale were found intolerable in Canada. It is evident, as a matter of reasoning, and notorious as a matter of fact, that the interposition of large blocks of property between tracts or districts of Crown land, must obstruct the opening up of those districts, unless it fortunately happens that the private proprietor is ready to expend money pari passu with the Government in the construction of roads and other improvements, and to conform his land policy to that of the authorities.

It is also clear that colonists of the Anglo-Saxon race look upon the land revenue as legitimately belonging to the community, and that the diversion of half, or more than half, of that revenue to the purpose of increasing the dividends of a private corporation, would cause a continual and growing discontent which could not be allayed by any abstract argument of right, and the full force of which the Government would be expected by the company to sustain.

His Grace cannot consent to make himself responsible for these consequences, and he is therefore obliged to treat as inadmissible any proposal for the proprietary partition of those territories which may be placed under the government of the Crown.

The only terms which, after a very grave consideration of your letter, he feels himself able to propose for the acceptance of the company, are the following :

1. That within certain geographical limits (coinciding more or less with those laid down in your letter) the territorial rights of the company should be surrendered to the Crown.

2. That the sum of 1 s. per acre on every acre sold by Government should be paid to the company, and payment to cease when their aggregate receipts from this source shall exceed 150,000 £., or on the expiration of 50 years.

3. That one-fourth of the sum received by the Government as an export duty for gold, or on leases of gold mines, or licenses for gold mining, shall be payable to the company for 50 years, or until the aggregate receipts shall amount to 100,000 £.

4. That on these conditions a government be established in the ceded territories; Great Britain undertaking the expense and risk of that government until the Colony is able to support it, as in British Columbia, and other Colonies.

It must be clearly understood that the payments contemplated in the second and third of these articles are entirely dependent on the Government receipts, and that the Government will not be pledged to any particular form of levying a tax upon gold.

If the company should find themselves unable to accept these terms, or some modification of them, his Grace does not see how it will be possible for him to recommend that the Crown should assume any responsibility in respect of the Hudson's Bay territories, and it will rest with the Company to apply to Parliament for such powers, as may, in their opinion, enable them to preserve order in the country in which they are interested.

Right Honourable Sir Edmund Head, Bart.,

P.S.—Since the above letter was drafted, his Grace has received from the Governor General of Canada a Despatch, from which it appears that the Canadian Government contemplate the assertion of a claim to all that portion of Central America which can be shown to have been in the possession of the French in 1763. It must be understood that the above suggestions are made on the supposition that the cession by the Company will place Her Majesty's Government in possession of an indisputable title to the territory ceded by them.

COPY of a LETTER from the Right Honourable Sir Edmund Head, Bart., to Chichester Fortescue, Esq., M. P.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London, 14 March 1864.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 11th instant, which has been laid before the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, by whom I am authorised to make the following remarks :

The Committee deeply regret to find that none of the proposals made by them has been found admissible by his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies ; but as this is the case, there is no further use in discussing the principles on which they were based, or the details involved in them.

On the other hand, the Committee would feel it their duty at once to address themselves to the consideration of the counter proposal contained in your letter of the 11th, were it not for the postscript of that letter relating to the claims of Canada.

It is true that these claims are not new ; they were expressly stated in the same form in the petition from the Board of Trade of Toronto, which was before the Parliamentary Committee of 1857, and they were in fact discussed by that Committee, and were referred to in the letter of the Attorney and Solicitor General to the Right Honourable H. Labouchere. The Law Officers there say, that the question of boundary could not be made the subject of a quasi judicial inquiry without the consent of both parties, and that a decision of a Committee of the Privy Council would have no effect in such a case as a binding judicial determination. They had previously stated, that "in the case of grants of a considerable age,

"age, such as this charter, when the words, as is often the case, are indefinite or ambiguous, the rule is, that they are construed by usage and enjoyment, including in these latter terms the assertion of ownership by the Company on important public occasions, such as the Treaty of Ryswick and Utrecht, and again in 1750."

Appendix.

When Sir Frederic Rogers, in his letter of 9th October 1863, intimated the readiness of his Grace the Secretary of State to receive any proposal made on the part of the Company, the fact that these claims had been made by Canada, and had not been waived, was as well known as it now is. The nature of the title of the Hudson's Bay Company also was then as well, perhaps better, known to the Secretary of State than it is to us. I say, perhaps better, because the Law Officers of the Crown have, we believe, at various times given the Colonial Office the benefit of their observations thereon, an advantage which the Company, of course, have not enjoyed to the same extent.

We believe the title of the Hudson's Bay Company to be good, and we are prepared to defend it in any court in which it may be impugned; but we are not prepared to originate any inquiry of the kind, or to undertake to give any guarantee, or to present to the Secretary of State any title other than that which I have already said is as well known to his Grace as it is to ourselves. Such as it is, it must be taken for better for worse, for we have no other to offer, and we believe that to be sufficient. If, therefore, any such guarantee or undertaking is a condition precedent to the completion of an arrangement on the basis now suggested in your letter of the 11th instant, it will, we fear, be wholly useless for us to enter into the consideration of the principle of that offer, or any discussion how far the details involved in it are or are not acceptable to the Company, or how far the amount of compensation would be sufficient.

If, indeed, the question were one only of some few miles, more or less, of boundary, the case would be wholly different. But in the form in which the claim is presented to us in your postscript, it appears to the Committee to make all further action impracticable.

We may perhaps be permitted to make one other remark on the postscript of your letter.

The claim of Canada, if it means anything, seems to assert that certain rights of a foreign power modify the operation of the Charter. These foreign rights were acquired by Treaty for the Crown of England in 1763, nearly 100 years after the grant of the Charter. Now, after the possession and recognition in various ways for two centuries, the validity of this instrument is attacked on the ground of those supposed rights. The claim thus made may be good or bad, but it appears to us singular that the Company should be required by the Crown itself to warrant the validity of its own Charter. There are legal methods, no doubt, of rescinding, by the courts, improvident or unlawful grants emanating from the Crown. In 1857 the Law Officers were consulted by Mr. Labouchere as to the possibility or equity of having recourse to proceedings of this kind in this case, and they gave their answer in the letter referred to above. Our rights, such as they are, come from the Crown, and it seems to us, who are unlearned in the law, somewhat strange that the Crown, the grantor, should ask of the Hudson's Bay Company, the grantee, a warranty for a title derived immediately from itself. It adds to this apparent anomaly, that the only competing title against which the warranty could be required is the title of the Crown itself in another shape. We presume that the object of the Canadian Government is to open the country for settlement -- an object which it would be in the power of the Colonial Office to secure at any rate, and which the Hudson's Bay Company have no wish whatever to prevent.

Appendix to Report,
pp. 403 and 404.

But for this preliminary difficulty, arising from the postscript to your letter, it would now be my duty to call your attention to the fact that that letter makes no allusion to a substantive portion of our offer, to which we attach great importance; that, namely, of erecting, on certain terms, an electric telegraph across the Hudson's Bay territory. We have ceded to no one the right to do this, and we are perfectly ready, on fair conditions and as part of the arrangement, to undertake to do it ourselves; nor is anything said, in the counter proposal made by you, as to the portions of land which the Company might be allowed to retain as private property, nor as to the manner in which their posts, or their buildings and improvements would be dealt with.

To revert for a moment to the electric telegraph, it is obvious that, so far as it goes, the mere appearance of a vague claim on the part of Canada, pressed upon us now or countenanced by the Secretary of State, must have a tendency to deter us from any outlay of capital in this or any other form. We had hoped to have taken the first steps for the erection of the telegraph in the present season, and we know by experience that in a distant country where winter begins early and lasts till late, a season lost is the loss of the whole year.

I trust, sir, that in laying these remarks before his Grace the Secretary of State, you will assure him that they are offered with great humility and respect, and that we are as ready as we ever were to deal in a fair and candid spirit with this or any other offer made to us. So far as the proposal itself goes, and irrespective of this question of title, the Committee rejects no basis of negotiation (if that is a proper word to use in a correspondence between a private company and Her Majesty's Government), and what they have said is dictated only by a sense of the duty incumbent on them to uphold the interests of the Company whose affairs they administer.

COPY of a LETTER from C. Fortescue Esq., M.P., to the Right Honourable Sir E. Head, Bart., K.C.B.

Sir,

Downing Street, 5 April 1864.

I AM directed by the Duke of Newcastle to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th ultimo, in which you state that the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company are prevented by the postscript of my letter of the 11th from taking into consideration the proposals contained in that letter relating to the transfer of part of Rupert's Land to the Crown.

It appears to the Duke of Newcastle that the Committee has somewhat misapprehended the intention with which that postscript was written.

It is assumed, for the present purpose, that the grant to the Hudson's Bay Company is a valid grant; but it appears to be contended on the part of Canada, that whether valid or not, an instrument which only granted to the Company land not in possession of a foreign power in the year 1670, could not, from its very terms, comprehend in 1763 a territory which then belonged to the French, and which it is contended must therefore have then belonged, and belongs now to Canada.

If this claim, on the part of Canada, were established it would evidently be impossible for Her Majesty's Government to secure that lands to which it extended, should when sold, be subject to a payment of 1s. an acre to the Hudson's Bay Company. It is therefore impossible for his Grace to make any pledge of this kind, except as to land which is beyond the scope of the Canadian claim.

As regards the territories west of the Mississippi, to which the present negotiation in the main relates, the Duke of Newcastle, after a careful examination, is prepared, for the purpose of the present negotiation, to assume that the Canadian claim is groundless. And he therefore authorises me to renew the proposals contained in the body of my letter of the 11th, subject to the following stipulation: that in case it should be found advisable to cede or annex to Canada any territory lying eastward of a line passing through Lake Winnipeg, and from thence to and through the Lake of the Woods, Her Majesty's Government should be at liberty to exempt the annexed territory from all payment to the Hudson's Bay Company, which payments would thenceforth be exclusively leviable (without any deduction from their amount) on the territories acquired by the Crown to the west of the above line of demarcation. His Grace hopes that this suggestion will remove the difficulty by which the Hudson's Bay Company at present conceive themselves to be embarrassed.

His Grace did not direct me to offer any observation on your proposal for the construction of a road and telegraph, because he had already commenced negotiations on that subject with gentlemen representing the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph and Transit Company, whose project he had recommended to the favourable consideration of the Colonies concerned. He is now informed, that this company has transferred its rights and responsibilities to the Hudson's Bay Company. That transfer his Grace is most willing to recognise, if it is recognised by the Colonies concerned. And he is further willing, that on the completion of the road and telegraph, from the frontier of Canada to that of British Columbia, lands adjacent to the line shall be granted to the company, at the rate of one square mile for every lineal mile of road and telegraph constructed on Crown land between the line of demarcation, above described, and the frontier of British Columbia.

The form and exact situation of these grants should, in his Grace's opinion, be left for future discussion, the principle being, that a strip of land, two miles in width, along the line of road and telegraph, is to be divided equally between the Government and the Company. But, in other respects, the grants will be subject to the conditions expressed in the 3rd article of a Memorandum, enclosed in a letter addressed to the Duke of Newcastle by Mr. Watkin, on the 28th April 1863,* and in Mr. Fortescue's answer of 1st of May, and must be understood to stand in lieu of the grants contemplated by that article.

I enclose a Parliamentary Paper, in which Mr. Watkin's letter is printed, with the correspondence relating to it.

13 April 1864.

Sir,

I HAVE had the honour of receiving your letter of 5th April,* which has been laid before the committee of the Hudson's Bay Company, and considered by them at a special meeting summoned for that purpose.

After the explanation given with reference to the postscript of your letter of the 11th ultimo, the Committee feel that they are in a position to renew the negotiation, with every hope of coming to a satisfactory conclusion. They think this, because they trust it will be found that their demands, on the part of the Company, differ in degree, rather than in principle, from the offers made by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle.

2. The

H. of C., No. 438 of
1863, page 12.

* Above.

2. The Committee do not object to the proposal that a payment of 1s. per acre for all lands sold should be made to the Company, in proportion as the money is received by the Government; nor do they object to the term of 50 years as the limit of time, after which such payment should cease. They think, however, that if a limit of time is fixed, there ought to be no limit of amount, inasmuch as the Government pay nothing beforehand, and will be called on to hand over the money only on the supposition that they receive a larger sum themselves. If the lands sell freely the receipts of the Government will be increased, and the Committee do not see why the share of the Company should not in justice increase in proportion.

If, however, any limit in the amount of the payments to be made to the Company by this and the next article is absolutely required, the Committee would be willing to agree that the produce of the two together; that is, of the 1s. an acre for land, and the percentage on the gold, should not, in the aggregate, exceed 1,000,000*l*.

It is necessary to make one observation with reference to the payments on account of land. According to the letter of the proposal, it would be open to the Colonial Government to defeat the claim of the Company altogether by adopting a system of free grants; and it must therefore be understood, if this is done on any ground of policy, the payment to the Company should be made notwithstanding.

3. With regard to the per-centage on the proceeds of gold, the Committee are willing to accept the proportion of one-fourth, as stated in your letter, it being clearly understood that they are not called on to defray any portion of the expense of collection or escort. Here again, however, it appears to the committee, whilst they are willing to admit the limit of time, that the limit in amount, looking to the contingent nature of the payment, ought to be withdrawn.

At any rate, they could consent to it on the terms already stated in Article 2; that is to say, if the possible limit were extended to 1,000,000*l*. for both lands and gold conjointly.

4. If, in exchange for the rights to be ceded by the Hudson's Bay Company, the Government were about to pay an adequate money consideration not contingent in its character, there would be, of course, no reason why the sellers should expect to retain any large portion of the soil, or to reserve to themselves the chance of future benefit from the future prosperity of the Colony. But the offers now made are of a totally different character. No profit will accrue to the Company unless the Government itself makes a higher one; and the committee, as trustees for the proprietors, feel it to be absolutely necessary to stipulate for certain additional reservations in land, which I will proceed to specify. I may add, too, that such a reservation would appear to be politic in the interest of the Colony itself. For many years to come the Company must be closely connected in trade with the territory which they propose to relinquish; and it appears important, on every account, that they should retain what may be called "a share in the stake"; that they should feel their own interest on landowners, as well as merchants, wrapped up with those of the Colony, and should have every inducement to contribute, by their influence and proceedings, to its future well-being and tranquillity. There is nothing, perhaps, in which the Company could exert this influence more beneficially than in discouraging the use of spirits in the trade with the natives; and it would be their interest and their wish to second every effort of the Colonial Government in this direction.

The Committee therefore ask—

(a). That the Company should retain as private property all their posts and stations on which buildings have been erected, with an area of not less than 6,000 acres round each such post; but they do not of course intend that this clause should apply to the Red River Settlement.

(b). That they should, in like manner, retain all lots set out and occupied by them.

(c). That whenever the Government of the Colony shall have sold or granted 50,000 acres, the Company should be entitled to a grant of 5,000 acres of wild land, to be selected by them.

The Committee have proposed this mode of reservation, because it appears to them to obviate the objection which may reasonably be made to setting apart beforehand a number of isolated tracts of wild land, dotted over the surface of the Colony, and calculated to impede the free flow of settlement in the territory. In this manner the grants to the Company will only proceed equally with the progress of colonisation; and the demand will hardly seem extravagant when it is considered that the total number of acres to be at once handed over cannot be estimated at less than 200,000,000.

5. The Committee think it necessary to provide that the Colonial Government shall not at any time tax the lands or property of the Company, in any way, or on any scale, different from that on which the lands or property of other proprietors are taxed.

6. The Committee assume that all charges of a public character which now fall on the Hudson's Bay Company shall, as a matter of course, be transferred to the Government of the Colony. As regards the salary of the Bishop of Rupert's Land, the Company, by the Governor and Deputy Governor, act jointly with others as trustees of what is called "The Leith Fund." For the discharge of these trusts, so far as that fund is concerned, they of course would remain answerable, but they think that they ought to be relieved of any obligations (over and above the proceeds of the fund) which they have taken on themselves as a matter of liberality and public policy. In an equitable arrangement of all these matters, without injury to the interest of the Church or of individuals, the Committee see no real difficulty.

Appendix.

7. The next point to be dealt with is the important question of the electric telegraph, and the opening a communication sufficient for the passage of the mails across the present territory of the Company from Canada to British Columbia.

The Committee are quite willing to accept the paper submitted by Mr. Watkin to his Grace the Duke of Newcastle as the basis of this arrangement, and are prepared to place themselves substantially in the position of the Atlantic and Pacific Transit and Telegraph Company, subject to the following alterations;—

The point at which the telegraph will probably begin on the eastern side of the territory, will be either Pembina or Rainy Lake, according as Canada may or may not adhere to the original terms proposed. If Canada should decline to fulfil what is laid down in the paper referred to, the Company will of course be compelled to make the best bargain they can with the lines traversing Minnesota, and passing through the United States; and they will have to forego the guarantee of interest originally held out from Canada. Rainy Lake is named, not as being the admitted frontier of the province, but simply as the conventional point eastward, assumed in your Despatch.

With regard to the third article in the paper referred to, the letter of its provisions is not wholly applicable to the altered state of things; but in accordance with your letter of the 5th instant, the Committee are willing to adopt its spirit as the basis of the arrangement to be made. They cannot however admit that one square mile for every lineal mile of telegraph would be an adequate allowance of wild land for such an undertaking. They believe it will be found that in all such enterprises through an unsettled country in America, the proportion of land granted to the contractors has been far larger, and they think that the claim in their case is strengthened, rather than weakened, by the fact that the land to be passed through is a very small portion of that which they themselves propose to cede for a consideration for a time, at least little more than nominal.

The Committee, on referring to the printed correspondence forwarded by you, find that Sir Frederic Rogers, in his letter of 28th August 1862 (p. 7), expressed the gratification of his Grace the Duke of Newcastle at the readiness of the Company to make a grant of land to the promoters of the proposed passenger and telegraphic communication; but they believe, on the best authority, that the most moderate demand ever made by Mr. Watkin, when then sent to the Company by his Grace, very far exceeded the breadth of five miles of wild land for every lineal mile of telegraph. Below this amount of wild land to be set out in alternate sections, as proposed in the 3rd article (p. 13) of Mr. Watkin's paper, the Committee could not reduce their demand.

8. Such, sir, are the conditions which the Committee feel bound to offer to Her Majesty's Government, after a full consideration of all the circumstances of the case. Even with these conditions they do not feel sure that they shall escape, on the part of their proprietors, the question, "What are we to obtain for this cession of our rights in so large a territory? Why are we (the Hudson's Bay Company) to purchase at so large a cost the exertion of the Queen's authority on British soil rendered necessary by no fault of ours"? Could we, under any circumstances, be worse off than we shall be in sacrificing, for a contingent consideration, this vast mass of property, and the chance of profit from its future development.

If we did not think that these questions admitted of a satisfactory answer, we should not, as trustees for the proprietors, convey to you the offers made in this letter. But it may be difficult to convince our shareholders that (as we believe) the real interests of the Company and of Her Majesty's Government will be equally promoted by their adoption in the form now suggested.

Sir,

Downing-street, 6 June 1864.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Cardwell to inform you that he has had under his consideration your letter of the 13th of April last.

Mr. Cardwell will not be prepared to accept, without considerable modifications, the terms contained in it. But before sending to you, in answer, the terms to which he would be prepared to bind Her Majesty's Government, he feels that it will be necessary to consult the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, and to ascertain more fully the views which may be entertained by the advisers of the Governor General of Canada.

In the meantime he does not understand that you are willing to undertake to complete a line of telegraph and road to the Pacific until you shall have received the assurances from Canada, British Columbia, and Vancouver Island, to which reference has been made in the former correspondence.

Sir F. Rogers, Bart.

Sir,

Hudson's Bay House, London, 7 December 1864.

In my letter of 13th April 1864,* a definite proposal involving the cession of a certain portion of the Company's territory, and rights of property therein, was made by me (subject to the approval of the proprietors) on behalf of the committee of the Hudson's Bay Company. We cannot but feel that the long delay which has taken place in answering this proposal has been detrimental to the interests of the Company in more ways than one; but, looking to the reasons assigned by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for such delay, in your letter of 5th April 1864, we have not hitherto felt at liberty to press for a final decision.

* Page 72.

The discussion which has now arisen respecting the union of the North American Provinces under one government, has made us think it may be expedient for us to submit to the Secretary of State another scheme for carrying out this transfer; not because we wish to alter or retract our previous offer, but simply as an alternative which we, on behalf of the Company, and subject to the approval of our proprietors, should be ready to accept.

The territory, with its mining rights, affected by such transfer, has been sufficiently defined in the former correspondence, but it may be roughly described as follows:—

On the west bounded by British Columbia.

On the north by the Northern Saskatchewan down to Lake Winnipeg.

On the east by a line from the mouth of the Saskatchewan to the point where the Winnipeg river enters that lake; and thence, by a parallel of latitude due east, until such parallel cuts Canadian territory by intersecting the watershed between the basin of the Lakes and the St. Lawrence on the one hand, and that of Hudson's Bay on the other.

On the south by the United States boundary, or by any outlying portion of British territory not included in this Company's lands.

The conditions on which we would recommend the proprietors to cede this territory, and all mining rights and rights of property or Government within it, are the following:—

1. That the Company be paid 1,000,000 l. sterling.
2. That the Government of British North America acknowledge the Company's right to trade, without exclusive privileges of any kind, within the territory.
3. That the Company should hold in fee simple all their posts now occupied, with a reasonable area round each post. All previous sales and bargains at Red River, made by them, shall be confirmed.
4. That the Government of British North America shall impose no exceptional taxes on the Company, its property, or its servants.
5. That the disputed matter of the Company's lands in Canada be settled by issuing grants on the footing formerly agreed upon between Mr. Vankoughnet and Mr. Hopkins.
6. That the Company shall be bound to hand over to the Government of British North America all the materials for the construction of the telegraph, on payment of the cost-price and expenses already incurred.

You will understand, sir, that the proposal contained in this letter is not to be construed as any withdrawal or modification of that previously made, but that it is laid before the Secretary of State simply as a possible alternative.

The committee are of opinion that in the event of the transfer of the territory to any Colonial Government, such transfer ought to be effected, and the conditions stipulated, with the Company, ought to be embodied in an English Act of Parliament.

Before closing this letter it is right that I should state, for the information of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State, that Dr. Rae has returned to England, having traversed the whole district, from Red River over the pass leading to Tête Janne Cêche, and thence down the Fraser to New Westminster. Every assistance was given him in British Columbia, and he reports that it is perfectly easy to construct across this country a line of telegraph, as well as a road sufficient for the carriage of the mails. Telegraphic wire and insulators in sufficient quantities are already at York Factory on the Mississippi, or on the voyage to Victoria, so that all the materials will be in the spring on the spots where they are required, and the Company will await with anxiety the decision of Her Majesty's Government as to the offers now in the hands of the Secretary of State.

COPY of a LETTER from T. Frederick Elliot, Esq., to the Right Honourable Sir
E. Head, Bart., K.C.B.

Sir,

Downing-street, 23 January 1867.

At a recent interview between Sir C. Lampson and yourself on the one side, and Lord Carnarvon on the other, respecting the position of the Hudson's Bay Company, some doubt appeared to exist respecting the exact state of the inchoate or intended negotiation for the transfer of certain of the rights claimed by the Company to Her Majesty's Government of the Province of Canada.

With the view of explaining the present position of the Canadian Government, I am directed by Lord Carnarvon to enclose extracts from a Minute of the Executive Council of Canada, dated the 22nd of June 1866, from which you will perceive, that while the question of confederation is pending the Canadian Government consider themselves incompetent to initiate negotiations, and bound to reserve them for the Confederate Government and Legislature.

It is, of course, for the Hudson's Bay Company to consider for themselves what course is most proper and conducive to their own interests. But it appears to Lord Carnarvon that any effective negotiation, being for the moment impossible, it is for the interest of both parties that the question should remain open for arrangement so soon as an authority exists capable of dealing with it on the part of the Colony or Colonies interested. He would, therefore, regret to learn that the Company contemplated any immediate action which was calculated to embarrass the negotiations which would then become possible, and which, in the opinion of the Executive Council, it would be the duty of the Confederate Government to open.

EXTRACT of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Executive Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General in Council, on the 22nd day of June 1866.

* * * * *

"Impressed with this conviction Canada would, ere this, have opened negotiations with the Hudson's Bay Company for the extinction of their claims, had it not been for the prospect of her speedy absorption in the proposed union of the British North American Colonies, it would obviously have been improper for the Canadian Government to commence negotiations which they could not hope to complete, or to enter into engagements, the fulfilment of which must fall on the whole Confederated provinces.

* * * * *

"Recent events serve to show that in a few months that union will be effected, and the Committee will have no doubt that the Confederate Government and Legislature will feel it to be one of their first duties to open negotiations with the Hudson's Bay Company for the transfer of their claims to the Territory. Meanwhile Canada invites the aid of Her Majesty's Government in discountenancing and preventing any such sales of any portion of the Territory as is now applied for."

Sir F. Rogers to the Secretary to the Treasury.

Sir,

Downing-street, 5 February 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to transmit to you a copy of a Despatch from the Governor General of Canada, accompanied by an Act of the Canadian Legislature, passed for the purpose of carrying into effect the requirements of the Imperial Act of last year, entitled, "The Canadian Railway Loan Act, 1867."

Their Lordships' attention will probably be drawn to the 32nd section, which provides for the raising of a supplemental loan of 1,000,000 l. without Imperial guarantee, if such additional expenditure should be necessary for the completion of the works.

His Grace has no data before him, further than were supplied at the time of the introduction of the Imperial Act, on which to found an estimate of the probable sum required to ensure the completion of the railway, but he desires me to state that he entertains considerable doubt whether the additional sum contemplated by the present Act will be sufficient for the purpose.

The 7th article of section 3 of the Imperial Act was especially inserted to meet the uncertainty of estimate, and as it is impossible to say that lines may not be selected which would inevitably exhaust the additional sum of 1,000,000 l., his Grace thinks that as a security for the completion of the railway, the extra loan to be raised by Canada should not be fixed at a lower amount than 2,000,000 l.

I HAVE the honour to transmit three copies of a Report to me from the Minister of Justice and Attorney General, on the Act passed in the present Session of the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, for the purpose of carrying into effect the requirements of the Imperial Statute, intituled, "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

I also transmit three copies of the Provincial Act referred to.

Your Grace will observe that the object of the Canadian Government is to obtain as soon as possible the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, as to whether the Act passed by the Canadian Parliament fulfils the requirements of the Imperial Statute, in order that no unnecessary delay may occur in commencing the construction of the Intercolonial railway.

I shall feel much obliged if your Grace will inform me as soon as convenient, whether, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, this Act is a satisfactory fulfilment of the conditions imposed as the basis for granting the Imperial guarantee by the "Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

His Grace
The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos,

I have, &c.

The Minister of Justice to Lord Monck.

THE undersigned has the honour to submit for your Excellency's consideration, the expediency of transmitting at an early day to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, a copy of the Act of the Canadian Parliament, authorising the construction of the Intercolonial railway, which was passed on the 21st December last, and an official copy of which I beg leave to send you herewith.

This Act has been framed with the view of fulfilling the requirements of the Imperial Act, known as "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867." It provides for the construction of the railway, and appropriates four millions sterling for the purpose, and by the 26th clause it provides for the use of the railway, at all times, for Her Majesty's military and other service.

It will be observed also that the conditions of the 3rd section of the Railway Loan Act are fulfilled by the 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st, 32nd, 33rd, and 34th clauses of the Canadian Statute.

As it is of great consequence that this work should be proceeded with without delay, it is important that the approval of Her Majesty's Government should be obtained with all convenient speed.

The Canadian Parliament will re-assemble on the 12th March, and it is exceedingly desirable that it should be informed that the Act in question has been approved of, or that some further legislation is necessary.

The undersigned assumes that the measure will be considered satisfactory, and in such case the only thing remaining to be done before the granting of the guarantee and the commencement of the work, is to obtain the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to the line in which the railway is to be constructed.

The Canadian Government expect to be able to transmit for the consideration of his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies, before the work can be commenced in the spring, a report of their decision as to the plan of the line of railway, together with the estimates of the cost of construction, which it is hoped will meet with his approbation.

The undersigned trusts, however, that his Grace will not wait the reception of such report before obtaining the decision of Her Majesty's Government, whether the Canadian Act is in other respects satisfactory.

Ottawa, 6 January 1868.

CAP. XIII.

AN ACT respecting the construction of "THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY."

Assented to 21 December 1867.

Preamble.

WHEREAS the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick joined in a declaration that the construction of the Intercolonial Railway is essential to the consolidation of the Union of British North America, and to the assent thereto of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; and consequently agreed that provision should be made for its immediate construction by the Government of the Dominion of Canada; and whereas, in order to give effect to that agreement, it was declared by the 145th section of the Imperial Act, known as "The British North America Act, 1867," that it should be the duty of the Government and Parliament of Canada to provide for the commencement, within six months after the Union, of a railway connecting the River St. Lawrence with the city of Halifax in Nova Scotia, and for the construction thereof without intermission, and the completion thereof with all practicable speed; and whereas the Imperial Act known as "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867," authorises the guarantee by the Imperial Government of the interest on a loan to be raised by Canada towards the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, connecting the Port of Rivière du Loup, in the province of Quebec, with the line of railway leading from the city of Halifax, in the province province of Nova Scotia, at or near the town of Truro, on certain conditions therein mentioned: Therefore, in fulfilment of the duty imposed on the Government and Parliament of Canada as aforesaid; and in order to the raising of the said loan, so to be guaranteed as aforesaid, Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:—

1. There shall be a railway constructed, connecting the port of Rivière du Loup before mentioned, with the line of railway leading from the said city of Halifax, at or near the said town of Truro, and such railway shall be styled and known as "The Intercolonial Railway." Termini of Railway.
Its name.
2. The said railway shall be a public work belonging to the Dominion of Canada; and shall be made with a gauge of 5 feet 6 inches, and on such grades, in such places, in such manner, with such materials and on such specifications as the Governor in Council shall determine and appoint as best adapted to the general interests of the dominion. To be a public work.
3. The construction of the railway and its management until completed shall be under the charge of four Commissioners, to be appointed by the Governor, who shall hold office during pleasure. How constructed and managed.
4. The Governor shall and may appoint a chief engineer, to hold office during pleasure, who, under the instructions he may receive from the Commissioners, shall have the general superintendence of the works to be constructed under this Act. Appointment of chief engineer.
5. The Commissioners shall and may appoint and employ a secretary, such engineers (under the chief engineer), and such surveyors and other officers, and also such agents, servants and workmen, as in their discretion they may deem necessary and proper for the execution of the powers and duties vested in the said Commissioners by virtue of this Act. Appointment of other officers, &c.
6. The Commissioners shall have full power and authority by themselves, their engineers, agents, workmen, servants, contractors and the servants and workmen of such contractors:—
 1. To explore and survey the country lying between Rivière du Loup and Truro; To explore.
 2. And for that purpose to enter into and upon any public lands or the lands of any corporation or person whatsoever; To enter on lands.
 3. To make surveys, examinations or other arrangements on such lands necessary for fixing the site of the railway, and to set out and ascertain such parts of the lands as shall be necessary and proper for the railway; To fix the site of road.
 4. And to fell or remove any trees standing in any woods, lands or forests where the railway shall pass, to the distance of four rods from either side thereof. To fell timber.
7. The Commissioners are further authorised to enter upon and take possession of any lands required for the purposes of the railway, and they shall lay off the same by metes and bounds, and deposit of record a description and plan thereof in the office for the registry of deeds for the county or registration division in which the lands are situate, and such deposit shall operate as a dedication to the public of such lands, which shall be thereupon vested in the Crown. To take possession of lands.
8. The Commissioners or contractors may enter with workmen, carts, carriages, and horses, upon any lands, and deposit thereon soil, earth, gravel, trees, bushes, logs, poles, brushwood or other material found on the line of railway or works connected therewith, or for the purpose of digging up, quarrying and carrying away earth, stones, gravel, or other material, and cutting down and carrying away trees, bushes, logs, poles and brushwood therefrom for the making and preparing of such railway. May use adjacent lands.
9. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners to make or construct in, upon, across, under or over any land, streets, hills, valleys, roads, railways or tramroads, canals, rivers, brooks, streams, lakes or other waters, such temporary or permanent inclined planes, embankments, cuttings, aqueducts, bridges, roads, ways, passages, conduits, drains, piers, arches or other works as they may think proper. May make all necessary works.
10. They may alter the course of any river, canal, brook, stream or watercourse, and may divert or alter as well temporarily as permanently the course of any such rivers, streams of water, roads, streets or ways, or raise or sink the level of the same, in order to carry them over or under, on the level of, or by the side of, the railway, as they may think proper. May alter the courses of rivers.
11. They shall have power to make conduits or drains into, through or under any lands adjoining the railway, for the purpose of conveying water from or to the railway. May drain into adjacent lands.
12. The Commissioners shall have all such other powers (not inconsistent with this Act) as may be conferred upon railway companies by any Act which may be passed for the consolidation and regulation of the general clauses relating to railways. And enjoy powers conferred by any General Railway Act.
13. The Commissioners may contract and agree with all persons, corporations, guardians, tutors, curators and trustees whatsoever, not only for themselves, their heirs, successors Powers of Commissioners with respect to purchase of lands.

STATEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS UNDER THE

cessors and assigns, but also for and on the behalf of those whom they represent, whether infants, absentees, lunatics, married women, or other persons otherwise incapable of contracting, for the purchase of any land or other property necessary for the construction, maintenance and use of the railway, at such prices as may be agreed upon; and may also contract and agree with all such persons and corporations on the amount of compensation to be paid for any damages sustained by them by reason of anything done under and by authority of this Act.

In case of difference as to value of lands.

14. Whenever the Commissioners and any such party or corporation fail to agree as to such value or compensation as aforesaid, the claim for the same shall, on the request of the claimant, be referred to the award of the official arbitrators to be appointed according to the provisions of any Act that may be passed respecting the public works of Canada, and the same proceedings shall be had before the said arbitrators as if the claim were one made under that Act.

Arbitrators to consider increased value given to property.

15. The arbitrators in deciding on such value or compensation are authorised and required to take into consideration the increased value that would be given to any lands or grounds through or over which the railway will pass, by reason of the passage of the railway through or over the same, and to set off the increased value that will attach to the said lands or grounds against the inconvenience, loss or damage that might be suffered or sustained by reason of Commissioners taking possession or using the said lands or grounds as aforesaid.

Duties of Commissioners with respect to tenders and contracts.

16. The Commissioners shall build such railway by tender and contract after the plans and specifications therefor shall have been duly advertised, and they shall accept the tenders of such contractors as shall appear to them to be possessed of sufficient skill, experience and resources, to carry on the work or such portions thereof as they may contract for; provided always that the Commissioners shall not be obliged to accept the lowest tender, in case they should deem it for the public interest not to do so; provided also that no contract under this section involving an expense of ten thousand dollars or upwards shall be concluded by the Commissioners until sanctioned by the Governor in Council.

Securities for fulfilment of contract.

17. The contracts to be so entered into shall be guarded by such securities, and contain such provisions for retaining a proportion of the contract monies, to be held as a reserve fund, for such periods of time, and on such conditions, as may appear to be necessary for the protection of the public, and for securing the due performance of the contract.

Chief engineer to certify to work done before payment.

18. No money shall be paid to any contractor until the chief engineer shall have certified that the work, for or on account of which the same shall be claimed, has been duly executed, nor until such certificate shall have been approved of by the Commissioners.

Disqualification of Members of Parliament as officers or contractors.

19. No Member of Parliament shall hold, or be appointed to any office of emolument under the Commissioners, or be a contractor or party to any contract with the Commissioners for the construction of the railway or any part thereof.

Inspection of contracts, &c. by Governor.

20. The Governor, or any person or persons appointed by him, shall have power to inspect all contracts and proceedings of the Commissioners, and to examine their accounts at all times.

Salaries.

21. The Governor in Council shall, in the first instance, fix the rate of salary or compensation for the Commissioners and the chief engineer, and shall approve of all other salaries to be awarded by the Commissioners, subject in all cases to the revision and confirmation of Parliament at its first Session thereafter.

Suspension of works.

22. The Governor in Council shall have the power, at any time, to suspend the progress of the work until the then next Session of Parliament.

Provision for meeting expenditure.

23. The Commissioners shall from time to time be paid, on their requisition by the Receiver General, all monies that may be required for the purposes of this Act, in such manner, at such times, and in such sums as may, from time to time, be ordered by the Governor in Council.

Quarterly accounts.

24. The Commissioners shall furnish quarterly accounts (or oftener, if required by the Governor in Council) to the Receiver General, of all expenditure and liabilities under this Act.

Working of completed portions.

25. Whenever the railway, or any portion thereof, shall be completed, it shall be lawful for the Governor in Council to make suitable arrangements for the working of the same; but such arrangements shall not be for any longer period than the end of the Session of Parliament next after the making of the same.

Carriage of naval and military forces.

26. Her Majesty's naval or military forces, and all artillery, ammunition, baggage, provisions, or other stores for their use, and all officers and others travelling on Her Majesty's naval, military, or other service, and their baggage and stores, shall at all times, when thereunto required by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or by the Commander of Her Majesty's forces in Canada, or by the chief naval officer on the North American station, be carried on the railway on such terms and conditions, and under such regulations as the Governor in Council shall from time to time make, or as shall be agreed upon between the Government of Canada, and one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

27. For

CANADA RAILWAY LOAN ACT.

27. For the purpose of constructing the said railway there shall be raised by loan and appropriated, a sum not exceeding 3,000,000 l. sterling, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, upon the guarantee of the payment of the interest of such loan by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, under the provisions of "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

Loan (with Imperial guarantee) for construction of road.

28. The Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada shall be, and is, hereby charged with the principal and interest of the loan, immediately after the charges specifically made thereon by sections 103, 104, and 105 of "The British North America Act, 1867."

Consolidated Revenue Fund charged.

29. A sinking fund is hereby provided for the payment by the Government of Canada of an annual sum at the rate of 1 per centum per annum on the entire amount of principal money whereon interest is guaranteed, which shall be remitted the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, by equal half-yearly payments, in such manner as they may from time to time direct, and shall be invested and accumulated under their direction in the name of four trustees, nominated from time to time, two by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury and two by the Government of Canada; and such sinking fund and its accumulations shall be invested in securities of the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, issued before the union of Canada, or at the option of the Government of Canada, in such other securities as may be proposed by that Government, and approved by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and shall be applied under the direction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury in discharge of the principal money whereon interest is guaranteed; and the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada shall be, and the same is, hereby charged with the amount of the said sinking fund immediately after the principal and interest of the loan.

Sinking fund provided for.

Its investment.

Its application.

30. The Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada shall be, and the same is, hereby charged with any sum issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, under "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867," with interest thereon, at the rate of 5 per centum per annum, immediately after the sinking fund.

Charge on Consolidated Revenue Fund.

31. The sinking fund shall be continued until all principal and interest of the loan, and all sums issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, under "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867," and all interest thereon are fully discharged, or until the sinking fund and its accumulations are adequate to discharge so much thereof as remains undischarged.

Continuance of sinking fund.

32. The Government of Canada is hereby empowered to raise, by loan, for the completion of the railway, a further sum not exceeding 1,000,000 l. sterling (without guarantee by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury), and the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada shall be, and the same is, hereby charged with the money so raised and interest, immediately after the charges made thereon in pursuance of the five next preceding sections of this Act.

Loan (without Imperial guarantee).

33. For the purpose of effecting the loan, the interest of which is to be guaranteed in manner hereinbefore mentioned, it shall be lawful for the Governor to authorise debentures to the amount of 3,000,000 l. sterling, to be issued in such form, and payable at such period, and for such sums, and at such rate of interest, as shall be most convenient, and as shall be in accordance with the terms of "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

Effecting of guaranteed loan by issue of debentures.

34. For the purpose of effecting the loan of 1,000,000 l. sterling, mentioned in the 32nd section of this Act, or any part thereof, it shall be lawful for the Governor in Council to authorise the issue of debentures either in currency or sterling money, in such form, bearing such rate of interest, not exceeding 6 per centum per annum, in such sums and payable at such periods as may be most convenient; or it shall be lawful for the Governor in Council to issue permanent Canadian Stock, or Terminable Annuities, or Exchequer Bills, or securities in any other form that may be most convenient, and as shall be in accordance with "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

Effecting of loan secondly mentioned.

35. Separate accounts of the monies raised under this Act shall be kept by the Receiver General, and all sums required for the carrying out of this Act shall be paid out of such monies, and not out of any other fund, except that the Governor in Council may authorise the advance, out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, of such sums as it may be necessary to expend for the purposes aforesaid, before the said loans can be raised, such sums to be repaid to the Consolidated Revenue Fund out of the loans.

Sir,

Treasury Chambers, 13 February 1868.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to state, for the information of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, that my Lords approve generally of the Act of the Canadian Legislature, 31 Vict. c. 13, for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, which was submitted in your letter of the 5th instant.

My Lords, however, concur with his Grace in opinion, that it would be desirable that the sum to be raised by the dominion without Imperial guarantee, should not be less than 2,000,000 l.; and they suggest that before approval of the Act is given, a communication to that effect should be made to the Governor General.

— No. 3. —

The Under Secretary for the Colonies to the Secretary to the Treasury.

Sir,

Downing street, 16 May 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to refer to the letter from this Department, dated the 5th of February last, and to your answer of the 13th of February, relative to the Act of the Canadian Legislature, 31 Vict. c. 13, respecting the construction of the Intercolonial Railway. In addition to the sum of 3,000,000 l. sterling, for which a guarantee loan is proposed to be raised in England, that Act provides for raising, if necessary, an additional million without guarantee, in order to complete the railway.

Their Lordships agreed with the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos that the provision of this additional amount was less than it might be prudent to require, especially in the uncertainty what line might be selected.

But his Grace has since understood it to be probable that the route by the Bay of Chaleur will be selected, which is the one that would best suit Imperial purposes

Major Robinson, of the Royal Engineers, made a report in 1848 for the Imperial Government, in which he estimated the length of the entire road from Halifax to Quebec at 635 miles, and the cost, including 10 per cent. for contingencies, at 4,889,500 l. This gives a cost of 7,700 l. per mile. The road has since been constructed from Halifax to Thuro, and from Quebec to Rivière du Loup, a distance taken in Major Robinson's estimate at 165 miles, so that, according to that estimate, 470 miles remain to be constructed. At the above rate per mile, this would cost 3,619,000 l., much less than the total sum of 4,000,000 l. sterling.

Mr. Sandford Fleming was a civil engineer, appointed in 1863, with the joint opinions in his favour of the three Provincial Governments, and of the Duke of Newcastle, who was then Secretary of State. He bears a high reputation for accuracy and caution. Mr. Fleming thought that, allowing for curvature, the distance might exceed Major Robinson's estimate, and he expressed a general opinion that, although the actual result might prove more favourable, the total cost should be taken in round numbers at twenty million (20,000,000) dollars.

But then Mr. Fleming caused a thorough survey to be made of a portion of the line, 70 miles in length, described by Major Robinson as the "most formidable" part of the whole, and the result confirmed Major Robinson's account of the distance, whilst the cost was estimated by Mr. Fleming at $ 39,786, or about 8,290 l. per mile. If this rate of cost, calculated on one of the most difficult portions of the line, be extended to the whole, the required distance of 470 miles would not cost more than 3,896,300 l.

Reviewing the circumstances, the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos would be prepared, if the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury concur, to instruct the Governor General that in case the line by the Bay of Chaleur be adopted, Her Majesty's Government will be willing to accept the provision of 1,000,000 l. sterling made in the Act already passed by the Canadian Parliament.

Sir,

Treasury Chambers, 22 May 1868.

THE Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have had before them your letter of the 16th instant, stating that the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos has had under his consideration the estimates for the Canadian Intercolonial Railway; and that upon a review of the circumstances, his Grace is disposed to consider that, if the route by the Bay of Chaleur is adopted, the provision of 1,000,000 l. already made in the Act passed by the Canadian Legislature, will be sufficient, in addition to the 3,000,000 l. guaranteed by Her Majesty's Government, and requesting the concurrence of my Lords in this view.

My Lords request that you will inform his Grace that, under the circumstances represented, they are not prepared to refuse their assent to the proposal of the Secretary of State.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith certain documents on the subject of the proposed loan for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, to be guaranteed by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, under the authority of "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

The terms of the Act of the Canadian Parliament, as well as the proposed line of railway, having been approved by Her Majesty's Government, it now only remains for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to convey their sanction to the conditions of the loan, as detailed in Enclosures A. and B., and to approve of the form in which it is suggested the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government may be evidenced.

I have prepared, for facility of reference, a brief statement (Enclosure, No. 1) of the several Acts of Parliament, and of the communications which have taken place on this subject, to which I would very respectfully call your attention.

I shall be happy to give any further information which may be desired, and, as my public duties require my return to Canada as speedily as possible, I trust I may be pardoned if I express the hope that I may be favoured with an early communication of the views of Her Majesty's Government on the subject of the enclosed.

(No. 1.)

CANADA INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN.

30 & 31 Vict. c. 16.

THE Canada Railway Loan Act authorised the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of interest not exceeding four per cent. on any principal sum not exceeding three millions sterling, to be raised by the Government of Canada for the purpose of constructing the Intercolonial Railway, on condition that Canada should pass an Act providing—

1st. For the construction of the railway; for its use by Her Majesty's troops; and provided the line should be approved of by a Secretary of State.

2nd. That the Canadian Act should provide, to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of the Treasury, for the raising and expenditure by Canada of the three millions on the railway; for creating a sinking fund, and for making the loan and the sinking fund charges on the revenue of Canada; for the appointment of trustees to manage the sinking fund; and lastly, for raising, on the sole credit of Canada, such further sum beyond the three millions as might be necessary to complete the line.

The Canada Act has complied with all these conditions, and authorised the raising of one million sterling beyond the three millions guaranteed by the Imperial Government, and has been approved of by Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The line has also been approved of by the Colonial Secretary, and Thomas Baring, Esq., and George Carr Glyn, Esq., have been named trustees by Canada for the management of the sinking fund.

The Canada Act provides that the work shall be performed and the money expended by a commission, named by the Canadian Government, and it is intended that operations shall be prosecuted by them as rapidly as possible.

Canada

31 Vict. c. 13.
Despatch, July

CANADA RAILWAY LOAN ACT.

Canada now proposes to put a portion of the loan on the market, and, after consultation with Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., the financial agents of the dominion in London, the terms specified in the annexed paper are suggested as those on which it should be offered to the public.

It will be perceived that it is proposed that the bonds for that portion of the loan which is guaranteed by the Imperial Government should, when issued, be countersigned on the part of Her Majesty's Government in the same form as was adopted in 1855, in the case of the Turkish Loan guaranteed by Her Majesty and the Emperor of the French.

The approbation of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury is necessary before preparing the form of bond to be issued by the Government of Canada, which is also annexed, as well as to the proposed terms of the loan and the form in which the guarantee is to be evidenced; and it will be requisite that the financial agents of the dominion, or the Minister of Finance, should receive the Commissioners' authority to grant the interim receipts embodying the undertaking for the countersignature on the part of Her Majesty's Government to the bonds when issued.

DRAFT of Substance of Terms of Proposed Loan.

ISSUE of 1,500,000 l. Canada Bonds, bearing 4 per cent. interest, and guaranteed by the Imperial Government of Great Britain under the authority of the Act of 30 Victoria, c. 16, being one moiety of the loan authorised by that Act, and of 500,000 l., 5 per Cent. Bonds of the Government of Canada, being also a moiety of the loan of 1,000,000 l. authorised by the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on the 21st of December 1867, for the construction of the intercolonial railway.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co. are authorised by the Minister of Finance of the dominion of Canada, to receive at the office of the former firm, No. 8, Bishopsgate-street Within, on between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock of the day, sealed tenders for 1,500,000 l., Canada 4 per Cent. Bonds guaranteed by the Imperial Government of Great Britain, and to be repaid at the end of 35 years, say on 1st October 1903, as per form of bond annexed, and 500,000 l., Canada 5 per Cent. Bonds of the form and tenor also annexed, and for which a sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum will be provided.

All these bonds will bear interest from 1st July 1868, and the dividends will be payable half-yearly on 1st April and 1st October of each year, as per Dividend Warrants.

The above-mentioned sealed tenders may be for the whole or part of 2,000,000 l., in the proportion of three quarters of guaranteed bonds, and one quarter of ordinary 5 per Cent. Canada Bonds, and no tender will be admitted which does not comply with this condition.

The Minister of Finance of Canada will deliver to the partners present of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., a sealed paper containing the minimum price at which he will sell the above-mentioned 2,000,000 l. bonds; and those partners will then open the tenders, and afterwards the Minister's sealed paper, and allot the bonds to the highest bidder or bidders, pro rata, according to the price offered.

Neither Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., nor Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co. will make any tender.

Upon allotment a payment of 20 per cent. will be required, and the subsequent instalments must be paid at the office of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., or Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., as follows: or in default the previous payments will be forfeited—

25 per cent.	-	-	-	-	-	-	13th October 1868.
25 per cent.	-	-	-	-	-	-	12th January 1869.
Balance	-	-	-	-	-	-	13th April 1869.

Payment of these instalments may be made in full on any of the above days, under discount, at the Bank of England minimum rate of discount.

Scrip receipts will be issued without delay, and bonds of 1,000 l., 500 l., or 100 l. will be delivered in exchange as soon as practicable.

CANADA.

Form of Debenture or Bond.

UNDER the authority of an Act of Parliament of Canada passed on the 21st December 1867, entitled "An Act respecting the Construction of the Intercolonial Railway," this debenture entitles the bearer on the 1st October 1903 to the sum of of lawful money of Great Britain, being part of the sum of 3,000,000 l. raised under the authority of the said Act, the said principal sum to be repaid in London, at the banking houses of Messrs. Baring Brothers, and of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., and to interest thereon until repayment of the principal at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the banking houses of Messrs. Baring Brothers, and of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., in the City of London on presentation of the proper coupon for the same as hereunto annexed, namely, 2 per cent. on 1st April, and 2 per cent. on the 1st October in each year, the said principal sum and the interest thereon being charged on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada immediately after the charges specifically made thereon, by sections 103, 104, and 105, of "the British North American Act, 1867"; and whereas under the authority of an Act of the Imperial Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland passed in the 30th year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter 16, the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury are authorised to guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent. per annum on any principal money not exceeding 3,000,000 l. to be raised by way of loan by the Government of Canada for the purposes of the construction of the railway, and are further authorised to cause to be issued from time to time, out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or the growing produce thereof, any money required for giving effect to such guarantee; and the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having accordingly guaranteed the due payment of such interest, such guarantee is testified so far as relates to the interest on the amount of this debenture until payment thereof, by the signature hereto of the undersigned duly appointed by the warrant of the said Commissioners for such purpose.

FORM for £. 1,000,000, without Guarantee.

UNDER the authority of an Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on the 21st of December 1867, entitled "An Act respecting the Construction of the Intercolonial Railway," this debenture entitles the bearer, 35 years after the date hereof, to the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, and to interest thereon in the meantime at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the banking house of _____ on presentation of the proper coupon for the same as hereunto annexed, namely, 2½ per cent. on 1st July, and 2½ per cent. on the 1st January in each year, the same being charged upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada immediately after the charges made thereon by sections 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31 of the aforesaid Act.

Mr. T. F. Elliot to Mr. G. A. Hamilton.

Sir,

Downing-street, 10 July 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to refer to Mr. Adderley's letter of the 16th of May last, on the Canadian Intercolonial Railway, and to your answer of the 22nd of May, in which it was agreed that if the Bay of Chaleur route be adopted, the provision of 1,000,000 l. sterling already made under the Act passed by the colonial legislature, may be accepted in addition to the sum of 3,000,000 l. sterling guaranteed by Her Majesty's Government.

The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos has now received a telegraphic message from the Governor General of Canada, announcing that the Bay of Chaleur line has been adopted by the Canadian Government. This is understood to be the short expression for the line surveyed on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, and reported on by Major Robinson, R.E., in 1848. I am desired to acquaint you that his Grace will be prepared to approve of that line, as soon as he receives Lord Monck's Despatch conveying the decision.

I am directed to enclose an extract of a letter from Mr. John Rose, Canadian Minister of Finance, who is now in England, urging the importance of taking steps for raising the loan at as early a date as possible; and I am desired to suggest that Mr. Rose should be enabled to enter into direct communication with the Treasury in order to arrange those matters connected with the line, on which the authority or assistance of their Lordships is required.

Enclosure in No. 7.

EXTRACT of a LETTER from Mr. Rose to the Duke of Buckingham, dated London, 1st July 1868.

"YOUR Grace is now aware of the result of the deliberations of the Canadian Government on this question, and it being important that the necessary financial arrangements should be made for the prosecution of the work with as little delay as possible, I have the honour to beg that the approval of the line may be given by your Grace as contemplated by the Imperial Act, and that the sum of money provided by the Government of Canada in excess of the 3,000,000 l. to be raised on the Imperial guarantee, may be held sufficient for the construction of the railway."

"I have further the honour to inform your Grace that Thomas Baring, Esq., M.P., and George Carr Glyn, Esq., M.P., have been named trustees by the Government of Canada under the 3rd Section of the Act, for the management of the sinking fund."

"On consultation with the financial agents of the dominion in London, it is thought to be extremely desirable that advantage should be taken of the present low rate of interest to place the loan, or such portion of it as the Government of Canada may think requisite, on the market at as early a day as possible, and I have accordingly to solicit the sanction of Her Majesty's Government to that proceeding."

The Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

My Lords,

Downing-street, 14 July 1868.

WITH reference to the letter from this Department, dated the 16th of May, and in pursuance of the second clause of the Imperial Act of Parliament, styled "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867," I have the honour, as one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, to convey to you my approval of the selection as the line in which the railway is to be constructed of the line passing by the Bay of Chaleur, explored by Major Robinson of the Royal Engineers, and recommended in his Report dated the 31st of August 1848, presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of Her Majesty in February 1849, the line so approved by me to be subject to such moderate deviations and modifications as may prove to be necessary or desirable in the progress of the undertaking. I append to this Despatch a copy of the Parliamentary paper containing Major Robinson's Report, authenticated by my initials, and containing a map which is also authenticated by my initials, showing the direction of the proposed line.

I have, &c.

Copy of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 15th July 1868.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer lays before the Board a letter, dated 11th July 1868, which he has received from Mr. John Rose, the Canadian Minister of Finance, in which he submits a statement of the terms and conditions, under which it is proposed by the Canadian Government to raise the loan for the sum of 3,000,000 l. for the construction of a railway connecting Quebec and Halifax, interest on which amount at the rate of 4 per cent. was guaranteed by the Act, 30 Vict. c. 16, together with a form of bond by which the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government may be carried into effect.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer states that in consequence of this communication an interview took place between himself and Mr. Rose, who was accompanied by Mr. T. Baring, M.P., and Mr. G. Glyn, M.P., the agents of the Canadian Government, in the presence of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Financial Secretary to the Board, and Sir A. Spearman, and that, after full consideration, consideration, it appears to him that the terms proposed for the several loans of 3,000,000 l. and 1,000,000 l., to be raised under the provisions of the before-mentioned Act, are unobjectionable; and he, therefore, recommends to the Board that their guarantee should be given for the payment of interest, at the rate of 4 per cent. on the sum of 3,000,000 l., in accordance with the form of bond or debenture, annexed to Mr. Rose's communication.

My Lords have before them the Act 30 Vict. c. 16. My Lords have also before them the following letters from the Colonial Office, viz.:—

5th February 1868, enclosing an Act of the Canadian Legislature (31 Vict. c. 13) respecting the construction of "The Intercolonial Railway," by which provision is made for carrying out the provisions contained in the 2nd and 3rd sections of the before-mentioned Act, 30 Vict. c. 16.

16th May 1868, stating that the Secretary of State is of opinion that in case the line of railway by the Bay of Chaleur is adopted, Her Majesty's Government should accept the provision made by the Canadian Act, 31 Vict. c. 13, of the sum of 1,000,000 l., in addition to the sum of 3,000,000 l., as sufficient for the purpose; and of 14th instant, conveying the approval of the Secretary of State of the selection, as the line in which the railway is to be constructed, of the line passing by the Bay of Chaleur, recommended by Major Robinson, R.E., in his Report of 31st August 1848.

My Lords have also before them the letter from the Colonial Office, of 1st instant, enclosing copy of a Despatch from the Governor General, reporting the appointment by the Canadian Government of Messrs. Baring and Glyn as trustees for the sinking fund of the loan of 3,000,000 l., under the provisions of the Act, 30 Vict. c. 16.

My Lords concur in the recommendation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and desire that a letter be addressed to the Honourable John Rose, stating that they have no objection to offer to the terms (as per enclosed statement No. 1) on which it is proposed by the Governor of Canada to raise the sum of 3,000,000 l., under the provisions of the Act 30 Vict. c. 16, and that they are prepared to guarantee the payment of interest at the rate of 4 per cent. on the said sum of 3,000,000 l., in accordance with the terms of the enclosed bond or debenture.

State that my Lords have appointed the Permanent Secretary to the Board, Mr. G. A. Hamilton, to carry into effect the guarantee on behalf of the Board, and that each bond or debenture should be submitted to this Department in order that his signature may be attached thereto.

Prepare warrant accordingly, appointing Mr. Hamilton.

Acquaint Colonial Office, and state that my Lords propose to appoint Sir F. Rogers, the Permanent Secretary to the Colonial Office, and Mr. William Law the Auditor of the Civil List in this office, as trustees to the Sinking Fund on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

— No. 10. —

COPY of Treasury Warrant, dated 20th July 1868, authorising Mr. Hamilton to sign Canada Intercolonial Railway Loan Bonds; and appointing Sir F. Rogers and Mr. Law Trustees of Sinking Fund.

After our hearty commendations:

WHEREAS, by an Act passed in the 30th year of Her Majesty's reign, entitled "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867," it was enacted, That the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of interest at the rate not exceeding 4 per cent. per annum, on any principal money not exceeding the sum of 3,000,000 l., to be raised by way of loan by the Government of Canada, for the purpose of the construction of a railway connecting Quebec and Halifax; and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may from time to time cause to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or the growing produce thereof, any money required for giving effect to such guarantee.

And whereas an Act of the Parliament of Canada has been passed providing for the construction of the said railway, for the raising, appropriation, and expenditure of the said loan of 3,000,000 l., for chargng the Consolidated Revenue Fund

CANADA RAILWAY LOAN ACT.

Fund of Canada with the principal and interest of the said loan, for the payment by way of Sinking Fund of an annual sum, at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum on the entire amount of principal money whereon interest is guaranteed, and for charging the same on the said Consolidated Revenue Fund, and in all other respects providing for the conditions prescribed by the Imperial Act above-mentioned.

And whereas the line in which the railway is to be constructed has been approved by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies;

Now, we, being two of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, do authorise and empower George Alexander Hamilton, Esq., the Permanent Secretary to this Board, for us and in our name to guarantee the due payment of the interest of 4 per cent. on the said loan so contracted as aforesaid, and generally to do all acts, matters, and things, necessary for effecting such guarantee as aforesaid; so, nevertheless, that all such acts, matters, and things, shall be in all respects conformable with the provisions of the aforesaid Act.

And we do further appoint Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart., Permanent Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, and William Law, Esq., Auditor of the Civil List and Assistant to the Secretaries to this Board, to be Trustees of the Sinking Fund of the said loan, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act.

The Honourable J. Rose to the Secretary to the Treasury.

Sir,

London, 16 July 1868.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 15th instant, informing me, by direction of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, that their Lordships have no objection to offer to the proposed mode of raising the loan for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, and that they are prepared to guarantee interest on the sum of 3,000,000 l. sterling in the manner stated in your letter, and that Mr. G. A. Hamilton, the Permanent Secretary of the Board, has been appointed to sign the bonds when forwarded to the department.

Permit me, in reply, to express my grateful acknowledgments, both on my own part and on behalf of the Government of Canada, for the great courtesy and promptitude which the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lords Commissioners so kindly evinced in the course of their recent negotiations, and for their readiness to meet the wishes of the Government of Canada.

The bonds will be forwarded, in accordance with your instructions, to the Secretary of the Treasury as soon as they are received from Canada, through Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., the financial agents of the dominion in England, and will be countersigned by one or other of those firms in evidence of their genuineness.

THE Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have had before them your letter of the 13th instant, enclosing copy of a letter from Messrs. Baring Brothers, and Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., making inquiry relative to the time of making the first investment on account of the sinking fund of the Canadian Intercolonial Loan. I am to state, for the information of the Secretary of State, that, as by the terms of the loan the bonds bear interest from 1st July last, and by the provisions of the third section of the Act 30 Vict. c. 16, the payments on account of sinking fund are directed to be made half-yearly, my Lords are of opinion that the first half-yearly payment should commence on 1st January 1869, at the rate of 10 s. per cent. on the whole of the amount raised under the provisions of the above-mentioned Act on which interest is guaranteed.

WE are instructed, in conjunction with Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., as financial agents of Canada, to communicate with you and Mr. Law respecting the arrangements which it may be desirable to make for the periodical investments on account of the sinking fund of the Canadian Intercolonial Railway Loan.

We are prepared, by instructions of the Minister of Finance, to hand over to the trustees of the sinking fund bonds of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, or the dominion of Canada, and as you are aware all now form a direct liability of the dominion, for the value of 7,500 l., the amount to be invested on the 1st January next, and we trust that this arrangement will meet the approval of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury; we shall be glad to learn your views as to the arrangement to be made for the safe custody, under the joint control of the four trustees, of the securities purchased from time to time on account of the sinking fund, and for the collection and reinvestment of the dividends thereon. If you think it desirable to have any personal communication on the subject, Mr. Thomas Baring, one of the trustees appointed by Canada, will call upon you on learning when it will be convenient to you; Mr. G. A.—Correspondence with the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the Minister of Finance, on the subject of the Loan, and also respecting the route, and the claims of the Intercolonial Contract Company to have their contracts recognised.

B.—Correspondence with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the subject of the conditions of the Loan, and transmitting copies of Debentures to be settled by the Treasury.

C.—Correspondence with the Financial Agents (Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., London, England), respecting the Loan, and containing lists of bids therefor.

D.—Correspondence with the Bank of Montreal, respecting the renewal of Loan in June 1868, and the terms on which they would make the deposits on account of the Intercolonial Loan, in England, available to the Government in Canada.

E.—Reports of the Minister of France to Council, dated the 14th and 27th August 1868, respecting his proceedings for the negotiation of the Intercolonial Loan, and arrangements for the sale of exchange with the Bank of Montreal, together with the Order of Council thereon.

(Intercolonial.)

My Lord Duke,

London, June 1868.

YOUR Grace will already have been apprised that the Government of Canada have had under consideration the question of determining the line of railway between Rivière du Loup and Truro, to be submitted for the approval of Her Majesty's Government, in accordance with the provisions of "The Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867."

Three lines presented themselves for discussion; the first, proceeding to and crossing over to the right or southern bank of the St. John River, at Woodstock, or Fredericton; thence continuing on the right bank of that river, by branch lines now in progress, to the town of St. John, by what is termed the Western Extension Railway; the second, in a more central direction through the Province of New Brunswick, connecting with the European and North American Road at some point between St. John and Shediac; and the third, the line surveyed by Major Robinson in the year 1848.

Your Grace is now aware of the result of the deliberation of the Canadian Government on this question, and it being important that the necessary financial arrangements should be made for the prosecution of the work with as little delay as possible, I have the honour very respectfully to beg that the approval of the line may be given by your Grace, as contemplated by the Imperial Act, and that the sum of money provided by the Government of Canada in excess of the three millions to be raised on the Imperial guarantee, may be held sufficient for the construction of the railway.

I have further the honour to inform your Grace, that Thomas Baring, Esquire, M. P., and George Carr Glyn, Esquire, M. P., have been named trustees by the Government of Canada, under the 3rd section of the Act for the management of the Sinking Fund.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO

On consultation with the financial agents of the Dominion in London, it is thought to be extremely desirable that advantage should be taken of the present low rate of interest, to place the loan, or a portion of it, on the market at as early a day as possible, and I have, accordingly, to solicit the sanction of Her Majesty's Government to that proceeding.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

My Lord Duke,

ON the letter from the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Intercolonial Railway Company, Limited, of the 9th inst., addressed to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, I beg to say that the only arrangements now existing for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway are to be found in the Imperial Act, 30th Vict. c. 16, and in that of the Parliament of Canada, 31st Vict. c. 13.

The previous negotiations which had, for a number of years, taken place between the several Provinces now composing the Dominion of Canada are superseded by the provisions contained in these two Acts.

The Imperial Act left to the Dominion of Canada to adopt such agency as it saw fit for the prosecution of the work, provided the requisite money provision was made; and by the Act of the Canadian Parliament it is provided that the work shall be done directly by a Commission, and not through the interposition of a Company, and shall be a public work belonging to the Dominion.

It will be the duty of the Commission to locate the road on the line approved by the Imperial Government, and they are in no way whatever bound to assume any intermediate portion of road, or to adopt any contracts which either of the Provinces may have previously made in respect of such local sections. Indeed, they are prohibited, by the terms of the Act, from concluding any contract exceeding 10,000 dollars without the sanction of the Government in Canada. It is of the first importance that the whole, from Truro to River du Loup, should be done in the most economical manner, and that the Dominion should have the advantage which payments in cash to contractor, out of the money raised on the Imperial Guarantee and on the credit of the Dominion, afford. Provisions of former contracts may be altogether too onerous, the prices excessive, the location and character of the work may be bad, the specifications insufficient. It was never contemplated that the work itself, or the commission for its execution, should be trammelled by any arrangements anterior to the two Acts of Parliament above quoted. If any contracts or engagements have been entered into by either of the Provinces anterior to the Act of Union, they will be faithfully carried out by the Dominion, if by the provisions of the Union Act they are entailed upon it. But it would be contrary to the spirit and terms of the Intercolonial Acts, both Imperial and Canadian, to tie the hands of the Commissioners appointed to carry them into effect.

The assumption of any intermediate section of work, or the adoption of any contracts, must be matter of arrangement with the Commissioners.

In conclusion, I beg to call his Grace's attention to the fact that the negotiations referred to in the letter written by direction of his Grace the Duke of Newcastle to Mr. Watkin, under date of the 19th March 1864, were never completed; and as in that letter his Grace expressly states, "That no claim is to be made on the Imperial Government under the old project" is to be carried into execution, and if the offer of 1862-63 should fall to the ground, this assurance will fall with it.

It therefore follows (wholly irrespective of the entirely new Legislative provision made in 1867), that no possible claim can be based on the terms of that communication.

His Grace
The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos,
&c. &c.

I have, &c.

The Nova Scotia and New Brunswick (Intercolonial) Railway Company (Limited), 6, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, London, S.W.

My Lord Duke,

9 June 1868.

WE, the Directors of the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick (Intercolonial) Railways Company, Limited, respectfully beg to draw the attention of your Grace to the following facts:—

This Company was formed for the purpose of constructing, under concessions granted by the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Governments, two of the most important sections of the Intercolonial Railway.

The

The section in New Brunswick, which extends from a junction with the European and North American Railway, near Moncton, in New Brunswick, to a point on the Nova Scotia boundary near Amherst, is about 36 miles in length, and is now in course of construction. The contract is in the hands of Messrs. Edwin Clark, Punchard, & Co., and the works are so far advanced that a portion of the line will be open for traffic in the Autumn of the present year.

The contract for the Nova Scotia section, 74 miles in length, from Amherst to Truro, where it joins the Nova Scotia State Line to Halifax, is also let to Messrs. Clark, Punchard, & Co., and heavy responsibilities, as well as considerable outlay, have already been incurred.

Both these lines were located by the respective Governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick as part of the proposed Intercolonial Railway, and were to be covered by the Imperial Guarantee, as your Grace will perceive by reference to the Despatch of the late Duke of Newcastle to Mr. Watkin, M.P., dated 19th March 1864.

It was on this understanding, and on the personal assurance to that effect of the Delegates of the Nova Scotia Government, that these lines were undertaken, and the necessary capital raised for their construction.

We beg to submit these facts for the information of your Grace, in order that the rights which we possess, and the responsibility we have incurred, may be duly considered in any decision that may be taken by the Imperial Government with respect to the Intercolonial Railway.

We have, &c.
(signed) George Sheward,
Chairman.
(signed) F. W. Webb,
Secretary.

His Grace
The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos,
&c. &c.

The Under Secretary of State to Mr. Watkin.

(Copy.)

Sir,

Downing-street, 19th March 1864.

THE Duke of Newcastle desires me to inform you that he has received from the Lords of the Treasury a copy of your letter of the 15th of February, contemplating the construction by New Brunswick and Nova Scotia of the first link of the Intercolonial Railway between Truro and the Bend, and suggesting that the line so constructed should be held to be part of the larger scheme contemplated in the laws recently passed by those two Provinces and by the memoranda of December 1862, and January 1864, recited in those laws.

I am directed by his Grace to inform you in reply, that if the Lower Provinces shall, at their own expense, commence the construction of a railway on a line approved by Her Majesty's Government between Truro and the Bend, and if subsequently the proposed loan of 3,000,000 £. shall be raised under the Imperial Guarantee in virtue of the offer contained in the above memoranda, the railway between Truro and the Bend, and the works constructed thereupon by the Lower Provinces, shall (as far as Her Majesty's Government is concerned) be considered to form part of the railway on which the loan of 3,000,000 £. is to be expended, and that his Grace sees no reason for requiring any change in that part of the memoranda which declares that 5-12ths of the loan shall be chargeable against Canada, 3½-12ths against Nova Scotia, and 3½-12ths against New Brunswick.

The further question, what part of that sum of 3,000,000 £. should be paid over to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in consequence of the works effected by them without the concurrence of Canada, will be mainly a question for the Provincial Governments, in which it must be understood that Her Majesty's Government is not to be involved. But the Imperial Government, before being party to any such payment in respect of this section of the railway, must have sufficient security that the whole scheme will be prosecuted with effect.

It is scarcely necessary to observe, that this assurance is given merely for the purpose of providing (as far as Her Majesty's Government is concerned) that New Brunswick and Nova Scotia shall not be prejudiced by commencing the railway in anticipation of a final arrangement (if such arrangement should ever take effect), and is not to be construed as in any way varying or keeping alive, or extending that arrangement, or as imposing on the Imperial Government any liability to assist in the construction of the shorter line now contemplated, whether by way of guarantee or otherwise, except in pursuance of the offer of December 1862 and January 1863. Therefore, no claim whatever is to be made on the Imperial Government, unless the old project is carried into execution; and if the offer of 1862-3 should fall to the ground, this assurance will, of course, fall with it. It must also be understood, that the present correspondence is not to affect the right of the Home Government to determine for itself at what period the offer of 1862-3 shall be held to be cancelled by the failure of the Canadian Government to fulfil the first of the proposed conditions, viz., that of submitting immediately to the Colonial Legislature the Bills required for carrying that offer into effect.

I am

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO

I am to add, however, that Her Majesty's Government consider that offer as still subsisting, but would certainly cease to do so unless a definite arrangement were made, and the necessary colonial laws passed within five years of the date of the first memorandum, i.e., before December 1867.

I am, &c.

E. W. Watkin, Esq.

Fleming's Hotel, Clarges-street, W.,
7 July 1868.

My Lord Duke,

I VENTURE to submit the following observations on the points adverted to by your Grace in person, as those in respect of which some explanation might with propriety be offered:—

First, touching the vagueness of the definition in speaking of the line submitted for the approval of Her Majesty's Government as the Bay of Chaleurs Line.

This term has been applied to indicate the route surveyed by Major Robinson in 1848 (and which in its general course follows the course of the Gulf of St. Lawrence), in consequence of its being used in the telegraphic message sent by your Grace to the Governor General of Canada in May last, and because a junction with the Bay of Chaleurs is incompatible with the adoption of the frontier route or any practicable central route.

I may now add, by way of supplement to my letter of the 1st inst., that the line submitted by the Canadian Government for your Grace's approval is understood to be the Robinson route, as contra-distinguished from the frontier or central route, subject of course to any such local modifications and changes in its location as more minute examination may show to be advantageous.

I would therefore presume to suggest, in approving of the line, your Grace, for the sake of greater certainty, might designate it as that following the general line of the route surveyed by Major Robinson, and indicated in his report laid before Parliament in January 1849, touching at the Bay of Chaleurs, and thence proceeding to Truro, in Nova Scotia, in such a course as may be shortest and best, and as may offer the greatest engineering advantages, touching, where practicable and consistent with these conditions, at any points in the Gulf of St. Lawrence which it may approach. The approval in such terms would seem to overcome any difficulty arising from the communication being made by telegraph, since your Grace would have thus defined with precision the line recommended in general terms by the Government of Canada.

That Government cannot, of course, proceed to construct any other line than the one approved of, and it would seem to be unimportant whether the adoption of it by the Government of Canada take place before or after the approval by Her Majesty's Government. As it is of the greatest moment that no time should be lost in making the financial arrangements, and as my public duties require my immediate return to Canada, I trust I may be pardoned if I express the hope that your Grace may find it not incompatible with your public duty to give the necessary sanction at the present time.

I transmit for the information of your Grace, the copy of a letter which Mr. Fleming, the engineer by whom the first surveys have been made, has addressed to me, showing that it is impossible that any more complete definition of the line can be given at the present time.

On the second point, relating to any supposed contracts for particular sections of the work, I desire, with the greatest respect, to repeat the objections I have already made to imposing these contracts in any way on the Commission appointed to carry out the works. These objections are, if possible, strengthened by a communication which I have received from Mr. Fleming since I addressed your Grace on the subject, and a copy of which communication I enclose for your information.

I cannot but feel assured that your Grace will consider the scope of duty devolving on Her Majesty's Government by the Act of Parliament to be limited to an approval of the general line of the route to be followed, and will leave to the commissioners for the work, the duty of determining whether or not it be in the public interest to avail themselves of any pre-existing arrangements for its partial execution.

Trusting that these explanations may be sufficiently satisfactory to enable your Grace to give the necessary reference to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, in order that the Canadian Government may have the advantage of making their financial arrangements at the present moment, which is so favourable for that operation.

I have, &c.

The Honourable John Rose, Minister of Finance, Canada.No. 2, Montagu-street, Russell-square, London, July 1868.

Sir,

I AM unable to find a copy of my letter to Sir John A. Macdonald, which you inquired for, relative to the estimated cost of the whole length of the Intercolonial Railway; I enclose, however, at your request, a copy of my Report to the Minister of Public Works, on that portion of the line between Moncton and Amherst.

In my report on the exploratory surveys of 1864, I ventured to give $20,000,000 as the probable total cost of the Intercolonial Railway. The information which I have since acquired in the maritime provinces convinces me that this estimate is not only sufficient, but that with very good management it is quite possible to complete the main line between Truro and Rivière du Loup, and also the projected branch from Bathurst to , for the sum named.

If, however, the line be twisted and warped from the best position to serve private and local interests, it will not be possible to form any reliable estimate of what the expenditure will ultimately come to. It appears necessary that I should allude to this in expressing, at your request, an opinion as to the sufficiency of the appropriation for the construction of the railway, because at the only point where the question of location has practically arisen as yet, viz., between Moncton and Amherst, the line advocated by the local authorities, and adopted by a contracting firm, is not only less favourable in an engineering point of view, but is actually from 21 to 35 per cent. longer than the line which ought to be constructed.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

London, 7 July 1868.

Sir,

REFERRING to our conversation this morning, allow me to remark :

It would not be possible to furnish plans and sections of the Intercolonial Railway, as it may finally be built, for a very long time. Railway surveys are very laborious operations in a wild wooded country. In England, the Ordnance surveys enable engineers very readily to define the line of a projected railway, but in a country like Canada, where no such surveys exist, the best position for the railway can only be ascertained after repeated trials and laborious surveys. After the work is commenced desirable changes and improvements in the location are frequently made in a wild country, and it would not, in my opinion, be wise to define the line so exactly that no such changes could be made.

With regard to the name of the route selected for the Intercolonial Railway, it has been designated "Major Robinson's Line," "The North Shore Line," and "Bay Chaleurs Route" (No. 15). It is, probably, best known as "Major Robinson's Line," but as the expression—line, might be taken to mean the exact line laid down by Major Robinson on the plans furnished by that gentleman, and which plans do not profess to be more than the results of a rough exploratory survey, and the line shown thereon as a possible railway line, it would, perhaps, be wise to define the route for the railway so as to avoid any misconceptions. I would suggest, therefore, that the route be described generally as follows :—

The shortest and best line that can be found from the existing railway at Rivière du Loup to the Bay Chaleurs by the River Matapédiac, and from the Bay Chaleurs to the existing railway at Truro, in Nova Scotia. The general designation of this intended line to be "The Bay Chaleurs Route."

On an examination of the map it will be found that a line touching the Bay Chaleurs, as above described, cannot be taken to mean a central or a frontier line, and that it is, in fact, substantially the route indicated by Major Robinson in his report laid before Parliament.

Referring to my report to the Minister of Public Works, dated 15th May last, on the location of that portion of the line between Moncton and Amherst, and also to my letter of yesterday, addressed to you on the same subject, I consider it my duty again to submit that within the limits of the route above defined, the railway should be located, as far as it is possible to do so, on that line which presents the most favourable engineering features, and subserves in the highest degree the general interests of the Dominion. If, on the contrary, other interests are too largely consulted, it will probably be discovered, when too late, that a large and useless expenditure has been incurred in constructing a railway proportionately expensive to maintain and operate.

Sir,

Intercolonial, London, 7 July 1868.

I AM in receipt of your note of yesterday's date, intimating that Messrs. Clark & Punchard propose calling here to-morrow morning at 10.30.

I regret that I have engagements on that day from which I cannot escape, but if they wish to see me I shall be ready to make an appointment for a future date.

Yours, &c.

Messrs. Edwin Clark, Punchard & Co.

Gentlemen,

London, 11 July 1868.

I HAVE to acknowledge your letter of yesterday's date, with the accompanying statements on the subject of certain works in the Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

I think it right to say, in order that misapprehension may not arise in future, that I have no authority whatever to come to any arrangements respecting these contracts, nor should I feel myself warranted in even expressing an opinion which might influence your action with reference to the subject-matter of your communication.

While it is due to you, as a matter of courtesy, that I should meet you and hear your representations, I trust you will understand that I can do no more than give respectful attention to your statements.

Yours, &c.

Sir,

Downing-street, 22 July 1868.

I AM directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to acknowledge your letters of the 1st and 7th instant, supplying information bearing on the choice of the line of railway to be constructed between Rivière du Loup and Truro, in order to complete the Intercolonial Railway.

The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos received with much satisfaction a telegraphic message from the Governor General, by which it appears that the Bay of Chaleurs Line has been selected by the Canadian Government. Her Majesty's Government readily acquiesce in this selection, as you will learn from the despatch to Viscount Monck, of which a copy is annexed.

I am, &c.

(signed) I. G. Elliot.

(Canada—No.—.)

The Duke of Buckingham to Viscount Monck.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 22 July 1868.

I HAVE received your Lordship's telegraphic message that the route by Bay of Chaleurs has been selected by the Canadian Government as the one to connect Truro with Rivière du Loup, and thus complete the Intercolonial Railway.

I understand three routes to have been under the consideration of the Government of Canada, namely, one crossing the St. John River, either at Woodstock or Fredericton; the second in a more central direction, through New Brunswick; and the third following the line selected by Major Robinson in 1848.

The route crossing the St. John River, either at Woodstock or Fredericton, is one to which the assent of Her Majesty's Government could not have been given. The objections on military grounds to any line on the south side of the St. John River are insuperable. One of the main advantages sought in granting an Imperial guarantee for constructing the railway would have been defeated if that line had been selected.

The remaining lines were the Central Line and that following the general course of route surveyed by Major Robinson; and Her Majesty's Government have learned, with much satisfaction, that the latter has been selected by the Canadian Government. The communication which this line affords with the Gulf of St. Lawrence at various points, and its remoteness from the American frontier, are conclusive considerations in its favour, and there can be no doubt that it is the only one which provides for the national objects involved in the undertaking.

I have, &c.

Governor,

The Right Honourable Viscount Monck.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, &c.

(Intercolonial.)

Sir,

Fleming's Hotel, 11 July 1868.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith certain documents on the subject of the proposed loan for construction of the Intercolonial Railway, to be guaranteed by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, under the authority of "The Canadian Railway Loan Act, 1867."

In the terms of the Act of the Canadian Parliament, as well as the proposed line of railway having been approved by Her Majesty's Government, it now only remains for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to convey their sanction to the conditions of the loan, as detailed in enclosures A. & B., and to approve of the form on which it is suggested the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government may be evidenced.

I have prepared for facility of reference a brief statement (Enclosure, No. 1) of the several Acts of Parliament, and of the communications which have taken place on this subject, to which I would respectfully crave your attention.

I shall be happy to give any further information which may be desired; and as my public duties require my return to Canada as speedily as possible, I trust I may be pardoned if I express the hope that I may be favoured with an early communication of the views of Her Majesty's Government on the subject of the enclosed.

The Right Hon. S. E. Hunt,
Chancellor of the Exchequer, &c. &c.

I have, &c.

Canada Intercolonial Railway Loan.

(Copy.)

THE Canadian Railway Loan Act authorised the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of interest, not exceeding 4 per cent. on any principal sum not exceeding 3,000,000 l. sterling, to be raised by the Government of Canada, for the purpose of constructing the Intercolonial Railway, on condition that Canada should pass an Act, providing:—

1st. For the construction of railway; for its use by Her Majesty's troops; and, provided the line should be approved by a Secretary of State.

2nd. That the Canadian Act should provide, to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the raising and expending by Canada of the 3,000,000 l. on the railway; for creating a sinking fund, and for making the loan and sinking fund charges in a specified order on the revenue of Canada; for the appointment of trustees to manage the sinking fund; and, lastly, for raising such further sum, on the sole credit of Canada, beyond the 3,000,000 l., as might be necessary to complete the line.

The Canada Act has complied with all three conditions, and authorised the raising of 1,000,000 l. sterling, beyond the 3,000,000 l. guaranteed by the Imperial Government, and has been approved of by Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The line has also been approved of by the Colonial Secretary; and Thomas Baring, Esq., M.P., and George Carr Glyn, Esq., M.P., have been named trustees by Canada, for the management of the sinking fund.

The Canadian Act provides that the work shall be performed and the money expended by a commission, named by the Canadian Government; and it is intended that operations shall be prosecuted by them as rapidly as possible.

Canada now proposes to put a portion of the loan on the market, and after consultation with Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., the financial agents of the Dominion in London, the terms specified in the annexed paper are suggested as those on which it should be offered to the public.

It will be perceived that it is proposed that the bonds for that portion of the loan which is guaranteed by the Imperial Government should, when issued, be countersigned on the part of Her Majesty's Government in the same form as was adopted in 1855 in the case of the Turkish Loan guaranteed by Her Majesty and the Emperor of the French.

The approbation of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury is necessary before preparing the form of bond to be issued by the Government of Canada, which is also annexed, as well as the proposed terms of loan, and the form in which the guarantee is to be evidenced, and it will be requisite that the financial agents of the dominion or the Minister of Finance should receive the Commissioners' authority to grant the interim receipts embodying the undertaking, for the countersignature on the part of Her Majesty's Government to the bond when issued.

(signed) John Rose.

INTERCOLONIAL LOAN.

1st. It is proposed that of the intercolonial loan of 4,000,000 l. sterling, the present issue shall be for two millions, three-fourths of which to be raised on the guarantee of the Imperial Government, and one-fourth on the bonds of Canada without such guarantee.

2nd. The bonds will be redeemable in 35 years; a sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum will be provided for the redemption of the Imperial portion and the ordinary sinking fund already existing for the redemption of the consolidated debt of Canada will be applicable for the Canadian bonds.

3rd. The loan will be payable to the subscribers by the following instalments, with the liberty to anticipate the rebate of interest at the bank rate.

4. Form of bond, to be prepared for approval of Treasury, who will authorise Messrs. Baring & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., to grant interim certificates on payments made previous to completion of bonds.

5. Loan to be offered to public by tender, and minimum price to be fixed, and placed in the hands of the Governor of the Bank of England.

Issue of 1,500,000 l. Canada Bonds, bearing 4 per cent interest, and guaranteed by the Imperial Government of the United Kingdom, under the authority of the Act of 30 Vict., c. 16, being one moiety of the loan authorised by that Act; and of 500,000 l. 5 per cent. Bonds of the Government of Canada, being also a moiety of the loan of 1,000,000 l. authorised by the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on the 21st of December 1867, for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., are authorised by the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada to receive at the office of the former firm, No. 8, Bishopgate-street Within, on Thursday, the 23rd instant, between the hours of one and two o'clock of the day, sealed tenders for 1,500,000 l. Canada 4 per Cent Bonds, guaranteed by the Imperial Government of the United Kingdom, and to be repaid on 1st October 1903, as per form of Bond annexed.

And 500,000 l. Canada 5 per Cent. Bonds, of the form and tenor annexed, to be repaid also on the 1st October 1903.

All these bonds will bear interest from 1st July 1868. A dividend for three months will be paid on 1st October, and the dividends will thenceforth be payable half-yearly, on 1st April and 1st October of each year, as per coupons.

The above-mentioned sealed tenders may be for the whole or part of 2,000,000 l., in the proportion of three quarters of guaranteed bonds, and one quarter of ordinary 5 per Cent. Canada Bonds; and no tender will be admitted which does not comply with this condition, namely, stating one price for the two stocks united.

The Minister of Finance of Canada will deliver to the partners present of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co. and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., a sealed paper containing the minimum price at which he will sell the above-mentioned 2,000,000 l. bonds, and those partners will then open the tenders and allot the bonds to the highest bidder or bidders pro ratâ, according to the price offered. The sealed paper will only be opened in case the Minister of Finance declares that the whole amount has not been tendered at or above his minimum.

Neither Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., nor Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., will make any tender.

Upon allotment, a payment of 20 per cent. will be required, and the subsequent instalments must be paid at the office of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., or Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., or, in default, the previous payments will be forfeited.

Twenty-five per cent. on the 13th of October 1868.

Twenty-five per cent. on the 12th January 1869.

And the balance on 13th April 1869.

Payment of these instalments may be made in full, on any of the above days, under discount at the then existing Bank of England minimum rate of discount.

Script receipts will be issued without delay, and bonds of 1,000 l., 500 l., or 100 l., will be delivered in exchange as soon as practicable.

London, 18 July 1868.

(Form of Guaranteed 4 per Cent. Bond.)

CANADA.

UNDER the authority of an Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on the 21st December 1867, entitled "An Act respecting the Construction of the Intercolonial Railway," this Debenture entitles the bearer, on the 1st October 1903, to the sum of of lawful money of Great Britain, being part of the sum of 3,000,000 l. raised under

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, &c.

Sir,

Treasury Chambers, 15 July 1868.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to state, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer has laid before them the letter which you addressed to him on the 11th instant, on the subject of the loans to be raised by the Government of Canada, for the purpose of the construction of a railway connecting Quebec and Halifax, under the provisions of the Act 30 Vict. c. 16, together with the statement enclosed in your letter, showing the substance of the terms and conditions on which it is proposed to raise the said loans (marked A), and also the form of bond or debenture (marked B), upon which it is suggested that the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government should be given for the payment of interest at the rate of 4 per cent. on a loan of 3,000,000 £, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act.

In the reply to this Letter the following number should be quoted: 11.112.68.

272—I.

I am

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO

I am desired by my Lords to acquaint you that their Lordships have no objection to offer to the terms and conditions proposed for raising these loans in accordance with Statement A (copy of which is enclosed); and that they are prepared to guarantee interest at the rate of 4 per cent. on a loan of 3,000,000 £, in accordance with the form of bond or debenture marked B, copy of which is also enclosed.

I am further to acquaint you that my Lords have appointed Mr. G. A. Hamilton, the Permanent Secretary of this Board, to act for them and in their name, for the purpose of guaranteeing the interest on the loan of 3,000,000 £, as provided by the before-mentioned Act. And I am to add that it will be necessary that each bond or debenture should be forwarded to this department, in order that his signature may be affixed thereto.

I am, &c.

(A.)

ISSUE of 1,500,000 £. Canada Bonds, bearing 4 per cent. interest, and guaranteed by the Imperial Government of Great Britain, under the authority of the Act of 30 Vict. c. 16, being one moiety of the loan authorised by that Act, and of 500,000 £. 5 per Cent. Bonds of the Government of Canada, being also a moiety of the loan of 1,000,000 £. authorised by the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on the 21st of December 1867, for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., are authorised by the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada, to receive at the office of the former firm, No. 8, Bishopsgate-street Within, on between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock of the day, sealed tenders for 1,500,000 £. Canada 4 per Cent. Bonds, guaranteed by the Imperial Government of Great Britain, and to be repaid at the end of 35 years, say, on 1st July 1903, as per form of bond annexed, and 500,000 £. Canada 5 per Cent. Bonds of the form and tenor also annexed, and for which a sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum will be provided. All these bonds will bear interest from July 1868, and the dividends will be payable half-yearly, on and of each year, as per dividend warrants.

The above-mentioned sealed tenders may be for the whole or part of 2,000,000 £., in the proportion of three-quarters of Guaranteed Bonds, and one-quarter of ordinary 5 per Cent. Canada Bonds, and no tender will be admitted which does not comply with this condition.

The Minister of Finance of Canada will deliver to the partners present, of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., a sealed paper containing the minimum price at which he will sell the above-mentioned 2,000,000 £. bonds, and those partners will then open the tenders, and afterwards the Minister's sealed paper, and allot the bonds to the highest bidder or bidders, pro rata, according to the price offered.

Neither Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., nor Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., will make any tender.

Upon allotment a payment of per cent. will be required, and the subsequent instalments must be paid at the office of Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co., or Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., as follows, or in default the previous payments will be forfeited.

Payment of these instalments may be made in full on any of the above days under discount, at the Bank of England minimum rate of discount.

Scrip receipts will be issued without delay, and bonds of 1,000 £., 500 £., or will be delivered in exchange as soon as practicable.

Sir,

London, 16 July.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 15th instant, informing me, by direction of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, that their Lordships have no objection to offer to the proposed mode of raising the loan for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, and that they are prepared to guarantee interest on the sum of 3,000,000 £. sterling, in the manner stated in your letter, and that Mr. G. A. Hamilton, the Permanent Secretary of the Board, has been appointed to sign the bonds when forwarded to the department.

Permit me, in reply, to express my grateful acknowledgments, both on my own part, and on behalf of the Government of Canada, for the great courtesy and promptitude which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Lords Commissioners, so kindly evinced in the course of the recent negotiations, and for their readiness to meet the wishes of the Government of Canada.

The bonds will be forwarded in accordance with your instructions to the Secretary of the Treasury as soon as received from Canada, through Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., the financial agents of the dominion in England, and will be countersigned by one or other of those firms in evidence of their genuineness.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, &c.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co.
Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co.

Gentlemen,

London, 18 July 1868.

REFERRING to the communications which have taken place between us during the last fortnight, on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, I have now the honour to enclose the copy of a letter from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, approving of the terms suggested in the course of our recent interviews, and of the form in which the guarantee of the Imperial Government shall be given.

I have, accordingly, to request that you will be good enough to take the necessary measures for placing the loan upon the market, in the terms stated in the enclosed draft of prospectus, and form of bond attached thereto. The bonds themselves will be prepared in Canada, in such amounts as you may indicate, and will be transmitted to you with the least possible delay.

I should be glad to be apprised of the result of your views on the question of commission, which has been discussed between us, and which you informed me would not, in any case, exceed the customary charge for similar operations on behalf of other foreign Governments, nor what, under the circumstances, would be a proper and reasonable remuneration for agency.

On the subject of investing the instalments that may be made, I have only to repeat the instructions already verbally expressed, that you will obtain the best rate of interest compatible with perfect security and immediate convertibility. The Indian Stock held as a sinking fund for the last instalments of the former loan on the Imperial guarantee, may, I presume, be considered of that character, and I will be glad if you will make arrangements with Commissioners, in whose control it is, for the retention of that stock, by your paying the balance of the loan, on its maturity, out of the money to be raised by the present operation.

I have, &c.
(signed) John Rose,
Minister of Finance, Canada.

Sir,

London, 28 July 1868.

WE have delayed our reply to the letter, which you have done us the honour to address to us, under date of the 18th instant, until the conclusion of the negotiation of the loan for the Dominion of Canada, in order to reply at once more positively to its several contents, and you will allow us now to commence by congratulating you, and by expressing our own sincere satisfaction, on the result of the tenders on 23rd instant, which have proved to be so favourable to the interests and credit of your Government.

The conditions on which the loan was offered to the public were in conformity with the official sanction of Her Majesty's Treasury, and with the instructions contained in your letter; and we observe with pleasure that the greatest possible expedition will be insured for the transmission to us here of the necessary bonds from Canada, since, for the satisfaction of the subscribers, it is most desirable that delay in their delivery should, as much as possible, be avoided.

With regard to the commission which our two firms will charge upon this operation, we are influenced, not only by the wishes for economy which you have personally expressed to us, but by our own desire to render the proceeds of the loan as advantageous as possible to the dominion, in agreeing that a commission of 1 per cent. on the nominal amount, and not on the actual sum received, 20,000*l.* between our two firms, should cover, not only our own remuneration for the agency, and responsibility of the transaction, but should also relieve the Government from all the incidental charges of legal expenses, advertisements, printing here, and other petty disbursements, so that the only additional expense for which the dominion will be liable will be the stamp duty required by the British Government; and we shall charge no additional commission for any purchases of stock which we may be required to make for the future employment of the sinking fund. Without entering into details, we must add, that the commission we now charge is much below that usually adopted for the agency in the negotiation of any foreign loan.

We take note of our instructions, that we should obtain for the temporary employment of the money to be received by us, the best rate of interest compatible with perfect security and immediate convertibility; but we regret that, in the present state of the money market, and consistently with these conditions, we cannot credit this account with a higher rate of interest than 1 per cent. per annum, whilst we assure you that we shall avail of any improvement in the value of money to afford to the Government such increased advantages as opportunities may allow.

With regard to the Indian Securities to which you allude, they are not under our control, and we must await your further powers and instructions; but we take due note of your order to us to pay the balance, when due, of the former guaranteed loan of Canada, which will be regularly complied with.

272—I.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co.
Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co.

Gentlemen,

London, 29 July 1868.

IN acknowledging your letter of yesterday's date, in reply to mine of the 18th instant, permit me to convey my cordial acknowledgments to your respective firms for the satisfactory manner in which the recent operations connected with the Intercolonial Loan were carried out by you, and to say I feel assured the Government of Canada recognise in the anxiety you evinced to make it successful, a practical evidence of the interest which you express in the future prospects and credit of the dominion.

I trust that the occasion which has arisen, of bringing its resources and character before the public, with your co-operation (on which I feel assured Canada may at all times rely), tend to place its securities and credit as high as those of the most favoured nations.

The charge which you make for commission, which you propose shall cover not only your ordinary remuneration for the agency and responsibility of the transaction, but all incidental charges of legal expenses, advertising, printing here, and petty disbursements, is satisfactory; and I have to express my thanks for your consideration in waiving the important item of commission in connection with the future management of the Sinking Fund.

I note your assurance, that you will avail of any improvement in the value of money, to obtain for the Government such rate of interest as opportunity may allow. Meanwhile be pleased, out of the first instalments, to extinguish the amount standing at the debit of the province, with your respective firms.

I have communicated with the Treasury on the subject of the Indian Securities; and I will thank you to redeem the balance of the former loan at maturity, and to intimate to Her Majesty's Government that you will be prepared to do so out of funds in deposit with you.

Will you be kind enough to furnish me with a list, under your signatures, of the bids for the loan, and also to apprise me, as soon as possible, of the number of bonds for the respective amounts of 1,000 £., 500 £., and 100 £., which you wish sent over.

I beg to thank you for the kind expressions at the close of your letter, and to acknowledge very cordially the uniform courtesy and kindness which you have extended to me in common with all my predecessors in official intercourse with you.

I have, &c.

Minister of Finance, Canada.

Hon. John Rose, Minister of Finance.

Dear Sir,
I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, referring to the heavy expenditures, on the part of the Government, pending the financial arrangements about to be made in London, and desiring a renewal of the loan from the bank of 2,500,000 dollars, maturing on the 30th instant, say 1,000,000 dollars for three months, to mature 30th September; and 1,500,000 dollars for six months, to mature 31st December next.

The bank is quite ready to meet the wishes of the Government, and will renew its loan in the manner you propose.

You are correct in the estimate of 500,000 dollars, available to the Government from the sales of Dominion Bonds, issued in connection with the export of American silver, as verbally reported, a sale of 500,000 dollars of bonds has been made to the Government of Ontario, and only awaits the sanction of an Order in Council from Toronto, to render the proceeds available to the Government of the dominion.

An account is being prepared of the recent silver operations, which I hope to furnish to-morrow.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, &c.

Dear Sir,

Montreal, 24 August 1868.

I SHOULD be glad to know what arrangements the Bank would be willing to make respecting the loan of two and one-half millions of dollars, maturing on the 30th September and 31st December next, in case the Government should determine to anticipate the payment of any of the instalments.

It is probable that a considerable sum of money may be at the disposal of the Dominion, and I will thank you to say whether it will suit your arrangements to receive any, and what, sum in deposit in excess of the debt due to the bank, and what rate of interest the bank would be willing to allow on such deposits.

I should likewise feel obliged by your stating whether arrangements can be made, so that a credit of 500,000 l. sterling can be available to the Government at such time within the next 18 months, and in such sums as may be required for the purposes of the Intercolonial Railway.

In case the bank cannot meet the views of Government with reference to the repayment of the loan, or further deposits, I will thank you to say whether any arrangement can be made for the purchase of any, and what, amount of Dominion Stock, and on what terms.

E. H. King, Esq.,

General Manager, Bank of Montreal, Montreal.

Yours, &c.

Hon. John Rose, Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

Dear Sir,

Bank of Montreal, Montreal,
25 August 1868.

I BEG to acknowledge your letter of 24th instant. In the present state of the money market, the bank can find no profitable employment for the large sum of 2,500,000 dollars, and it would much prefer that the loans maturing for that amount should remain undisturbed until maturity.

The directors request me to say, however, that if it will be any advantage to the Government to deposit the sum of 2,500,000 dollars, with the understanding that it is to be supplied in payment of the loans at their maturity, the bank will allow interest thereon, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. And with reference to the inquiry whether an available credit for a similar amount, on say 500,000 l. sterling, can be arranged, I am desired to reply, that the directors will be quite willing, and entertain no doubt of their ability to make advances to the Government to that extent, within the next 18 months, if required, for the purpose of the Intercolonial Railway.

With respect to any further deposits of money, the directors are compelled to decline them at present, as they can see no outlet for their profitable employment, and in response to your last inquiry, they would suggest that such moneys be invested in the purchase of Dominion Stock, which can probably be obtained at a small discount, to the extent of 500,000 l. This would be a more advantageous than the present arrangement for the Government, and if there be no objection to the redemption of what is now a permanent loan, at 6 per cent. per annum, the directors would prefer to see a portion of the money intended for the repayment of their loan employed for that purpose, rather than in deposit with the bank, under present circumstances.

I remain, &c.

(signed) E. H. King,
General Manager.

Dear Sir,

Ottawa, 25 August 1868.

I HAVE to acknowledge your letter of the 25th instant, in reply to mine of the 24th.

The terms you name with reference to the deposit of the 2,500,000 dollars, and the application of that sum to the repayment of the bank loan, are satisfactory; and I have to express my acknowledgment to the bank for its readiness to meet the wishes of the Government, as well in that matter as in granting the credit of 500,000 l., referred to in my letter.

The available bank balances in Canada will be required to meet maturing bonds and other engagements of the Government here, and payment of the 2,500,000 dollars will have to be made by exchange on our London agents.

I am apprehensive of the effect which throwing so large an amount of exchange on the market would have on the rate; and I will feel obliged by your favouring me with your opinion as to the quantity which the market here could absorb without causing a decline, and also on the expediency of having the bills drawn against a credit authorised by the Government in London, rather than by the Receiver General himself.

I will further thank you to say what arrangements the bank would be willing to make itself, for having the money available, and placed to the credit of the Government here.

I do not think that, for the present, I am in a position, under the circumstances of the contemplated arrangement, to negotiate for the purchase of the Dominion Stock.

272—I.

Thanking

Thanking you for the promptitude with which you have acted on my former communications, and awaiting your early reply to this letter,

E. H. King, Esq.,
General Manager, Bank of Montreal, Montreal.

I am, &c.
(signed) John Rose.

Hon. John Rose, Minister of Finance.

Bank of Montreal, Montreal,
25 August 1868.

Dear Sir,

I HAVE to acknowledge your letter of this date. There can be no doubt that the sale of 500,000 l. sterling would cause a decline in the exchange market. So far as the local market is concerned, it would assist you but little. It would not absorb more than 20,000 l. to 25,000 l. per week, for cash sales, and not even that without a concession on the rate, which approximates, for such sales, very close to that of New York. You would also find Commissariat bills competing with yours in the market, before you had sold any considerable amount.

I am satisfied that it is not advisable for the Government to draw their own bills for sale in New York. Their appearance would at once give rise to the impression, Government was drawing very heavily against the Intercolonial Railway loan, and this would immediately cause a decline in the market. To avoid this, I think it would be more for your advantage to use our bills of exchange, paying our English bank commission, and the stamps we require to affix. If this were done, the bank would undertake the sale of the bills through its agents in New York, at the rate of 100,000 l. per week, charging a commission of one-quarter of 1 per cent., which would cover the remittance of the funds to the credit of the Government at Ottawa, without further charge.

The highest class of bills can be bought in New York to-day, according to my latest telegrams, at 9½ per cent. premium, and you might limit our sales, for your account, to that, or such lesser rate as you think advisable. It would doubtless be more for the advantage of the Government if the whole 500,000 l. sterling could be disposed of in one sale, at a fair rate, inasmuch as it would give you the benefit of interest immediately.

I am unwilling that the bank should take any risk of loss by decline of the market, and I don't think it could be considered entirely safe in making an offer for such a sum, even with a margin of one-half of 1 per cent. in the rate, exclusive of English commission; this would make the rate, based upon to-day's quotations, 8½ per cent. premium, net, for the funds in Canada.

If the Government should be disposed to accept the rate, I shall submit to the directors; but I shall be more pleased, so far as the bank is concerned, if you elect to take the chances of the market, and direct us to sell for your account.

I remain, &c.
(signed) E. H. King,
General Manager.

P. S.—Since the above was written, I have lower quotations from New York, and I wish my suggestion, as to the bank purchasing the whole amount, to be understood as contingent on present rates.

General Manager, Bank of Montreal, 25th August 1868.

BANK to sell one-half on commission; and for other half Government will accept your rate; sales of your own, and Government exchange, to be "pari passu." Will it not answer if Baring and Glyn deposit money in Union Bank to your credit?

Any commission or stamps saved by that course, Government will expect to be allowed. Telegraph if possible, to-night, whether that course will answer, or whether bills shall still be sent.

COPY of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General in Council, on the 27th of August 1868.

THE Committee have had under consideration the annexed Memorandum of the Honourable the Minister of Finance, reporting, for your Excellency's information, the proceedings adopted by him whilst recently in England for the negotiation of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, and the arrangements entered into with the Financial Agents of the Dominion in London, in relation thereto ; and they respectfully report their concurrence in the measures so adopted by the Finance Minister, and submit the same for your Excellency's sanction.

(Certified) W. H. Lee, Clerk, P.C.

THE undersigned has the honour to submit, for the information of his Excellency the Governor General, the following report of his proceedings in England on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway Loan. It was important that the preliminary arrangements with Her Majesty's Government should be made without delay, in order that advantage might be taken of the unusually favourable state of the money market, and that the loan should be placed before the summer holidays, as well as previous to certain anticipated loans by the Governments of France, Egypt, and Sweden.

Communication was, accordingly, immediately had with his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, for the purpose of obtaining the requisite assent to the sufficiency of the legislation here, and of having that assent conveyed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

Copies of the correspondence which took place are herewith submitted.

After full discussion with Messrs. Baring Brothers, and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., the Financial Agents, it was considered proper to offer the loan on the terms stated on the accompanying prospectus, which terms were accordingly communicated to the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

The approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies having been obtained, the general conditions, and the terms of the proposed bond, were discussed at a meeting with his Grace, the Colonial Secretary, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Secretary of the Treasury, at which Mr. Baring and Mr. Glyn were present, and these terms were finally settled.

The correspondence on that subject is annexed to this report. Every publicity was given by advertisement, through the press, and otherwise, respecting the loan.

The minimum price was settled by the undersigned, and placed in a sealed paper in the hands of the Financial Agents, in the presence of the bidders for the loan, but was not communicated to any one.

The sealed tenders (in number 335) were opened by the Financial Agents, in the presence of the parties tendering. A schedule of those bids is herewith submitted.

Letters dated London.

 Glyn, Mills & Co., 18th July

Reply dated 28th July.
 Reply dated 29th July.

A good deal of communication took place on the subject of the commission to be charged by the Financial Agents. The result of those communications will be found in the correspondence entered in the margin.

The undersigned thinks it right to acknowledge the exertion made by the Financial Agents to place the loan on the most advantageous terms possible, and to say that he believed the arrangements touching the commission, and management of the Sinking Fund are more favourable to Canada than are ordinarily accorded by London agents to foreign governments on like operations.

He cannot close this report without mentioning the courtesy and ready assistance which were on all occasions extended to him by his Grace, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

But for the facilities which were at all times so kindly afforded, it might have been difficult to have placed the loan on the market during the present season.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, &c.

COPY of a Report of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General in Council, on the 27th August 1868.

THE Committee have had under consideration the annexed memorandum from the Honourable the Minister of Finance, submitting for consideration and approval, certain arrangements which he suggests should be made in view of the exceptional state of the financial affairs of the Dominion, and reporting the measures he has adopted in reference thereto.

The Committee advise that the action taken by the Minister of Finance be approved; and further, that the balance due to the Financial Agents in London be paid out of the amounts on deposit with them; that the maturing bonds, and other engagements mentioned in the memorandum of the Finance Minister, be paid, and that his recommendation, as to the issue of Exchequer Bills or Bonds be carried into effect through the Treasury Board, in such form as may be deemed expedient; and finally, that the Finance Minister be authorised to carry out his suggestion with reference to Exchange, in such manner as he may deem most advantageous.

(Certified) W. H. Lee,
Clerk, P.C.

The undersigned has the honour to submit a statement of the amount deposited on account of the Intercolonial Loan, together with the other balances available to the Government in the banks here, amounting in the aggregate to about $6,200,000, accompanied with a statement of the engagements which the Dominion has to meet at an early day.

The loan of two and one-half millions of dollars from the Bank of Montreal, and the bonds amounting to $880,000, issued in 1866, both bear 7 per cent. interest, while the amount payable to Ontario, bears 5 per cent.

The balance on the account of the Financial Agents in London also bears 5 per cent. interest.

These agents report that they are unable at the present moment to obtain in England more than 1 per cent. per annum on the sum in their hands. It is obvious, therefore, that, unless other employment can temporarily be found for the money, a serious loss of interest may take place, for the Dominion is paying at the rate of 7 per cent. interest on all its old current loans, 4 per cent. on three-fourths, and 5 per cent. on one-fourth of the Intercolonial Loan, and 5 per cent. to Ontario, and a like rate on any balance due the Fiscal Agents in London.

The Minister of Finance begs to bring under the notice of his Excellency in Council the following suggestion, by which it is sought to accomplish the double purpose of finding such employment for the money as will avert a serious loss to the dominion in the way of interest, and at the same time provide, beyond all possible eventuality, for having the Intercolonial money immediately available whenever it may be required for the prosecution of the work.

The credit with Messrs. Baring & Glyn, which the dominion may avail of to the extent of 250,000*l.* sterling, he proposes shall be specially used, if need be, to recoup any portion of the Intercolonial money that may now be invested in any interest-bearing securities, issued for the reduction of such dominion liabilities as bear a high rate of interest, and the Bank of Montreal have agreed to grant a further credit for the like purposes of the Intercolonial Railway, to the extent of 500,000*l.* sterling.

He suggests, further, in addition to these special credits provided for recouping the Intercolonial Loan, that Exchequer Bills of the Dominion, bearing a like rate of interest as is payable on that loan, be prepared; that these Exchequer Bills shall be receivable in payment of all dues to the Government, and be placed in the hands of the Receiver General, as Trustee for the Intercolonial Fund, and not be issued by him unless needed for that work.

There will thus be available, for recouping the Intercolonial Fund, apart from the general resources of the Dominion, the special credits of the Financial Agents and of the Bank of Montreal, and Exchequer Bills convertible at any moment, as they are receivable in payment of public dues, at short date.

Although the undersigned does not contemplate the probability of any occasion arising, which will render it necessary for the Dominion to avail itself of any of these special means provided for replacing the Intercolonial Fund, and although, under ordinary circumstances, the surplus revenues of the Dominion, and the incomings from good debts actually due to it from Savings Banks deposits, and the issue of Dominion Stock to Insurance Companies and the public, as demand for it may arise, might be relied on to meet the payments on the works, according to their progress; yet in view of the circumstances attending the issue of the Intercolonial Loan, he is of opinion that the special provisions before suggested, should be supplied before even a temporary use of any portion of the fund is made.

If Council deem it expedient to invest any portion of the Intercolonial money in such way as to reduce the interest payable by the Dominion, it will be necessary to bring the funds now in deposit with the London Financial Agents, to Canada.

In anticipation of the possibility of that operation the undersigned had informal communication with the Bank of Montreal, the substance of which is contained in the correspondence and telegrams herewith submitted.

It will be seen that the Bank is willing either to sell the Bills of Exchange of the Government for a Brokerage, and place the proceeds to the credit of the Dominion at Ottawa, or themselves to purchase the Exchange at the rate specified in the Manager's letter placing the proceeds to the credit of the Government at once to bear 4 per cent. interest.

The undersigned has considered the propriety, first, of importing gold from England, and, secondly, of asking public tenders for Bills of Exchange. In the former way the money could not be laid down here except at a considerable loss as compared with the present quoted rates of Exchange in New York, and if the latter course were adopted he believes it would lead to a serious decline in the rates as well in Canada as in New York. He is of opinion that the same result would follow if the Government were to offer its own Bills drawn on the financial agents in London, for sale through any broker, or through the agency of the Bank of Montreal, and he thinks it would be for the interest of the Government to allow the Bills of the Bank of Montreal on the Union Bank of London, its agents there, to be used. This course will subject the Government to the payment of a brokerage to the Bank of Montreal on the sale of the Bills in New York, and the transfer of the funds thence to Canada, as well as to the cost of recouping that institution for the commission it may have to pay to its London agents on their acceptance and payment of the Bills it may draw. But he considers it probable that the cost to the Government of that plan would be less than the loss which would be occasioned by the decline in the rate of Exchange were the Government to draw its own bills on Messrs. Baring and Glyn.

From the best information within his reach, the undersigned is inclined to the opinion that the price of Exchange is less likely to rise than to decline for some time to come.

The present demand for American securities in Europe, the probable heavy export of grain and other products in the autumn, the prospect of a considerable cotton crop, and the light fall importations into Canada, are among the causes which prompt this belief, and he thinks it improbable that the Government would gain as much by waiting for a rise, as it would lose in the way of interest which the deposit of money on the sale of the bills would otherwise give. He therefore submits, for the consideration of Council, the expediency of realising the exchange as expeditiously as practicable in New York, and placing the amount at 4 per cent. interest.

But, in view of the impossibility of making any certain calculations with reference to the result, and in order that the Government may have the advantage of any rise in exchange, and at the same time place a considerable sum at once at interest, he proposes:—

1st. That the offer of the Bank to purchase, at the rate specified in Mr. King's letter, be accepted as to the half of the 500,000 l. sterling only.

2nd. That the other half be sold by the Bank on Commission on the terms stated by him, either pari passu with the purchased half, or at a minimum rate to be fixed from day to day by the Government when apprised of the daily quotations in New York.

3rd. That the sum of 500,000 l. be placed by the Financial Agents in London at the disposal of the Bank of Montreal, by letter of instruction to that effect, to meet the drafts of the Bank, and on the understanding that if the payment of stamps and commission to the Bank Agents is thereby avoided, these charges will be allowed to the Government.

Ottawa, 27 August 1868.

(No. 77.)

Government House, Ottawa, July 2, 1869.

MY LORD,

Received, July 14, 1869.

In accordance with the request preferred in their Addresses to me, of which the copies are enclosed, I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship, for presentation to Her most Gracious Majesty, the Addresses of the two Houses of the Parliament of Canada praying for the admission of the Colony of Newfoundland into the Union on the terms and conditions therein expressed.

In submitting these terms and conditions for the Royal approval, at the proper time, I beg to state that they have been agreed upon by the Ministers of the Dominion in concert with the delegates specially sent for the purpose of discussing them by the Government and Parliament of Newfoundland.

They do not materially vary from the conditions adopted by the two Houses of Newfoundland during the last Session, and they will, I trust, prove acceptable to, and be sanctioned by, the constituencies of that island at the general election, which is to take place in the course of the ensuing autumn, so as to enable their representatives to present Addresses corresponding to those enclosed, early in the next year.

Enclosure 3.

To the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Senate of the Dominion of Canada, in Parliament assembled, humbly approach Your Majesty, for the purpose of representing :

That on the fourth day of June instant, his Excellency the Governor General transmitted for our information a copy of the minutes of a conference between a committee of the Privy Council of Canada

4 ADDRESSES FROM THE PARLIAMENT OF CANADA,

CANADA.

and certain delegates from the Colony of Newfoundland, on the subject of the union of that Colony with the Dominion of Canada, and of the resolutions adopted by them, as the basis of such union, which are in the following words, namely :

Resolved, 1. That Canada shall be liable for the debts and liabilities of Newfoundland, existing at the time of the union :

2. For the purpose of placing the interest on the public debt of Newfoundland on the same footing as that of the other provinces, Canada will, on the request of the Lieutenant Governor and Council of Newfoundland, make arrangements to substitute in lieu of the existing securities which now represent the public debt of Newfoundland, the bonds or stock, either of the late Province of Canada, or of the Provinces of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, issued before the 1st July 1867 ; and will further endeavour to provide that the securities of Newfoundland shall be placed on the same footing as those of the other Provinces, as investments in which the sinking funds of any portion of the debts for which Canada is now responsible may be made.

3. Newfoundland not having incurred debts equal to those of the other Provinces now constituting the Dominion, shall be entitled to receive by half-yearly payments, in advance, from the General Government interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the difference between the actual amount of its indebtedness and the indebtedness per head of the population of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the population of Newfoundland being estimated at 130,000.

4. In consideration of the transfer to the General Parliament of the powers of taxation, the following sums shall be paid yearly by Canada to Newfoundland, for the support of its Government and Legislature, to wit, $35,000, and an annual grant equal to 80 cents per head of the aforesaid population, both half yearly in advance ; such grant of 80 cents per head to be augmented in proportion to the increase of population as may be shown by each subsequent decennial census, until the population amounts to 400,000, at which rate such grant shall thereafter remain, it being understood that the first census shall be taken in the year 1871.

5. In consideration of the transfer to the General Government by Newfoundland of the now ungranted and unoccupied lands, mines, and minerals of the Colony, it is agreed that the sum of $150,000 shall each year be paid to Newfoundland by semi-annual payments in advance, and that Colony shall retain the right of opening, constructing, and controlling roads and bridges, through any of the said lands, and that the privilege heretofore enjoyed by the inhabitants of Newfoundland of cutting (free of charge) wood on the ungranted lands of the Crown, shall continue to be exercised by them in like manner free of charge, but the aforesaid reservations shall be subject to such regulations as may from time to time be passed by the Lieutenant Governor of Newfoundland in council, and which regulations shall be subject to the approval of the Governor General in council.

Such surrender shall also be subject to the reservations and provisoes contained in the 7th and 8th sections of the Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland, 7 Vic. cap. 1, but these shall in like manner be at all times subject to approval as aforesaid.

6. It shall be optional, however, for Newfoundland before entering the Union to reserve to itself all the lands and rights conveyed to the General Government by the last preceding clause, and in that case Canada shall be relieved of the payment of the aforesaid sum of $150,000 per annum.

7. The encouragement, benefits, and protection, accorded by the Dominion to fisheries in other parts thereof shall be extended to the fisheries of Newfoundland, and unless Parliament shall make other provision, the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland, 31 Vic. cap. 1, sec. 3, shall remain in force.

8. In addition to the present local water rates and assessments in the town of St. John, the water dues now payable by vessels entering that harbour, as well as the present duty on coal entering the said harbour, shall be available to Newfoundland, and be applied in reduction of the interest for which Newfoundland is now responsible in respect of its liability toward the General Water Company ; such duties on coal and water dues shall be subject to adjustment from time to time by the Legislature of Newfoundland. On an address of such Legislature to that effect the Dominion Government will issue bonds bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum, maturing not less than 15 years from the dates thereof, to be delivered to the Government of Newfoundland for the purpose of finding the aforesaid liability to the said General Water Company. On a like address, the Dominion Government will also issue bonds to fund the liability contracted in respect of the Harbour Grace Water Company, all such sums being charged to Newfoundland as part of its debt.

9. The Dominion will provide an efficient Mail Service between the present dominion, Newfoundland, and the United Kingdom, by steamers adapted and giving adequate facilities for the conveyance of passengers and cargo.

The obligations of Newfoundland with respect to the present Mail Service between Newfoundland and Halifax will be undertaken by the Governor of the Dominion, and on the expiry of existing arrangements other provisions will be made for maintaining the services in a manner equally advantageous to Newfoundland.

Efficient coast steam service, including Labrador, in connexion with the Post Office, will be established and maintained by the Government of the Dominion.

10. Canada will assume and defray the charges for the following services :—

- a. Salary of the Lieutenant Governor.
- b. Salaries and allowances of the Judges of the Superior Court, the Judges of District Courts, and the Labrador Judge and Bailiff.
- c. The Charges in respect of the Department of Customs.
- d. Postal Department.
- e. Protection of Fisheries.
- f. Provision for Volunteer, Militia, and Naval Brigade Force.
- g. Light-houses, Shipwrecked Crews, Quarantine, and Marine Hospitals.
- h. The Surveyor-General and his Staff (in case the lands shall be transferred).
- i. The Geological Survey.
- j. The Penitentiary.

FOR ADMITTING NEWFOUNDLAND INTO THE DOMINION. 5

And such further charges as may be incident to and connected with the services, which by the British North America Act, 1867, appertain to the General Government, and as are or may be allowed to the other Provinces.

CANADA.

11. No exceptional tax shall be imposed on any of the exports of Newfoundland.

12. Newfoundland shall in case the union take place, previous to the next census in the year 1871, be entitled to be represented by eight members in the House of Commons, and thereafter the representation shall be subject to the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867.

13. The union shall take effect on such day as Her Majesty, by Order in Council, on an Address to that effect, in terms of the 146th section of the British North America Act, 1867, may direct, and Newfoundland may in such Address specify the divisions, if any, for which any of the four Senators to which that Colony is entitled shall be named; the electoral district for which, and the time within which, the first election of Members to serve in the House of Commons in Canada shall take place.

14. The Constitution of the Executive Authority and of the Legislature of Newfoundland shall, subject to the provisions of the said Act, continue as they exist at the union, until altered under the authority thereof.

15. The provisions in the aforesaid British North America Act, 1867 shall—except those parts thereof which are in terms made or by reasonable intendment, may be held to be specially applicable to, and only affect one and not the whole of the Provinces now composing the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by the Resolutions—be applicable to Newfoundland, in the same way, and to the like extent, as they apply to the other Provinces of the Dominion, and as if the Colony of Newfoundland had been one of the Provinces originally united by the said Act.

The House of Commons of Canada, having in the present Session of the Parliament of the Dominion passed an Address to Your Majesty, praying that Your Majesty would be graciously pleased, by and with the advice of Your Most Honourable Privy Council, under the provisions of the 146th section of the British North America Act, 1867, to admit Newfoundland into the Union or Dominion of Canada, on the terms and conditions set forth in the above-mentioned Resolutions:

Wherefore we, the Senate of Canada, fully concurring in the terms and conditions expressed in the Address of the House of Commons, humbly pray that Your Majesty will be pleased, by and with the advice of Your Most Honourable Privy Council under the provisions of the 146th section of the British North America Act, 1867, to admit Newfoundland into the Dominion of Canada."

The Senate, Tuesday, 15th June 1869.

(Signed.) JOSEPH CAUCHON, Speaker.

Enclosure 4.

Enclosure 4.

To the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WE Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the House of Commons of the Dominion of Canada in Parliament assembled, humbly approach Your Majesty for the purpose of representing:

That during the present Session of Parliament, we have taken into consideration the subject of the admission of the Colony of Newfoundland into the Union or Dominion of Canada, and have resolved that it is expedient that such admission should be effected at as early a date as may be found practicable under the 146th Section of the British North America Act of 1867, on the conditions herein-after set forth, which have been agreed upon with the delegates from the said Colony, that is to say:—

That Canada shall be liable for the debts and liabilities of Newfoundland existing at the time of the Union.

That for the purpose of placing the interest on the public debt of Newfoundland on the same footing as that of the other Provinces, Canada will, on the request of the Lieutenant Governor and Council of Newfoundland, make arrangements to substitute in lieu of the existing securities which now represent the public debt of Newfoundland the bonds or stock, either of the late Province of Canada or of the Provinces of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, issued before the 1st July 1867, and will further endeavour to provide that the securities of Newfoundland shall be placed on the same footing as those of the other Provinces as investments in which the sinking funds of any portion of the debts for which Canada is now responsible, may be made.

That Newfoundland not having incurred debts equal to those of the other Provinces now constituting the Dominion, shall be entitled to receive by half-yearly payments in advance from the General Government, interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the difference between the actual amount of its indebtedness and the indebtedness per head of the population of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the population of Newfoundland being estimated at 130,000.

That in consideration of the transfer to the Parliament of the Dominion of the powers of taxation, the following sums shall be paid yearly by Canada to Newfoundland for the support of its Government and Legislature, to wit, $35,000, and an annual grant equal to 80 cents. per head of the aforesaid population, both half yearly in advance, such grant of 80 cents per head to be augmented in proportion to the increase of population, as may be shown by each subsequent decennial census, until the population amounts to 400,000, at which rate such grant shall thereafter remain, it being understood that the first census shall be taken in the year 1871.

That in consideration of the transfer to the General Government by Newfoundland of the now ungranted and unoccupied lands, mines and minerals of the Colony the sum of $150,000 shall each year be paid to Newfoundland by semi-annual payments in advance; and the Colony shall retain the right of opening, constructing, and controlling roads and bridges through any of the said lands and the privilege heretofore enjoyed by the inhabitants of Newfoundland of cutting (free of charge) wood on the ungranted lands of the Crown, shall continue to be exercised by them in like manner free of charge, but the aforesaid reservations shall be subject to such regulations as may from time to time be passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Newfoundland in Council, and which regulations shall be subject to the approval of the Governor General in Council. Such surrender shall also be subject to the reservations and provisoes contained in the 7th and 8th sections of the Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland, 7 Vic. cap. 1, but these shall in like manner be at all times subject to approval as aforesaid.

That it shall be optional, however, for Newfoundland before entering the Union, to reserve to itself all the lands and rights conveyed to the General Government by the last preceding clause, and in that case Canada shall be relieved of the payment of the aforesaid sum of $150,000 per annum.

That the encouragement, benefits, and protection accorded by the Dominion to fisheries in other parts thereof shall be extended to the fisheries of Newfoundland, and unless Parliament shall make other provision, the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland, 31 Vic. cap. 1, sec. 3, shall remain in force.

That in addition to the present local water rates and assessments in the town of St. John, the water dues now paid by vessels entering that harbour as well as the present duty on coal entering the said harbour shall be available to Newfoundland and be applied in reduction of the interest for which Newfoundland is now responsible in respect of its liability toward the General Water Company. Such duties on coal and water dues shall be subject to adjustment from time to time by the Legislature of Newfoundland. On an address of such Legislature to that effect the general Government will issue bonds bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum, maturing not less than 15 years from the dates thereof to be delivered to the Government of Newfoundland for the purpose of funding the aforesaid liability to the said General Water Company. On a like address the Dominion Government will also issue bonds to fund the liability contracted in respect of the Harbour Grace Water Company, all such sums being charged to Newfoundland as part of its debt.

That the Dominion will provide an efficient Mail Service between the present Dominion, Newfoundland, and the United Kingdom, by steamers adapted and giving adequate facilities for the conveyance of passengers and cargo.

The obligations of Newfoundland with respect to the present Mail Service between Newfoundland and Halifax, will be undertaken by the Government of the Dominion, and on the expiry of existing arrangements other provision will be made for maintaining the services in a manner equally advantageous to Newfoundland.

Efficient coast steam service, including Labrador, in connexion with the Post Office, will be established, and maintained by the Government of the Dominion.

That Canada will assume and defray the charges of the following services :

Salary of the Lieutenant Governor.

Salaries and allowances of the Judges of the Superior Court, the Judges of District Courts, and Labrador Judge and Bailiff.

The Charges in respect of the Department of Customs.

Postal Department.

Protection of Fisheries.

Provision for Volunteer, Militia, and Naval Brigade Force.

Light-houses, Shipwrecked Crews, Quarantine, and Marine Hospitals.

The Surveyor General and his Staff (in case the lands shall be transferred.)

The Geological Survey.

The Penitentiary.

And such further charges as may be incident to and connected with the services which by the British North America Act, 1867, appertain to the General Government, and as are or may be allowed to the other Provinces.

That no exceptional tax shall be imposed on any of the exports of Newfoundland.

That Newfoundland shall, in case the union takes place previous to the next census, in the year 1871, be entitled to be represented by eight members in the House of Commons, and thereafter the representation shall be subject to the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867.

That the union shall take effect on such day as Her Majesty, by Order in Council, on an Address to that effect in terms of the 146th section of the British North America Act, 1867, may direct, and Newfoundland may, in such Address specify the divisions, if any, for which any of the four senators to which that Colony is entitled, shall be named, and the electoral districts for which, and the time within which the first election for members to serve in the House of Commons in Canada shall take place.

That the constitution of the Executive Authority, and of the Legislature of Newfoundland shall subject to the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, continue as they exist at the Union, until altered under the authority of the Act.

That the provisions in the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or by reasonable intendment may be held to be specially applicable to, and only to affect one, and not all the Provinces now composing the Dominion, and, except so far as the same may be varied by the provisions herein, may be applicable to Newfoundland in the same way and to the like extent as they apply to the other Provinces of the Dominion, and as if the Colony of Newfoundland had been one of the Provinces originally united by the said Act.

We, therefore, humbly pray, that Your Majesty will be graciously pleased, by and with the advice of Your Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, under the provisions of the 146th Section of the British North America Act, 1867, to admit Newfoundland into the Union or Dominion of Canada, on the terms and conditions herein-after set forth.

ANNO TRICESIMO PRIMO VICTORIÆ REGINÆ.

CAP. XLI.

AN ACT to make provision for defraying the Expense of certain Works of Fortification required for the Defence of the Dominion.

[Assented to, 22nd May 1868.]

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, having taken into consideration the Message of his Excellency the Governor General, bearing date the first day of May in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, recommending that provision should be made to the amount hereinafter mentioned, to defray the expense of constructing certain Works of Fortification for the defence of the Dominion, and having resolved to make such provision, and for that purpose to grant to Your Majesty the sums hereinafter mentioned,—do most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted, by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, that—

1. It shall be lawful for the Governor in Council to authorise the raising by way of loan, upon the guarantee of such loan or of the interest thereon by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, of such sums not exceeding in the whole the sum of one million one hundred thousand pounds sterling, as may be necessary for the purposes hereinafter mentioned; and the sums so raised, with the interest thereon, shall be a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada, next after the appropriation for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, as shall also such sums as may be necessary to repay the said loan, either by way of a sinking fund not exceeding one per centum per annum on the principal sum so raised, or in such other way and subject to such conditions as the Governor in Council, with the assent of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, may agree upon and determine.

Preamble.
 Power to raise loan of 1,100,000 £ sterling for the purposes of this Act.
 How to rank on Consolidated Revenue Fund, &c.
2. It shall be lawful for the Governor in Council, from time to time, to authorise the payment out of the sums to be raised under the authority of this Act, of such sums as may be necessary to defray the expense of constructing works of fortification for the defence of the city of Montreal and other cities and places west of Montreal, and for the defence of the city of St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick; such works of defence to be public works within the purview of the Act of the present Session, intituled, “An Act respecting the Public Works of Canada,” and to be constructed under the provisions of the said Act.

Works to be constructed under this Act.
 To be Public Works under 31 Vict. c. 12.
3. A detailed account of all moneys raised and expended under the authority of this Act, shall be laid before the House of Commons during the first fifteen days of the Session of Parliament next after they are so raised or expended.

FROM

THE EARL GRANVILLE, K.G.,

TO

GOVERNOR-GENERAL THE RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN YOUNG, BART., K.C.B., RESPECTING

THE RECENT FENIAN RAID INTO CANADA.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty, 25th July, 1870.

No. 178.

Downing Street,
5th July, 1870.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch, No. 132, of the 9th ultimo, with its enclosures, relating to the recent Fenian raid.

I have read with sustained interest the graphic accounts given by Colonel Smith and Colonel Bagot of the two affairs which resulted in the repulse and route of the Fenians on the Missisquoi and Huntingdon frontiers. I have sincere pleasure in acknowledging the conduct of the officers, the courage, alacrity, and discipline of the Volunteers and Militia, and the zeal and helpful enthusiasm of the farmers and country people on both the points of attack.

The discredit and ridicule attaching to these marauders on account of their signal overthrow when they had scarcely crossed the frontier must cripple, if not utterly destroy, the means of re-organizing expeditions as wicked and unjustifiable in their conception as they have proved to be feeble and unsuccessful in their execution. The genuine admiration of the spirit and behaviour of the Canadian levies which pervades the reports of Colonel Smith and Colonel Bagot is the best evidence that their easy success is not so much due to the character of their opponents as to the intrinsic qualities of the Canadians, the promptitude, courage, and intelligence which make individuals distinguished and a nation great.

The Right Honourable Sir John Young, Bart.
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.,

COPY of a DESPATCH from Governor General the Right Honourable Sir John Young, Bart., G.C.B., to The Earl Granville, K.G.

Ottawa, Canada, 30 May 1869.

(Received, 14 June 1869.)

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to enclose, for your Lordship's information, an approved Minute of the Privy Council, relative to the measures adopted by the Canadian Government to provide temporary investment for the money raised under Imperial guarantee for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway.

I have, &c.

No. 1.
Governor General
Sir John Young,
Bart., G.C.B., to Earl Granville, K.G.
30 May 1869.

Enclosure in No. 1.

COPY of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council of Canada, approved by His Excellency the Governor General on the 29th May 1869.

Encl. in No. 1.

THE Committee have had under consideration the annexed Memorandum from the Honourable the Minister of Finance, having reference to the measures adopted by the Canadian Government to provide temporary investment for the money raised under the Imperial guarantee for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, until it should be required for actual outlay, and they respectfully report their entire concurrence in the statements made and the views expressed in the said Memorandum; and advise that a copy thereof be transmitted by your Excellency to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the information of Her Majesty's Government.

Certified,
W. A. Hinsworth,
Assistant Clerk, Privy Council.

Sub-Enclosure in No. 1.

THE Minister of Finance has had his attention called to an inquiry in the House of Commons, whether the Governor General has approved of a "Recommendation of Council, that money raised under the Imperial guarantee, for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, should be applied to the payment of the general debts of the Canadian Dominion, and whether such application is not in contravention of the Canadian Railway Loan Act, 1867;" and he thinks it proper to call your Excellency's attention to the circumstance in order that the imputation which is impliedly made on the good faith of the Government may be promptly repelled.

Sub-Encl. in No. 1.

1. The Act of Union provided that "it shall be the duty of the Government and Parliament of Canada, to provide for the commencement, within six months after the Union, of a railway connecting the River St. Lawrence with the city of Halifax, in Nova Scotia, and for the construction thereof without intermission, and the completion thereof with all practicable speed."

The Government felt it to be their duty to carry out this provision of the constitution with all possible diligence. A great portion of the route had been so far surveyed in former years that it was believed it could be placed under contract in the course of last summer or autumn.

2. It was, however, necessary, before doing this, to place the loan; and the Finance Minister, in the course of his negotiations with the Imperial Government in July 1868, intimated that he would only raise one-half the authorised amount until the progress of the works made it necessary to provide the remainder.

3. In the course of negotiations with the financial agents, Messrs. Baring and Glyn, the Finance Minister endeavoured to postpone the payments on the loan to as remote a day as possible; but it was thought that it would militate against the success of the operation if the last instalments were deferred beyond April 1869, or if the privilege of paying by anticipation were not accorded to the subscribers.

4. When the loan was contracted for, a considerable number of the subscribers availed themselves of this option, and a large amount of money was paid in by anticipation.

As interest on the entire loan of two millions (three-fourths bearing four per cent., and one-fourth bearing five per cent.) began in July 1868, and was payable by Canada from that day, it became the obvious duty of the Government so to place the money received as that an undue loss of interest might be avoided.

5. The Minister of Finance accordingly requested Messrs. Baring and Glyn, the financial agents, to endeavour to do so at the best rates they could, "compatible with perfect security and immediate convertibility;" but these gentlemen informed the Government that in the present state of the money market, and consistently with these conditions, they could not obtain a higher rate of interest than one per cent. per annum.

Had they been able to have placed the deposits at any reasonable rate, the Government would have been relieved from the necessity of seeking other means of temporarily employing the instalments.

6. Under the circumstances mentioned, the Government had, however, to consider what other means, on the like conditions of immediate convertibility and perfect security, were open to them as a temporary investment.

7. The Government of Canada was, at that time, about issuing securities to provide for certain engagements of the Dominion which it was desirable to fund or otherwise meet; and it was considered that no better or more perfect security than those adverted to could be provided in which to place a portion of the moneys, lying comparatively unproductive, until these moneys were required to be disbursed to the contractors on the works.

8. The Government had not ceased to urge the completion of the surveys with all possible speed, and they endeavoured to push on the letting of the works as rapidly as possible. All the sections, on which the location surveys were sufficiently advanced, were accordingly let last winter by public tender. They are seven in number, 162 miles in length, and the cost is estimated at 5,000,000 dollars. On these sections operations are being actively prosecuted, and the contractors are entitled to payment as the works proceed.

9. The engineers have been continually engaged in locating the remaining sections, and these will be placed under contract as rapidly as possible. On one portion of the route a railway had been already built by a private company, about 36 miles in length. The propriety of acquiring this line, and making it a portion of the Intercolonial, was always contemplated as a possibility, and if the negotiations having that object in view, which began some time ago, are concluded, it will involve an immediate large cash outlay, in addition to the payment of the current works, out of the Intercolonial Fund.

10. It will thus be seen that the most energetic steps were taken from the outset to accelerate the progress of the works, and that the Government are not open to the suspicion of having deferred their prosecution for one hour, but that on the contrary they have endeavoured to carry out, with the utmost promptitude and good faith, the obligations entailed upon them by the Act of Union, with reference to the Intercolonial Railway.

11. It may be asked why the loan could not have been postponed for some months, or a less amount issued, inasmuch as it now appears that the whole of the money will not be spent for some time? To this inquiry there are obvious and conclusive answers. The Government could enter into no contracts, nor negotiate for the acquisition of any intermediate portion of the line, until they saw that the money was available. A considerable sum had actually been spent on surveys, &c. &c., by anticipation. The money market was then unusually favourable, and it might have been a most serious matter, in a pecuniary point of view, to the Dominion, if the loan had been deferred until a condition of things arose which might have entailed on Canada the payment for 35 years of a higher rate of interest. The financial agents of the Government considered the time unusually opportune. Her Majesty's Government were in full possession of all the circumstances, and gave their unqualified

unqualified consent to the operation on the terms and to the extent to which it was carried out.

12. The Government of Canada had therefore, under these circumstances, to deal with the alternative, of allowing the large deposits to remain unproductive and entail a loss of about 350,000 dollars a year; or of placing them temporarily, and in a way that would be available as the money was required for actual outlay.

It was not unnaturally to be supposed, that if the Imperial Government had sufficient confidence in Canada, to guarantee or endorse her bonds, that confidence also extended to trusting her with the outlay of the money on the work for which it had been raised; a work which was declared to be essential to the consolidation of the Union of British North America, and a condition of the assent thereto, of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; and one to the completion of which the good faith and interest of every Province of the Dominion were pledged.

If the Imperial Government had conveyed the intimation that Canada could not be entrusted with the money for the prosecution of its own works, or had sought to impose restrictions on its outlay, which would necessarily have presupposed that distrust, the Finance Minister believes it would have been the unanimous opinion of the people of Canada, that the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government to the loan, however highly they might have prized the granting of it, and however advantageous it might have been, ought not to have been accepted on such a condition.

13. The meaning of the inquiry made in the House of Commons plainly is, that, under the pressure of financial necessity, Canada used the Intercolonial money; if indeed the inquiry be not meant to convey the imputation that Canada raised the loan prematurely with that object. The Minister of Finance believes it to be his duty to repel an insinuation which would be alike unworthy of the Government, as it would be utterly opposed to the character for good faith and straightforward integrity which the people of every Province of the Dominion have justly earned, and for the maintenance of which they have ever held the representatives in whom they place confidence to a strict observance.

14. It is only necessary to advert to the financial condition of Canada at the time, to prove how irreconcilable with the actual facts such a supposition is.

It is true that there was a certain amount of floating liability due by the Dominion, but only to its fiscal agents in London; its bankers in Canada, and a small amount to one of the Provinces of the Dominion.

This liability, so far from being pressing, was one which the public creditor would have too gladly allowed to remain, but the Government thought it proper to make provision for its gradual funding, partly out of deposits in the Government savings banks; partly out of deposits required from insurance companies, under the law, and by other equally certain means. Had they been disposed to place a loan for the purpose on the market, it could have been successfully accomplished without any difficulty; for the only loan issued since the Union (except the Intercolonial) was promptly taken up in Canada; the six per cent. stock being now readily saleable and in continued demand at a premium of eight to nine per cent.; and the Government has been compelled to decline repeated applications for further issues.

A certain amount of bonded debt also fell due last autumn, for which ample provision had been made, but the great bulk of the holders expressed in advance their wish either to renew it or convert it into the Dominion Stock already mentioned; an offer which the Government thought it proper in the public interest to decline.

15. It is unnecessary to say more to prove how unfounded any imputation is that the motive of financial necessity had any part whatever in inducing the arrangements with reference to the temporary investment of the Intercolonial money, or to show that the Government was influenced solely by the one single consideration of finding a temporary investment for it, on the condition of perfect security and immediate convertibility, by which a heavy loss of interest might be avoided.

In carrying this out, the Government took unwonted and exceptional precautions in order that by no possibility whatever might there be any doubt that the money borrowed would be as safe and as immediately available as it would have been were it deposited at call in the Bank of England.

16. Some of these precautions are indicated in general terms in the Order in Council, approved of by his Excellency the Governor General in August last, a copy of which, with the accompanying report of the Minister of Finance, it is presumed, was transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies by his Excellency.

The Minister of Finance is not aware that any exception has ever been taken to the arrangements so made.

17. It is proper briefly to recapitulate the means immediately and prospectively available to the Government of Canada for the purposes above mentioned.

a. The Government have a cash balance in the hands of their bankers of upwards of 2,750,000 dollars, a portion of which they are now endeavouring, though so far unsuccessfully, to place on special deposit at interest.

b. They have a further special deposit with their bankers, at 4 per cent. interest, of 1,500,000 dollars.

244.

c. They

PAPERS RELATING TO THE

c. They have in the hands of Messrs. Baring and Glyn an amount estimated by the last advices at 2,900,000 dollars.

d. They have India Bonds in the hands of Messrs. Baring and Glyn worth about 750,000 dollars.

e. They have preferential securities, of undoubted value, payable in 1, 2, 3 and 4 years from January last, with interest, of the Great Western Railway Company of Canada, amounting to 2,750,000 dollars.

f. They have receipts from the Post Office Savings Bank, which since their establishment have averaged about 50,000 dollars per month, and which in the course of the next year are estimated (beyond the cash in hand) at 600,000 dollars.

g. They have deposits by insurance companies of consols, stocks, and bonds, about to be converted into cash within two years, of 1,500,000 dollars.

h. They have purchased bonds, in anticipation of the requirements of the Intercolonial Sinking Fund, to about 270,000 dollars.

i. They have provided, over and above the foregoing means, special credits with the bankers and financial agents of the Government for the express purpose of meeting any possible call on Intercolonial account, to wit, with Messrs. Baring and Glyn, 1,250,000 dollars.

The Bank of Montreal, 2,500,000 dollars.

18. It will thus be seen that the statement of having applied the money raised under the Canada Loan Act, 1867, in payment of the general debts of the Dominion in contravention of that Act, is without a shadow of foundation.

The credit of the Dominion of Canada stands too well to render the recourse to any indirect or unworthy means for the payment of her debts necessary, and she prizes her reputation for good faith too highly to resort to them. Canada has but to offer her own securities to her own people, or on the London money market, as she may think most for her advantage, to find whatever means are needed for the maintenance of the public credit, or for the prosecution of enterprises which her people think can be prudently and advantageously undertaken. And while her obligation to complete the Intercolonial Railway will be fulfilled to the letter, she claims the right of making such subsidiary arrangements, whether in regard to the loan or the works themselves, as her own interests may require.

19. Her Majesty's Government has hitherto extended a most generous confidence to Canada in connection with all the antecedent negotiations on this subject, and she has no reason to believe that in future that confidence will be abridged. This feeling induced the Minister of Finance to recommend to his Excellency the propriety of making the extraordinary and unwonted provisions already referred to; provisions which under ordinary circumstances need nor have been made, and it now impels him to submit these observations for your Excellency's consideration, in order that Her Majesty's Government may have the means of justifying the confidence which in this matter as in all others they have invariably reposed in the good faith of the inhabitants of British North America.

It is the duty of Canada to see that the amount of the loan is faithfully expended on a work in which Her Majesty's Government and the Dominion have confessedly a common interest. Of that duty Canada is fully sensible, and it will be performed with the most exact integrity.

John Rose, Minister of Finance.

Enclosure in No. 2.

COPY of a MINUTE of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, adopted 18 June 1869.

Encl. in No. 2.

May it please Your Excellency,

THE Privy Council have had under consideration the Despatch of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, under date of the 1st June, on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, which was referred to them by your Excellency, and have now the honour to report as follows:—

The Secretary of State wishes to learn from your Excellency to what extent the Loan has been employed under the authority of the Minute of Council of the 27th August last, and conveys his instructions to refuse concurrence in any mode of dealing with the money other than that of investments, properly so called; and he desires to receive from the Minister of Finance any observations respecting the Minute in question which he may consider calculated to remove the strong objections which in the opinion of the Secretary of State at first sight attach to it.

Your Excellency's Advisers, while they will most readily afford the amplest information on the subject of the Loan, and respecting the manner in which it has been dealt with, would desire at the outset to say that they are all equally responsible with the Minister of Finance for the arrangements, as well touching the Loan as for the subsequent employment of any part of the moneys; that they participated in recommending to your Excellency's predecessor the course which was taken with reference to it, and they cannot recognise the principle of permitting one of your Advisers to be charged with a special measure of responsibility, or to be individually called on to account for acts which they collectively approved.

On the subject of the alleged temporary application of the money to the purpose of defraying the general debts of the Dominion, your Excellency's Advisers would say that the facts are so fully set forth in the Minute of Council approved of by your Excellency on the 29th May last, that it would be superfluous to repeat them here. They cannot but believe that the explanations given in that Minute will be satisfactory to Her Majesty's Government, and that the Despatch now under review was written without a full cognizance of all the circumstances connected with the proposed possible temporary investment of a portion of the money.

It may not be unadvisable, however, again to call attention to the fact, that the Intercolonial Loan Act provided that Canada, and not the Imperial Government, should raise the Loan; that the duty of determining the mode in which the road should be constructed devolved wholly on Canada; that she has accordingly provided, with the sanction of the Imperial Government, that the work shall be done by a Commission appointed by Canada, and responsible only to the Government and Parliament of Canada.

It is further required that Canada shall provide for the raising, appropriation, and expenditure of the money; and by the Act of the Canadian Parliament, it is provided that payment for the works shall be made by the Receiver General to the Commissioners, in such way as the Governor in Council may direct.

The only reservations which Her Majesty's Government would appear to have considered it necessary to make in the Intercolonial Railway Act, were, that the interest on the guaranteed portion of the Loan should be a charge on the Consolidated Revenue of Canada in a specified order; that provision should be made for a sinking fund, which might be invested in securities either of the Province of Canada, Nova Scotia, or New Brunswick, issued before the Union.

The whole scope of the legislation, as well of the Imperial as of the Dominion Parliament, shows that it was intended to impose on Canada the entire responsibility of raising and managing the Loan for constructing the road. In this essential feature it is in direct variance with the former guaranteed Loan of 1842, which was raised not by Canada but by the Imperial Government itself, and managed by it; whereas in the present case, the Imperial Parliament would appear to have purposely dissociated Her Majesty's Government from all connection either with the work itself, the raising of the loan, or the management of the fund. So implicit indeed would the confidence in Canada appear to have been, that it was provided that the sinking fund might be invested in the securities of the Dominion, thus practically accepting the credit of Canada as the sole security, not only for the construction of the work, but for the ultimate repayment of the money.

The negotiations attending the Loan in July last were conducted obviously in the spirit of this legislation. Her Majesty's Government wished only to reserve their approval of the route before endorsing the bonds.

It was thought proper, however, that the proposed terms of the Loan should, in the minutest particulars, be communicated to Her Majesty's Government, exhibiting the amount proposed to be raised, the mode and time of paying the instalments, and even the form of bonds to be issued. It was at that time perfectly apparent that the moiety of the Loan which was then raised would not all be required for a considerable interval of time, inasmuch as the sanction of Her Majesty's Government had only then been given to the route; until which sanction no contracts could be entered into, or outlay incurred.

The Privy Council would invite attention to the fact that although every detail was in possession of Her Majesty's Government, no objection whatever was made to the terms so proposed;

proposed; it was not suggested that the Loan was premature or needlessly large, nor did they on any occasion express any wish whatever to participate in controlling or managing the appropriation of the moneys in the interval. That duty had beyond all question been delegated to Canada alone.

If Her Majesty's Government had evinced a confidence in Canada more limited than Parliament had reposed, or, by seeking to interpose a joint control, had exhibited a distrust either of the credit of Canada or of its good faith in expending the money on the works as rapidly as they could be pushed forward, the duty of your Excellency's advisers would have been plain; they could not have accepted the guarantee on these terms.

But no such distrust was ever suggested, nor the faintest wish expressed on the part of Her Majesty's Government, to direct the temporary administration of the money.

If any suggestions in the spirit of extending co-operation or advice, as to providing temporary employment for the instalments had been made on the part of Her Majesty's Government, they would then, as now, have received fitting appreciation.

The Privy Council cannot but regret that after arrangements conducted in this spirit have been completed, and after the entire responsibility of managing the funds has been thrown on Canada, your Excellency should now, for the first time, be called upon to interpose your authority for the purpose of refusing your concurrence in the mode of dealing with the money, which the Canadian Government have deemed it expedient to adopt.

Your Excellency's advisers have throughout these negotiations been perfectly unreserved with her Majesty's Government, and have, besides, taken the promptest and most energetic steps to further the prosecution of the work.

It is unnecessary to repeat the circumstances attending the contemplated temporary investment of a portion of the money, or the extreme precautions which the Minister of Finance took to provide for its immediate return, in case it was deemed advantageous to invest any portion of it in the securities of the Dominion.

These precautions were dictated by a desire to provide for contingencies, which, though within the range of possibility, were not reasonably to be anticipated, and to guard against any possible loss to Canada, in replacing the money, should circumstances make it more for her interest to use for a time a portion of the receipts of the Intercolonial Loan, lying unproductive and idle, rather than have recourse to the other means which were always available, and which Canada has always at command to meet any temporary drafts on the Treasury.

In compliance with your Excellency's wishes, the Privy Council have caused a statement to be made showing the extent to which that portion of the Intercolonial Loan guaranteed by Her Majesty's Government may be considered to have been drawn on.

It is proper to state that all the receipts from Loans and from other sources, go into the ordinary cash balances in the hands of the bankers and fiscal agents of the Dominion, out of which all calls are met, and it cannot therefore be said, in strictness, that any portion of such balances has been specifically used for one purpose or another.

In former statements it has been assumed that the Intercolonial money would be available for the payment of a certain part of the debt since redeemed without reducing the ordinary bank balances at all. In the statement now transmitted to your Excellency, the Intercolonial payments are included in the bank balances, and these balances are regarded as available for the Intercolonial Fund so guaranteed.

Keeping this explanation in view, it will be perceived, that after deducting the expenditure on the road since Confederation, the India Bonds and other investments, and the cash balances, at no time since the Loan was contracted has the amount raised on the Imperial guarantee been really drawn upon; and it was only during the first few weeks, when the proceeds of the Loan, as paid in to the fiscal agents more than covered the amount by which they were in advance to Canada, and before the instructions for other investments could be carried out, that this has even apparently been the case.

If, as formerly stated, certain redemptions of the Public Debt were considered as being made out of a portion of the Intercolonial payments, the Bank balances became correspondingly larger than if these redemptions had been met out of ordinary funds. But if a close examination is made into the state of the banking accounts, the very important fact is disclosed that the ordinary Bank balances, wholly irrespective of that portion of the Intercolonial money raised on the Imperial guarantee, have at every date (except during a portion of the quarter ending 30th September 1868, when there was a small difference of 339,000 dollars, or 69,657 l. sterling) been more than adequate to meet the redemptions and all other payments whatever, without using one shilling of the guaranteed Intercolonial money. In other words, the Government have always, except at that one date, and by that limited sum, had at call in their banker's hands more than the amount of the loan raised on the Imperial guarantee; and it may be literally said that, except as to the sum of 69,657 l. sterling, no part of the guaranteed loan has ever been used. That sum was almost immediately replaced by further incomings of ordinary revenue.

It is true that, in this view, the possession of the Intercolonial money permitted the Government to allow their bank balances to run lower than they would otherwise have done, but it is equally true that the bank credits at the disposal of the Government were more than ample to have met any possible demand without relying on the Intercolonial money even as an available reserve.

The annexed Statement (No. 3), prepared by the Auditor, the Deputy Inspector General, and the Deputy Receiver General, shows that in the quarter ending 30th September 1868, the

the payments on the guaranteed Intercolonial Loan, after deducting a portion only of the expenditure on the work, amounted to - - - - - $2,927,773
 while the funds on hand were - - - - - 2,588,058
 In the quarter ended 31st December 1868, the payments had amounted to - - - - - 5,468,523
 while the funds on hand and invested, were - - - - - 5,497,688
 In the quarter ending 31st March 1869, the payments had amounted to - - - - - 6,488,165
 while the funds on hand were - - - - - 6,972,881
 And up to the 16th June instant, the payments have been - - - 7,363,654
 while the funds on hand were - - - - - 9,632,055
 whereof 2,000,000 dollars will be required for the payment of interest at an early day.

From this official statement it is therefore manifest, and your Excellency's Advisers deem it their duty to re-affirm, that the possible measures contemplated in the Minute of August last, were prompted not with the object of providing for any temporary necessities of Canada, but solely as a means of avoiding the loss of interest which would otherwise have arisen. Ample arrangements had been made previous to floating the Loan for meeting the accruing engagements of Canada. These arrangements were actually countermanded, the maturity of other loans was anticipated, and payments made in advance, when the possible expediency of finding employment for a portion of the Intercolonial instalments forced itself upon the consideration of the Canadian Government.

As to the means provided for making such portion of the Loan as might have been or may be used, instantly available, it is perhaps even less necessary again to enumerate them in view of the facts disclosed in the reports of the Auditor General and the Deputy Receiver General.

The work of the Intercolonial Railway is admitted to be one for the benefit of the empire at large, as well as of Canada, and it is certain that for many years it will be a heavy charge on the Canadian Treasury.

The Government of Canada believe they would have been greatly wanting in their duty had they not sought to avail themselves of every proper means of making the burden, in the way of interest, as light to the Dominion as possible during the progress of construction, especially at the present moment, when the consolidation of British interests in North America by the union of new provinces and the acquisition and government of new territories create an exceptional strain on the resources of the country. Had they wantonly allowed the money to remain unemployed without making an effort to invest it temporarily on the conditions of perfect security and instant convertibility, or declined to consider it as an available reserve, they believe they would have exposed themselves to the just censure of the Parliament, to which alone they are responsible for the management and prosecution of the work, and to which they must look for the means of meeting the Loan; and they cannot believe that it either was, or is the deliberate wish of the Imperial Government to have subjected them to any such loss.

As the matter now stands, it has been shown above that the Government has at all times had available cash to the full extent of the uninvested portion of the proceeds of the Loan; but a very considerable reserve must always be kept in the hands of the bankers in Canada, and agents in London; and if instead of placing all the moneys received in one account, a separate account had been kept of the proceeds of the Intercolonial Loan, the effect would have been, that, to this extent, the Dominion would have been paying the agents five per cent. on their advances, whilst they were allowing one per cent. on the special deposit. There would have been a similar loss of interest with the bankers in Canada; a loss which the Government did not feel itself justified in incurring for the sake of a nominal separation of the accounts.

No other investment is either so available at a like rate of interest as the securities of Canada, nor is there any in which the Government of Canada felt it could with such entire confidence place a portion of the surplus funds at its disposal. For every farthing not otherwise invested, Exchequer Bills were delivered to the Receiver General, and held by him specially for the Intercolonial Fund under an Order of Council. The Exchequer Bills were held in case the other means provided should by any possibility be inadequate, over and above the cash balances in the hands of our bankers and fiscal agents, which were always available to the full extent of the Loan. They are receivable in payment of duties of customs and excise, amounting to about 12,000,000 dollars per annum, and it is, therefore, beyond all question that the amount would be forthcoming, even from that source alone, to meet any sums needed to replace the Intercolonial Loan. In truth, the entire revenues of the Dominion were pledged by anticipation to meet any part of the Intercolonial Loan which might be temporarily used.

Your Excellency's Advisers think they may not unreasonably suggest whether the solicitude evinced by Her Majesty's Government respecting the custody of the money may not have its origin in the extreme precautions taken by the Canadian Government, and in the arrangements they made to provide for a much larger amount of that Loan than it has been in their power to invest, with a due regard to the conditions of perfect security and immediate convertibility.

They now challenge the fullest investigation into the sufficiency of the provision they have made for the instant availability of the moneys to the Treasury, for the purpose of being expended on the works.

While your Excellency's Advisers thus assert the right, and believe it to have been their unquestionable unquestionable duty to have dealt with the funds in the manner they have done, and to a much greater extent than it has been practicable for them to do, they would be unwilling that any issue of an unsatisfactory nature should arise between them and Her Majesty's Government.

If the right of controlling the funds had been asserted by Her Majesty's Government before the Loan was issued, your Excellency's Advisers have already indicated what their duty would have been; but now that the securities have been actually issued, and that obligations of good faith on the part of both Governments as to this instalment of the Loan make the issue irrevocable, and when the amount cannot be returned to the public, grave difficulties arise, and they will await the judgment of Her Majesty's Government on the facts now communicated to them, before submitting any recommendation to your Excellency on the subject.

Meanwhile they cannot, with a proper regard to the responsibilities of their position, recede from the assertion of what they believe to be their undoubted right and bounden duty, of continuing to control and manage the Loan to the exclusion of all other authority, however much they may regret that the necessity of making such an assertion is now for the time forced upon them.

In conclusion, your Excellency's Advisers feel that it is no light thing at the outset of the new career on which Canada is entering, that any suspicion should attach to its reputation for financial integrity and upright dealing; and they cannot but express their deep regret, that in a matter which in their judgment admits of no possible question, and of which they believe neither the right nor propriety is open to controversy, expressions should have been publicly used, having a tendency to throw doubt on the scrupulous exactitude of the Government in its financial dealings.

They do not doubt that, on due consideration, Her Majesty's Government will frankly recognise that Canada has the undoubted right to control and manage the fund in question; that considerations of what is due to her own honour, and the trust under which that fund was received, must alone guide her; that no arrangements have been made or proposed with reference to it, which are open even to criticism; and that the opinions expressed and instructions given to your Excellency under a misconception of the facts will be recalled.

Clerk of Privy Council.

STATEMENT, No. 1—Of the Intercolonial Railway Account.

THE proceeds of the International Loan went into the General Cash Balances in the hands of the financial agents in London and in Canada; but by Order in Council a special account was to be kept, without distinguishing the proceeds of the 1,500,000*l.* of the Guaranteed Loan from the 500,000*l.* raised for the same purpose on the sole security of Canada. The account was to be credited with the proceeds of the loan as received, and debited with the charges incidental to the negotiation, and with the expenditure on the works. Certain securities were to be held as an investment, and certain special receipts, apart from ordinary revenue, viz., the deposits in Government Savings Banks, the deposits under the law by Insurance Companies, and the repayments of the original loan to the Great Western Railway Company, were to be further invested as they came in. Any balance of the special account not covered by such investments was to be invested in Exchequer Bills, bearing five per cent. interest, and receivable for all public dues. A statement is made out monthly of the account, including interest accrued, and the investment in Exchequer Bills is revised monthly, either by the cancelling of those already issued, or by a further issue, as the state of the account may require.

The Intercolonial Loan Account and the corresponding investment stood as follows on 1st June 1869, since which date instructions have been sent to the financial agents in London to purchase a further amount of 50,000*l.* of Canadian securities; and a further investment of 500,000 dollars has been made by special deposit in the Bank of Montreal at four per cent. On the 1st July the Exchequer Bills will be reduced by a similar amount.

and his colleagues unite in offering as the explanation of the course they have pursued.

In compliance with your Lordship's wish to learn from me to what extent, and in what way, the loan has been employed under the Minute of the 27th of August, I can only say that the statements, 1 and 2, appended to the Minute of the 18th instant, are derived from distinct and independent sources, and seem to furnish the required information.

Statement No. 1 shows in what way the total (guaranteed and unguaranteed) Intercolonial Loan has been invested; and it will be seen that in addition to the special securities set apart by the Order in Council of August last, Exchequer Bills, amounting to 7,627,900 dollars, are held for account of the total loan.

These Exchequer Bills, of which I enclose a form, being receivable in payment of all public dues, would seem to form a security of as high a character as it is possible to procure, and to be readily convertible into cash, irrespective of any reliance on the Bank Credits.

As to the extent of the application of the guaranteed Loan for the purpose of defraying the general debts of the Dominion, it appears, by Statement 2, that the receipts of the Dominion from other sources (and wholly irrespective of its ordinary revenues) have been sufficient to defray all these debts, without relying on the guaranteed portion of the loan at all (except by about 2,000*l.* sterling); and against this 2,000*l.*, besides the ordinary cash balances in hand, a credit of 250,000*l.* was at any moment available in London, and twice as much more in Montreal.

MINUTE of the Treasury Board of the 11th August 1869, on the INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN, and the MINUTE of the Honourable the Privy Council thereon, of 12th August 1869.

COPY of a MINUTE of the Honourable the Privy Council, adopted in Committee on the 12th August 1869.

THE Committee of Council have given their attentive consideration to the annexed Memorandum, dated 11th August instant, from the Honourable the Board of Treasury to whom was referred the Despatch of the Right Honourable Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, No. 129, dated 8th July 1869, communicating to your Excellency the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown in England, and the views of Her Majesty's Government on the subject of the temporary investment of a portion of the moneys raised under the Imperial Guarantee for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway.

The Committee entirely concur in the opinion expressed by the Treasury Board in their said Memorandum, and advise that a copy of that Memorandum and of the present Report be transmitted by your Excellency to Earl Granville, as embodying the views entertained by the Canadian Government on the important subject to which they refer.

MINUTE of the Treasury Board, adopted 11th August 1869.

May it please your Excellency,

THE Treasury Board have had under consideration the Despatch of Earl Granville of the 8th July 1869, on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, transmitted to the Privy Council by his Excellency the Governor General, and referred to the Board for its consideration and report. The Board have to express their satisfaction at the declaration of his Lordship, that it was not the intention of Her Majesty's Government to call in question the financial integrity and upright dealing of the Dominion of Canada with reference to the employment of those moneys.

His Lordship transmits copies of two opinions of the Law Officers of the Crown which, in his judgment, lead to the conclusion that the Canada Loan Act of the Imperial Parliament, in using the word "appropriate," required that the money should be kept or invested as a distinct fund applicable to the construction of the road, and to no other purpose.

The conclusion arrived at by the Law Officers would appear to be threefold :

1st. That it was not the intention of the Imperial Act that the money should be invested at all, but that it should be set apart or appropriated.

2nd. That the only sort of investment within its provisions would be one, the rate of which does not fluctuate, but which is convertible at any moment without loss.

3rd. That the temporary application of a portion of the loan to the redemption of the debt of Canada (in other words, the acquisition of Canadian securities) may be a useful investment but is not an appropriation of the loan.

The Board have given careful attention to the statements of the law officers, and have, in the first place, to notice that it would appear that their opinions are based solely on the wording of the Imperial Act, and that they make no allusion to the Act of the Canadian Parliament, 31 Vict. c. 13.

The Board would observe that the Imperial Act is silent as to the investment or custody of the moneys to be raised under the guarantee. It provides that the guarantee shall not be given, "unless and until" an Act has been passed by the Parliament of Canada, providing, to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the "raising, appropriation, and expenditure" of the loan.

A Canadian Act was passed making provision for the "raising, appropriation, and expenditure" of the loan, and it "satisfied" the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, as is evidenced by the fact that the guarantee was given.

The terms of the Imperial Act are, therefore, complied with ; that Act is executed ; its force is spent, and it appears to the Board that reference must now be had to the Canadian Act, and the financial system which obtains in Canada for direction as to the proper custody and disposition of the money raised.

Her Majesty's Government having once accepted that Act as sufficient, the Canadian Government is bound by its terms, and it is its duty, temporarily, to administer the money in the same way as other moneys at its disposal, having due regard to its ultimate expenditure on the work.

The Canadian Act contemplated the ordinary action of the constitutional power of Parliament to be from time to time exercised in appropriating the public money under its control. The construction of the railway ; the contracts and payments were left to the control, and are within the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliament, without any other limit limit or restriction on the part of the Imperial Government than the general power of the Crown to disallow its Acts. It is not contended that the Act of the Canadian Parliament has not been complied with by the Government in dealing with the loan, or that the ordinary mode of administering trust moneys by that Government has been departed from.

The Board do not think it necessary, in discussing an objection which is now limited to a point of technical construction, to dwell further on this view, which appears to them so well founded, that the measure of discretion which the Government may exercise in the management of the fund, is to be looked for in the terms of the Canadian, and not of the Imperial Act of Parliament.

The Board deem it respectful, however, briefly to advert, seriatim, to the three points they have noted as embraced in the opinions which accompanied Earl Granville's Despatch.

First. That there should be an appropriation in specie kept distinct and apart.

If this view is the true one it would appear to be equally objectionable to place the money for safe keeping into the hands of the agents of the Government, or to deposit it in any bank whatever. It would merge, in either case, into the general mass of deposits; would not be "set aside" or "kept apart," but would be invested by them, on their discretion and responsibility, with other moneys in their hands. The merging of the loan by the Government with the other moneys in its hands, cannot surely be more objectionable than the merging of it with the ordinary money of any bank into which it might be placed. The only mode of complying literally with the Act, as sought to be construed by the law officers, would appear to be to place away the identical money received from the lenders in packages, to keep these physically separate during the entire period of construction, and to pay away the same money to the persons employed in the prosecution of the work. Anything less would fail to carry out, literally, the view of the law officers as to the complete setting aside and separation of the loan from other moneys, which is, in their opinion, implied by the word appropriate.

It can hardly be supposed, however, that the Imperial Parliament had any such operation in view. If it had not, then the keeping of distinct accounts, and the expenditure, with due promptitude of an equal amount to that raised, on the road, would seem to be a satisfactory and rational compliance with the provisions of the Act.

The public revenue is the produce of loans and taxes, and is not distinguishable in respect of its origin. That revenue or fund has been increased by the amount of the railway loan; the construction of the work is being proceeded with. Parliament has authorised the "payment" of the requisite amount out of that general fund to meet the outlay.

The Board cannot regard the appropriation by Parliament as a direction to deal with it in specie, but only as an authority to the proper officer to pay out of the general fund for the specific object for which the appropriation is made.

Second.—But the Law Officers would appear to admit that there may be some sort of an investment into which the loan could properly be placed, viz., one "the rate of which does not fluctuate, and which is convertible at any moment without loss."

If this be granted, it is a sufficient answer to say that the Board consider the securities which have been set apart as of that character.

If, in the realisation of these securities, there would be any loss, that loss would not fall on the Intercolonial Fund, but on the general revenue of Canada.

It would seem as if the Law Officers of the Crown considered that any loss in the value of the securities would be charged to the Intercolonial Fund, and diminish it by so much; and that the Government of Canada was not under the obligation of making the loss good.

The Board cannot take so restricted a view of the responsibility of the Canadian Government.

On the contrary, they believe that the duty of managing the fund devolved on them, and that it carries with it the corresponding obligation of making it good against loss and disaster of every kind, and of expending the total sum raised on the work, no matter what intermediate diminution from failures, depreciation or other losses, may take place.

The Canadian Government know that the securities set apart are convertible at any moment before the money is required, with certainly no loss whatever to the fund, and probably no loss even to the Government.

Third.—The Law Officers consider that the temporary application of the loan to the reduction of the debt of Canada is not an appropriation of the money.

The Board cannot but take exception to the form in which the operation is made to appear by the expression which the Law Officers, in their first opinion, made use of, viz., "paying off with the Railway Loan Canadian Provincial debts," inasmuch as there was really an investment in the Exchequer Bills of the Dominion of the Intercolonial money to the extent to which it was applied in reduction of debt. For the payment of these Exchequer Bills the whole revenues of the Dominion are pledged by anticipation.

The Law Officers admit that the money may be invested in some form, and that there may be a class of investment within the provisions of the Imperial Act. They add, that the securities of the Government of Canada may be a useful investment of the money raised, but do not seem to be an appropriation of it.

If it be admitted that the loan may lawfully be invested at all, and that securities, which are immediately convertible and not of a fluctuating nature, would be an investment within the provisions of the Act, the only other question would seem to be, who is to judge whether

whether those conditions have been satisfied. Her Majesty's Government, or the Government of the Dominion, on whom the responsibility of making good any losses that may arise, rests?

The Board fail to see why, if an investment in securities of the character described by the Law Officers would be within the provisions of the Imperial Act, an investment in the securities of Canada, which, in the opinion of its Government fulfil, and which it has never been alleged do not fulfil, the conditions which the Law Officers lay down, should not be equally within its provisions.

Earl Granville, in the conclusion of his Despatch, expresses the hope, that the Canadian Government, even if they do not concur in the views he has been led to entertain, will acquiesce in the propriety of avoiding all occasion of cavil, by placing the money in the shape of a distinct fund applicable in its entirety, and at any moment, to the object for which it is destined.

The Treasury Board, while sensible of the courteous terms in which his Lordship expresses this hope, and in which he declares his full conviction in the power of the Canadian Government to replace at any time the sums which have been employed by it, believe that Her Majesty's Government would not desire to suggest the adoption of any course which, on due consideration, might be shown to involve an abnegation, on the part of the Canadian Government, of their constitutional responsibility, or which would inflict unnecessarily a heavy loss on the Canadian Exchequer.

The Board fail to see, after the fullest consideration of all the arguments that have been used, that, in dealing with the money, Canada has exceeded its constitutional right, or that the Government have done anything which was not their bounden duty; and they equally fail to see that there has been any technical departure from the wording of the law. The case has been put as if a permanent application of a portion of the loan to another purpose had taken place, or been contemplated, instead of, as is the fact, that Canada wished to procure some temporary return for moneys which she could not at the time, by any possibility, employ for the purposes of the work; and which, if not placed on security, would have been unproductive, and thereby have subjected her people to serious loss. The ability of Canada to replace the amount at any moment is now acknowledged by Her Majesty's Government; the most rapid prosecution of the work practicable is unquestioned, but it is yet asked that the money may not be used in the interval at all; that it may be set aside and kept intact without any regard to the questions of productiveness; that this loss of interest must be incurred, although an opportunity of investing a portion productively has offered, and although the character of the investment is admittedly undoubted!!

If, at the time the loan was contracted, the Government of Canada could have placed the amount with their bankers at a reasonable rate of interest, they would undoubtedly have done so, and made other arrangements respecting the maturing debt. They were, however, compelled to avail themselves of the only safe investment which offered, their own bonds, which they were about issuing, and they desire to call Lord Granville's attention to the fact that they did, by Order in Council, at that time create a distinct fund for the loan, and set the securities in which that fund was invested aside, to be applied when realised to the object for which the loan was destined. As those securities mature, or can be advantageously placed, the cash will, in like manner, be set aside as a distinct fund.

While ready to give every consideration to any suggestion on the part of Her Majesty's Government, the adoption of which may not be at variance with the duty which the Government of Canada believe is imposed upon them of managing this fund, subject only to their constitutional responsibility towards the Parliament and people of Canada, the Board would desire to call his Lordship's attention to the aspect of the case which is now presented, and to the fact which is shown in the previous Minute of Council, that ever since the money was raised, there has, except during a very brief interval and by a very insignificant amount, been a larger sum on call at their bankers than the total amount of the guaranteed loan. They would also remind his Lordship that the Government have special credits beyond this, amounting to 750,000 £ sterling, which are practically so much money on call with their bankers, available at any moment for the purposes of the work, while securities of the most undoubted character, on which they could obtain further advances or dispose of at any moment, have been set apart to meet the drafts on this loan.

They would further call his attention to Statement Number 1, attached to the Minutes of Council of the 18th of June last, by which it will be seen that a special account is kept in the books of the Canadian Treasury for this loan. The Government have already made full provision to meet the outlay on the work to the extent of the loan, and the amount stands in the books of the Treasury as a separate fund, distinguished from the accounts for all other works. They cannot but believe that these arrangements already made fully carry out the hope expressed by his Lordship that the amount raised should be placed to a distinct fund, available at any moment to the object for which it is destined.

It is unnecessary to say that it has been, and is, the anxious wish of the Canadian Government to fulfil with implicit exactitude, and in the largest sense, both the letter and the spirit of all their undertakings towards Her Majesty's Government, connected with this loan. The Board are therefore unwilling to believe, in view of the fuller explanations now given, that Earl Granville will fail to recognise in the measures which were adopted at the outset for placing this fund beyond the reach of any possible loss, not only a practical evidence evidence of this desire, but a satisfactory compliance with the law. They feel assured that his Lordship will acknowledge it to be their duty to guard the public Exchequer of Canada from unnecessary loss, and that he would not urge any course which the Canadian Government might conceive to conflict, not only with that duty but with the constitutional obligations they owe to Parliament.

My Lord,

With reference to previous correspondence, I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship a copy of a Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, respecting the investment of the Intercolonial Railway money.

Encl. in No. 5.

COPY of a REPORT of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General, on the 2nd of October 1869.

THE Committee have had under consideration the accompanying Report, dated 11th August 1869, from the Honourable the Minister of Finance, submitting certain correspondence had by him with the Bank of Montreal, on the subject of the balances in the hands of that institution, and the disposal to it of, or the advance by it on, the bonds of the Great Western Railway Company, and recommending the same for your Excellency's approval.

The Committee respectfully report their approval of the arrangements made by the Minister of Finance, as stated in the correspondence, and recommend that the bonds of the Great Western Railway Company be delivered to the Bank of Montreal, on their being obtained from that company.

(Certified) Wm. H. Lee,
Clerk, Privy Council.

THE Minister of Finance has the honour to bring under the consideration of his Excellency in Council the correspondence had by him with the Bank of Montreal, on the subject of the balances in the hands of that institution, and the disposal to it of, or the advance by it on, the bonds of the Great Western Railway Company, and to recommend the same for his Excellency's approval.

(signed) John Rose,
Minister of Finance.

Ottawa, 12 August 1869.

Dear Sir,

Ottawa, 5 August 1869.

REFERRING to the conversations we had on the subject of the balances at the credit of the Government with the Bank of Montreal, on which the Government desired to obtain interest, and to the difficulty under which the bank laboured in meeting its wishes, owing to the large amount of unemployed money at its disposal, and to the existing arrangements as to the uncertain dates of withdrawal, I have communicated with my colleagues, and now submit a memorandum of the arrangements which the Government is prepared to make.

You will perceive that we propose to embrace in this plan the payments on account of the Intercolonial Railway from the balances we have in hand, and on account of which loan it is our object to provide some return.

While the Government anticipate that these payments will extend over a considerable period, yet they cannot guarantee that they will do so; but the amount must be considered at the disposal of the Government for the purpose of the work, whenever required; and you will understand that these payments may involve the considerable one at an early day, on account of the purchase of the Eastern Extension Railway, should the Government decide to acquire that work. With respect to the rate of interest to be allowed, which we have more recently discussed, the Government would have been glad if the bank could have seen its way to make it four per cent.; but they have given consideration to the point you mentioned, that the payments on Government account may considerably exceed the amount of matured Great Western Railway Bonds, and thus leave the bank in advance to that extent at a low rate of interest. Having due regard to this possibility, and believing it desirable to make provision, at a certain fixed rate, for having the entire amount of the bonds available as a cash balance for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, they think the rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the whole to be fair, and acquiesce in it accordingly.

You will perceive that the first proposal contemplates the transference from current account of a sum beyond what is now held in special deposit.*

If the arrangement now proposed is carried out, the Government would not contemplate using the credit for 500,000 l., referred to in a previous correspondence.

I am, &c.

Minister of Finance.

E. H. King, Esq.,
Manager, Bank of Montreal, Montreal.

MEMORANDUM.

1st. The bank to renew the amount now at special deposit, and to receive such further amount as may be agreed on by transfer from the ordinary account. The bank, in addition, to place to the credit of the Government the amount of the Great Western Railway Company's bonds at par. These bonds are to be handed over to the bank, and the bank may either purchase them at par, with the guarantee of the Government for their payment at maturity, or may regard the amount as an advance made to the Government for the term of these bonds, the bank continuing to hold the bonds of Canada, now in its possession as a guarantee for the payment at maturity of the Great Western Railway bonds in either case; it being understood that if the bank elects to make an advance, the rate of interest on such advance shall not exceed 4 per cent. per annum.

2nd. These sums to be placed to a special account, to be called Intercolonial Railway Construction Account, and to be drawn on solely for the purpose of the railway, according to the progress of the works; the amounts at the credit of the account to bear $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. interest until the entire sum is exhausted.

3rd. The bank to make arrangements for the payment of such money as may be required at the points on the line of the Intercolonial Railway, which may be indicated by the Commissioners; the bank having the use, free of charge, of the building at Chatham, recently leased by the Government, not to be subject to any other charge than the actual cost to the bank of making such payments.

(signed) John Rose,
Minister of Finance.

Ottawa, 5 August 1869.

Dear Sir,

Montreal, 9 August 1869.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, accompanied by a memorandum of the arrangement which the Government is prepared to make for the purpose of providing for the expenditure upon the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, out of the following sources:—

1st. From the special deposits now held by this bank.

* I should be glad if you would inform me whether you acquiesce in this, or still desire to limit the transfer to the sum held in special deposit?

CANADA RAILWAY LOAN ACT (1867).

17

2nd. From the sale at par, with the guarantee of the Government, of the bonds of the Great Western Railway Company, bearing interest at 4 per cent. per annum to the extent, as I understand, of about 500,000 l. sterling, or a loan for an equal amount for the term of these bonds by the bank to the Government, at a rate of interest not exceeding 4 per cent. per annum; the bank continuing, in either case, to hold the bonds of Canada, now in its possession, until the maturity of the Great Western Railway bonds.

3rd. From a further special deposit derived from the current balances at the credit of the Receiver General.

I am prepared on the part of the bank to meet the wishes of the Government, so far as the first and second sources, from which the amount is to be derived, and in the meantime, make a loan upon the Great Western Railway bonds at par, for the term they have to run.

I do not see, at present, that the bank could make an absolute purchase of these bonds at par; but I shall be glad to retain the option.

With regard to the third source, from which this sum is to be derived, I regret that it is not possible for the bank to meet the wishes of the Government. The bank has been embarrassed for some months past with about four or five millions of dollars of gold, absolutely idle, and for a good portion of which the bank has been paying interest to the Government on special deposits. There is no safe and profitable employment for this large surplus in Canada, combined with the certainty of prompt realisation in case of need; and I may mention that the bank has at this moment under consideration the propriety of making a considerable reduction in the rate of interest upon short advances, covered by railway receipts and bills of lading, with a view of finding temporary employment for its funds. I trust, therefore, that it will be satisfactory to the Government to carry out the proposed arrangements, subject to the above exception.

The balances at the credit of this proposed account will bear interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum.

The Honourable John Rose,
Minister of Finance.

I am, &c.
(signed) E. H. King.

Dear Sir,

Ottawa, 11 August 1869.

In reply to your letter of the 9th instant, I beg to say that, though I regret that you are not prepared to accept a transfer of a further amount from the present large current balances now in deposit with the bank, the Government, after due consideration, is prepared to assent to the modified terms suggested by you in that letter, with this qualification, that we wish to have the option of maintaining and receiving interest on the balances proposed to be placed to the credit of the Intercolonial Railway Fund; in other words, to deposit from time to time to its credit, from our current balances, amounts equal to the expenditure on account of that fund, if the state of those working balances will permit.

As you cannot acquiesce in my proposal to transfer a further amount from the current balances, to the credit of the special account, I beg you will be good enough to remit, on the most favourable terms in your power, and at as early a day as may be, the sum of 100,000 l. sterling to Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., for account of the Government, advising me, in due course, of details.

My Lord,

WITH reference to your Lordship's Despatch of 30th November (No. 216*), acknowledging the receipt of my Despatch, No. 112,† of the 28th October last, enclosing a copy of the Minute of Council, dated the 11th August, on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, and observing that you would have been glad to have received the Minute at an earlier date,—

I have the honour to state, in explanation, that though the Minute bears date as having passed the Council on the 12th August, it did not receive my assent until the 2nd October. The delay occurred in this way: I had left Quebec for the Maritime Provinces before the 12th August, and the Minute did not reach reach me until my arrival in Halifax some weeks later. When it did reach me I was in doubt whether it would prove in exact conformity with your Lordship's instructions, and I held it over, Mr. Rose having left Ottawa, until I could personally confer with the Premier. He was indisposed during the few days I passed in Ottawa between my tour in the Maritime Provinces and that which I had engaged to make in Ontario. So that, after all, my doubts had to be resolved by correspondence, which they accordingly were; and on the 2nd October I returned the Minute, approved, from Niagara, where I was at the time. On my return to Ottawa I transmitted the Minute so soon as I received the authenticated copy from the Clerk of the Privy Council.

The delay was therefore occasioned, in the first instance, by my absence from the seat of Government at so great a distance as Halifax; and secondly, by my anxiety not to give my approval to any disposition of the funds in question until I could be fully assured that it was in conformity with your Lordship's instructions.

WITH reference to your Lordship's telegram of the 18th instant*—

"Early explanation required of statement by Minister of Finance in budget speech, that Law Officers' opinion as to railway loan will not be followed."

I have the honour to enclose a statement furnished to me by Sir Francis Hincks.

From this paper it appears, that of the unexpended balance of the Imperial Guaranteed Loan for the Intercolonial Railway, amounting to 5,733,763 dollars 76 cents., there are lying on deposit in the Bank of Montreal, 4,799,784 dollars.

Paragraph 2 of an instruction to the Montreal Bank, dated 2nd October 1869, a copy of which was sent in my Despatch, No. 117,† 30th October 1869, states, with regard to the first of the above items,

"There seems to be placed to a special account, to be called Intercolonial Railway Construction Account, and to be drawn on solely for the purpose of the railway, according to the progress of the works; the amounts at the credit of the account to bear 3½ per cent. interest until the entire sum is exhausted."

Further, there is in deposit at call in the chartered banks a sum of 1,814,769 dollars 90 cents, more than covering the unexpended balance of the Guaranteed Intercolonial Railway Loan. So that the Intercolonial Railway money is more than covered without referring to the Imperial Guaranteed Bonds (300,000 £. sterling) for the purchase of the Hudson's Bay Territory, which have not yet been negotiated, although the full amount has been deposited.

Sir J. Rose was authorised by the instructions he received from the Canadian Government to offer explanations in England, and negotiate in reference to the matter in hand. A copy of these instructions was duly transmitted to your Lordship in my Despatch, No. 98,* 4th September 1869, and the Ministers here understood, unofficially, of course, from Sir John Rose, that he had offered explanations which were accepted as satisfactory at the Treasury. I was not informed of their having been offered, nor of their result, and considered myself still bound by your Lordship's instructions of 1st June 1869 (No. 97†). No opportunity, however, was afforded for acting upon those instructions, for no paper has come before me, nor a proposition of any kind been submitted in reference to these moneys since I wrote my Despatch of 30th October 1869, No. 117.

Enclosure in No. 8.

IN obedience to your Excellency's instructions that I should enable you to reply to Earl Granville's telegram, requesting an explanation of some remarks made by me in the House of Commons on the 7th inst., in my speech on the Budget, to the effect that the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, as to the disposition of the Intercolonial Railway Loan, had been disregarded, I have the honour to report that, after consulting several newspapers, I find such a discrepancy in the reports, that I think it will be more satisfactory that I should explain substantially what passed on the occasion referred to. Before doing so, I may observe that all the transactions connected with the Intercolonial Railway Loan occurred before I became a Member of the Government. I had ventured to hope that, as no intimation to the contrary had been given to the Canadian Government, the Minute of the Treasury Board of the 11th August 1869, approved by the Privy Council Minute of the 20th of that month, had been deemed satisfactory by Her Majesty's Government; and when the Opposition Members renewed, during the present Session of Parliament, the attack on the policy of the Government regarding the Intercolonial Loan which they had commenced during the previous Session, I considered it my duty to maintain and defend that policy.

Encl. in No. 8.

The subject had not in any way been referred to by me in my speech on the 7th inst., bringing forward the Budget, but at a later hour of the evening the Opposition demanded explanations on the subject of the Intercolonial Loan, and especially as to whether there had been a compliance with the opinions of the Crown Law Officers. To this but one answer could have been given, viz., that it had not been found possible to act in accordance with those opinions, but that, as no reply had been received to the Minute of the Canadian Government pointing out the impracticability of acting in accordance with the opinions of the Crown Law Officers, we had a right to assume that the Imperial Government were satisfied with our explanations, and that we had made no change in our arrangements.

On reference to the Canadian Treasury Minute of the 11th August 1869, to the Despatches of Earl Granville, and to the opinions of the Law Officers, it will, I think, be apparent not only that it would be impossible to give effect to those opinions, but that Earl Granville has not instructed your Excellency to adopt any measures with a view of trying to do so. The Law Officers declare: "We think that it was not the intention of the Imperial Legislature that the money should be invested at all; it was to be appropriated or set aside." Again, "The only sort of investment within the provisions of the Imperial Act would be, we think, an investment (if any such exists or can be conceived), the value of which does not fluctuate, and which is convertible at any moment without loss." The Law Officers were evidently of opinion that no such investment, as in their opinion was alone within the provisions of the Imperial Act, was to be found, or could be conceived; but they failed to give any intimation as to what, in their opinion, would be a legal disposal of the money.

The Treasury Minute has, in my opinion, shown conclusively that it would be quite impossible to act on the opinion of the Law Officers.

But I submit that Earl Granville has not instructed your Excellency to attempt to give effect to that opinion. His Lordship, in his Despatch of 8th July 1869, points out to your Excellency that "the first of those opinions more than bears out the conclusion at which I had arrived," and which was communicated to your Excellency in his Lordship's previous Despatch of the 1st June, which was, "to refuse your concurrence, in any mode, of dealing with the money remaining in the hands of Government, other than that of investment properly so called." In the Despatch of 8th July, his Lordship hoped that the Canadian Government would avoid all occasion of cavil, "by placing the money in the shape of a distinct fund, applicable in its entirety, and at any moment, to the object for which it is destined."

I submit

I submit that there is a very wide difference between the instructions of Earl Granville, and the opinion of the Crown Law Officers. Earl Granville distinctly recognises the propriety of investing the money, provided it can be made applicable at any moment to the object for which it is destined. The Law Officers declare that it was not the intention of the Imperial Legislature that the money should be invested at all, and that no investment would come within the provisions of the Act, unless one which does not fluctuate, and which is convertible at any moment without loss. I do not find, in any of the Despatches, a suggestion as to the kind of investment which, in the opinion of Earl Granville, would meet the requirements of the Act.

It is clear that the securities, which have been always held to be the best in England, and in which trust funds of all kinds are habitually invested, would not satisfy the requirements of the Law Officers; and I submit that the Canadian Government has, from the first, literally complied with the requirements of Earl Granville. There has always been "a distinct fund, applicable in its entirety, and at any moment, to the object for which it is destined."

Earl Granville has never prescribed any particular mode of investment; and I own that I fail to comprehend how the Imperial Government can object to a mere temporary investment in Canadian Securities, when they have sanctioned the investment of the sinking fund in similar securities. I believe that the objection originally taken to the transaction was founded on misconception.

It was assumed that the money had been employed in paying off a debt of the Dominion, and that no special fund had been created.

The real facts were these: the Dominion had a floating debt at the time, which there would not have been the slightest difficulty in funding, but considerable sums were likely to be paid into the Canadian Treasury at a comparatively early period, which rendered it undesirable to issue debentures at a long date. The Canadian Parliament had agreed to issue stock at par to insurance companies, to be held as a special deposit for the security of policy-holders, and it was known that there would be an early demand for such stock. There was likewise a large debt due to the Government by the Great Western Railway Company, which, by agreement, was to be paid off at an early period, and which was in the shape of negotiable bonds.

It was, therefore, deemed more expedient to issue Exchequer Bills, which, being receivable for all debts due to Government, were equivalent to gold, instead of negotiating a loan, payable at a distant period. All these arrangements would have been made without reference to the Intercolonial money. When it became necessary to invest that money temporarily, these Exchequer Bills were considered the most eligible mode of investing the money, and the correctness of Sir John Rose's anticipations has been proved by the fact, that upwards of 4,000,000 dollars of these Exchequer Bills have been already paid off. It is no doubt true, that the money invested in the Exchequer Bills was used for paying off a floating debt of the Dominion, which would otherwise have been paid off with the money which was subsequently used to redeem the Exchequer Bills. In the absence of all information as to what are the views of Her Majesty's Government as to the kind of investment that they consider admissible, I am unable to judge whether Earl Granville would be satisfied with the present position of the Intercolonial account, but I have no doubt that your Excellency would wish me to state exactly how it stands. The proceeds of the Imperial Guaranteed Loan, as stated in the Minute of 18th June 1869, were 7,403,654.76 Dollars.

Expended on works to this date	-	-	-	-	-	1,669,891	„
							5,733,763.76 Dollars.

To meet this there is at interest in the Bank of Montreal, on the condition that it is to be drawn for as required for the Intercolonial Railway

-	-	-	-	-	-	4,799,784 Dollars.
India Bonds in London	-	-	-	-	-	681,333 „
							5,481,117 Dollars.

There is in deposit at call in the chartered banks a sum of $1,814,769.90, and the Imperial Guaranteed Bonds (300,000 l. sterling), for the purchase of the Hudson's Bay Territory, have not yet been negotiated, although the full amount has been deposited. The expenditure on the works will, for some time to come, be met out of the money at the credit of the Government with the chartered banks, not bearing interest. I may observe that a portion of the special deposit in the Bank of Montreal consists of the Great Western Railway bonds, which the bank made an advance on to the full amount. Sir John Rose having been of opinion that it was more desirable to have that sum at call in the bank than in bonds of a railway company.

I trust that the foregoing explanation will supply your Excellency with the information which you require.

COPY of DESPATCH from The Earl Granville, K.G., to Governor the Right Honourable Sir John Young, Bart., G.C.B.

Sir,

Downing-street, 1 June 1869.

THE Treasurer of the Dominion has recently transmitted to this Department a paper presented to the Canadian Parliament, containing, among other documents, a Minute of the Privy Council, approved by the Governor General on the 27th of August last.* It would appear that under that Minute money raised under Imperial guarantee for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway was to be temporarily applied to the purpose of defraying the general debts of the Dominion.

This mode of employing a loan guaranteed by the Parliament of this country for a specific purpose appears to Her Majesty's Government not to be justifiable. I wish, therefore, to learn from you to what extent and in what way the loan has been employed under authority of that Minute, and I have to instruct you to refuse your concurrence in any mode of dealing with the money remaining in the hands of Government other than that of investment properly so called.

I should also wish to receive from Mr. Rose any observations respecting the Minute of 27th August which he may consider calculated to remove the strong objections which at first sight attach to it.

I have, &c.

COPY of DESPATCH from The Earl Granville, K.G., to Governor the Right Honourable Sir John Young, Bart., G.C.B.

Sir,

Downing-street, 8 July 1869.

I HAVE to acknowledge your Despatch, No. 67,† of 20th June, transmitting a Minute adopted by the Privy Council of Canada in relation to my Despatch, No. 97,‡ of 1st June, relating to the disposal of moneys raised under Imperial Guarantee for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway.

I desire, first, to explain that in requesting you to submit this question to Mr. Rose for his observations, my only object was to obtain information from that member of your Government who was presumably most competent to give it, and not, as your Ministers appear to suppose, to fasten on Mr. Rose any special or personal responsibility.

You will assure your Advisers that I have never had any intention to call in question the financial integrity and upright dealing of the Dominion of Canada, still less the personal honour of Mr. Rose and his colleagues.

I have been led to the conclusion that the spirit, if not the letter, of the Canada Loan Act (30 Vict. cap. 16, Imperial) required that all money raised under it should not only be expended on the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, but "appropriated" to that purpose; that is, that it should be kept or invested as a distinct fund applicable to that construction, and to no other purpose.

I enclose copies of two opinions of the Law Officers of the Crown, sought and given, I can assure you, with no unfriendly feeling towards the Canadian Government, nor any wish to impose on them any obligation beyond what is implied in the terms of the arrangement as sanctioned by Parliament.

You will observe that the first of these opinions more than bears out the conclusion at which I had arrived, and that this opinion is not altered by the Minute of your Privy Council which I at once referred to them.

I have full confidence in the power of the Canadian Government to replace at any time the sums which have been so employed, under a belief that there could be no doubt as to the propriety of that course. The opinions of the Law Officers and the Treasury, whom I have consulted, show that that belief is not well founded.

With these opinions before them, your Advisers will, I am sure, see that my Despatch was not written hastily or without necessity. And even if they do not concur in the views which I am led to entertain, I hope they will acquiesce in the propriety of avoiding all occasion for cavil by placing the money in the shape of a distinct fund applicable, in its entirety, and at any moment, to the object for which it is destined.

Enclosure 1, in No. 2.

Encl. 1, in No. 2.

My Lord,

Temple, 28 June 1869.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Sir Frederic Rogers' letter of the 17th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the following case.

2. That by the Imperial Act, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 16, the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury were empowered to guarantee payment of interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent. per annum, on any principal money not exceeding 3,000,000 l. sterling, to be raised by way of loan by the Government of Canada for the purpose of the construction of a railway connecting Quebec and Halifax.

3. That by the 3rd section of the Act, this guarantee was not to be given until certain provisions had been embodied in an Act of the Parliament of Canada, and that he was directed to call our attention to the first of these provisions which related to the "Appropriation," for the purpose of the construction of the railway, of a loan not exceeding 3,000,000 l. sterling.

4. That an Act of Parliament of Canada was in due course passed, 31 Vict. c. 13, and that a copy of it was annexed for reference.

5. That it would be seen that the Act was in operation, and that it might be assumed that that Act fulfilled the requirements of the Imperial Act, though it had not received as yet the formal sanction of Her Majesty.

6. That subsequently to the passing of that Act a loan was raised, and the substance of the terms and conditions upon which the loan was raised, and the form of debentures, would be seen from the letter of the 11th July 1868, from Mr. Rose, the Financial Minister to the Treasury, and from the reply thereto of the 15th July, and that copies of those letters were annexed for reference.

7. That from a Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, approved by the Governor General on 27th August 1868, it appeared that the money raised under the Imperial guarantee for the construction of the railway, was to be temporarily applied to the purpose of defraying certain debts of the Dominion bearing a high rate of interest, and that a copy of such Minute was annexed for reference.

8. That the Minute gave rise to an inquiry in the House of Commons, whether such application was not in contravention of the Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867, and a full report from Mr. Rose, the Financial Minister, which was approved of by the Privy Council of the Dominion, had lately been received in answer to such inquiry, and that a copy of such report was annexed for reference.

9. That under these circumstances our opinion was requested on the following questions:—

1. Whether this appropriation of the proceeds of the loan was in contravention of the Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867, or;

2. Whether in the absence of any special provision as to the custody or investment of the proceeds of the loan until they were wanted for the purpose for which they were raised, the Canadian Government were, or were not, within their legal rights in making this temporary use of the paid-up instalments?

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered the questions submitted to us, and have the honour to report,

That

That we regret to be unable to advise that the investment of the money, under the Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, is in conformity with the Imperial Act of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 16.

We think that it was not the intention of the Imperial Legislature that the money should be invested at all; it was to be appropriated or set aside. The only sort of investment within the provisions of the Imperial Act would be, we think, an investment (if any such exists or can be conceived) the value of which does not fluctuate, and which is convertible at any moment without loss. Paying off with the railway loan, Canadian Government debts bearing a high rate of interest, may be, perhaps, an useful investment of the money raised, but does not seem to us to be an appropriation of it; and we think, therefore, that the spirit and intention of the Canada Railway Loan Act, 1867, has not been complied with.

Sir,

Downing-street, 10 May 1870.

I AM desired by Earl Granville to inform you that it is proposed shortly to lay before Parliament certain papers relating to the investment of the Inter-colonial Railway Loan, and that it appears to his Lordship desirable that an account of the actual expenditure and progress of the railway works, and of the obligations assumed up to the present time, should be annexed to these papers.

Should it be in your power to furnish such a statement, Lord Granville would be glad to receive it at your early convenience, together with any other information which your intimate knowledge of the subject may supply.

COPY of a LETTER from Sir John Rose, K.C.M.G., to Sir Frederic Rogers, Bart., K.C.M.G.

Sir,

London, 12 May 1870.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 10th instant, written by direction of Earl Granville, in which you inform me that his Lordship would be glad to receive a statement of the progress of the Intercolonial Railway, of the expenditure on it, and the obligations assumed up to the present time, together with any other information which my knowledge of the subject may enable me to supply.

In

In reply, I have now the honour to say, that it is somewhat difficult to state, with precision, the exact position of the undertaking, and the obligations existing in respect of it. These are daily changing, and the last official reports, of which I have any knowledge, relate chiefly to the considerations which affected the selection of the route, the manner of letting the contracts, &c. I have, however, been favoured with the perusal of statements prepared by the Secretary and one of the Intercolonial Commissioners, giving a very full explanation of the operations up to January last, which I shall have great pleasure in placing at Earl Granville's disposal, and the substance of which I will now communicate.

It will be remembered that up to July 1868, when the Intercolonial Loan was raised, the route which the Railway would take was undetermined, three lines being then proposed; the one by the Valley of the St. John, the other through the centre of New Brunswick, and the third that now being constructed. Previous to, and during the summer of, 1868, Canada had gone to great expense in exploring these three different routes, in order to place before Her Majesty's Government sufficient information as to the character of the country, the engineering difficulties, and the considerations of national advantage affecting each, so as to enable them to select intelligently the one which would be the most advisable. When Her Majesty's Government did decide on the third route, and authorised the loan, it became necessary to have more minute surveys, with a view to the actual location of the line, and the letting of contracts. The more general explorations had gone as far as it was possible to push them, previous to the decision of the Imperial Government, as to the adoption of the line, and the new location surveys were prosecuted simultaneously at various points, with the largest force available, and without the loss of a day. Advertisements were issued to intending contractors that the profiles, &c., were being prepared, and notifying them to examine the ground for themselves, in anticipation of the accurate reports of the surveys. When it is considered that the greater portion of the line is through a wilderness of forest, and that the working season is very short, it will be admitted that the surveys and engineering preparations made extraordinarily rapid progress. The total length of the road finally sanctioned is about 488½ miles. As soon as small sections were surveyed, and finally located, advertisements were issued for tenders, and the progress and engagements up to this time, as stated in the report of the Commissioner to whom I refer, will show how rapidly the works have been pushed forward.

By this report it appears—

1st. That a section of 37½ miles, partly undertaken and constructed by an independent Company, has been purchased, and has been running for more than a year, the cash already paid for it being about $ 800,000.

2nd. That twelve contracts were let in the early part of the year 1869 for 232½ miles more, on all of which substantial progress has been made; the amount of these contracts being about $ 3,547,022.

3rd. That tenders have been invited by advertisement, for rolling stock estimated to cost $ 800,000, part of which it is believed is now in course of being built, and that as respects the remainder, offers of ready-made stock may be accepted, and be required to be paid for at any day in cash.

4th. That the rails now being contracted for are estimated to cost $ 2,500,000.

5th. That the buildings in course of erection, and lands in course of payment, are estimated at $ 400,000.

6th. That the engineering expenses are about $ 400,000, making a total outlay or obligations contracted, and in course of payment so far, of $ 8,537,000, or about 1,750,000 l. sterling. The amount actually paid in cash, exclusive of disbursements for surveys and explorations at the date of the last return, is believed to be about $ 1,670,000, irrespective of what may have since been paid on the various engagements contracted as already stated.

When the character of the work and the severity of the climate which prevents active operations in winter, the difficulty of obtaining labour, of moving materials and plant in many places through an almost impassable forest, forest, and of procuring supplies, &c., as well as the peculiar difficulties in the way of locating the exact position of the line, and ascertaining the character of the soil and works to be performed, are considered, it will be admitted that the most untiring energy has been used in pushing on the work. Mr. Brydges, the Commissioner to whom I refer, says in his report:—

“You will see from this statement of what we are doing, that the work is “being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, quite as rapidly as is wise in so “large an undertaking. If we were to attempt to hurry it more than is now “being done, we should let contracts upon insufficient plans, and besides, “disturb the labour market, which is very likely to be difficult enough to deal “with as it is. I have no doubt we shall get the entire line completed, and in “working order during the summer of 1872. It would not be possible, except “at an enormous expense, if it could be done under any circumstances, to “have it completed before that date.”

It will be remembered that the general course of the road was only determined, and the loan for half the estimated cost of the work authorised in July 1868; and if within four years the whole line of 488 miles, running through a country, which by some was stated to interpose such serious physical obstacles as to make them pronounce the undertaking impracticable, is completed and working, it will be admitted that the operations have been prosecuted with remarkable celerity and vigour.

Having thus detailed the facts as far as they are accessible here, with reference to the progress of the work, it may be considered superfluous to prolong this communication, but as his Lordship has requested me to furnish any other information which my knowledge of the subject may supply, I would briefly say that I think a perusal of the papers noted in the margin, and which are doubtless in his Lordship's possession, will establish the following points:—

Report, Minister of Finance, and Minutes of the Privy Council of Canada of the 29th May 1869, the 18th June 1869, and 20th Aug. 1869; and such further Minutes as may have been subsequently communicated to the Colonial Office.

1st. That the work was one in which it was admitted Imperial interests were concerned, but the execution of which was thrown wholly on Canada and that the utmost possible diligence has since been used by Canada to further its progress.

2nd. That it was necessary to contract the loan at the time it was done; that the conditions of its issue, the dates and manner of payment, and placing the instalments, were left wholly to Canada, on whose Government the entire responsibility of completing the work was devolved.

3rd. That it was never proposed to control Canada in regard to the temporary employment of the money; that any such proposal would have been unwarranted by the provisions of the Act authorising the guarantee; and had it been made, that Canada could not properly have accepted the guarantee coupled with any such conditions.

4th. That the financial agents, Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co. and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., being only able to obtain interest at the rate of 1 per cent. while Canada was paying 4 per cent., that Government made the most judicious temporary use in its power of the amounts deposited, by investing them, partly in anticipating the sinking fund, partly in its own securities, partly in Exchequer Bills which were intended to be issued to the public to pay off liabilities maturing, partly in India Stock, and partly in special deposits at 4 per cent. with its bankers.

5th. As a special, and perhaps superfluous, measure of precaution, and to meet any possible delay in the realisation of any of these securities, the Canadian Government provided credits with their bankers available on demand, for 750,000 l. sterling, and also specially laid aside, by order of Council, other securities due by third parties and belonging to the Government, and incomings from special sources of revenue, amounting to upwards of 1,000,000 l. sterling more.

6th. That these precautions were dictated by the desire to place the money in the condition of most perfect security while returning some interest that they were at the time deemed to be, and have since been shown, by the result, to have been, wholly unnecessary; because, at no time has Canada had less money lying in cash at her bankers than the amount of the loan, less the expenditure on the works, and she could at any moment have paid the entire amount on demand.

7th. That

7th. That the special sources of revenue anticipated to come in before the money could be spent on the works and the other securities which were laid aside to meet the outlay have much exceeded the estimated amount, and the securities have actually been realised and are now in the shape of cash deposits with the Dominion bankers, on the condition of being drawn for as required for the Intercolonial works.

I learn that the special cash deposit amounts at the present time to about $4,800,000, the India stock to about $690,000 beyond a general balance of about $1,800,000 cash at call with the Dominion bankers, while the Government also holds 300,000 l. sterling of Imperial guaranteed bonds, representing an equal amount paid to the Hudson's Bay Company out of its own funds. It thus appears that the amount of cash specially deposited and actually available to meet the outlay on the works, represents, with the India stock and the sums spent, about the full amount of the guaranteed loan.

This, I believe, exhibits in general terms, and as accurately as the means of reference at my command here permit me to give, the actual financial bearings of the case. Under ordinary circumstances I should hesitate to trouble his Lordship with any further observations than a reference to these specific facts; but as the mode in which the money was temporarily used has led to some discussion, I may perhaps be permitted to add one or two words.

The good faith and credit of Canada have never been questioned. She has met all her engagements with punctuality, and the only other amount guaranteed by England has been paid off long ago. Her revenues are ample for all her expenditure. The Imperial Government was satisfied of this fact, because before the guarantee was authorised an examination was made into her affairs, and the Treasury reported their entire satisfaction with them, and actually authorised the investment of the Sinking Fund, applicable for the redemption of the loan, in her own securities, devolving on Canada the undivided duty of constructing the work, and purposely declining all participation in the operations attending it.

The guarantee being given, it would seem to suffice, after this admitted ability to repay the loan, if the money raised was expended on the work as rapidly as its nature warranted; and that complaint would be premature until the work was delayed or left undone, or that there was clear evidence of permanent misapplication.

I am not aware that any of the States, whether European or American, who guarantee the bonds of railway corporations, and who devolve on these corporations the sole duty of performing the works—disclaiming all control or interference with them—inquire into the application of the amounts deposited during the construction of the works, provided these are prosecuted with diligence and good faith.

It is obviously for the interest of the surety that the debtor should so employ the money as to derive a benefit from it, rather than add to his liabilities by the amount of interest unnecessarily lost.

But, apart from the question of interest, it appears to be emphatically stated by Canada that she would not have accepted the guarantee, nor undertaken the work, if it had been accompanied with any such distrust as the controlling of the funds raised would necessarily have implied.

It is said, however, that the difficulty is a technical one, founded on the provision of the Imperial Act which directs an "appropriation" of the money. It is contended that this wording requires a setting aside in specie of the identical money received, and will not warrant any intermediate use of it whatever.

Whether such an interpretation of the law be critically accurate or not, I fail to discover in what way it would be practically possible to carry it out, except by a course of dealing exceptionally invented for this case, and utterly at variance with the system of monetary affairs throughout the commercial world.

This point is noticed at length in the Minute of the Treasury Board of Canada of the 11th August 1869, and need not be enlarged upon here.

The system of payment by cheques and through clearing houses, of depositing money with bankers, the use which it is notorious bankers invariably make of their deposits, must all be set aside if the critical interpretation contended for is to be given to this wording of the Act.

It is said that the money could only be invested, if at all, in securities which do not fluctuate. But Consols fluctuate; even the precious metals themselves fluctuate; and could it be supposed to be the intention of Parliament to require this loan to be kept wholly apart in specie, and unproductive during the interval before its disbursement for the purpose it was destined could possibly take place.

Apologising for troubling his Lordship with a communication of so much length, I would but finally remark that it appears from these observations that the sufficiency of the securities provided for the temporary employment of the money is shown by the fact of the conversion of the greater part of them into cash long before the time when the money could be expended on the work; that the greater part of the amount is in special deposit in the only way in which the banking usages of the world permits it to be; and that the balance, partly invested in India Bonds, and represented by cash in the general balances at the credit of Canada with her bankers, is equally available at call.

JAMES STANSFELD.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 22nd November 1869.

MY LORDS have before them a Letter from the Colonial Office, dated 5th instant, transmitting, with reference to the Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 101, entitled "An Act for authorising a Guarantee of a Loan to be raised by Canada, for a Payment in respect of the Transfer of Rupert's Land," copy of an Act of the Parliament of Canada (32 & 33 Vict. c. 1), passed in anticipation of the Imperial Act, by the 3rd section of which, authority is given to raise a Loan not exceeding 300,000 l., on such terms and conditions as the Governor in Council may think advisable, with the approval of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury; and also copies of the following Reports of the Committee of Privy Council, approved by the Governor in Council:

17th August 1869, appointing Messrs. Baring, Brothers, & Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., to act as the Financial Agents of the Dominion, in reference to the Loan of 300,000 l. mentioned in the 3rd clause of the before-mentioned Act of the Parliament of Canada.

18th September 1869, accepting the terms of the Imperial Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 101, which provides for charging the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada with certain payments in respect of the said Loan, declaring that the Government of Canada will recommend to Parliament, at its first Session, the passing of an Act to carry into effect, in so far as provision may not be already made by existing Acts or by such Order, the requirements of the said Imperial Act, and appointing T. Baring, Esq., and G. C. Glyn, Esq., Trustees of the Sinking Fund required by the said Act.

20th September 1869, authorising the payment to the Hudson's Bay Company of the sum of 300,000 l. out of funds now in the hands of the Canadian Government, provided that Her Majesty's Government assent that such payment shall not interfere with the granting of the Guarantee under the Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 101.

Lord Granville further states that Mr. Rose, late Finance Minister of Canada, has been authorised to make the necessary arrangements on behalf of the Government of Canada for raising the Loan; and that it has been agreed that the surrender of Rupert's Land by the Hudson's Bay Company shall be made on 1st December next.

My Lords have also before them a letter from Mr. J. Rose, dated 23rd October, expressing a hope that the Board will assent to the Guarantee being given, in order that the Financial Agents may negotiate the Loan prior to the 2nd December next, and submitting a statement of the items and conditions under which it is proposed to raise the said Loan of 300,000 l., together with a form of bond by which the Guarantee of the Board may be carried into effect.

My Lords have also before them the Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 101, by the 2nd and 3rd sections of which, the Board are empowered to guarantee interest at a rate not exceeding four per cent. on a sum not exceeding 300,000 l. sterling, when certain conditions specified therein are provided for by an Act of the Parliament of Canada, or otherwise to the satisfaction of the Treasury.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer states to the Board that Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that the terms proposed for raising the loan of 300,000 l. are unobjectionable, and that, provided sufficient proof is afforded to the satisfaction of the Board that this sum has been paid over to the Hudson's Bay Company, by or on behalf of the Government of Canada, and with the understanding, ob majorem cantelam, that that Government will recommend to the Parliament of Canada, at its first Session, the passing of whatever further Act may appear to be called for by a strict interpretation of the provisions of the Imperial Act, he would recommend to the Board that their guarantee should be given for the payment of interest at the rate of four per cent. on the sum of 300,000 l., in accordance with the form of bond or debenture submitted by Mr. Rose.

My Lords concur in the recommendation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and desire that the Honourable J. Rose should be informed that they have no objection to offer to the manner in which it is proposed to raise the sum of 300,000 l., or to the terms of the bond or debenture; and that they are prepared to guarantee the payment of interest at the rate of four per cent. on the said sum of 300,000 l. in the terms of the bond, on the conditions specified by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Add, that my Lords have appointed their permanent secretary to carry into effect the guarantee on behalf of the Board.

Prepare warrant, appointing the permanent secretary accordingly.

Acquaint Colonial Office, and add, that my Lords propose that the Under Secretary of State and Auditor of the Civil List, for the time being, should act as Trustees of the Sinking Fund on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

TREASURY WARRANT authorising the Permanent Secretary to the Treasury to give effect to the Guarantee, and appointing Trustees for the Sinking Fund of the Loan.

After our Hearty Commendation,

WHEREAS, by an Act passed in the Thirty-third year of Her Majesty's reign, entitled "The Canada (Rupert's Land) Loan Act, 1869," it was enacted: That the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of interest, at the rate not exceeding Four per cent. per annum, on any principal money not exceeding the sum of 300,000 l., to be raised by way of Loan by the Government of Canada, for the purpose of payment to the Hudson's Bay Company on the surrender of Rupert's Land; and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may, from time to time, cause to be issued, out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or the growing produce thereof, any money required for giving effect to such guarantee:

And whereas, by the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed on 22nd June 1869, and the several Orders passed by the Governor in Council, in accordance with the 3rd Section thereof, dated respectively 17th August, and 18th and 20th September 1869, provision has been made for the raising, appropriation, and expenditure of the said Loan of 300,000 l., and for making the various sums specified in the aforementioned Imperial Act, a charge on the Consolidated Revenue of Canada, in the order therein specified:

And whereas it has been proved to our satisfaction that the said sum of 300,000 l. has been duly paid over to and received by the said Hudson's Bay Company from the Government of Canada:

Now we, being two of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, do authorise and empower the Permanent Secretary to this Board, for us, and in our name, to guarantee the due payment of the interest at Four per cent. on the said Loan of 300,000 l., so contracted as aforesaid, and generally to do all acts, matters, and things necessary for effecting such guarantee as aforesaid, so

so nevertheless that all such acts, matters and things shall be, in all respects, conformable with the provisions of the aforesaid Act.

And we do further appoint the Permanent Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the time being, and the Auditor of the Civil List, and Assistant to the Secretaries to this Board, for the time being, to be Trustees of the Sinking Fund of the said Loan, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act.

MEMORANDUM.

IN pursuance of the authority conveyed to him by Treasury Warrant, dated 18th June 1870, Mr. R. R. W. Lingen, Permanent Secretary to the Treasury, has attached his signature, testifying the guarantee of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to the payment of interest on bonds issued by the Financial Agents of the Dominion of Canada for 300,000 l., authorised to be guaranteed by the said Act.

2. It was deemed expedient to change the date from October 1st to December 1st, in order to give more time to complete the financial and other arrangements consequent on the transfer.

3. Although the Bill, guaranteeing the £300,000, has received Her Majesty’s sanction, it will take some time (especially as the suggested interchange of money for the Intercolonial Railway Loan cannot be admitted) to make the arrangements that must be made for putting the Loan on the Market and raising the money.

COPY of a REPORT of a COMMITTEE of the Honourable the PRIVY COUNCIL approved by His EXCELLENCY the GOVERNOR-GENERAL in Council on the 28th September, 1869.

The Committee have had under consideration the annexed Draft of a Letter proposed to be addressed by the Secretary of State for the Provinces to the Honourable William McDougall as his preliminary Instructions on proceeding to the North-West Territories, and on the recommendation of the Honourable the Minister of Justice advise that the same be approved by your Excellency.

(Certified) WM. H. LEE, Clerk P. C.

SIR,

Office of the Secretary of State for the Provinces,
28th September, 1869.

1. As you have been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, in anticipation of the formal transfer of those Territories by Her Majesty to the Dominion of Canada, and, as it is expected that such transfer will be made within the course of the next two or three months, I have the honour, by command of His Excellency the Governor-General, to inform you that it is desirable that no time should be lost in making the necessary preliminary arrangements for the organization of the Government of the Territories.

2. With this view, I am to instruct you to proceed with all convenient speed to Fort Garry, in order that you may effectually superintend the carrying out of the preliminary arrangements indicated in the preceding paragraph, and be ready to assume the Government of the Territories on their actual transfer to Canada.

3. On your arrival at Fort Garry, you will place yourself at once in communication with Mr. McTavish, the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, and notify him of your appointment; you will at the same time offer seats in your Council to Mr. McTavish, and to Mr. Black, or other Chief Judicial Officer of the Hudson's Bay Company now in the Territory. Should either or both of these gentlemen decline to accept office, you will submit, for the consideration of His Excellency, the names of one or two other Officers of the Company whom you consider eligible to act as Members of your Council. You will at the same time submit the names of several of the residents of character and standing in the Territory, unconnected with the Company, qualified to act as Councillors, giving particulars respecting them, and stating their comparative merits.

4. You will have the goodness to report with all convenient speed, for the information of His Excellency, on the state of the Laws now existing in the Territories; transmitting copies of any Laws, Ordinances, or Regulations of the Company now in force there, together with a full Report as to the mode of administering Justice, the organization of the Courts, the number and mode of appointment of Justices of the Peace, the Police arrangements, and the means adopted for keeping the peace, &c.

5. In preparing the Report on the matters referred to in the preceding paragraph, it will be well that you should confer with the Chief Judicial Officer of the Company in the Territories.

6. You will have the goodness to report also upon the System of Taxation (if any) now in force in the Territories, the system of licensing shops, taverns, &c.; the mode of regulating or prohibiting the sale of wines, spirituous and malt liquors, and further as to the mode of keeping up the roads, and generally on the municipal organization (if any) existing in the Territories.

7. You will also make a full Report upon the state of the Indian Tribes now in the Territories, their numbers, wants, and claims; the system heretofore pursued by the Hudson's Bay Company in dealing with them; accompanied by any suggestions you may desire to offer with reference to their protection, and to the improvement of their condition.

CANADA.

8. You will have the goodness to report also on the nature and amount of the Currency or circulating medium now employed in the Territories, and of the probable requirements of the Territories in that respect in the future.

9. You will also report on the System of Education (if any) which now obtains in the Territories.

10. You will also please to report as to such lands in the Territories as it may be desirable to open up at once for settlement, transmitting a plan of such Survey as may be necessary, with an Estimate of the cost of survey, a statement of the conditions of grants of land and settlement; the Plan should show the number of townships it is proposed to lay out at once, the size and situation of the townships, and the size of the lots, making the necessary reservation for churches, schools, roads, and other public purposes.

11. You will also report upon the relations at present existing between the Hudson's Bay Company and the different religious bodies in the Territories.

12. You will also report as to the number of Officers now employed by the Hudson's Bay Company in the administration of the Government of the Territories, stating the duties and salaries of such officers, and specifying those who should, in your opinion, be retained. You will also report as to the number of persons whom it will be necessary hereafter to employ in the administration of the Government; and you will report generally on all subjects connected with the welfare of the Territories, upon which it may seem to you desirable to communicate with the Government of the Dominion.

13. It is desirable that you should take immediate measures for the extension of the Telegraph System from the Territory to Pembina, and for its connection at that place with the System of the American Telegraph Company or Companies, making any provisional arrangements for that purpose that may be necessary, and forwarding a copy of such arrangements to this Department for confirmation by His Excellency.

McDougall, who has been designated Lieutenant-Governor of North-West Territory when transferred, has been stopped on his way to Fort Garry by a small force of armed insurgent half-breeds. Authorities of Hudson's Bay Company, with whom the Government still rests, are apparently inactive and powerless. Provisional Committee of Government: John Bruce, President, has been appointed by half-breeds. MacTavish, the Governor, is very ill, and reported to be dying.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to transmit, for your Lordship's information, copies of all the Correspondence up to this date, in the possession of the Canadian Government, relating to the obstruction offered to Mr. McDougall's (the designated Lieutenant-Governor) entrance into the North-West Territory by a portion of the French half-breeds.

Affairs have, however, advanced since the dates given, and we have learnt from other sources that the armed half-breeds, encouraged, as is alleged, by some of the French Priests, have formed a Provisional Government, defied the Hudson Bay Company authorities, and taken possession of the Fort and Stores.

The English and Scotch half-breeds have taken no part in this movement, but are unwilling to come into armed collision with the insurgents; even the French half-breeds themselves are stated to be divided in opinion.

There are no Indians near the place, and their opposition, in any case, to the French half-breeds may, I am informed, be entirely relied upon.

The most extravagant mis-statements have been circulated about the intentions of the Canadian Government, and misapprehensions created which there will be some difficulty in removing. The Ministers have, as a preliminary, decided upon sending up emissaries well known to, and personally liked by, these French half-breeds, to confer with them and, if possible, disabuse their minds of the erroneous impressions that have been made upon them.

F. Turville, Esquire, Governor's Secretary.

SIR,

Hudson Bay Post, Pembina,
October 31st, 1869.

I have the honour to report my arrival at this place last evening, where I have determined to remain for a short time, in consequence of the events hereinafter detailed.

Rumours of hostile movements on the part of the French half-breeds against the authority of the Canadian Government, reached me at several points between St. Paul and Pembina, but they were so wild and contradictory that I gave little heed to them.

I met the Hon. Joseph Howe on his return from Fort Garry, about half a day's journey south of Georgetown, in the open prairie. As the weather was stormy we had only a very short interview. He stated that the people of Red River Settlement were well-disposed towards the Canadian Government, but, from some circumstances of which he would advise me by Letter from Fort Abercrombie, the feelings of a certain section of the population had been excited, and that delicate handling would be necessary to allay them. He did not state, and apparently did not anticipate, that there was any danger of an armed insurrection before my arrival at Fort Garry.

At a point about thirty miles from this post where I camped for the night, I met a Mr. Lanford, of Hamilton (Ontario), who put into my hands Despatches, of which the enclosed are copies (marked A, B, C, D). He stated, also, that he was stopped at Scratching River (about fifteen miles from Fort Garry) by a body of armed men, who had thrown a barricade across the road, and who expressed their determination to prevent me from passing that point. He had no doubt of their intention to carry out their threats by force, if necessary.

His Report of the state of feelings among the French half-breeds, and of the movements of the Insurgents, confirmed generally the statements in the enclosed Papers.

On my arrival at the American Customs House at Pembina, a half-breed, who had been waiting there for the last three or four days, put into my hands a Letter, of which the Paper marked E is a Copy, and immediately disappeared. I paid no attention to his Letter, but, as soon as the proper entries had been made by the Collector, proceeded to the Hudson Bay Company's Post about two miles distant, and within the "Territory of the North-West." Here I found another Despatch (marked F), with a Note from Colonel Dennis (marked).

This morning I determined to send Mr. Provencher (who with Mr. Richards and Captain Cameron accompanied me from Port Abercrombie to this place) to Fort Garry, if permitted to go so far, with a verbal message to Governor McTavish announcing my arrival within his jurisdiction, and claiming his protection for myself and party. Mr. Provencher was instructed to ascertain from the Insurgents by a friendly conference, if possible, their object, and the extent of the force at their command. He was instructed to assure them of the determination of the Government to deal justly with all classes, and to respect existing rights without reference to race or religion. But he was to explain to them that until the New Government was organized, and so long as they remained with arms in their hands, no Official communication could be had with them by me or any one on my behalf. Mr. Provencher left this morning about 8 o'clock, with a reliable guide who is well acquainted with the country and the half-breeds of the Settlement.

I shall remain here with Mr. Richards and the balance of my party until I hear from Mr. Provencher, or learn from other sources that the Insurgents have dispersed.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

I have further to report that Captain Cameron of the Royal Artillery, who accompanied me in his own conveyance for the greater part of the way from St. Cloud, and who expects to hold an appointment under the Government, determined this morning to proceed to Fort Garry on his own responsibility. I endeavoured to dissuade him from making the attempt until we had some assurance that the road would not be obstructed, but he persisted in making preparations for the journey, whereupon I addressed him the following Note, (marked G).

After reading my Note he said he would take all risks, and proceeded on his journey, taking with him his wife and two servants.

I have just heard that I am to have a visit to-morrow from the Chief of a band of Chippewa Indians, who claim title to a large tract of country, extending from the boundary line at Pembina towards Fort Garry. I have agreed to talk with him, and will report the result of my interview in due course.

I have, &c.,

(Signed)

WILLIAM McDOUGALL.

The Honourable the Secretary of State for the Provinces, Ottawa.

November 1st, 1869.

POSTSCRIPT.—Colonel Dennis and Mr. William Hallett have just arrived from Fort Garry, having made a detour over the Prairie, in order to avoid the armed party at Scratching River. The situation is but little changed, except that the attempt of the Insurgents to rally the Indians to their side has failed. Two Chiefs who obeyed their summons returned home, refusing to take part in the movement when they had ascertained its nature.

I have just had a long talk with the Chief of the tribe who claim the country in this neighbourhood. They repudiate all sympathy with the half-breeds who are in arms.

In haste,

(Signed)

WILLIAM McDOUGALL.

MEMORANDUM of FACTS and CIRCUMSTANCES connected with the active Opposition by the FRENCH HALF-BREEDS in this Settlement to the prosecution of the GOVERNMENT SURVEYS.

Fort Garry, October 11th, 1869.

This day about 2 P.M. a messenger arrived, Mr. Farmer, Chairman of Mr. Webb's party, employed in surveying the base line, or parallel of latitude, between townships 6 & 7 east of the meridian, on which service the party left a week ago to-day, bringing the unwelcome information from Mr. Webb that his further progress with the Survey had been stopped by a band* of some eighteen French half-breeds, headed by a man named Louis Riel.

Mr. Webb had projected the line to about the Fourth Section in Township 7, Second Range East, and being within, say, two and a half miles of the Red River, when this occurrence took place.

He was ordered by the leader of the party at once to desist from further running the line, and in fact notified that he must leave the country on the south side of the Assiniboine, which country the party claimed as the property of the French half-breeds, and which they would not allow to be surveyed by the Canadian Government.

No arms were seen with the party, but by standing on the chain and using threats of violence if the Survey was persisted in, it became evident that to go on with the Survey would probably have led to a collision, and Mr. Webb, in accordance with written instructions which I had previously given him, to provide for any such contingency, discontinued his work, and as the half-breeds would not allow him to remain encamped where he was, moved his camp out to the main road on the Red River, waiting for orders, having sent off in the mean time Mr. Farmer, as above stated.

I at once waited on Dr. Cowan, the Chief Magistrate in the Settlement, and laying the facts of the case before him, requested that he would consult with the Governor, or such other Magistrate as he might think desirable to call in, and take such further steps with regard to this outrage as he and they might think called for under the circumstances.

I remarked to Dr. Cowan, at the same time, that I questioned whether, owing to the unsettled relation of the land tenure as regarded the half-breeds and Indians, and the peculiar irritation or sensitiveness that existed on the part of the French half-breeds in view of the transfer of the Territory and the assumption of the Government by Canada, it would be politic to take harsh measures towards the offenders in this case; but stated that, as he and his brother Magistrate knew the temper and feelings of the people in the Settlement generally, I left the matter in their hands, satisfied that they would do what would seem most advisable under the circumstances.

Before I left Dr. Cowan it was settled that he would call in another Magistrate, Mr. Goulet, and consult with him as to what course to take.

Tuesday, 12th October.

I waited on Dr. Cowan this morning about 11 o'clock, and was informed that he and Mr. Goulet had thought it best to send for Riel the leader, and ascertain what the party meant by this proceeding, and

* Names of Band:—Louis Riel, leader, De Saugré and Son, Baptiste Nona, Baptiste Treuau and three Sons, François Charest, Bideau Non, Edward Morin, Mannin Non, Janvive Richot, Benjamin Non; three others, names not known.

CANADA. explain to him and them the serious character of the offence of which they had been guilty, and endeavour quietly to obtain a promise that no further opposition should be made to continuing the Survey.

The Magistrates had done so accordingly, but had failed either to extract from him any rational excuse for their proceeding (beyond the assertion that the Canadian Government had no right to make Surveys in the Territory without the express permission of the people in the Settlement) or any promise that their opposition would be withdrawn.

Dr. Cowan stated further that Riel was to be back at 2 o'clock, when he, the Doctor, if Riel still refused to listen to reason, would bring in the influence of Governor McTavish, whose health being in a critical condition, he had desired should not be troubled, if it could be avoided.

Wednesday, October 13th.

Dr. Cowan informed me this morning that the interview of himself and Governor McTavish with Riel in the interview which had taken place yesterday had been in no respect satisfactory; that Riel still persisted that injustice was being done by the Canadian Government, and utterly refused to withdraw from the position he and those under him had taken.

Dr. Cowan said he should now apply to the Father Superior Lestanc, in charge of the diocese during the absence of Bishop Taché, and that he felt sanguine that the Reverend Father—if so disposed—could put a stop to the trouble at once.

It being important that I should no longer delay visiting another of my parties under the charge of Mr. Hart, engaged in projecting the meridian up near Shoal Lake, on which service, had this trouble not occurred, I should have left on the afternoon of the 11th instant, I determined to leave to-day, desiring Dr. Cowan, after consulting with Father Lestanc, to send a note to my office stating the result, and, instructing Mr. Webb accordingly, I started on the service above-mentioned.

October 14th to 20th, both inclusive.

Absent at Shoal Lake, and examining country between that lake and Lake Manitoba.

October 21st.

Having returned to the Settlement late last night, I found Dr. Cowan's efforts with Father Lestanc had been without avail, the Reverend Father declining to attempt to use any influence with the party of half-breeds in question.

Dr. Cowan informed me that the Reverend Father, in explanation of his refusal, said that any such attempt, in consequence of an idea which possessed the half-breeds that the Company was in collusion with the Canadian Government, would have a tendency to impress them with the idea that the Church also was in sympathy with the Government, and so might lead to weakening their influence over their people in a religious point of view.

Dr. Cowan had written a note (see same, dated 15th October), announcing the entire failure of his endeavours to get over the opposition of the French Settlers to the Survey, in consequence of which Mr. Webb, according to my instructions in such event, had withdrawn his party to the north side of the Assiniboine, and was proceeding with the surveying of the Settlement north of Fort Garry, to which no opposition was offered.

Such is the present condition of affairs.

Same day, 4 o'clock, P.M.

The High Constable, Mullinan, has just come in to inform me, as a matter of duty, that a meeting took place yesterday at the house of a French half-breed named Bruce, on the other side of the river, by a number of the disaffected French party, among whom the man Riel was conspicuous.

That at such meeting it was resolved to send an armed party to meet the Governor, whom they expected to come in to-morrow, and to prevent, at all hazards, his entering the Settlement.

Under these circumstances, not wishing to identify myself with any one of the three parties into which the people in the village are evidently divided, and who have no sympathy with each other, either socially or politically, I called in the counsel of two Canadian gentlemen, Messrs. Sanford and Turner of Hamilton, who had accompanied Mr. Howe on his visit, and remaining behind that gentleman, were still in the Settlement.

He considered that the circumstances called for immediate and vigorous action on the part of the authorities, and it was arranged that Mr. Turner and I should wait upon Judge Black, and inform him of the intended outrage.

We found Judge Black at his residence some four miles down the Settlement, and laid the matter before him, and it was arranged that he should wait upon the Governor and Dr. Cowan early to-morrow morning to concert measures to defeat the object of the refractory half-breeds.

On our return there were reports confirmatory of the statements we had heard.

Friday, October 22nd.

I met Judge Black, Governor McTavish, and Dr. Cowan this morning at the Fort by appointment, when the matter was fully discussed in all its bearings; and, in view of the serious aspect of affairs, the Governor thought it only proper that a meeting of the Council of the Colony should be convened with the least possible delay, and upon their advice and action such further steps should be promptly taken as should effectually prevent the perpetration of the gross outrage intended.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

In evidence of the object intended by this armed party, reference is called to the Affidavit of Mr. * * * * a Copy of which is hereto annexed, which was made during the afternoon, the original having been sworn to before Dr. Cowan, and remaining in his possession.

CANADA

This Affidavit was further corroborated by a statement made about 4 P.M. by Mr. Lyons, merchant of the village, who on his way from Pembina to-day found a body of armed men in possession of the roadway near the crossing of the River Sale across which they had thrown a barricade, through which barricade they were not allowed to pass without explanation, and giving satisfactory assurances that a stranger who formed one of the party was not connected with the Canadian Government.

The Meeting of Council Governor McTavish called for Monday, the 25th instant, it being stated that some of the members resided at such a distance that it could not be convened at an earlier date.

DEAR SIR,

Fort Garry, 15th October, 1869.

I very much regret to say that we have failed entirely in our endeavours to get over the opposition of the French Settlers to the Survey.

Governor McTavish has done all in his power in the present state of his health, and every effort has been made by Mr. Goulet and myself to persuade these men, but to no purpose.

I believe that they are now of opinion that we are influenced unduly in favour of the Canadian Government, so that it is in vain for us to have any further conferences with them at present.

Col. Dennis.

I remain &c.,

(C.)

MY DEAR COL. DENNIS,

Monday afternoon.

Your note has just been handed me, and of course, if you wish it, I will be very glad to see you after the meeting of Council, which will probably not be over before two o'clock, but I will send down and let you know. Matters, from information that has reached me, look serious, but it is very difficult judging of affairs of this kind here, and sometimes when the case looks bad the whole thing subsides. I have seen too many difficulties here got over quietly, to despair until the worst has taken place, but I must allow there are incidents in the present case that have not been in former troubles.

Yours truly,

* * * Maketh oath, and saith

During the afternoon of yesterday, some twenty men or thereabouts, fully armed, made their appearance at the crossing of River Salé, on the road between here and Pembina, near the Tannery of the Deponent; and other and smaller parties of men, also armed, kept coming in during the afternoon and evening, till as many as forty were in the party.

That the said party of forty men are now billeted (or were when the Deponent left home this A.M., at which time they had sent off some men for more provisions) round in the adjacent houses.

That the men composing the said party, deponent believes, all belong to the parish of St. Norbrot above mentioned, and St. Vital, and that the avowed object of their meeting in arms and waiting at the said point was to turn back the new Governor Mr. McDougall, and not allow him to enter further into the Colony. One of the men, in conversation with the Deponent, who was naturally anxious to find out the meaning of such an assemblage with arms in their hands, told the Deponent the above was their object, and further said that if the Governor persisted in attempting to come further than that point, i.e. the crossing of the River Salé, they would shoot him.

The Deponent saith further that he was informed by this party, and believes the same (inasmuch as he saw a number of horsemen passing previously), that another party mounted, supposed to consist of twenty men or more, are now in advance somewhere about Scratching River, accompanied by a man named Riel, whose intention it is to stop the Governor and submit to him several questions or rather demands, in the event of refusing which he is to be warned not to proceed.

There is a further and third party between the two points mentioned, which this Deponent, from information received, believes to number forty men.

Should the Governor persist in coming forward, notwithstanding repeated warnings, these parties will fall back on the reserve at the River Salé, and there final action will be taken as above mentioned, should he still further endeavour to force his way on to the Settlement.

The Deponent further saith, that among other houses in the vicinity where certain of the forty men at the River Salé are billeted, ten of the armed party find quarters at the house of the curé, Rev. Père Ritchot.

Finally, that this Deponent seriously believes that the said men are truly in earnest, and that, without prompt action be taken by the Authorities to avert the same, a serious calamity is about to

(F.)

Wednesday, 27th October, 1869.—(Noon.)

Have just returned from a visit to the lower part of the Settlement on the west side of Red River, having left yesterday afternoon.

Called upon * * * * * and others.

From the conversations had with these different gentlemen, I am satisfied that the general disposition is in favour of receiving the incoming Government with respect, but there is no enthusiasm.

The attitude of the English-speaking portion of the Colony may, I think, be fairly stated as follows:

They say, We feel a disposition to extend a sincere welcome to the Hon. Mr. McDougall, as the gentleman who has been selected for our future Governor.

We regret sincerely that the good name of the Colony should be prejudiced by any such action as that we are told is contemplated by a portion of the French half-breeds.

We consider it a most outrageous proceeding on their part, and one that we would be glad to see, if possible, put a stop to. At the same time, should an appeal to arms be necessary, we could hardly justify ourselves in engaging in a conflict which would be, in our opinion, certain to resolve itself into one of nationalities and religions, and of which we could hardly at present see the termination.

We feel this way; we feel confidence in the future administration of the Government of this country under Canadian rule. At the same time, we have not been consulted in any way as a people, in entering into the Dominion.

The character of the new Government has been settled in Canada without our being consulted. We are prepared to accept it respectfully, to obey the laws and to become good subjects; but when you present to us the issue of a conflict with the French party, with whom we have hitherto lived in friendship, backed up as they would be by the Roman Catholic Church, which appears probable by the course at present being taken by the priests,—in which conflict it is almost certain the aid of the Indians would be invoked, and perhaps obtained by that party,—we feel disinclined to enter upon it, and think that the Dominion should assume the responsibility of establishing amongst us, * which it and it alone has decided upon.

* sic. in orig.

At the same time we are ready, should the Council make an appeal to the Settlement, to prevent the gross outrage contemplated by a large mounted deputation, unarmed, to meet and escort the Honourable Wm. McDougall to Winnipeg, and thus show to the Settlement * of the English-speaking portion of the Colony is entirely opposed to the present threatening movement by a portion of the French half-breeds; we will cheerfully and promptly respond to the call.

* sic. in orig.

7 P.M.

Mr. * * * has just come in, and reports that about eighty of the French party who are opposed to the views of the Insurgents, met by invitation at the camp of the disaffected to-day, but that their remonstrances and appeals to get them to disband were entirely without avail.

Several priests were present, among others Père Lestanc, the Father Superior. Père Lestanc took little or no part in the proceedings one way or another; some of the others were less scrupulous, Père Richot declaring in favour of the stand taken, and called upon the insurgents to maintain their ground.

The appeals of this priest,* and of the leaders of the Insurgent party, had the effect of even withdrawing, then and there, some twenty, or thereabouts, of Mr. Dease's party over to their side.

Mr. * * * thereupon withdrew his party from the ground, and they accordingly went into camp a short distance nearer to Fort Garry, where they are at present.

Mr. * * * previous to coming to me, states that he had an interview with Governor McTavish, in which he expressed the determination of his party to remain together, and, if possible, to overawe the others, with which view he requested a supply of arms and ammunition.

He proposes, if these are granted to his party, to escort the Governor in. His proposition is for a number of his men, say fifteen, to ride down towards Pembina and meet Mr. McDougall, and escort him straight to his residence on the Assiniboine, passing by the "Old Crossing" over * * * * another leader of the Dease party, testifies that on this occasion the priest raved and tore his gown, addressing the assemblage in the most frantic and excited manner.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

CANADA.

the River Salé, possession of which, as it is understood that there are a few men of the Insurgents now at that point, should previously have been taken by another party of his men.

He does not fear that Mr. McDougall will be interfered with at any other point.

He thinks that once on the north side of the Assiniboine at his own house, or at the Fort, five miles lower down, Mr. McDougall would not be subjected to any indignity.

I accompanied Mr. Dease to the Fort, and had an interview with Governor McTavish, at which Dr. Cowan was present, when Mr. Dease's proposition was discussed.

The Governor, who was very feeble, and is evidently feeling the responsibility and delicacy of his position, determined to consider the matter to-night, and to call in the aid of some Members of the Council to-morrow morning, and decide what course was best to be pursued.

It is worthy of remark that Mr. Dease expressed his conviction, from what had fallen from the lips of the Insurgent leaders, that it would not be a matter of much regret to them,—implying that they would feel it a relief rather than otherwise, owing to the evident division among the French element,—were the Governor to find his way into the Settlement by another route.

Mr. Dease remarked to me that as his party were entirely without provisions, and he feared that if they were obliged to go home it might be difficult to get them together again, and so prejudice the position in favour of the Insurgents, and I agreed to send him a small supply to-morrow morning for their sustenance, until the Council should have decided on the course to be taken.

There was no determination come to by Governor McTavish as to furnishing his party with arms.

I understood that there was three or four hundred stand of arms—the old "Brown Bess," with ammunition, at present in the Fort.

I may say further that I sent * * * a man of influence among the French half-breeds and Indians—himself a French half-breed, but favourable to our cause, up to the French Settlement on the "White Horse Plains," on the Assiniboine,—yesterday to use his influence to prevent the people there from coming down to help the Insurgents. He returned to-day, and the result of his mission is given in the annexed Paper.

Came from the road—from Magan's, Buston's, and go to bring the horse from the church to the water. The nuns see him water his horse; they run to him and ask him "Did you come from St. Vital," they said to him, "to join the people? and do not let the Governor cross the lines or come into the country—he will speak and say many things to please you, fill his mouth with sugar, but he will do you much harm when he gets in."

They told the people to get their arms and take them with them, supplied them with provisions, bags of pemican, &c. They got arms from Cowley—about twenty-eight or forty people.

Priest Cabina spoke against * * * letter to Buston, saying that Sherman wanted to blind the people.

Note.—* * * knows about this—ask him.

Heard the priests and nuns declare, both, that the Bishop had sent letters from Canada, that the Governor was not to be allowed to come into the Territory.

MY DEAR MR. MCDUGALL,

October 27, 11 A.M.

The enclosed will bring matters up to last evening. This morning Mr. Dease has been with me to say that Governor McTavish has decided to make an appeal to the people to obtain a large unarmed party to go down and escort you through; in which case it will, no doubt, be responded to generally. But this may take two or three days, as some parts of the Settlement are so distant.

In the mean time, till further fully advised to the contrary, you would only prejudice the chances of a quiet settlement of affairs by endeavouring to force your way on.

I will endeavour to keep you informed every day in some way or other, and you need only be patient, if you can.

The bearer, who is reliable, will give you an accurate account of the state of things on the road.

Most truly yours,

(Signed) J. S. DENNIS.

If I find I can be of less use here than with you, I will at once go down to meet you.

J. S. D.

Hon. William McDougall.

SIR,

Pembina, October 31, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you that information has reached me, of the truth of which I have no doubt, that the road to Fort Garry is barricaded, and in possession of a party of Insurgents, who threaten to arrest and turn back the Representatives and Officials of the Canadian Government. I have determined to await at this place communications from the Local Authorities at Fort Garry, who advise that any attempt to force a passage under present circumstances would embarrass their proceedings.

As you will probably be regarded as an Official of the Canadian Government, I am of opinion that you will incur some personal risk, and may cause some embarrassment to the loyal and peaceably disposed in their efforts to quell the outbreak, by provoking a collision at the present moment.

I do not make any order in your case, as I have no authority to direct your movements; but I wish to relieve myself of all responsibility for the consequences of your attempt to proceed immediately to Fort Garry.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, 4th November, 1869.

Having been engaged during the day in arranging for a temporary residence on the American side of the Line, and in writing to the Authorities at Fort Garry, I find I have only a few minutes left to catch the Mail of to-day. Important events have occurred since my Report of the 31st instant. On the 2nd instant a body of armed half-breeds galloped up to the Hudson Bay Post and demanded an audience with me. Two of the leaders were admitted, and told me they had been sent to order me out of the North-West Territory. When I asked who sent them, they replied, the Government. To my question, What Government? they said, "The Government they had made." They said I must leave by nine o'clock next morning. I explained my position; but they were evidently very ignorant, and had come for one object, viz., to compel me to leave the Territory. In the morning they appeared at the gate with arms in their hands, and loudly demanded that we should leave, as after nine o'clock they would not answer for our lives. We accordingly put our horses to our waggons, and drove across the Line, accompanied by a portion of the party with arms in their hands.

We are now encamped on American territory, waiting the issue of events. As soon as I hear from the Authorities at Fort Garry what action they or the people have taken on hearing of this outrage, I shall determine my course. The weather is still fair, but winter may set in at any moment. Mr. Provencher and Captain Cameron were sent back from the barricade under escort, and are now here. There is a strong sympathy among the people here with the Insurgents. We are not free from peril; but will not run away so long as we see that any purpose can be served by our presence here. In haste.

The Secretary of State for the Provinces.

Very respectfully,

(Signed)

W. McDougall.

SIR,

Ottawa, 19th November, 1869.

I had the honour to receive this morning your Despatch of the 31st ultimo, covering Colonel Dennis' Report and other Papers relating to the obstructions opposed to your progress through the country lying between Pembina and Fort Garry.

Those Papers were promptly submitted to the Privy Council, and I am instructed to convey to you their entire approval of the judgment and prudence displayed by you in the trying circumstances in which you were placed.

At this distance from the scene of disturbance any instructions that could be sent to you would only embarrass you, and restrain your freedom of action. You will therefore exercise your own judgment, and decide on the instant, as circumstances change, what is best to be done.

The Government entertain the hope that the opposition presented will be withdrawn when the prejudices aroused have been allayed by frank explanations; and in the mean time they would deeply regret that blood should be shed, or that any hasty or intemperate exercise, even of lawful authority, should, in the transfer of the Country, array the feelings of any large portion of the people against your administration.

As matters stand you can claim or assert no authority in the Hudson Bay Territory until the Queen's Proclamation, annexing the Country to Canada, reaches you through this Office. It will probably be issued on the 2nd of December, and will be forwarded by a safe hand as soon as received. You had better inform Governor McTavish that you are only proceeding to Fort Garry on the assumed consent of the Company and its Officers, and, having stated the facts, await his answer. If he either declines to admit you, or is powerless to give you safe conduct, stay where you are till further advised.

In due time, no doubt, when all peaceful means have been exhausted, should it be necessary, the power of the Crown will be exerted, and the authority of this Government maintained. In the mean time let me hear from you by every Mail, and inform me by what safe means we can communicate with the least possible delay.

Hon. Wm. McDougall.

I have, &c.,

(Signed)

JOSEPH HOWE,

Secretary of State for the Provinces.

MY DEAR WHELOCK,

Ottawa, November 19th, 1869.

Send this by a safe hand as quickly as you can, so that it may not be stopped or tampered with by the way.

Yours truly,

JOSEPH HOWE,

Secretary of State for the Provinces.

Say nothing of this; the expense will be paid.

MR. JOSEPH WHELOCK, St. Paul, Minesota.

November 20th, 1869.

Letter for you mailed to-day. Should Governor McDougall return to St. Paul, request him to remain there till he hears from me. Telegraph any authentic news from frontier. They will charge tolls to this Office.

MY DEAR MR. HOWE,

Hamilton, 18th November, 1869.

I am in receipt of your kind Letter of the 16th respecting Telegram, which was sent with the conviction that matters were in a more serious state than Mr. McDougall or you supposed. Immediately after your departure the Insurrection began to develop itself. Armed men immediately took possession of the roads entering Fort Garry. A meeting of the Council was at once called, and the wildest excitement followed. The leader of the insurgents, "Riel," was before the Council from 10 A.M. till 7 P.M., and concluded by convincing them that he was correct and they wrong. We purposed leaving the Friday following your departure, but were detained, by order of Governor McTavish, four days to hear the decision of the Council, that he might send by me verbal advice to Governor McDougall. The Council, finding itself powerless, broke up without taking any action, while the Insurgents were gathering fresh material hourly. Governor McTavish was unable to attend the Council, and is failing rapidly. Shall not be surprised to hear of his death by any Mail. When leaving Stinking River, we found an encampment of the Rebels thirty strong. They had barricaded the roads, and were patrolling on both sides of the barricade, all armed with rifles. They seized our horses by the heads, and we had to dismount. It was very generally known they had a force out to intercept the Government supplies for Dennis and Snow, also the rifles being brought forward by Governor McDougall. I, however, sent messengers to him, and learned, when I met him, the rifles had been carefully stored below, so they are safe. Mr. McDougall, not having been in the Settlement, can only have a general idea of the true position, and I felt that affairs were assuming so serious an aspect that I thought I would at once hurry down to Ottawa and enter fully into detail; but afterwards thought it better to telegraph, and, if you thought it necessary, you would telegraph, for more particulars. On my arrival in St. Paul, and when passing through St. Cloud, and other of those villages, I found a great many rough men collecting and preparing for the Prairies, just the class who would only be too ready to fillibuster, and, knowing that in a week they would be out of the way, I put into the paper the account of Mr. McDougall's safe arrival.

At Fort Garry you saw telegraphed from St. Paul, which I have to confess had not one word of truth in it. * * * * * Things are not healthy, and I am afraid it will cost money and blood yet.

If there is anything more you may wish to know, write me; or, if you think necessary, I will run down.

Mr. J. Howe, Secretary of State for the Provinces.

I am &c.,

Copy of a TELEGRAM from * * * to SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD.

Dated at Toronto, November 24th, 1869.

Letter received at St. Paul's to-day, dated Pembina (10th), says Governor McDougall has rented a house there for the winter, other members of his Cabinet are boarding in Pembina. The Letter says object of the Insurgents is not to throw off allegiance to Queen, but to oppose annexation to Canada. Nothing new from Fort Garry or McDougall.

Copy of a TELEGRAM from * * * to SIR JOHN A. McDONALD.

Toronto, November 24th, 1869.

A gentleman from Fort Garry arrived at St. Paul's yesterday, says that the English half-breeds and whites are taking little or no part in the demonstration, it being made chiefly by French half-breeds. A system of passes has been adopted, and strict surveillance exercised. The Insurgents have taken possession of Hudson Bay Store House, and dealing out themselves daily rations from the Company's supplies. Dr. Brown, the Editor of the 'Nor'-Wester,' refused to print rebel proclamation, but printers were forced at mouth of the musket to issue the revolutionary document, which was posted in various parts of rebellious Districts. A Red River trading house in St. Paul's learns that there is a strong organization, including many half-breeds, waiting favourable opportunity to declare in favour of Governor McDougall. A Fenian Priest is said to be the directing mind of the disturbance.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

Dakotah Territory, U.S., Pembina,
5th November, 1869.

CANADA.

SIR,

I have the honour to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, the events which have occurred in this vicinity since my communication of the 31st October. I expected to have been able to send this Report by the Mail which left Pembina this morning; but, in consequence of the unexpected closing of the Mail last evening at six o'clock, which the Postmaster said was "contract time," I was able to write only a short note, which, for prudential reasons, I addressed unofficially to Mr. Meredith. I now proceed to give you the details of the important events which have prevented me from remaining in the North-West Territory.

On the first day of November, about eleven o'clock, A.M., while I was talking with a Chippewa Chief and some of his band who had met me by appointment, Colonel Dennis and an English half-breed, Mr. Hallet, arrived from Fort Garry, having left the Fort early in the morning of the previous day. They rode over the prairie some miles to the West of Red River, and were not observed by the rebel scouts. Colonel Dennis brought a Despatch from Governor McTavish, of which the Paper marked A is a copy. He also handed me the papers marked B and C, bringing down his own narrative to the day previous to his departure.

As the Governor and his Council concurred with Colonel Dennis in the opinion that it would be imprudent for me to proceed to Fort Garry under present circumstances, and as no steps had been taken towards organizing a force to support the Authorities, I had no alternative but to remain at the Hudson's Bay Company's Post. The furniture, &c., for Government House having arrived at Pembina from St. Cloud, the person who had undertaken to deliver it at Fort Garry called upon me to know if he was to proceed with his freight, suggesting that it might be stopped on the way and perhaps destroyed. I told him that, as he had bargained to deliver it at Fort Garry, he must complete his contract. I had reason to believe that he was aware of the designs and movements of the Insurgents, and was in their confidence, if not in their plot. I took pains to impress him with the belief that it was no child's play his friends had begun, and that all the consequences of rebellion against Imperial authority must follow in this case as in others. I told him I had been sent as a Civil Governor, and was prepared to treat all classes and parties in the most friendly and impartial manner; but if they preferred a Military regime and martial law, they were taking the proper course to secure it. I knew that he would report my remarks as he passed through the Rebel camp, and I thought it would be politic, since they had gone so far, that they should understand the view I took of their proceedings. I knew that Mr. Provencher's Mission must end either favourably or otherwise, before my interlocutor could see his friends. He told me that a party of twenty mounted men would pay me a visit in a day or two. As evidence of the earnestness and patriotic spirit of the Insurgents, he showed me a song in French, copied partly from the Marseillaise, and which was being circulated among the half-breeds of the neighbourhood. He proposed to buy some portion of the property in his charge—the stoves especially—in order to save it from destruction. I declined his proposal, with the remark that the rebels might as well destroy the stoves as anything else; but I would hold him responsible, in the first place, for their safe delivery at Fort Garry, and I thought the farms and cattle of the half-breed Settlers would ultimately be found sufficient to pay any damage they might inflict on public or private property. I told him he could do as he pleased with his freight, as I had no directions to give him until he arrived at Fort Garry. Upon this he left the Post, convinced at all events that he had not succeeded in frightening me into a sale of the Government property at his own price. His carts, in a few minutes, were on their way to the Settlement. I have not up to this moment (4 o'clock P.M.) been able to ascertain whether they have passed the barricade unmolested or not.

The interview with the Chippewa Chief, Kewetaosh, and his band, which I stated in my previous Report was fixed for this day, was interesting to us and apparently satisfactory to him. His pipe-bearer, after filling the pipe with tobacco mixed with dry willow-bark, and placing a live coal upon it, rose with the pipe in his hand and waited for an observation from the Chief. He, with the dignity of his race and class, rose slowly from his seat, and pointing to a large silver medal on his breast, which had been given to his grandfather in the time of George III., said he was glad to see me as the English Governor. Pointing to the fumes of the pipe, he said there was no harm in that smoke—it meant peace and friendship between us. He then sat down and the pipe-bearer presented me the pipe, which I smoked for a little, and then returned to him. It was then handed to Mr. Richards and the other members of my party, each in turn. It was next smoked by the Indians, and last of all by the Chief. This ceremony being over, the Chief drew himself up for his speech. He is a pure Indian, about fifty years of age, with a stately figure and an agreeable and intelligent countenance. He repeated his friendly greeting, and said he had waited some time to see me. He was sorry to hear of the proceedings of the half-breeds in the Settlement, and wished me not to go there. He had not much to say, but would ask me a question. Had I bought their (his) land from the Hudson Bay Company? He then proceeded to lay claim to the country from Pembina to the Assiniboine, and from the high lands on the West to the Lake of the Woods. He said his ancestors had never sold their title to any part of it—they had only lent as much as a man could see under a horse's belly on both sides of the River to the Company, and he now wanted to know what I was going to do with his land. He repeated his desire to be on good terms with me, and said that neither he nor his band had anything to do with the movements or designs of the French half-breeds.

I replied to his speech through an interpreter, a French Canadian Settler, who spoke a little Chippewa and about as much English. I reciprocated his friendly greeting, and expressed my regret that, from the length of the journey I had travelled, and the time required for preparation for it, I had not reached Pembina as soon as was expected. I was glad to see him and his band, and hoped we would be able to make a satisfactory agreement about any land of his we might require. I explained the nature of the arrangement with the Hudson's Bay Company, which I assured him left his rights, whatever they might be, just as they stood before. With respect to his remark that I ought not to go to Fort Garry—if he meant it as a friendly warning, I thanked him for it, but I told him I must obey, not the wishes of others but the requirements of duty. I was sent to govern the country in the Queen's name, and would do it unless prevented by force. I then produced a map of the Territory, and asked him to point out the bounds of the land to which he and his band laid claim. This proposal was evidently something he did not expect, and a good deal of consultation took place between him and his companions. I told them I merely wished to find out the extent of the country they claimed; that I was not prepared either to admit their claim or deny it, but, before we could negotiate, I must know what it was they pretended to own; that there were other Indian bands, especially towards the Lake of the Woods, who would probably claim some part of the territory he had described as belonging to his band. It then came out that three Chiefs—"Pequis," near Lake Winnipeg, "Fox," of Prairie Portage, and "Gros Oeille," of Oak Point, towards Lake of the Woods, and himself, agreed last winter upon a division of the country between them, and that his claim was to be limited to the country bounded by Scratching River and the Government Road on the North, Pembina Mountain on the West, White Mouth River on the East, and the American Boundary on the South. I questioned him as to the bargain with Lord Selkirk; whereupon he appealed to an old man who said he was present on the occasion, and remembered that "My Lord," as he was called, only borrowed the land along Red River, as far as he could see under a horse. I asked him how long it was understood the loan should continue? Another consultation took place among the Indians, and they answered twenty or twenty-five years. To my question—whether any written record of the agreement was preserved, they said they had never seen any. He said his band numbered about six hundred souls, and that he could not make any cession of their rights without consultation with the other Chiefs. He mentioned the month of May as the most convenient time to meet them at Fort Garry for a Conference with me. As I learned that his band, excluding half-breeds, did not probably exceed half the number he had stated, I told him it would be necessary, when he came to Fort Garry, to bring a list of the number of families, and their names and places of residence who acknowledged him as their Chief, excluding American Indians and half-breeds. This he agreed to do. I directed the Hudson's Bay Company's Agent to give them some tobacco, flour, and tea, according to custom on such occasions. We all shook hands and the Conference was at an end.

I then had a private interview with Colonel Dennis and Mr. Hallett, who had taken some rest in the mean time, and endeavoured to ascertain the precise object of the insurrectionary movement, and the probability of its present success. I confess that their verbal account of the condition of things at Fort Garry—the indecision and infirmity of the Governor, the hesitation and indifference of the Merchants and English half-breeds—more than confirmed the impression I had derived from the correspondence, that there would be no measures taken to arrest the progress of the Rebellion or resist any government the French half-breeds might set up. Colonel Dennis expressed the opinion that the "Canadians" in the country could be relied upon; that they were fretting under the inactivity of the Authorities, and would at once rally under any vigorous leader who appealed to them in the name of law and order and the authority of the Crown. But unfortunately their number was small as compared with the Insurgents, and they were much scattered over the country. The Local Government had not even published a warning to the malcontent portion of the population of the consequences which would be likely to follow their threatened resort to arms. No official statement of the nature of the arrangement with the Hudson's Bay Company and of the authority under which it was made had been published to remove the misapprehensions created in the minds of the half-breeds by designing men in the Settlement. It was well known at Fort Garry that American citizens had come into the country ostensibly for purposes of trade, but in reality to create disaffection, and, if possible, a movement for annexation to the United States. These men and their sympathizers, had been actively engaged in circulating stories, absurd as they were unfounded, to alarm the fears of the half-breeds and excite their hostility against the Canadian Government. It was known that these stories had produced the desired effect, yet nothing appears to have been done by the Government to counteract them, beyond explanation and remonstrance verbally and to a few individuals, some of whom it was believed had entirely misrepresented to the ignorant half-breeds the purport of their conversations with members of the Council. Neither Colonel Dennis nor Mr. Hallett could suggest anything better than a policy of inaction on my part until I heard the result of Mr. Provencher's Mission.

The next day (Tuesday), about five o'clock in the afternoon, fourteen horsemen were seen approaching us from the direction of Fort Garry. It was soon evident that they were armed and moving rapidly forward. As they approached they slackened their pace and dismounted at the gate of the stockade which surrounds the Post, with their guns cocked and in military order. In a few minutes two of their number demanded an interview with me. They left their arms with their comrades at the gate, and were at once admitted. I invited them to a seat, and asked them what they wished to say to me. They replied that they had been sent to tell me I must leave the North-West Territory—I must go back before nine o'clock to-morrow morning. I asked them who had sent them with this message? They said the Committee—the Government. I asked, what Government? They said, "The Government we have made." I asked what they were instructed to do if I declined to go back? They said they did not know—they had no order. I then told them I was sent to assume the Government of the country under the Queen of England and by her authority, and I could not obey the orders of their Committee. I at the same time produced my Commission under the Great Seal, and handed it to the Captain for his perusal. He evidently could not read it, but the parchment and seal seemed to convince him that it was what I described it to be. He handed it back, saying that if his leaders had seen that he thought they would not have opposed me—they did not wish to take up arms against the Queen. He added that I ought to have come on as far as the Barricade, which I might have done without molestation. I told him, in reply, that I was going on as fast as I could when I was stopped by a written order from his Committee, which I handed to him. He read it, and remarked that he was not present when it was written, but admitted that it came from the National Committee, whose orders he obeyed. His companion having left the room, he seemed impatient to end the conversation, and rose to retire. I had asked their names, which they gave without hesitation as Lepine and Lavaillo. They were very respectful in their bearing, and seemed ashamed of the business they had on hand. I sent out to ask if they wished to eat, which they said they would be glad to do, and I accordingly ordered some pork and bread and tea to be given to them. Hearing of their remarks to one another that if they had known I was coming to represent the Queen as well as the Government of Canada, and that I was not sent to interfere with their religious or private rights, they would not have joined the insurgent party; and having observed the effect of the Great Seal upon the Captain of the band, I resolved to send for the whole party and explain my position and authority to them in the same manner as I had done to the two leaders. They replied to my invitation that they were tired, and that some of their party had gone to the village and could not see me until morning. About six o'clock the same morning Mr. Provencher and Captain Cameron made their appearance at the Post, escorted by six horsemen, who had conducted them as prisoners all the way from River Salé. These gentlemen had not been allowed to go beyond the Barricade, or to hold any communication with the authorities at Fort Garry. Mr. Provencher's Report of his Mission and its result is enclosed herewith, marked E.

About eight o'clock in the morning of Wednesday, the 3rd instant, loud talking was heard at the gateway, and on going out I found the Rebel party, with their arms in their hands, drawn up in a half circle, gesticulating fiercely, and threatening that if we were not off by nine o'clock they would not answer for our lives. I found that they had made a prisoner of Mr. Hallett, who went out to repeat my invitation of the evening before, and that he was then tied to a cart and not allowed to speak to any of my party. Seeing their temper, and thinking it would not be prudent to give them an excuse for any further outrage, I ordered the horses to be harnessed and we drove away from the Hudson's Bay Company's Post towards Pembina, escorted by a portion of the party on foot. When I reached the post which has been set up to mark the 49th parallel, the Captain of the band stopped, and addressing me in French, said, "You must not return beyond this line," pointing to the boundary monument. He further remarked that he did not know me as Governor, but only as Mr. McDougall. As three or four persons had joined us on the way, but had no other connection with us, I asked if they also were interdicted from going on. He shrugged his shoulders and said he did not know—he would not prevent them, but perhaps they would be stopped at River Salé. I then drove on, and my escort returned to the Hudson's Bay Company's Post.

We encamped on the farm of Mr. Peter Hayden, an old Irish settler, who had been forty years in the territory, and had married the sister of the Indian Chief Kewetaosh. He was very friendly to us, and strongly British in his feeling, though living on the American side of the boundary line. Here we have remained until to-day. The weather being cold and stormy, I have directed Colonel Dennis to hire a house for our protection and stables for our horses, if they can be found in the neighbourhood, of which I have some doubt. The village of Pembina consists of the house of the Post-master, and another in which the Collector of Customs has his office. All the others, four or five in number, are mere huts, and afford very poor accommodation for their present occupants. Our position is beset with difficulties. We cannot go forward without an armed force, which is not at our command. We cannot immediately return, for our horses require rest and grain before we can undertake so long a journey. The snow may overtake us on the way, and render further progress with waggons impossible. There are no houses or supplies between this place and Georgetown, a distance of 150 miles. With the Canadians who joined me on the way, and who are now afraid to go forward, my party numbers twenty souls. Colonel Dennis is also with me, and will probably follow my fortunes, as he was ordered out of the country at the same time, and by the same authority. After surveying the situation, and deciding in my own mind upon the course which it was my duty to adopt, I held a Council with Messrs. Richards and Provencher and Colonel Dennis, Captain Cameron being at some distance from us at the moment, and having acted on his own judgment on more than one occasion against my advice, much to his own disadvantage as well as ours. I did not wait to consult him: I had previously sent Colonel Dennis to ascertain what supplies could be procured in the neighbourhood for our horses and party. He reported that the supply of tea, sugar, salt, flour, and beef (fresh), which could be obtained at the Hudson's Bay Company's Post was sufficient for our wants, if the Rebels did not seize them, or prevent us from getting possession of them. Only a few bushels of oats (about 20) could be procured on either side of the Line; but he heard that barley was more plentiful, although even that grain might be difficult to procure, if the farmers on the American side of the line proved to be, as we more than suspected they would, friendly to the Insurgents and inimical to us.

Under this state of facts we decided, 1st, to get, if possible, the 20 bushels of oats already bargained for, as our horses were much in need of them. 2nd, To secure all the barley that we could hear of, for future use. 3rd, To send down to the Hudson's Bay Company's agent for all the groceries, flour, and beef, we would require for three or four weeks at least. 4th, Having secured a sufficient supply of provisions to enable us to reach St. Cloud, if we found it necessary to return to that point, we would then make ourselves as comfortable as possible under tents, or in houses if they could be had, until we could hear from Fort Garry, and learn the effect of our expulsion upon the loyal portion of the people. We all agreed that it would be discouraging to our friends, and a great triumph for the Rebels, if their first demonstration resulted in my return to Canada before I had assumed the reins of Government. We therefore resolved to remain at Pembina for a week or two longer, if we could get supplies. I may remark that I was shown to-day a written evidence that residents of the American village of Pembina are in constant communication with the leaders of what they call the "Patriot Army," at River Salé. A Mr. Stuttsman, an ex-official of the Treasury Department, who has resided here some time, now doing business as a sort of village lawyer, and reputed to be a man of considerable influence, met the Insurgents as they rode up to the Hudson's Bay Company's Post on Tuesday, and held a short parley with them. We ascertained also that the leaders of the party went down and consulted with him and others at the village as soon as they had delivered their message to me. This person now grants passes, addressed to the Commanding Officer of the "Patriot Army," vouching for the good faith of his friends, and expressing his conviction that they were hostile to Mr. Wm. McDougall. I have entrusted to one of my party, who got into the confidence of Stuttzman, both being members of the same secret society, and obtained a pass from him, two communications addressed to Governor McTavish, copies of which I enclose herewith, marked F and G. A slight disagreement with this person on the journey, which caused some talk in our party, had reached Stuttzman's ear, and made him the more ready to take this man into his confidence. I have, on the other hand, no doubt of his loyalty to me, and that, if Colonel Stuttzman's pass is recognised by the Rebels, my letters will reach their destination.

CANADA:

Larose's Farm, 1 mile south of Pembina River,
7th November, 1869.

We were successful in obtaining our supplies, enough for two or three weeks, from the Hudson's Bay Company's Post. We got them over the Line in the night, with the aid of our Irish friend, who sent an ox-cart for them. The enemy's scouts, who were lurking about to watch our movements, were apparently deceived by this move, and allowed the cart to pass without examination. As soon as this point was gained, I ordered the tents to be struck, and the party removed to a position about a mile to the south of Pembina River, on the farm of one Larose, a Canadian from Sault Ste. Marie. He is one quarter Indian, but intelligent and friendly. He has consented to give us the use of his house, a new one, and will build a shanty for himself and family. He has also a stable for our horses, which, with a little improvement, can be made to answer our purpose. The house requires some alterations to accommodate the females and children of our party, even for a short time, which we have bargained to have made. Messrs. Richards, Provencher, and Begg have found temporary lodgings in the village, and Captain Cameron and his party are still under the shelter of the Irishman's cabin, which they share with a numerous family of half-breed children.

I have had no further communication from Fort Garry of later date than those brought by Colonel Dennis and Mr. Hallett. The mails have been stopped and opened by the Rebel force, and I have no doubt that all letters to me or any of my party have been opened and detained. I am now hourly expecting a messenger from Fort Garry, who will either pass the barricade as a friend of the Rebels, or go round them as Colonel Dennis did. Rumours of all kinds reach us, as may be supposed. The last is that Fort Garry has been taken by the Rebels, and Governor McTavish compelled to quit his house and the Fort; that sentries are posted through the Settlement, and at the house rented for me on the Assiniboine; and that there is no attempt at resistance from any quarter.

Sunday, 6 o'clock, P.M.

A messenger has just arrived from a point about forty miles down the river. He brings a letter without signature, but understood to come from Dr. Schultz and other Canadians (see Paper marked H). This letter confirms the story of the surrender of Fort Garry, and the continued inaction and helplessness of the Authorities.

I replied in a short note, without signature, by the same messenger, apprising the writer of the letter that it was my intention to remain here for the present, that I could not assume or believe that the Hudson's Bay Company's agents desired the success of the Rebels, or gave them any assistance except under compulsion, that I had opened communication with the Authorities, and had suggested a Proclamation by them explaining the change of Government, and the character in which I was sent, and warning the malcontents of the consequences of their acts; that, at the proper time, I would issue a Manifesto or Proclamation myself, await the effect, and be guided by circumstances. I requested the same parties to communicate with me as often as they found opportunity, but to act rather than recriminate. I at the same time addressed a short note to Governor McTavish, fearing that my previous letters might have failed to reach him (see Paper marked I). I arranged with the messenger, who is an intelligent and loyal German half-breed, to keep open a private channel of communication, if possible, with the Settlement during my stay here.

From the foregoing narration, and the Papers enclosed, his Excellency will be able to appreciate the difficulties by which I am surrounded, and the grave questions which may soon present themselves for his consideration. While I hope to receive a message that the "emeute" is at an end, and that the authority of the Crown will be recognized in my person by those who are now in arms. I confess there are facts in the case which point strongly to a different result.

I may observe, in conclusion, that, apprehending the possibility of some such interruption as I have encountered, I arranged at St. Cloud for the transport of the arms and ammunition to Georgetown, there to await my order. They are now in possession of the Hudson's Bay Company's agent at that post, and not likely to fall into the hands of the Rebels. If I hear of any attempt on their part to get possession of them, I shall take steps to remove them, if possible, to Fort Abercrombie.

I am, &c.,

The Hon. the Secretary of State for the Provinces, Ottawa, Canada.

(A.)

MY DEAR SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River, 30th October, 1869.

It is with much concern I have to say that among a certain portion of the half-breed population here there prevails a degree of excitement at the prospect of your arrival in the country, which seems to make it necessary that in coming into the Settlement you should use great circumspection; and it is for the purpose of pointing attention to that apparent necessity, that I send you this communication.

For some weeks past rumours have been reaching me, through more or less reliable channels, of dissatisfaction among the French half-breeds with the recent arrangements; but believing, as I then did, that these feelings had no very deep root, I indulged the hope that they might pass away. But in this respect, I am deeply pained to say, I have been disappointed, and that, within the last few days, the feeling of discontent has manifested itself in such a manner as to create serious apprehensions for the result. After interfering with the surveying operations of Colonel Dennis, these people, in considerable numbers, have combined for the avowed purpose of stopping your entrance into the Settlement, and with that view they have actually taken up permanent positions on the road by which, in the usual course of travel, you would advance.

Ever since matters began to assume a serious aspect, the conduct of these people has been, I may say, constantly engaging the earnest deliberations of the Local Authorities, but although every effort has been made which the Council deemed prudent or practicable for bringing these misguided people to reason and for procuring their peaceable dispersion, yet I am sorry to say that hitherto all has been without effect, and that the difficulty—the serious and now somewhat alarming difficulty—still remains unsolved, as to how you are to be effectually protected from molestation in approaching the Settlement.

From Colonel Dennis I learn that, by different hands, he has been lately sending you Reports upon the state of matters here, and that in his last communication he had advised you to remain at Pembina until you should have ascertained through reliable intelligence from this, that, by some means or other, the course had been cleared so as to make it prudent for you to come on. It appears to me that, under the circumstances, the advice so tendered by Colonel Dennis was sound and judicious, and it relieved my mind from much anxiety to hear that Officer express so confident a belief that you would be inclined to act upon it; although I cannot but add that I fully share in his feeling of mortification at being so circumstanced as to be constrained to counsel such a course.

I have not myself seen Colonel Dennis's communications to you on the subject of these unfortunate occurrences, but he has been kind enough to read them to some Members of the Council, for the purpose of enabling them to judge of the accuracy and completeness of his information; and upon their assurance, I have no hesitation in saying that the contents of the Colonel's communications to you may be relied upon as conveying in the main a correct narrative of the occurrences to which they refer, and a fair representation of the popular sentiment throughout the Settlement.

The question which now presses itself upon every mind is, what is to be done to secure your peaceable entrance into the Settlement. So far, all our expedients have failed, and unless the efforts of a temporizing character which are still being earnestly used for the dispersion of the malcontents succeed, it is to be feared that your coming into the Settlement at the present moment would not be free from considerable danger.

From Colonel Dennis's Despatches and this Letter you will derive as full and accurate a knowledge of the position of affairs here as, I believe, can very well be given in writing, and having satisfied myself that you are acquainted with all the material circumstances of the case, I think that you are now in possession of the principal data for enabling you to determine the important question of your movements, and I need not say that I shall most anxiously await your decision.

But, without of course, in any way meaning to prescribe the line to be pursued, I may be permitted to add that to those who with myself have been deliberating upon the most advisable steps to be taken in circumstances of so embarrassing and so critical a nature, there have been suggested three courses for meeting the difficulty as it now stands.

The first is that there happily being, among even the French half-breeds, a considerable element of well-disposed persons, there should be carefully selected from that section a body of from twenty to thirty men, who, mounted and armed, should proceed to Pembina and escort you to your residence in the Settlement by a round-about road, which would keep you entirely clear of the roads on which the malcontents are known to have taken up their positions.

The second is that of making a public call upon the whole loyal portion of the Settlement to turn out in the cause of order, and to the number of say 300 unarmed able-bodied men—if such a force could be mustered—proceed to Pembina, and escort you into the Settlement by the usual route, whether the malcontents remain upon it or not.

And the third is, that you should remain at Pembina and await the issue of conciliatory negotiations, with a view of procuring a peaceable dispersion of the malcontents.

Now, with respect to the first of these courses, it is in my opinion open to the grave objection, that, even if it were to issue in your safe arrival amongst us, it would obviously involve a virtual acknowledgement of the ascendancy of these lawless people, and would have a direct tendency to inspire them with fresh courage in the prosecution of their designs; and, besides, I am strongly of opinion that, under present circumstances, your personal safety could not be sufficiently provided for by the attendance of so small a body of men as that proposed; a body large enough to provoke a collision, but probably far from strong enough successfully to meet it.

The second is one which the Local Authorities have all along been pondering, but one which, as in somewhat similar emergencies on former occasions, they have hitherto shrunk from adopting, partly from a misgiving as to the extent and the spirit of the response to such a call as that proposed, and partly also, but principally, from an apprehension of precipitating a collision between different sections of the people, which might plunge, not only the Settlement, but the whole Territory, into all the disasters of a war of races and religions—a war in which the legitimate object for which it had been begun would probably soon be lost sight of, and passion and prejudice alone animate the minds of those engaged in it.

To the Council and myself it appears that, under present circumstances, the third proposal is the only one that can be regarded as prudent or practicable; and it is therefore our opinion that you should remain at Pembina and await the issue of conciliatory negotiations, in the hope of procuring a peaceable dispersion of the malcontents.

I have only to add that, although this Letter proceeds ostensibly from myself, it embodies the views of the Council of Assiniboia, and that at a Meeting of the Council to-day, held for the express purpose, it was unanimously adopted as to the communication which I should immediately make you.

Earnestly hoping that ere long some peaceable solution of all these difficulties may be arrived at,
I remain, &c.,

The Hon. William McDougall, C.B.

(Signed) W. McTAVISH.

THURSDAY, 28th October.

The situation remains unchanged. I sent down, about 9 o'clock, provisions for Mr. Dease's party, consisting of one bag flour, a quarter of beef, and a small quantity of tea and sugar. Called upon Dr. Cowan about 11 o'clock, and found with him Judge Black. Was informed that the Governor, having written a note for Père Ritchot to come down and see him, that Priest was there with him. Mr. McBeth, a Member of the Council, called at Dr. Cowan's while I was there, and the conversation turned upon the necessity of advising Mr. McDougall, from the Council or some other official source, as to the situation of affairs here; so that that gentleman would receive it before he came to Pembina. I stated that I had prepared from day to day a statement of facts and circumstances connected with the outbreak, which I had taken the opportunity to send forward so as to meet Mr. McDougall, I thought, in good time; and that, in order to let the Council see to what extent I had put Mr. McDougall in possession of the facts, I had no objection, although I had no intention when writing of making it public, to show them the statement referred to. They expressed a desire to that effect, and I accordingly sent for the statement, and read it. I was glad to find that the feeling was unanimous that the statement of facts and views which I had sent forward to Mr. McDougall was, without exception, truthful and reliable—Judge Black remarking that the Council could add nothing to the statement calculated to give Mr. McDougall a more accurate description of the state of affairs.

5 P.M.—Judge Black has just called to say that the Governor failed, after some three hours' interview with Père Ritchot, to bring him and his party to reason. He says, also, that Mr. Dease has informed him that the Insurgent party have made an overture to the effect that, if they the Peace party will join them in turning Mr. McDougall out of the Territory at a subsequent time, should he refuse to accede to their present demands, they will allow him to enter in the mean time. This, however, Mr. Black mentioned that he had advised Mr. Dease could not be consented to, as it might involve precisely the same outrage as that at present contemplated. It was understood, then, that Mr. Dease would see the refractory party again this evening, and endeavour to get them to consent to make their proposition less objectionable.

FRIDAY, 29th October.—The negotiation, spoken of last evening, ended in nothing. Mr. Dease reports that, based upon the statements which he had reason to believe emanated from Père Ritchot last evening, the assertion is made by that party that Governor McTavish is favourable to their designs. I am not sure, from Mr. Dease's manner, that I succeeded in convincing him of what I am convinced myself, that nothing is further from the fact. If Mr. Ritchot made any such assertion, he has stated it for the purpose of intentionally misleading his party, and maintaining his control over them. Sent another day's supply of provisions down for Mr. Dease's party. Was invited to meet, at the Fort, at 9 o'clock this morning, some Members of the Council; these were Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Fraser, Dr. Cowan, Mr. Dease, and Judge Black. After some conversation, it was arranged that Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland should visit the camp of the disaffected, and endeavour to impress them with the fact, that the English-speaking element in the Settlement was entirely opposed to their views and their proceedings, and see what they could do to bring them to reason. I have provided Mr. William Hallett and the Cree Chief Fox with conveyance, and they have also gone up to have an interview with the Insurgents for a like purpose.

3 P.M.—Charles Donald, an English half-breed, resident in Mapleton Parish, down below the Lower Fort, who had been instructed by Mr. Dease to notify all of the well-disposed half-breeds in his part of the Settlement to be in readiness to turn out, if called upon to join his party, has just arrived from below, on his way up to the Insurgents, to deliver them a letter, of which that on page 458 is a copy. Complaining that his horse, having been carrying him for the last two days and one night, was exhausted, he left his horse and I lent him another.

9 P.M.—Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland have called, bringing the accompanying note from Dr. Cowan. These gentlemen state that, on their visiting the Insurgent camp, they were met by Père Ritchot, who took them into a private room in his own house, in part of which was the Chapel, and, declining for a long time to bring them face to face with the Leaders in this movement, used every effort to persuade them that it would be impossible to get them to withdraw from the stand they had taken. The gentlemen insisted, however, and at length were shown by the Priest upstairs in the same building, into what he termed the Committee Room. Here were sitting, in a very formal way, the Committee, consisting of ten Members. The gentlemen announced the purpose of their visit; but were told that no business could be done in the absence of the Chairman, who came in shortly after, and proved to be the man formerly mentioned, named John Bruce. Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland then proceeded to put several questions as to the object and purposes of the party. Not a single reply could be obtained to any of these, and at length it became difficult for them to get a hearing at all; it seeming as if the leaders, Bruce and Riel—the latter also being in the room—were afraid to allow these gentlemen to speak, for fear their arguments might lead to a defection in their camp. Mr. William Hallett was also present, and commenced addressing the Committee, most of the Members being well known to him, in the Indian language; but they refused to allow him to go on, the voice of the Priest being heard from the room below, where he had been evidently listening to the proceedings, calling out, "Why do you not speak in French?" After spending the whole day there to no purpose, Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland returned. They report the strength of the party, every member of which, so far as they saw, was completely armed, at about one hundred and fifty men. Mr. Hallett and the Chief have also returned, and corroborate in every way the statements made by Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland. Mr. Hallett tells me that the Chief Fox spoke effectively in his native language to the Insurgents outside. They did not leave the camp until some time after the gentlemen named, and Mr. Hallett tells me that he saw signs of wavering among some of the subordinate leaders of the refractory party, and thinks there is good reason to believe that the feeling will increase, with all the influences that are being brought to bear in its favour by the other half-breeds, that it will lead to the enterprise being abandoned. Mr. Hallett informs me, also, that the Insurgent party had sent out to get in the Chief "Gros Oreille" and his people to join their side; and the Chief, with ten of his men, came in accordingly. On learning, however, the character of the proceedings, the Chief declined to identify himself with it at all, and he and his men withdrew from that party, and were at a house near there, where he (Hallett) and the Chief "Fox" had an interview with him last night. These men sent a written paper to me by Hallett, conveying sentiments with regard to this movement. (See Memorandum attached, in French.) I have every reason to believe that all the Indians, cognisant of the designs of the Insurgents, are entirely opposed to them. Whether in the future, should the affair take a more serious turn, the Priests will be able to take them over, remains to be seen. Hallett says, and his statement is corroborated by Messrs. Fraser and Sutherland, that the Priest Ritchot remarked that Mr. McDougall might perhaps come in by some other route, and indicated by his language that in such case they would not follow him, as to their present intentions.

SATURDAY, 30th October.—At Fort, at 9 A.M. Met Dr. Cowan and the Recorder. The Père Lestanc, the Red River being difficult to cross on account of the ice forming, had remained all night with the Governor, and had just left with the promise to the latter, that all the efforts and influence that his position could bring to bear would be applied to putting a stop to the disturbance. I was informed that all the Members of the Council, that could be got together by 11 o'clock, were being sent for to attend a Special Meeting called for that hour. The Chiefs "Gros Oreille" and the "Fox" being both in town, I made a point of seeing them, and presenting them each with a new blanket, some provisions, and some other trifling articles.

5 P.M.—Saw Dr. Cowan and the Recorder at the Fort; the result of the meeting of Council was the drawing up of a letter to Mr. McDougall, which was read to me, in which he was informed of the position of affairs and different courses of action suggested for his consideration. That letter goes forward to-night, and, for fear of miscarriage, a duplicate will follow by the mail on Monday. Père Lestanc, in accordance with the promise which he had made this morning, came over to the Fort this evening to the Governor, and found it necessary to express his regrets—as I understand—that all efforts he had been able to bring to bear had been of no avail. The party under Père Ritchot as yet show not the slightest inclination to give way; but, on the contrary, by their language, and the fact of their having stopped some of the carts with goods and detained them unnecessarily, are creating annoyance in the minds of those who have been disposed to stand aloof, which annoyance may yet take shape and tend to increase the difficulties.

ADDRESS to COLONEL DENNIS from RESIDENTS in the Town of WINNIPEG.

To COLONEL DENNIS,

Fort Garry, October 27, 1869.

We, the undersigned British subject, members of a meeting held at the Garrett House, town of Winnipeg, this evening, in accordance with a Resolution passed to that effect, beg to inform you that we are ready at your call to proceed to Pembina to escort Governor McDougall into this Settlement.

Address to Col. Dennis from Residents in the town of Winnipeg, offering their services to proceed to Pembina, and escort into the Red River Settlement Lieut.-Gov. McDougall.

Received 27th Oct., 1869.

(E.)

Letter from Mr. J. A. N. PROVENCHER to Governor WILLIAM McDUGALL, C.B.

SIR,

Pembina, 3rd November, 1869.

I have the honour to report that, according to your instructions of the 30th ultimo, I left the Fort of Pembina, with the intention of going as far as possible in the direction of Fort Garry, and there to meet the leaders of the so-called half-breed party. After I had proceeded a few miles from Pembina,

CANADA.

I noticed that all my movements were closely watched by scouts constantly communicating from one point to another. These scouts were on horseback. At about 5 P.M., one of these mounted scouts began to follow my waggon. He refused to give his name, but said it was his intention to accompany me as far as Salé River, where the barricade was established. Not being able to go as far as that point that evening, I put up during the night at a house near the road. Every precaution was taken by the proprietor of the house, who appeared to be connected with the Insurgent movement, to prevent my escape during the night. They were especially afraid of my going to Fort Garry, as one of their first objects was to prevent every communication between the Authorities there and yourself.

In the morning I went to the place called Salé River, where I found a fence across the road, and a guard of about thirty or forty footmen. I immediately got out of my waggon and asked for the chief officer in command. The answer was that I would be conducted to him at the house he occupied. It was about four or five minutes' walk beyond the fence alluded to. I told my driver to wait for me, but they told him to follow with the waggon. I was accompanied by a guard of ten or fifteen men, all armed with guns, rifles, and pistols of various kinds. I was asked to assist at the church service just beginning, to which I assented. I talked with several men whom I had reason to believe were leaders of the Insurgents or in some way connected with them. I was surprised to hear that they did not know anything about what had been done either in the Canadian or Imperial Parliaments relating to the North-West Territory. They only knew that Canada had paid to the Hudson's Bay Company £300,000 for their rights in that country.

I explained to them that the Imperial Parliament had authorized the transfer of the North-West Territories to Canada, and that the Canadian Parliament and the Hudson's Bay Company had agreed upon the terms of transfer. I insisted that the new Government, when established by the issuing of the Proclamation to that effect, would represent the Crown of England and the Government of Canada; but that Canada only being substituted to the rights of the Crown and the Company, could not and would not interfere with the religious or private rights of citizens. I added also that many members of the new Council would be taken from the amongst the population of this country, so as to represent as faithfully as possible all the various interests of the people, and that the policy of the Canadian Government could be ascertained by their general dealings with other Provinces, and by the speeches of Ministers on this very question. The people of Canada would only be too glad to be relieved of a portion of their responsibility by granting to those people free political institutions and self-government as soon as practicable.

Sic in orig.

They immediately seemed to see the matter in quite another light, but they uniformly answered that it was too late, and that the insurrectionary movement had taken such precautions as to prevent any peaceful settlement at present. I was told in the mean time that a new Government was already organized, that a new Constitution had been drafted, that elections had taken place, and that they were in negotiation with the English and Protestant half-breeds to arrange all matters relating to language, nationality, or religion. The same Committee, I was told, had also to decide what they would do in relation to my mission.

The general complaint of these men, as far as I could ascertain, was that they had not been consulted on the new political changes about to take place. They said they tolerated the Government of the Company from the mere fact of its existence, and because in reality the charges were so light, that they had no reason to ask for a change, though for many years they had agitated the question of electing their Representatives in the Council of Assiniboia, and now they were resolved to take advantage of the recent changes to realize that desire. They said, moreover, that they had been greatly abused by a few people, looked upon as representing the views of the Canadian Government, and that they had been led to fear that great danger would arise to them from the establishment of the new contemplated Government. Under these circumstances they decided to prevent at once any possibility of establishing that new form of Government, by not allowing the newly-appointed Governor to come into the country.

At about (4) four o'clock P.M. I was introduced to the President of the so-called Special Committee of the Half-breeds, who began by asking me in what capacity I was there? I explained what was your mission and my own. When he told me that, as the newly-appointed Chief of the Half-breeds could not acknowledge the validity of any proceedings of the Canadian Government towards them, nor our appointment, nevertheless, if the Canadian Government was willing to do it, they were ready to open negotiations with them, or with any person vested with full powers, in view of settling the terms of their coming into the Dominion of Canada.

I was told, moreover, that they would only receive such persons as representatives of the Canadian Government as they approved of for the purposes of negotiation, and that certain persons would be peremptorily objected to. Immediately after that interview, which lasted about twenty minutes, I was told that I must leave at once for the Fort at Pembina. I heard afterwards that the crowd had been calling for me for two hours, and that they were very anxious to see me away. I left with a guard of thirteen armed men on horseback; seven of them left next morning, and six came along with me as far as Fort Pembina, where I arrived the 2nd day of November at 6 o'clock P.M.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

21

CANADA.

(F.)

From Governor McDougall to Governor McTavish.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, 2nd November, 1868.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt, by the hands of Colonel Dennis, of your Letter of the 30th October, announcing the assemblage of a body of armed men upon the public road near Fort Garry, for the avowed purpose of preventing my entrance into the Settlement. Colonel Dennis had already apprised me of the movements and designs of these people, and as you state that his communications to me had been shown to, and approved, as to the statements contained, by the members of your Council, I have no doubt that I am now in possession of sufficient information to enable me to understand the origin and nature of the outbreak which your Government has been unable to prevent, and which obstructs for the present my further progress into the country.

I have acted on the suggestion of Colonel Dennis (repeated and confirmed by you) that I should delay a few days at Pembina, in the hope that the measures you have taken may result in the withdrawal of the armed parties from their present position. As you are aware, the transfer of the Territory and the powers of Government entrusted to you is to take effect on a day to be named in Her Majesty's Royal Proclamation. Until that day arrives (which I am informed will be about the 1st of December next) you are the Legal Ruler of the country, and responsible for the preservation of the public peace. My Commission authorises and commands me to assume and exercise the powers of Government from and after that day. I am instructed to proceed in the mean time to the Territory and report on certain subjects, and make preparations for the new state of things.

In these circumstances you will see that the legal authority to resist any lawless exhibition of force which may occur previous to the actual transfer of the powers of Government is in other hands than mine. You have not, it appears, felt justified in calling upon the loyal and well-disposed inhabitants of the country to aid you in the suppression of the outbreak, of which you have notified me. I must therefore conclude that your better knowledge of the disposition of the people, and of the means at your disposal to enforce your authority, convinces you that such a call would prove ineffectual; but I cannot help thinking that a Proclamation from your Government explaining the provisions of the late Imperial Act respecting the Territory, and the authority under which the new Government will exercise its powers, at the same time warning the malcontents of the serious nature of the crime they meditated, and the grave consequences to all concerned that must result from its commission, would have been well timed and perhaps sufficient to prevent the designing men at the head of this movement from accomplishing their purposes. I understand from Colonel Dennis that no Proclamation or warning has as yet been published at Fort Garry under official sanction.

I am unwilling, at this distance from the scene of action and in the circumstances by which I am surrounded, to make any other suggestion. Perhaps the measures you have taken may prove successful. I sincerely hope they may, and remain, my dear Sir,

Very faithfully,
(Signed)

WM. McDOUGALL.

From Governor McDougall to Governor McTavish.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, 4th November, 1869.

Since my Letter of the 2nd instant was written, and before I found an opportunity to send it forward, events have occurred which alter somewhat the situation of affairs. In the afternoon of that day a body of horsemen (armed), to the number of fourteen, galloped up to the Hudson's Bay Company's Post, at which I was quartered, and demanded an interview with me. Two of their number, apparently recognised as leaders, who gave their names, at my request, as Lepine and Lavaille, stated that they had been sent to tell me to go back—that I must not remain in the Post later than nine o'clock the next day. I asked them who sent them, and by what authority? They said their leaders sent them, and the authority was the Government. I asked, what Government? They replied, "The Government we have made." I told them I could not obey the orders of their Government, as I was sent by the authority of the Queen, to administer the Government in her name, at the same time exhibiting my Commission under the Great Seal, and explaining its terms. The Captain of the band looked at the Seal and parchment, and made an effort to read the document; but soon handed it back, with the remark, that if I had come on and shown the Queen's Commission to his leaders, he thought they would not have opposed me—that they did not wish to oppose the Queen's authority; he added that I could have done so without any risk. I replied that I was going on as fast as I could, when I was notified by his so-called leaders not to proceed further, showing him at the same time a Letter from the "National Committee," by order of John Bruce, President, and Lewis Riel, Secretary, which was put into my hands at Pembina immediately on my arrival. He seemed a little nonplussed by this, but merely said that he was not present when the Letter was written. I asked him what he was ordered to do in the event of my refusal to quit the Territory? He said he had no orders, and, his companions having left the room a few minutes before, took his leave somewhat abruptly.

CANADA.

Noticing the effect of the exhibition of my Commission and the remark that his party did not wish to oppose the authority of the Crown, I determined to invite the whole party (by this time increased to twenty by the arrival of those who escorted Mr. Provencher and Captain Cameron) to a friendly conference, in order to make known to them the truth as to my position and their own. But they excused themselves to the messenger by saying that the party was scattered and tired, and would see me in the morning. As it drew near eight o'clock in the morning, they seeing no preparations for our departure, surrounded the gateway and vociferously demanded that we should leave before nine o'clock. The leader stated that his orders were positive, and he would not be answerable for our lives if we remained. They had in the mean time made a prisoner of Mr. Hallett, who went out to speak to them preparatory to the proposed conference; and seeing that they were not disposed to hold any parley and might possibly commit some further outrage, I ordered my horses to be got ready, and without waiting for breakfast proceeded across the Line towards Pembina, escorted by a portion of the party, with arms in their hands. On reaching the post which marks the international boundary, they stopped and warned me not to return beyond that point, remarking that they did not know me as Governor, but only as Mr. McDougall.

Colonel Dennis was told that he must accompany me, which he accordingly did, and remains with me. Mr. Hallett, who had for some time been tied to a cart and was forbidden to speak to any of my people, was sent off towards Fort Garry under armed escort.

I am now encamped a short distance from the Boundary Line on the farm of Mr. Hayden, and intend to remain in the neighbourhood till I learn what action your Government and the loyal people of the Territory may have taken on receiving intelligence of these events. I need only say that if the people now in the Territory tamely submit to the Government these half-breeds have, or pretend they have established, I have no force at my command, and at present no authority to assist it or them. The operations, military and otherwise, which must ensue, you can guess without any suggestion from me. I have reported the facts as they have reached me to the proper authorities.

I may add, for your information, that I have good reason to believe that there are persons on the American side of the line actively engaged in fomenting these disturbances, and that there are also persons of some influence in the Settlement in correspondence with them. Their avowed object is to bring about the annexation of the Territory, or some part of it, to the United States. I cannot learn that the French half-breeds have contemplated this as the result of their movement; but it is well to know all the influences and motives at work.

I trust you will take measures to keep me advised of what is going on beyond the Barricade, and whether, in your opinion, any useful purpose will be served by my remaining here for any length of time.

I leave many details for verbal communication, which you will no doubt receive from reliable quarters, not being sure that this will reach you unread by others.

Governor McTavish,

Fort Garry.

To the Honourable WM. McDOUGALL, C.B., &c., Pembina.

Winnipeg, 5th November, 1869.

We, as friends, would advise you by the bearer, who is a reliable man, as to the position of affairs here. The Insurgents have taken possession of Fort Garry, and established sentries at its gates. No opposition offered by the Officers of the Company, although informed that such an event would take place twelve hours before. The town is also occupied by the Rebels. So far no disturbance has occurred. Considerable wavering among the half-breeds of Riel's party, on account of Mr. Provencher not being allowed to address them in public, and many would be glad to go quietly to their homes. The Rebels call a general meeting about Monday next, and will then demand an expression of the whole Settlement, which we shall take care to have present, and have no doubt that a large majority will be in your favour, and advise you strongly to await the result at Pembina.

The Hudson's Bay Company are evidently with the Rebels, and their present role is to prevent your having any official intercourse with them. It is said that the Rebels will support the Government of the Hudson's Bay Company as it now exists. All the subordinates in the party say that if you have a Commission from Her Majesty to enter here as Governor, they will lay down their arms. Riel and the other leaders allow them to know nothing. If the Proclamation can be issued here, and the Hudson's Bay Company's Government officially called on to act, they (the Hudson's Bay Company) would be forced to suppress the Insurrection, and they can easily do it.

The actual number of the disaffected do not exceed 250 men, all told, and the slightest opposition would reduce that number to the original 40, including the priests at their head.

The supporters of the Rebels in town begin to manifest considerable anxiety. Our opinion is that the Proclamation should be forwarded by the bearer, and we will see it placarded here. Send duplicate copies to Portage La Prairie by a trusty man to * * *. On no account leave Pembina till you have established official communication with the Hudson's Bay Company. Any such sent by the bearer will be duly handed to them.

We are friends of the Canadian Government.

From GOVERNOR McDougall to GOVERNOR McTAVISH.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, November 7th, 1869.

I avail myself of this opportunity to inform you that I have been compelled, by an armed party of twenty men, to leave the Hudson Bay Company's Post here and recross the Line. I am now in American territory, and shall remain here for the present. I wrote you two Letters, both in one envelope, detailing the proceedings and position of things here, and suggesting a Proclamation from your Government explaining the nature of the change in the Government, and warning the malcontents of the consequences of their acts. I was disappointed to hear from those who met me that they had not been informed by any one in authority that the change of Government was an Imperial Act, and had the sanction of the Queen. I also reminded you and your Council that until the actual transfer and Proclamation you are the legal rulers, and responsible for the preservation of the public peace. I am surprised to learn, by a communication brought by the bearer of this, that a few Rebels have been allowed to take your Fort, unopposed even by a public protest. Of course I am not in the best position to judge or advise in such a crisis; but, in the hope that by some means the people will find out what it is they are doing, and will shrink from the consequences of war, and bloodshed, and confiscation, which are sure to follow, I shall remain here until I hear officially of the transfer of authority, and shall then be guided by circumstances as to what I shall say and do.

Hoping to hear from you full details of what has occurred, and what you advise to be done there as well as here,

Governor McTavish.

I remain, &c.,

(Signed)

WILLIAM McDougall.

From ALEXANDER BEGG, Collector, to the Hon. the MINISTER of CUSTOMS, Ottawa.

SIR,

Pembina Village, U.S., 11th November, 1869.

I have the honour to report that I reached Pembina on the 30th ult., en route for Fort Garry, in company with Governor McDougall and party.

You are, doubtless, aware of the circumstances which prevented us from proceeding onward, and how we were driven from the Hudson's Bay Company's Post back across the Boundary Line into the United States by an armed party of twenty half-breeds.

The Governor will remain here for some time yet, to await results. Of course I have no alternative, but remain with him, and will be guided by his movements and advice.

Expenses have been, so far, very heavy. Everything at war prices. By the time I can hear from your Department, in answer to this, my funds will be exhausted. Please send remittances to be accounted for.

EXTRACT from a DESPATCH from Governor the Right Hon. Sir J. YOUNG, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., to The EARL GRANVILLE, K.G., dated Government House, Ottawa, Canada, 2nd December, 1869. (Confidential.)

MY LORD,

(Received December 17, 1869.)

I have the honour to enclose for your perusal extracts from newspapers, which contain the latest accounts we have of what is going on at the Red River.

We have not received any authentic confirmation of the robbery or seizure of the arms which Mr. McDougall took up with him, but we fear the statement is correct. The place to which the arms were sent back, Georgetown, is a hamlet, consisting of three small wooden houses and a wooden depôt for storing goods in transit. It is in the State of Minnesota, 160 miles away from the frontier of Canada, but the country around is thinly peopled, wild and lawless.

FROM THE 'OTTAWA TIMES.'

RED RIVER.

[London Prototype.]

We publish below a very interesting letter from a gentleman well known in this neighbourhood, Mr. Gardiner Ellwood, who, it will be remembered, left London during the present year for the North-West. His letter is of a recent date, and is addressed to Crowell Wilson, Esq., M.P.P. It gives a glowing account of the Territory, but being written before the late troubles began, of course no mention is made thereof:—

DEAR SIR,

Town of Winnipeg, Red River Settlement, 10th Oct., 1869.

I arrived safely in the newly-founded town of Winnipeg on the 1st ultimo, after a long and rather tedious journey over the plains, and now think that I have been long enough here to give you my opinion of the country, its people and productions. The soil throughout the whole country, wherever I have been, cannot be surpassed, consisting of rich black loamy clay, very deep, and capable of producing very great crops. Harvesting was going on when I arrived, so I had an opportunity of witnessing their yield. The wheat is excellent, both in quantity and quality, the samples all over being as fine, if not finer, than any I have seen in Canada, and, as near as I can learn, will be from twenty-five to thirty bushels per acre; barley equally good; oats not so much grown; potatoes are very fine, and give enormous yields. There is no occasion for meadows, as the prairie furnishes the hay, and all a farmer has to do is to go back two or three miles from the Settlement, cut and stack his hay, leaving it to be drawn during the winter. Cattle are numerous, some settlers having very large herds. The beef is excellent, and commands a good price—from 5*d.* to 6*d.* sterling per lb. Sheep and hogs are rather scarce. The climate is very healthy, and I am in better health than I have been for years; and I have heard of several invalids coming here who have been completely restored to health. The great bulk of the population are half-breeds, partly of French and partly of English and Scotch origin, the principal settlements of Canadians being at the Portage (about sixty miles up the Assiniboine), and in the town there are a good many Americans. I like the people very well, and have been generally well treated, having plenty of employment ever since I arrived, and more before me, principally in helping to build up the town, which is fast growing, and I think a few years will see it no mean city. My general impression of the country is, that any industrious man, with a small capital, coming here, can, in a few years, secure a competency; but the great thing wanted is a railroad, and, in my opinion, the quickest way to secure it would be by building one to Pembina, on the Boundary Line, to join the St. Paul and Pacific road, and which could be done at a comparatively trifling cost. The Hon. Joseph Howe arrived yesterday. Governor McDougall has not arrived, but is expected within fourteen days. I will write you further particulars before long.

I am, &c.,

GARDINER ELLWOOD.

Crowell Wilson, Esq., M.P.P.

AN AMERICAN VIEW OF THE DIFFICULTY.*

(From the Minneapolis 'Tribune,' November 24.)

The latest news from Winnipeg is dated October 10. They indicate that the Insurgents are increasing their strength, having enlisted over 1000 men. They are commanded by Louis Riel, and the discipline maintained is remarkably perfect. A Republican form of government is to be instituted, and a Congress of all parties was to have met for that purpose on the 16th.

Five Indian Chiefs arrived at Fort Garry on the 7th, and tendered the services of their bands. These were accepted, and the force of the Insurgents is thus increased by thousands.

Twelve cases of rifles,* imported for McDougall's use were captured en route. These are a portion of the 1000 stand of arms that the would-be Governor was reported to have sent to the country.

Although Governor McTavish and Recorder Black, the only representatives the Red River country has in the new Government, are Members of the Hudson's Bay Company, that body find no fault with the proceedings; on the contrary, they offer them every facility for maintaining their position, and furnish the garrison with supplies.

While the 'Buffalo Express' is humorous enough (under care of Mr. Mark Twain) to talk as under:—
 "We have reason to believe that the Fenian organization is at the bottom of the Red River movement; that the Fenian leaders have been secretly at work for several months to bring it about, and that their later plans have been chiefly directed to their consummation. The present occurrences in the Red River country form the beginning of the execution of an entirely new Fenian programme, for which it is claimed that the organization has more means in hand, and better preparations, than it ever had before. Should it be the fact that their plans have taken the direction of such an initiative, the Fenian leaders are certainly to be credited with more shrewdness than has hitherto been evinced by them. The fertile British territory beyond Lake Superior is absolutely indefensible by Canada or England. Neither troops nor supplies can be conveyed to it in the winter season except through the United States. A small Fenian force will suffice to wrest it from the Dominion

* 350 in all.
A. D.

"and the Crown; and the territory is of immense extent and value. Its Fenian capture would be a decidedly hard blow, both morally and materially, to the powers, Imperial and Colonial, at which Fenian hostility is aimed. Whatever further direction the operations of the Fenian Brotherhood may take, it is expected, in their own ranks and by both the Canadian and American authorities, that the coming winter will see active undertakings of some sort."

CANADA.

RED RIVER.

Red River Settlement, British North America, 6th November, 1869.

The past week has been one of great excitement here, in consequence of the serious action taken by the parties opposed to the entrance of Lieutenant-Governor McDougall and his Staff. The events connected with this movement will doubtless have reached Canada before this letter; but as the world outside the Settlement cannot be expected fully to understand the motives or relative position of the parties implicated in the lawless proceedings of late occurrence, I shall endeavour to throw what light my observations on the spot enables me to collect upon what might appear to an outsider unintelligible.

The active opponents of the incoming Government are all of what is termed the "French half-breed" population. Their total number is about five thousand, of whom between six and eight hundred appear to be fighting men. In these numbers I include only the local population of the Settlement at Red River,—but scattered up and down the territory of Rupert's Land there are great numbers of the same class, regarding the gross number of whom I possess no means of forming an idea.

The whole nation has its origin between the traders and servants, European and Canadian, of the Hudson's Bay Company, and the Indian women whom they have married. Born at the different trading posts in every part of the country, the children of these people have settled at Red River, and, while still largely supporting themselves by the buffalo hunts and other roving modes of life, have brought certain limited portions of land in the Colony under rude cultivation.

As a class, they are quiet and civil when not excited, but when roused are quite destitute of self-control. Their honesty and trustworthiness are well known, their hospitality, more especially to each other, is great according to their means. Their extravagance is also, generally speaking, much observed, and their want of perseverance in sedentary pursuits is as remarkable as any of their characteristics.

They claim to be a nation, already, along with the English half-breeds, whom they claim as their brethren, in possession of this country, and entitled, under the Act of Confederation, to a voice similar to that ceded to the other Provinces respecting their entrance into the Confederation. They have always claimed a commanding interest in the country, and are now indignant at the Hudson's Bay Company for not having more effectually protected their assumed rights at the period of the transfer to Canada.

The English half-breeds have altogether abstained from taking any part in the demonstrations now being made. They, however, will not actively oppose them, and profess no sentiments of loyalty whatever to the Canadian Authorities. The entire population of Red River, in fact, with the exception of those now in arms, and a few Canadians lately arrived, are anxious only to preserve the tranquillity of the Colony, and destitute of any enthusiasm in the matter.

This state of matters would, however, I believe, be much modified in the event of bloodshed, even on a small scale. The disaffected are connected between each other and the English half-breed population by so many ties of kindred, race and friendship, that the death of any one would be revenged by further blood. The element of religion would also enter forcibly into the disturbance.

The interest of the French population in the opening up of the country to civilized life is, however, directly the reverse of the English interest. To the former, the cultivation of the prairies means the expulsion of the buffalo, which form their mainstay; the latter would merely feel the effects of increased competition in farming. Even, therefore, supposing considerable political influence to be conferred on the half-breeds as a class, those among them who would not obtain equal influence, as a matter of course among a settled population, would be compelled to make a radical change in their mode of life, or permanently leave the Settlement. In speaking of the different sections of the people, I, of course, describe them in bulk. There is a large section of the English half-breeds who will undoubtedly sink, through idleness and other causes, into a very low situation of society, while the French are not without men of intelligence and capability in various walks of life.

It has been reported of late, with some degree of assurance, though I know not on what authority, that encouragement has been given to the half-breeds by parties resident in the Settlement, of Fenian proclivities. A considerable number of immigrants from the States also profess a strong sympathy with the project of Annexation. At present the half-breeds hold themselves aloof from both these parties, although, in the event of hostilities, it is probable they might receive active aid from both.

I mentioned in a former letter that on the occurrence of events which gave a serious air to the disaffection of the half-breeds, the Council of Assiniboia, held a meeting on the 25th ult., at which the two leaders of the party of action were present. Attempts had previously been made by efforts at persuasion on the part of Governor McTavish, and others, to induce these people to abandon their opposition to the Governor's entrance, and the Council of Assiniboine, on the occasion in question, renewed these efforts with similar poverty of effect. Their arguments were useless.

The sense of the Council was then taken as to the course the Authorities ought to pursue. It is understood outside that three courses were debated,—one was to arm a select band of loyally disposed French half-breeds, and send them to force their compatriots to give way. A second plan was to invite a counter demonstration on the part of all the loyal population, in order that an overpowering force of numbers might be drawn forth to go out to Pembina, unarmed, and escort Mr. McDougal in. The third proposition was, that Mr. McDougall should remain at Pembina until the force of persuasion, or the effect of the cold weather about to close in, might prevail on his opponents to break up their camp and disperse.

An attempt made forthwith by some of the French Members of the Council to ascertain how many of that section would arm themselves, showed conclusively that not even twenty or thirty could be induced to do so, and that such a step would only result in ridicule.

The propriety of the second course was discussed and finally settled at the Council itself. It was agreed by all representative men at the Board that the great bulk of the Settlement was quite indifferent about Canadian rule, and the prevailing feeling was that, as the business had not yet practically come before them, they would decline to encounter danger at the hands of their fellow settlers in defence of a body of officials, in the appointment of whom they had no voice, and in support of a Government hitherto known to them only by report. Colonel Dennis, whose efforts to ascertain the true feeling of the people generally regarding this matter, have been skilful and unremitting, is understood to have agreed with the Council in its estimate of the popular feeling, and the propriety of calling for such general counter demonstration as that proposed.

The third course, by which Mr. McDougall should remain for some time at Pembina until public excitement should abate, was therefore the only visible outlet of escape from the dilemma; but as its adoption lay entirely with the Lieutenant-Governor himself, the present Council had, of course, no voice in the matter.

No direct communication had yet passed between the Government of Canada or Mr. McDougall, and the Governor of Rupert's Land or the Council of Assiniboia. It is, however, generally understood that such a communication was opened by the Authorities here sending a Despatch to meet Mr. McDougall on his arrival at Pembina, acquainting him with the demonstration in course of preparation by the half-breeds. Colonel Dennis himself started early on the morning of the 31st ultimo, intending to reach Pembina by a round-about route, by which he would escape the obstructions placed upon the usual line of travel.

On the evening of the 30th October, Mr. McDougall reached Pembina, and was immediately advised by the advanced guard of the half-breeds of the impossibility of his reaching Fort Garry. He is said to have remained at Pembina quite satisfied that advance was impossible for a time. The gentleman in charge of the Company's frontier trading post was instructed to assist him to the utmost of his power; but the post of Pembina is one of the worst appointed stations in the country, and there is little doubt that, under even the most favourable circumstances, Mr. McDougall and his party must experience much personal hardship.

Mr. Provencher, one of the incoming Councillors, believing possibly that the obstacles to his progress might be less serious than was reported, proceeded on his journey, but, after coming as far as the head-quarters of the half-breeds at St. Norbert, he was forced to return to Pembina under armed escort.

Just as he was preparing to return, quite a commotion was excited at the barrier by the arrival of Captain Cameron, R.A., who, seeing only the regular guard of fifty men at the Barricade, determined to carry it by assault single-handed. It is reported to be only two or three feet high, and the Captain, urging the magnificent black horses which he drove to a gallop, was heard to make some remarks about "being accustomed to such matters." Luckily, he did not succeed in forcing his way through the Barricade, but, after driving over an Insurgent, his horses were seized by the others and brought to a halt without bloodshed. Meanwhile the mass of the disaffected, numbering perhaps five hundred armed men, who had been engaged at the moment at a little distance, in seeing Mr. Provencher commence his return journey, hearing a disturbance at the Barricade, rushed forward in great excitement, believing Mr. McDougall to have arrived. Captain Cameron requested permission to enter the Settlement for supplies, promising, if necessary, to return as soon as he could get them; but he was peremptorily refused, and compelled to return to Pembina with Mr. Provencher under armed escort.

Such is the account I have received of the details of this attempt to force a way through the Barricade. I believe the facts to be substantially true. It will, at least, show what people say here. Had Captain Cameron once passed the Barrier, he surely would have been shot.

On the 2nd instant, an armed party of one hundred of the Insurgents came to Fort Garry, of which they have since held possession. Armed sentries stand at the gates and patrol the platform. They scrupulously, however, respect property, and have forcibly stopped the sale of liquor both in the Fort and the village of Winnipeg. Parties entering and leaving the Fort, when unknown to the sentries, are questioned, and the watch is maintained day and night, the guard being regularly relieved at stated hours.

Outgoing and incoming mails are detained and subjected to examination at St. Norbert.

The organization formed by the Insurgents is called the "Republic of the Half-breeds," and is governed by a Council. A form has been gone through, which professes to be a "Proclamation of Independence."

It is generally expected that movements will take place, to enable the inhabitants of the Colony generally, to concur with the French population in the formation of a temporary Government.

(EXTRACTS FROM PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.)

Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, November 2nd, 1869.

Mr. Provencher was selected to confer with the Insurgents, as being able to speak their language. As Mr. Provencher was being turned back, Captain Cameron, R.A., who is appointed to some position in the Government here, and Dr. O'Donnel, of Montreal, both of whom were on their way to the settlement, arose up, and, after being questioned, were put back along with Mr. Provencher. The gentlemen left their wives at Pembina, and were pushing on to the settlement for provisions, their upward journey having extended over a greater length of time than they had calculated on when setting out. None of the half-breeds having seen the Governor, they suspect every well-appointed person, and Captain Cameron came under their strongest suspicions. He was ready to come on here for supplies, but the decree was inexorable. The muster-roll yesterday was answered by 402 men, all bearing arms; and, while Mr. Provencher was present, about 100 more came into camp and took the oath. There are, besides, scouts out on the prairie, fears being entertained that Mr. McDougall may seek to come in by a round-about way. The mail in which my last letter was carried was intercepted, and the Postmaster had to go out to open it, in order that, if letters for the Government were contained in it, they might be seized. The inward mail due yesterday has also been detained, and the Postmaster is now trying to release it. The camp is daily attended by one or more of the Roman Catholic clergy. The letter of Mr. Cartier to Bishop Taché has been considered as an offence both to the Bishop and to themselves. They take an oath to abstain from intoxicating liquors until they have this matter settled, and, so far, have strictly abided by it. They have allowed large quantities of liquors to pass through their camp on their way here without touching any of it. In some cases they have opened boxes to search for rifles, but if they were not found they do not touch the contents. The Council of Assiniboia are doing nothing, but I understand have at last agreed upon an Address to be presented to the new Governor when he arrives. Governor McTavish is still very ill, and unable to take any part in the informal meetings of the Councillors, which are, I understand, held every day. The Canadian party claims to be able to bring together between 200 and 300 men, including Scotch and English half-breeds, and those among them who are looked upon as authorities, say this force can be at once commanded by the Council, and grumble that they have not been called upon to escort Mr. McDougall into the Settlement. Colonel Dennis, the Chief of the Surveying party, is the only person having any authority from the Canadian Government, and he has gone to see Governor McDougall at Pembina, so that there appears to be no danger of an opposition force being raised. The party under Mr. William Dease has, I believe, dwindled away, the men having mostly gone back to their homes. Will the Hudson's Bay Company be entitled to the 300,000*l.* now that they are unable to deliver over the Territory in peace?

Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, 6th November, 1869.

On the afternoon of the 3rd, about 100 of the Insurgents came in from the encampment at Stinking River, and marched into Fort Garry to take possession. The gates of the Fort were open, and no attempt was made to defend the place. The men have since remained there. They levy upon the Company for supplies of flour and provisions. The Secretary of the new Republic gave instructions to the officer in charge of the Fort to close the store in which the liquor is contained, and I believe has had the key handed to him. While the detachment was on its way to the Fort, wild rumours were spread abroad as to the designs of the approaching party. One of these rumours was to the effect that a party was to be despatched to fire the store of Dr. Schultz, and take the Doctor and Dr. Bown, proprietor of the 'Nor-Wester,' prisoners. These rumours were carried back to the party at the Fort, and their truth indignantly denied. They state they will molest no property, nor injure any individual. A rumour prevailed yesterday that an oath of allegiance was to be administered to all foreigners; but this I have also found to be false. Indeed, the discipline hitherto maintained has been quite wonderful. There has been no drinking, and the men are civil to all strangers who meet them. A night watch of about ten men is put over the town. The chief constable of the Council of Assiniboia has been superseded, and his work performed by the guard. Drunken men and women have been put into the Council gaol, and released by order of the new Authorities. The Government, so far, is generally acknowledged to be an improvement upon that of the Company.

A new flag has been adopted, which is composed of a white ground, upon which are displayed three crosses—the centre one large and scarlet coloured, the side ones smaller and gold coloured. A golden fringe binds the white ground.

I hear that there is to be a Proclamation, and that the reasons assigned for rising will be that their consent was not asked by the Canadian people—that they were "sold like so many sheep;" that the Canadian Government should, before entering into negotiations with the Hudson's Bay Company, have consulted the Natives of the country, and, if this had been done, they would have listened to what the Commissioners of the Government had to say; but, having been transferred in the way they were, nothing was left to them as brave men but to resent the insult. My informant was not sure that it will not be stated that if the Canadian Government still sends a Commissioner they will hear him, but will listen to no one sent in the capacity of Governor. As to their future intentions, they are, I believe, to state that they mean to administer the Government of the country in a republican form, only until they can communicate their position to the Imperial Government. They are anxious that it should be clearly understood that their actions have been solely directed against the Canadian, and not at all against the Imperial Government. They will not submit to be the "Colony of a Colony." Colonel Dennis, the Chief of the Surveying party here, went to Pembina to meet the Governor. He evaded the Insurgents in going, but, in coming back, was discovered and sent over the Line to join McDougall. His guide, an intelligent English half-breed, was captured, and held a prisoner for a day or two, but has now been released. The principal Officers of the Canadian Government here now are Mr. Snow, Superintendent of the road, and Mr. Grant, in charge of Colonel Dennis' office. They are both, I believe, without any instructions. The Council of Assiniboine is doing nothing, and we are all waiting for "something to turn up." Mr. Charles Mair, the author of 'Dreamland,' and Paymaster of the road, is supposed to be in the hands of the Insurgents, as he had left Pembina, and has not since been heard of.

CANADA. No fears are entertained of his safety; but he may be either detained for a few days and searched, or sent back over the Line. Dr. Schultz has been in the habit of hoisting on Sundays and holidays the British flag, with the word Canada written on the red ground. I hear it is the Doctor's intention to hoist it as usual to-morrow, and there are predictions of evil if this should be the case. Mr. McDougall's party had a cold and very long journey over the plains, and I fear they will suffer on their return from bad roads and unsettled weather.

P.S.—Mr. Mair has just arrived, having been kept prisoner for two days.

THE MINNESOTA PRESS UPON THE RED RIVER AFFAIR—A CHANCE FOR GOVERNOR
McDOUGALL TO GO AS WELL AS LOOK TO WASHINGTON.

(Correspondence of the St. Paul Press.)

Pembina, November 8.

On Tuesday, the 2nd inst., the Red River Troops took quiet possession of Fort Garry and the Government House. Winnipeg is under martial law. No soldier is permitted to take a drop of spirits. The most stringent discipline is observed. If a citizen or outsider is found drunk or disorderly he is promptly arrested and confined until sober and quiet.

The Governor has called upon the Canadian Government for troops, and inasmuch as it is impossible to import them by any other route, permission to pass them through United States territory will be requested. But it is to be hoped that our Government will not bring civil war upon the Red River people by granting such a request. The people being united, no civil war can exist until coercion be attempted, and if our Government declines, coercion is out of the question; and so long as civil war does not exist, the rights of person and property will be respected. The American residents remain non-committal, but should it unfortunately come to blows, they to a man will be found in the front ranks of the citizen troops. Captain Cameron, one of the Governor's law-makers, a half-witted unfortunate, proposes to head 400 Canadians (when they arrive) and penetrate the territory as far as Lake Winnipeg! Should those 400 soldiers be as brainless as the proposed "head," the penetration would not be great.

I am sorry to inform you that Governor McTavish is very ill, and not expected to recover.

SPECTATOR.

(From the 'St. Paul Pioneer,' November 21.)

The distinguished Canadian gentleman now sojourning at Pembina, will probably have leisure in his winter quarters to consider the best means of establishing his authority at Selkirk upon sure foundations. And it must now be apparent to a politician of his astuteness, that it would have been wiser, simultaneously with the negotiation between the Hudson Bay Company and the Earl of Granville, to have consulted, in some form, the wishes and feelings of the party most interested—namely, the people who have occupied the Red River country for the last fifty years. Such a plebiscite would have had only one result: the declaration would have been almost unanimous for the Canadian connection; and, in that case, Mr. McDougall would have gone forward with all the sanction and prestige of the popular voice.

The Legislature of Minnesota were not wanting with a word of excellent advice on the subject. We find by reference to the general laws of the tenth Session, under date of March 8, 1868, that the following Resolutions were adopted and communicated to the Government at Washington:—

Resolved,—By the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, * * * * That we regret to be informed of a purpose to transfer the territory between Minnesota and Alaska to the Dominion of Canada by an order in Council at London without a vote of Selkirk and the settlers upon the sources of the Saskatchewan River, who largely consist of emigrants from the United States; and we would respectfully urge that the President and Congress of the United States shall represent to the Government of Great Britain that such action will be an unwarrantable interference with the principles of self-government, and cannot not be regarded with indifference by the people of the United States.

That the Legislature of Minnesota would rejoice to be assured that the cession of North-West British America to the United States, accompanied by the construction of a Northern Pacific Railroad, are regarded by Great Britain and Canada as satisfactory provisions of a treaty which shall remove all grounds of controversy between the respective countries.

These friendly suggestions failed to change the Anglo-Canadian policy, and it now remains for the Ottawa Ministry to determine whether it is not still expedient to authorize some formal expression by the inhabitants of Selkirk. Perhaps, also, the Canadians might find in the proposition of a cession of the North-West Territory to the United States a potent agency to secure access to American markets on terms even more satisfactory than by the abrogated treaty of June, 1854. At present, even if Mr. McDougall makes his way to Fort Garry, this North-West acquisition, with its half-breed and Indian incumbrances, will be a burthen and a snare to Canada; but if its transfer to the United States will assist to a commercial union with the United States, will it not be better, not only for Canada but for the Hon. William McDougall himself, whom we hereby nominate as the first United States Senator from Selkirk?

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

THE NORTH-WEST.

CANADA.

Some Letters which appeared in the 'St. Paul Press,' in Selkirk Settlement, indicate that the American residents in that Territory are far from being uninterested spectators of recent events. They warn and entreat the American Government not to permit Canadian Troops to pass through the United States. A Meeting is also to be held at St. Paul, designed to influence the Washington Authorities to take that course.

There is nothing, however, in the actions or Proclamations of the Insurgents to indicate that they have any desire to bring about the Annexation of the Territory to the United States. The Catholic Clergy, by whom they are influenced, will certainly do everything in their power to prevent any such result, and we do not doubt that any attempt on the part of Fenian Sympathisers to reach the Territory would be met with stern resistance by the present Insurgents. The last news from the Territory indicates a desire on the part of the French half-breeds to join themselves to the English population in the formation of a Government. The French cannot control the Territory alone, and the proposal is an indication of returning moderation of feeling, which will undoubtedly be welcomed by the rest of the population. When a rapprochement takes place between the two classes, an opportunity will be presented for the opening of negotiations, which will probably lead to the conclusion of peace. It is said, that a very strong prejudice has been excited by Mr. McDougall's appointment. It remains to be seen whether it can be removed. We hope that it may, for a change of Governor will be a sign of weakness which we should regret; but no personal considerations ought to stand in the way of a peaceable settlement of the issue which has been mainly raised by the errors of our Government.

We observe that it is reported in Ottawa, that inquiries are being made as to the feasibility of sending troops to Red River by the Fort William route. A much more reasonable proposal would be to enlist the French half-breeds themselves as the preservers of order in the Territory. We have not the least doubt that, when the causes of dissatisfaction, which at present exist, are happily removed, they will be loyal supporters of Canadian Authority, and admirably qualified to act as Frontier Police. They are excellent horsemen, accustomed to the use of arms, and to obey the leaders whom they themselves select, when they traverse the plains in search of buffalo. Give them leaders of the right sort, and neither Fenian Sympathisers nor marauding Sioux will be able to stand before them.

COPY of a DESPATCH from Governor the Right Hon. Sir J. YOUNG, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., to The EARL GRANVILLE, K.G.

(No. 147.)

Government House, Ottawa, Canada,
9th December, 1869.

(Received December 25th, 1869.)

(Answered No. 7, January 8th, 1870, page 173.)

MY LORD,

I have the honour to forward herewith a number of Papers, which bring the accounts received from the North-West down to the present date. I beg, also, to enclose a copy of a Letter which I addressed to Governor McTavish. I sent similar letters to the Lord Bishop of Rupert's Land, and to the Reverend Father Lestanc, who, in the absence of Bishop Taché, is the head of the Roman Catholics in the Settlement. These letters I entrusted to the care of Grand Vicaire Thibault and Colonel de Salaberry, who have been selected by the Dominion Government to act as envoys and represent matters in their true light to the inhabitants of the Red River Settlement.

The Grand Vicaire Thibault lived and laboured amongst the people in the North-West until recently, for more than thirty-six years. He has much influence, being greatly beloved, and holding a high position in the Roman Catholic Church.

Colonel de Salaberry is a son of the officer who commanded at the victory of Chateauquay; he has passed several years of his life in the North-West Territory, and is looked up to as a leader and friend by the French half-breeds.

Governor McTavish's illness has been a serious drawback, and much to be regretted.

Mr. Smith, the Hudson Bay Company's second in command, leaves Ottawa on Monday next, in order to assist, or, in case of emergency, replace, Mr. McTavish.

I am very sanguine that success will attend the Mission we have despatched, and trust your Lordship will approve of the instructions which have been given, and the measures which have been adopted, after anxious deliberation, with the hope of restoring order and tranquillity, and conquering, without menace or resort to force, the opposition

CANADA. — which has been engendered at the Red River by false rumours and mistaken anticipations of evil.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOHN YOUNG.

The Earl Granville, K.G.,
&c. &c. &c.

Enclosures

Enclosures in No. 9.

SIR,

Ottawa, 29th November, 1869.

I had the honour to receive, on Friday, your Despatches of the 5th and 7th November; the former dated from Pembina, and the latter from Larose's Farm. Eight enclosures, including your Correspondence with Governor McTavish, and the Reports made to you by Colonel Dennis and Mr. Provencher also came safe to hand.

These Papers were at once laid before the Governor-General and Council, and were anxiously considered by the Privy Council. The crisis was grave, as it was unexpected, and might, if dealt with rashly and unwisely, lead to a civil, if not a National War, the end of which no man could foresee.

It was the first duty of the Government to acquaint Her Majesty's Ministers with the facts reported, and a cable message was sent at once by the Governor-General to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and copies of all the Papers have been forwarded by the mail for England, which left Ottawa this morning.

The Insurrection you describe is not merely an expression of dislike to the Government of the Dominion, but an open violation of Imperial Legislation and defiance of the authority of the Crown. All the negotiations for the transfer of the country had proceeded with the sanction of Her Majesty's Government, and the purchase money had been raised under an Imperial Guarantee. It was assumed on both sides that the Queen's right of Sovereignty was indisputable, and that Her power to protect Her subjects even in that distant part of Her Dominions would be asserted with firmness and decision. It therefore appeared to the Privy Council unwise to complicate matters by any hasty action until the policy of the Queen's Government was known.

The Governor-General is still in telegraphic communication with the Secretary of State, and I may be able, before closing this Despatch, to convey to you, with some degree of clearness and accuracy, the views of Her Majesty's Government.

In the mean time I have it in command to express to you the anxious desire of the Governor-General in Council that all collision with the Insurgents may be avoided, and that no violation of the Neutrality Laws of the United States shall give a pretext for the interference of their Government.

This will be conveyed to you by a special messenger, who, as he speaks French fluently, and is a gentleman of some experience, may be of service.

You will for the present remain at Pembina, cheered by the conviction, which animates us here, that Her Majesty's Ministers will duly estimate the gravity of the facts reported, and take such steps as will, while carefully providing for the good government of the North-West, maintain the authority and vindicate the honour of the Crown.

I have, &c.,
JOSEPH HOWE.

P.S.—The messenger cannot leave for a day or two. Duplicate will be sent by him.

Adverting to my Letters of the 22nd and 27th ultimo, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, a copy of a Despatch received at this Department, yesterday, from the Hon. Mr. McDougall, together with copies of the Enclosures therein mentioned.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

31

SIR,

La Rose's Farm, Pembina, 13th November, 1869.

CANADA.

I have the honour to state, for the information of His Excellency that I am still without any further communication from the Hudson's Bay Company's authorities at Fort Garry. I have received, through private channels, notice that my Letters of the 2nd and 4th instant to Governor McTavish were placed in his hands on Monday morning last, and that a Meeting of Council was called for that day. But though a week (nearly) has elapsed, and private persons have found means to send letters to me, and to other members of my party, written at Fort Garry as late as Thursday (the 11th), the Government have either had nothing to communicate, or found themselves unequal to the task of reaching me. I learn also that they have issued no Proclamation or warning to the Rebels, and those who, believing the stories now current that the Hudson's Bay Company is opposed to the Government of Canada, may be inclined to join their ranks. I cannot account for this extraordinary reticence and hasty surrender of authority by the legal rulers of the country upon any theory but that of the weakness and imbecility of the Governor, and the complicity of some Members of his Council with the Insurrection. I have evidence that one of his Councillors, at whose house some of the first meetings of the malcontents were held, is in correspondence with the American plotters at Pembina, and trying to find out through them what my intentions and movements are! This treason within the Council will also account for the stopping of supplies which were ordered by the Hudson's Bay Company's Agent here, for our use as well as his own, and which the Rebels could have known nothing about, unless some of the Hudson's Bay Company's employes had disclosed their destination. The Rebels had not previously interfered with the Company's carts or trade operations.

I enclose a printed Paper (A) issued by the Rebels at Fort Garry on the 6th instant. It was printed at the office of the 'Nor-Wester' by the Rebels, who seized the office for the purpose, the proprietor and his employes refusing to have anything to do with it. The type was set by a Yankee in their ranks, and the proof corrected, as I am informed, by Mr. Ross, late of the 'Globe' Office, Toronto. This "Call" was enclosed in a letter under cover to the Postmaster at Pembina, which he delivered after some hesitation, and stating that he would not, in future, deliver letters to me which might come addressed under cover to him. The Post Office here is very loosely conducted, and is entirely at the service of the Insurgents and their sympathisers. Many letters appear to have been opened, and the general opinion is that this accident occurs at Pembina. It might not be amiss if Mr. Thornton requested the United States Postmaster-General to instruct his subordinates here to show more care and courtesy in the conduct of his office than he has hitherto done.

My information from the Settlement, verbal and written, leads me to believe that this "call" of the French half-breeds will not be responded to by the English-speaking part of the population, except a few traitors who have been in the plot from the beginning, and who may take this opportunity to declare themselves.

Sunday, 14th.

The Letter (B) which reached me to-day is without signature; but from the hand-writing I know it to be from Mr. Snow, Superintendent of the Government Road. It merely confirms information which has reached me by various means for the last two or three days. The recommendation that I should issue a Proclamation at once, is not made for the first time; but I have uniformly replied that until the transfer of the Territory has taken place, and I am notified of the fact, I shall not assume any of the responsibilities of Government. Messrs. Richards and Provencher concur with me in this policy.

Papers C and D are extracts from Letters received during the week. The one, marked "C," is from Mr. Mair, who was at St. Paul when the outbreak occurred, but was allowed to pass the Barricade after some delay, on his return to Fort Garry; and extract "D" is from a Letter written by a young Englishman who was on his way to Fort Garry to see the country, with a view to settlement. He travelled part of the way with Mr. Begg, and was allowed to pass the Barricade in charge of one of the Hudson's Bay Company's waggons.

I enclose also a communication "E," just received from the "friends of Canada," through the same channel as the one marked "H" in my Report of the 5th instant. It apprises me, as will be seen, of a state of things in the Rebel ranks which, if true, gives hope of a more easy solution than a few days ago seemed possible.

I directed Colonel Dennis to answer this Letter by the same messenger, to the effect that I was still here and intended to remain, advising that any action by the loyal inhabitants should be taken with deliberation and as much unanimity as possible, and promising that they should hear from me officially very shortly. They were asked to report promptly the result of the "Call" on the 16th instant. A notice posted at the foot of one of the printed "Calls," fixing a place of meeting in the parish of Kildonan, is in the handwriting of one of Governor McTavish's Councillors. This Paper is now in my possession.

The last Mail from Canada brought me no official Letters. I expected to hear by this time that the "Transfer" had been agreed to and the Imperial Order in Council passed. If I do not receive notice of this "Order" in a few days, I shall be much embarrassed in my plans, and the leaders of the Insurrection will be emboldened and strengthened. They understand perfectly that I have no legal authority to act or to command obedience till the Queen's Proclamation is issued.

The weather is still mild for this latitude. The earth is not frozen on the prairie to a greater depth than four inches; the snow barely covers the ground, and yesterday it rained for two or three hours.

I have, &c.,
(Signed)

WM. McDougall.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

To the INHABITANTS of RUPERT'S LAND.

Winnipeg, 6th November, 1869.

The President and Representatives of the French-speaking population of Rupert's Land in Council, "the invaders of our rights being now expelled," already aware of your sympathy, do extend the hand of friendship to you our friendly inhabitants, and in doing so invite you to send twelve Representatives from the following places, viz.:—

St. John's 1, St. Margaret's 1, Headingly 1, St. James 1, St. Mary's 1, Kildoman 1, St. Paul's 1, St. Andrew's 1, St. Clement's 1, St. Peter's 1, Town of Winnipeg 2, in order to form one body with the above Council, consisting of twelve members, to consider the present political state of this country, and to adopt such measures as may be deemed best for the future welfare of the same.

A meeting of the above Council will be held in the Court House at Fort Garry on Tuesday, the 16th day of November, at which the invited Representatives will attend.

By Order of the President,

LOUIS RIEL, Secretary.

(B.)

"Fort Garry, 9th November, 1869.

"Council in deliberation to-day on yours. Received all right. Decision not known. Saddle will fall on right horse. 'Call' made on the different parishes by Manifesto of Riel, who seized 'Nor-Wester' Office, and by force used the press. English and Scotch parishes will not respond.

"Issue Proclamation, and then you may come fearlessly down. Hudson's Bay Company evidently shaking.

"By no means leave Pembina."

(C.)

"Winnipeg, 8th November, 1869.

* * "The Company, beyond all question, are deeply concerned in the matter. Half-breeds themselves declare that they have received assistance. Insurgents in quasi possession of Fort Garry receive their supplies there. Yours received all right. Council in deliberation to-day. On no account leave. The English have not risen, because they have not been called upon by the authorities—otherwise they would have risen. Issue your Proclamation, and it will be responded to by 500 men.

"Mr. Snow was told by Mr. Riel to-day that the road would be stopped. Last night they took possession of 'Nor-Wester' Office and printed off a 'Call,' of which a copy is enclosed. The types were set by a Yankee whom they brought with them, and the proof was revised by Mr. Ross. All the Yankees here are openly concerned in it, including certain merchants. Will write at length to-day.

"Monday evening.—There is a rumour that Fenian aid has been invoked, through the agency of Donaldson, probably. The Company are at nonplus regarding your determination to remain at Pembina. A meeting of Council held this afternoon, which, the Archdeacon informed us this evening, resulted, he understood, in nothing.

"The Pointe de Chene half-breeds are opposed to the stoppage of the road, which is a great benefit to them, but have made their boasts that they will only allow it to be built so long as matters go on to suit them. Mr. Snow thinks it would have a good effect to stop the works for a time, to bring want as a pressure upon them. They are all off the works you may say, and it would be folly to hire one-half of them to feed the other half.

"If the Company shut down upon the Insurgents, which they can do at any moment, they cannot subsist for any length of time upon their own means. I think, with many others, that your best course is to remain at Pembina until further developments."

"MY DEAR * * *

"Fort Garry, November 11th.

"I write you these few lines, hearing that you are still on the borders of this pleasant land, I got in all right thanks to * * * and am rather pleased with the place. The Government now established is a Republic, with, of course, French half-breeds for its officers. The English half-breeds are perfectly loyal, and will continue so if there is a chance of the Government coming in. I believe that as soon as the Proclamation is received that they will rise and 'lick' the French; of course we shall all go in, that is, the Canadians and English now in the Settlement. The French have the Fort guarded by 140 men, and have taken possession of the artillery and other arms stored there. They are making the Hudson's Bay Company find them without pay, which serves them right, as when they had cash they did not mind letting them into the Fort,

" which, with the help of the loyal, they might easily have held ; but it is evident, between you and me, " that they at first were well pleased at the way things were working, and even since I was here, " when the half-breeds heard that Mr. McDougall left for Ottawa, they gave up the Fort, but " returned next day and got it again. My firm opinion is, that the affair will not be settled until " forces are brought from Canada. No blood has yet been shed, but it is impossible to say the " day that it may be. All property is respected at present but the Hudson Bay Company, which is " used pro bono publico ; of course we are all doing nothing. Send me a line of what you are doing, " and what is being done to bring this miserable affair to a conclusion.

Friday, 12th November, 1869,
Town of Winnipeg.

COLONEL DENNIS, DEAR SIR,

The communication to " friends " of the Canadian Government " Town of Winnipeg," and to Governor McTavish, under cover to Mr. Grant, arrived this morning, and were at once delivered by Mr. Grant. The mail of Tuesday contained letters for his Excellency and for yourself, under cover to Charles Cavalier and Colonel Stuttsman respectively, but we believe they have been taken out, as the mail-bag was brought back to the Post-office and there examined. In future all mail matter is to be examined both ways. Riviere Salé is now guarded by half-a-dozen, Fort Garry being headquarters, and particular pains are taken to see that no communication reaches the Governor, who is still said (?) to be very sick. Reports of yesterday speak of a split between Riel and Bruce, and a determination on the part of the former to oust the latter apart from the Mission influence. Bruce has the largest personal following, and the result will, of course, be good. Indications show things to be shaky in their camp, more especially since they have heard that the English half-breeds have taken all the ammunition from the magazines at the Lower Fort and secreted it. This information led to a demand the day before yesterday from Riel, for the keys of the bastions at Fort Garry, where the guns are, and they have since been guarded at night. The shot and shell, however, belonging to them were at the Lower Fort.

Indians, to the number of fifty, had a grand meeting in this neighbourhood the day before yesterday, " Pegwis " (Prince) presiding, highly indignant with half-breeds ; result, a letter from them to the Governor, entrusted to Mr. Grant, to forward their interests in this matter, being so directly antagonistic to the claims of the half-breeds, that coupled with the fact that Indians are, as a rule, on the side of the provisions and pay, there is not the slightest cause to apprehend danger from them, but rather powerful support at any moment, having the sanction of Government, and English half-breed heading.

We will have a strong protest into the Authorities here at once against their inaction, and embodying the suggestions made in the Letter. We believe that time, a short time, backed by anything official from Governor McDougall, will bring about a solution of the difficulty, and that, if something comes in the way foreshadowed in the Letter, we will guarantee the result.

In most of the parishes no answer will be made to Riel's Proclamation, or, if acted on at all, will be simply to send a letter, protesting against their past and present action. They are trying to get an election of * * * and McK. (McKenny) from the town, but will, I think, be able to frustrate that, if the Americans do not turn out too strong.

This method of communication may be trusted, and is being paid for in full here. Mr. * * * is at Oak Point, and stops all contracts to Pointe du Chene half-breeds. The effect will be to turn their influence against those who have rendered it necessary for the Government to withhold its hitherto liberally spent money.

We want guidance at once, force, if necessary, is available ; but we believe that patience and proper authority will force the present Government to action. Town people are beginning to tire of feeding and encouraging their guard, and the guard in turn resent the falling off of attention. One of the Captains told us he was forced into the affair, and wished our good offices to clear him when the time of examination in the affair came.

The cause is quietly and surely advancing with the English element, and gaining ground even with the French, and we feel sure that all will be well. * * *

EXTRACTS of a LETTER addressed to the SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE PROVINCES, by a GENTLEMAN resident at St. Paul, Minnesota, dated November 26th, 1869.

I sent your letter by mail to Mr. McDougall, under cover to a trusty friend at Pembina, with instructions to deliver it in person to that weather-bound gentleman.

I am in frequent receipt of letters by mail or private hands, three or four times a week from Pembina. Mails to that point are safe ; beyond it, all, both ways, are ransacked, and the contents examined, and nothing is allowed to pass without the countersign of some Insurgent inspector.

The events occurring at Red River naturally excite a good deal of interest here, and though there is, of course, a general desire that the affair may result in the annexation of the country to the United States, the main anxiety here is that bloodshed should be avoided, or anything like war, for our people are very apprehensive that such a conflict would draw the Indians of both sides into it, and involve our own border in the horrors of an Indian war. I have not, of course, the slightest idea

CANADA. — what your Government are going to do about it, but to us here it seems the height of imprudence to attempt coercion.

From what I can learn there is at present very little, if any, annexation sentiment in the country; but coercion would be likely to force that alternative. There is a little dash of the Fenian in the leadership. A young Irish priest named O'Donahue, attached to Bishop Taché's establishment, being said to supply the brains of the movement.

From the GOVERNOR-GENERAL to GOVERNOR MCTAVISH.

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 6th December, 1869.

Nov. 26, 1869.

I have the honour to address you in my capacity of Representative of the Queen and Governor-General of Her Majesty's British North-American Possessions, and to enclose, for your information a, Copy of the Message which I received from Earl Granville, in reply to the accounts which I had sent officially of the events which have taken place at the Red River.

This Message conveys the matured opinion of the Imperial Cabinet. The Proclamation I have issued is based upon it; and you will observe it refers all who "have desires to express or complaints to make," to me as invested with authority to act on behalf of the British Government. Every claim or complaint which may be put forward will be attentively considered, and the inhabitants of Rupert's Land, of all classes and persuasions, may rest assured that Her Majesty's Government has no intention of interfering with, or setting aside, or allowing others to interfere with or set aside, their religious rights and the franchises which they have hitherto enjoyed or to which they may hereafter prove themselves equal.

You will please to make what use you think best of this Communication, and of the Enclosure.

I have, &c.,

William M'Tavish, Esquire,
&c. &c. &c., Governor of Assiniboine.

(Signed) JOHN YOUNG.

Copy of a TELEGRAM from The EARL GRANVILLE to SIR JOHN YOUNG.

Make what use you think best of the following.

The Queen has heard with surprise and regret that certain misguided persons have banded together to oppose by force the entry of the future Lieutenant (?) Governor into Her Settlements on the Red River. Her Majesty does not distrust the loyalty of Her subjects in these Settlements, and can only ascribe to misunderstanding or misrepresentation their opposition to a change which is plainly for their advantage. She relies on your Government for using every effort to explain whatever is misunderstood, to ascertain the wants and to conciliate the good will of the Red River Settlers. But meantime She authorises you to signify to them the sorrow and displeasure with which She views these unreasonable and lawless proceedings, and Her expectation that if any parties have desires to express or complaints to make respecting their condition and prospects, they will address themselves to the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada.

The Queen expects from Her Representative, that as he will always be ready to receive well founded grievances, so he will exercise all the power and authority with which She has entrusted him in the support of order, and for the suppression of unlawful disturbance.

(Signed) GRANVILLE.

Copy of a TELEGRAM from MR. DWIGHT to SIR JOHN McDONALD.

Dated, St. Paul's, Minnesota,
6th December, 1869.

Mr. Thomas Boddy, a reliable man, who left Fort Garry November 22nd, gives following intelligence:—The Scotch and English half-breeds are disgusted with the course of the French half-breeds in the disturbance, and utterly refused to join with them, and it is believed the Insurrection is dying out—only about fifty Insurgents remain under arms. The remainder is disbanded, and a large portion of them have gone to the plains upon their winter buffalo hunt.

The Insurgent Council met 10th and adjourned to 22nd. Result of their deliberations unknown; but it is thought probable, by the inhabitants of Settlement, they will decide to abandon insurrectionary movement, and invite Governor McDougall to come in and assume reins of Government. The Indian Tribes, the Crees and Bungeis, are both favourable to McDougall. Mr. Boddy says, so strong was opposition of English and Scotch inhabitants to course pursued by the French element, that had the time arrived for the Hudson Bay Company to turn over the Government to Dominion, when Governor McDougall reached the border they would have risen in arms, and have conducted him to Fort Garry; but until 1st December Governor McDougall would have no authority there, nor would they be justified in taking measures to bring him within the Settlement. They therefore let things take their course, biding their time until December 1st, at which date McDougall will issue Proclamation, and probably find little or no opposition to his entry. Governor McTavish was lying very ill, with no hopes of recovery, yet his authority is respected in Civil matters. Since his Proclamation, mails have not been tampered with nor have travellers been molested.

CANADA.

Department of Secretary of State for the Provinces,
Ottawa, December 7th, 1869.

SIR,

I had the honour to address to you Despatches on the 19th and 29th November, which, in view of the insecurity of the mails, were enclosed to a friend at St. Paul, to be sent forward, if possible, by private hands. For fear that they may have miscarried, duplicates are annexed to this.

Your Despatch of the 13th ultimo, with its Enclosures from A to E, reached me on the 3rd instant, and was immediately laid before the Council. Copies will be sent to the Colonial Secretary this week.

I have now the honour to inform you that the Very Reverend M. Thibault, accompanied by Charles de Salaberry, Esq., proceeds to-morrow, via St. Paul and Pembina, to Fort Garry, for the purpose of assisting in putting down the unlawful assemblage of people on the Red River, and obtaining access for the Canadian Authorities into the North-West.

M. Thibault has had great experience in that country, having been for thirty-seven years a priest there, and having only left it last year.

Mr. de Salaberry has also had considerable experience in dealing with the French half-breeds.

After consulting with you, they will take such action with these people as they think most calculated to carry out our objects, and it may perhaps be politic that they should have as little open communication with you as possible.

It is, of course, advisable not to arouse the suspicions of the Insurgents, who would be very likely to view with disfavour any persons coming directly as agents from you, and acting under your instructions. You will, however, be good enough to strengthen their hands as much as possible.

With them we send you a Proclamation issued by the Governor-General by the direct command of Her Majesty. This should be widely disseminated, in such a manner and at such a time as you think most expedient. It has also been thought well to print copies of your Letter of Instructions, which will of itself show how unfounded is the charge that the North-West is to be governed without the interposition or aid of the residents, but by Canadians solely.

Messrs. Thibault and de Salaberry will be followed by Donald A. Smith, Esq., the Hudson's Bay Agent at Montreal, who now occupies the position formerly held by Mr. Hopkins. In his capacity as an officer of the Hudson Bay Company he will obtain ready access to the country, and to Governor McTavish, and it is hoped that he will be able to strengthen that gentleman in his attempts to restore law and order at Fort Garry.

In order to give his representations due weight and importance, Mr. Smith has been asked to act as a Commissioner holding confidential relations with the Canadian Government. In that capacity, having once reached Fort Garry, he will be able to speak authoritatively as to the beneficent intentions of the Government.

We hope that calmer counsels will soon prevail, and that these misguided people will disperse. So soon as they do so, you will, I presume, proceed to Fort Garry and carry out your instructions.

It will be well for you to arrange for sending messages to St. Cloud, so that we may know by telegraph that order has been restored. On receiving this information, His Excellency will communicate the fact, by cable message, to the Colonial Office, and the Proclamation will be at once issued. It has been hitherto delayed, so that the authority of the Hudson's Bay Company might continue unimpaired, until it was replaced by the Canadian Government, as represented by you.

I have the honour also to send you an Order in Council, passed this day, on the subject of Customs Duties. You will now be in a position, in your communications with the residents of the North-West, to assure them:—

1. That all their civil and religious liberties and privileges will be sacredly respected.
2. That all their properties, rights, and equities of every kind, as enjoyed under the Government of the Hudson's Bay Company will be continued to them.
3. That in granting titles to land now occupied by the Settlers, the most liberal policy will be pursued.
4. That the present Tariff of Customs Duties will be continued for two years, from the 1st January next, except in the case of spirituous liquors, as specified in the Order in Council above alluded to.
5. That in forming your Council the Governor-General will see that not only the Hudson's Bay Company, but the other classes of the residents, are fully and fairly represented.
6. That your Council will have the power of establishing municipal self-government at once, and in such a manner as they think most beneficial to the country.

CANADA.

7. That the country will be governed, as in the past, by British Law, and according to the spirit of British justice.

8. That the present Government is to be considered as merely provisional and temporary, and that the Government of Canada will be prepared to submit a measure to Parliament granting a liberal constitution so soon as you as Governor and your Council have had an opportunity of reporting fully on the wants and requirements of the Territory.

You had, of course, Instructions on all the above-mentioned points, excepting as regards the Tariff, before you left Ottawa, but it has been thought well that I should repeat them to you in this authoritative form.

Trusting that ere long you may be in a position to carry these liberal propositions practically into the Administration of the affairs of the North-West,

The Honourable William McDougall, C.B.

I have, &c.,

(Signed)

JOSEPH HOWE.

SIR,

Ottawa, 9th December, 1869.

Nov. 20, 1869.

I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, a Copy of a Despatch, with Enclosures, marked from A to C inclusive, from the Honourable William McDougall, giving a detail of the occurrences in the North-West Territories since the date of his Despatch of the 13th ultimo, a Copy of which was enclosed to you in my Letter of the 4th instant.

I have, &c.,

(Signed)

JOSEPH HOWE.

F. Turville, Esquire, Governor's Secretary.

SIR,

Larose's Farm, Pembina, U.S.

20th November, 1869.

I have the honour to enclose, for the information of His Excellency, the Reply of Governor McTavish to my communications of the 2nd and 4th instant, which only reached me last night. (Copy "A.")

Also Copy of Correspondence which has passed between certain "loyalists" in the town of Winnipeg and Colonel Dennis, who is still with me, and writes under my direction. (Copy "B.")

Also a printed Copy of a "Protest," or "Appeal," of these Loyalists to Governor McTavish, and of the "Proclamation" which at last he was induced to issue. (Paper "C.")

I have not yet made any reply to the lengthy and somewhat extraordinary communication which the representatives of the Hudson Bay Company at Fort Garry have thought themselves called upon to address to me, nor have I made any arrangements with a view to the "movement" which they have recommended in its concluding paragraph. As the main object of my correspondence with them has been accomplished; to wit, the issue of a Proclamation against the Insurgents, I shall await for a few days the effect of this proceeding before determining upon the course of action which I ought to adopt myself or recommend to others. I am sure His Excellency will acquit me of indifference to the just claims of Canada, and the reputation of its Government, or to the duties of the position I have the honour to hold as its Representative, if I abstain, in the presence of the grave events now transpiring, from all controversy with Governor McTavish, or any other employé of the Hudson Bay Company, as to the propriety of the political arrangements with respect to the North-West Territory, which the Imperial Government has authorised and sanctioned, and the Government of Canada undertaken to carry out. With respect to Governor McTavish, I may observe that the report is current that he is still seriously ill, and that Mr. Black is the writer of the communications which have reached me over the signature of the Governor. How far the personal views and private feelings of Mr. Black, who lately informed Colonel Dennis that he was about to quit the Territory, may have influenced the policy of the Local Authorities and found expression in their Official Correspondence, may hereafter appear, but I shall not assume that either the policy adopted by these gentlemen, or the opinions entertained by them of the acts of Her Majesty's Government in England, as well as in Canada, has received, or is likely to receive, the sanction of the Hudson Bay Company.

Except the supply of a few articles of food and clothing, for which the prices charged are on the average higher than those of the American traders in the neighbourhood, and the two Letters from Governor McTavish, of which Copies have been forwarded, I have received no assistance, or suggestion, or communication of any kind, from the Company's Agents in the Territory since my arrival at this place. I have been obliged to organize an independent private means of communication with the Settlement in order to ascertain the movements of the Rebels, as well as of the Loyalists, and I may add of the Government itself. Even the Protest or Proclamation issued by the Governor has not yet been forwarded to me by him or any of his agents, although for the last five days it has been in the hands of the public at Fort Garry. But for the private channel of communication referred to, of the existence of which the Company's Officers have not been made aware, I would not have been able to forward this document by the present mail.

I have felt it my duty to mention these circumstances, to enable His Excellency to understand the difficulty that meets me in attempting to organize, in connection with the Local Authorities, any resistance to the conspiracy which has already made such head in the Settlement. The confirmed belief of every person I have seen, or whose testimony has reached me (whether in the confidence of the Rebels, or friendly to Canada), is that the Hudson Bay Company's employes, with scarcely an exception, are either actively or tacitly encouraging the Insurrection. It was the prevalence of this belief that determined me to force the Authorities into a public declaration of some kind that would dispel this illusion, if such it should prove to be, or compel them to show their hand as abettors of the Insurrection. The "Appeal" of the loyal inhabitants (see Paper "C") who had previously opened correspondence with me, was the last screw applied, and seems to have accomplished the purpose, notwithstanding the "peculiar circumstances" so strongly insisted upon in the enclosed Letter, to show that the issue of such a Proclamation "might affect injuriously the future as well as the present Government."

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

37

CANADA.

I feel bound also to state, with reference to the "serious occurrence" detailed in the 10th and 11th paragraphs of Governor McTavish's Letter, that I have the positive assurance of Major Wallace, who has just returned from Fort Garry, as well as the statements of the "friends of Canada," that the Company's Officers in charge of Fort Garry were told of the intention of the Rebels to take the Fort the day before it occurred, and that Chief Constable Mulligan, who is an old soldier, offered to raise a force partly composed of "pensioners," with which he declared he could hold the Fort against all the Rebels who would be likely to attack it, but he was told by Dr. Cowan, the Officer in charge, that his services were not wanted.

The communication from Winnipeg of the 17th instant (marked "B") is from a well-informed correspondent, who has access to the Council Room of the malcontents, and is in confidential relations with certain Members of the Convention opposed to the aims of the French half-breeds. I thought it prudent to strengthen the hands of the loyal portion of the community by enabling them to deny, on the authority of Colonel Dennis, known to be with me and in my confidence, the story about my Council, which is still industriously circulated in the Settlement. Canadian newspapers are quoted to prove that all the Members of the new Government have been chosen from Canada; and Mr. Howe's remarks, while at Fort Garry, are repeated from mouth to mouth, and construed into an approval of their present attitude of "resistance to tyranny," and "defence of their rights." The best way, as it appeared to me, to contradict these false and pernicious reports, was to authorise the statement contained in the "reply" of Colonel Dennis. I have thus far avoided direct communication with unofficial persons; but the extraordinary policy adopted by the Local Authorities, and the difficulty and delay which I have experienced in my attempts to communicate with them, compel me to seek the aid of loyal men wherever I can find them. It will not surprise the Government to hear that I have had to incur considerable expense that was unforeseen when I left Ottawa, and that private persons will not risk their lives and property in the service of a Government unable to assert its existence, either de jure or de facto, without immediate and adequate remuneration, and a very unequivocal promise of indemnity. I have hitherto exercised great caution on this point; but I can foresee that affairs may soon take such a turn as to render a bolder and more costly policy indispensable for the protection of life and property, as well as for the establishment and maintenance of authority.

Messrs. Richards and Provencher are still in the neighbourhood, and see me daily. As soon as the result of the meeting of so-called "Representatives" is known, we shall take counsel together, and determine upon the course which prudence and duty may then point out,

I have, &c.,

The Honourable Joseph Howe, Secretary of State,
&c. &c. &c.

W. McDougall.

Fort Garry, Red River, 9th November, 1869.

MY DEAR SIR,

(Received previously from the H. B. Co., in No. 14037, 1869.)

Yesterday, about 10 A.M., I had the honour to receive your two Letters, dated respectively the 2nd and 4th instant; and, deeming it advisable that in answering these important communications I should be advised by the Council of Assiniboia, I at once called a meeting of that body for to-day, and with their concurrence have now to forward you this Reply.

In the first of your Letters you mention that, in conformity with the suggestion of Colonel Dennis, and the opinion of the Council, you had decided upon remaining a few days at Pembina, in the hope of the withdrawal of the disaffected parties from their positions; and we cannot but think that, in the circumstances, your decision in that respect must be considered wise. But it has not been without feelings, to which we should find it difficult to give adequate expression, that we have heard of your having been disturbed at the Company's Post while you were there waiting the course of events, and of your having been compelled to retire beyond the International Line.

It appears you are under the belief that a Proclamation from this Government, explaining the late Imperial Act regarding the Territory, and warning the people of the consequences of steps tending to impede any action that might be taken under its provisions, would have had a salutary effect in checking the present unlawful movement on the part of the French population. It is difficult, if not impossible, to say with any degree of certainty, how far that measure might have produced such a result; but if due consideration be given to the peculiar circumstances in which the Local Authorities here stood, there will, perhaps, appear to be but little ground for surprise at a measure of that kind not having been adopted.

The Act in question referred to the prospective transfer of the Territory; but up to this moment we have no official intimation from England, or the Dominion of Canada, of the fact of the transfer, or of its conditions, or of the date at which they were to take practical effect upon the Government of this country. In such a state of matters we think it is evident that any such action on the part of the Red River Authorities as that to which you point would necessarily have been marked by a great degree of vagueness and uncertainty; it was felt that it might affect injuriously the future as well as the present Government, and we therefore deemed it advisable to await the receipt of official intelligence of the actual transfer of the country, and of all the details which it concerned us to know.

But having every reason to believe, from semi-official sources of information, that the transfer of the Territory would soon take place, I have not failed to take every proper opportunity of putting the matter before the public in that light, and although we have not seen the expediency of issuing any such Proclamation as that suggested, yet we have been incessant in our efforts to impress upon the leaders of these disaffected people a just sense of the illegality and danger of the course upon which they had entered, and to dissuade them from the further prosecution of their unlawful purposes. Measures, it is true, of a positively coercive nature, have not been resorted to, for the simple reason that we have had no reliable force to insure their safety and success; and we are strongly impressed with the belief that there is great, if not overwhelming weight in the reasons given in my former Letter for the Authorities hesitating to adopt the perilous step of deliberately calling upon one portion of so peculiar a community as this to confront the other in an attitude of determined hostility.

With regard to that part of your Letter in which you make such express reference to my position as the present legal Ruler of the country, and to my responsibility for the preservation of the public peace, permit me to say it is because I so deeply feel that responsibility that I have hitherto been restrained from sanctioning a course so likely, I may almost say so certain, to engender a strife which, for years to come, might prove fatal to the peace and prosperity of the whole country, and make all government impossible. It is unquestionable that the preservation of the public peace is the paramount duty of every Government; but, while in ordinary circumstances it might be reasonable enough to cast upon us the exclusive responsibility of preserving the public peace, it may, perhaps, at the same time, admit of doubt whether some degree of responsibility did not also rest upon others in a case of so exceptional a character as this—a case in which not merely a whole country is transferred, but also, in a certain sense, a whole people, or where at least the political condition of the people undergoes such a great change; and it may, moreover, be a question whether, on the part of the Dominion, the preliminary arrangements for introducing that change have proceeded upon such a just and accurate appreciation of the condition of the country, and the peculiar feelings and habits of its people, as, on such an occasion, was desirable, if not absolutely essential, and whether the complications by which we are now surrounded may not to a great extent be owing to that circumstance.

But at a time like this, when it is felt that all our energies ought to be directed to the possible removal of the obstacles that oppose the peaceable inauguration of your Government, it would be out of place here to go into the discussion of such points as relate to the responsibility of the concerned in the introduction of the new order of things, and I shall therefore proceed to deal with matters of a more practical, as well as more pressing nature.

What the ultimate object of the malcontents may be, it is difficult to ascertain; but if they are aiming at establishing a Government of their own, as the leaders whom you met on the 2nd instant rather prematurely said they had already done, I doubt very much whether the rest of the Settlement are at all likely to submit to such a domination; but whether they may think it best tacitly to ignore such a usurpation of power, while it consisted merely in a name, or actively resist it, or take part in the movement in the hope of moderating and directing it, will, I apprehend, greatly depend upon circumstances.

It seems by no means improbable that on both sides of the Line there may be persons who are looking with a degree of sympathy upon this movement of the French population: their motives it is not difficult to imagine; but it seems to be nothing short of infatuation for the leaders of these disturbances to encourage the idea of annexation to the States; for it is highly improbable that whatever might be the influence of such a change upon other portions of the community, its effect upon the French population generally could hardly fail to prove unfavourable to them.

Excepting in one respect—but that, I am sorry to say, a serious, if not formidable sense—little change, so far as we can learn, has since my last, come over the arrangements or the spirit of these people. The prevention of your entrance into the Settlement was the object they first proposed to themselves, and upon that object they appear to be as fully bent as ever—being still, as I am informed, collected at several points in numerous armed bands, in readiness, as we may presume, to obstruct your approach to the Settlement, should that be attempted; and they are, of course, aware that so long as you remain in the neighbourhood, such an attempt is always possible.

The occurrence to which I have alluded in the preceding paragraph as being serious is this, that on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 2nd instant, a number of these daring people suddenly, and without the least intimation of their intention to make such a move, took possession of the gates of Fort Garry, where they placed themselves inside and outside the gates to the number, in all, of about 120, and where, night and day, they have constantly kept a pretty strong armed guard. On being asked what they meant by such a movement upon the Fort, they said their object was to protect it. Protect it from what? they were asked. Their answer was, From danger. Against what danger? they were asked. To this question they replied that they could not now specify the danger, but that they would do so hereafter, and obstinately took up the position they have since kept, in spite of all our protests and remonstrances at such a bold and high-handed proceeding.

On coming into the Fort they earnestly disclaimed all intention of injuring either person or property within it—and it must be allowed that in that respect they have kept their word; but it is an inconvenience and a danger, next to intolerable, to have a body of armed men, even with professions of peace toward ourselves, forcibly billeted upon an establishment such as this. Their intentions in coming to the Fort they have never definitely expressed, nor have they yet specified the danger from which their presence was meant to protect the place. We are therefore left in some measure to conjectures, and by these we are strongly led to believe that you were expected to come to the Fort, and that by thus having previous possession of the gates, they felt that they would be sure of keeping you out.

It is needless to ask why their presence was submitted to, as I presume you already know enough of the circumstances fully to understand that it was only borne, as being apparently, with respect to immediate results, the less formidable of two very serious evils.

Towards the end of your last Letter you desire my opinion as to whether any useful purpose is likely to be served by your remaining for any length of time at Pembina; and, feeling the importance that may be attached to any expression from me on that point, I have taken care to test my own ideas very closely by the opinion of the Council.

In compliance with your wishes let me say, as the substance of our opinion on this point, that we perceive there is as little chance as ever of these people receding from opposition to your coming into the Settlement; that the attempt might be productive of the most disastrous consequences; and that while you remain at Pembina, the effect, so far as the Settlement is concerned, is likely to be the perpetuation, and possibly even the aggravation, of the state of disturbance and danger. You can, therefore, yourself judge whether any good purpose would be likely to be answered by your remaining at Pembina; and perhaps your own view of the matter will be such as to prepare you for my adding, as I assure you I do, with a feeling of inexpressible regret, that to the Council and myself it appears that your early return to Canada, is not only essential for the peace of the country, but also advisable in the interest of the establishment in the future of the Canadian Government.

It is, no doubt, possible that a little more time may change the minds of the men; and public meetings are notified which may somewhat alter the present state of affairs. Your immediate departure ought not, therefore, perhaps to be at once determined upon. It might be advisable a few days longer to wait the course of events, or at any rate until I can again communicate with you; but at present, I confess, I see but very little reason to expect the occurrence of anything that is likely materially to change the opinions I have expressed with regard to your movements.

I remain, &c.,

(Signed) W. McTAVISH.

Winnepeg, Wednesday Evening, 11 P.M.,
17th November, 1869.

Council met at 12 yesterday; English Delegates, all staunch, except the two from the Town of Winnepeg. The English parishes, considering a meeting, such as proposed by the French, illegal, sent representatives with written instructions, and these were to explain, first, that they disapproved of all the acts committed; and, secondly, that they would not join in forming an Independent Government. The French Delegation consisted of their Council of twelve, before formed, and the President and Secretary. Riel caused a salute of a number of field-pieces to be fired; and the meeting took place in the Court House, which was at the time, and since, guarded. Yesterday was consumed in the expression of the views of the English Delegates; and it was expected that to-day the French were to show their hand.

Late in the afternoon of yesterday the MSS. of Governor McTavish's Proclamation was handed in to the Assembly; and much discussion as to the propriety of doing so preceded its reading. The English Delegation, with the exception of the two from the Town, worked well together, and wished to make special use of this document; but its want of general publication and translation into French prevented. An interview with three of the principal English Delegates, just before this writing, informs us that they this morning demanded of the French Delegates their policy, but they refused to give it. Riel argued that Hudson Bay Company's Government was a very weak one, and that a better one was necessary. This was met by the counter argument of the consequent necessity of a strong Government, and shown, by reference to the different published papers, that the Canadian one was the only one possible. Riel evidently pointed to a Republic, but would not say so directly. Priest O'Donohue at one time became very much excited, and quoted the wrongs of Ireland, and stated that the British Government was now shaking to its foundation, &c. They affect to despise the Proclamation of Governor McTavish, herewith enclosed. We have no faith in the sincerity of that Proclamation; but believe that the pressure brought to bear upon them here by the loyal party was such that they could no longer resist, and their own conviction of the utter helplessness and impossibility of further resistance compelled them to issue it, as much for their own safety as for the continuance of their authority, if any portion remains. Delegates thanked Governor in writing for the Proclamation. General Court of Assiniboia is to be held to-morrow as usual; and, in consequence, the meeting of Delegates and French put off till Monday, when English insist on knowing the French policy. English Delegates, except those from Town, very determined, and will have meetings of their people in the interim. A report reached here yesterday of 2000 Troops being on the way, and is believed by the French—hence the quietude of to-day in comparison with yesterday. Riel alluded CANADA. indirectly to it, and said that all routes were alike impossible. The three principal Delegates we have just conversed with say, "that they think that as it is believed the Governor has it in his power to "increase the number of Councillors to fifteen, and that only six are said yet to be appointed, the "concession of the remainder to the people here will be what the claims may be whittled down to." Result of Monday meeting of Council will be duly reported. We think that the Insurgents will back down. Probably a deputation to you will be decided upon at next meeting; any concession made will do good. Can we inspire Delegates in regard to what is possible? Answer by bearer.

(To which the following Reply was sent.)

Pembina, 19th November, 1869.

The information given in yours of Wednesday is very satisfactory. Monday's proceedings will be looked for with much anxiety. The efforts of the Loyalists to maintain order and the authority of the Crown, in a difficult crisis, will not be forgotten or go unrewarded. The Proclamation of Governor McTavish seems judicious, and ought to impress all but the leaders of the conspiracy, who must know the nature of the crime they have committed, and cannot be expected to listen to his admonitions. Labour to detach the ignorant and, so far, the innocent dupes of these men, from their treasonable association. It is thought here that if the majority now deliberating decides for a Republic, or other illegal form of Government, the loyal inhabitants should withdraw from all association and discussion with the Insurgents, and be prepared to rally in support of law and order, and the rights of the British Crown in this part of the Dominion the moment a call is made by competent authority.

Most of the stories told to deceive and excite the half-breeds and others against the Government, which the highest Authority in the Empire has ordered to be established, and will support with all its force, are known to be false by many persons now in the Territory, especially by those who are still its legal rulers. One statement, that seems to be believed by many, and may have tended to abate the loyal zeal of some otherwise well-disposed persons, is, that "all the Members of the New Council "are to be sent from Canada." This may be contradicted at once. The only person mentioned in the Governor's Instructions, to whom he is directed to offer seats in his Council, are residents, and have long been residents within the Territory.

Three gentlemen only have come from Canada, with the expectation of appointment in or under the Government; but the Governor's hands are so far untied, except as above stated, in the matter of his Council.

This is not an official announcement, or for use in any public way, but to enable you to correct the false statements which are current, and to assure the loyal and well-disposed.

The Governor remains here for the present.

Winnepeg, Wednesday, November 17, 1869.

THE CRISIS! LOYALTY TRIUMPHANT!—THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION!

On the 12th instant the following Address was presented to Governor McTavish, signed by a large number of most respectable inhabitants, and on the 17th a reply was issued, which will be found below.

Town of Winnepeg, November 12, 1869.

We, the undersigned, residents of the Town of Winnepeg, and loyal subjects of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland,

Beholding with great alarm the unsettled state of feeling existing in this Territory, and the threatening position assumed by a portion of its French-speaking population towards the Crown, in the person of Her Majesty's Representative, the future Governor of this Territory, and believing, as we do, that this disaffection or dissatisfaction is the result of various slanderous interpretations having been, from time to time, disseminated among the people by persons unknown;

We do, therefore, now demand that you, as the Representative of Her Majesty in this Territory, do proclaim among the people, either by convening a public meeting for that purpose, or posting in conspicuous places throughout the county a full and correct exposition of the nature of the transfer of this Territory to the Dominion of Canada.

We also request that you will explain, so far as lies in your power, the policy likely to be adopted by the Canadian Authorities relative to the governing of the Territory;

Also, that you deny the numerous libellous slanders which are in circulation regarding the purposes for which the Territory was acquired. That you warn them of the danger they are incurring to themselves by persistence in their present violent course, thereby imperilling the future welfare of the Country; and that you do entreat them to lay down their arms, and return peaceably to their homes. CANADA.

To William McTavish, Esq.,
&c. &c. &c.
Governor, Hudson's Bay Company, Fort Garry.

Here is the Proclamation drawn from Governor McTavish on the present state of affairs:—

Whereas I, William McTavish, Governor of Assiniboine, have been informed that a meeting is to be held to-day of persons from the different districts of the Settlement, for the ostensible purpose of taking into consideration the present political condition of the Colony, and for suggesting such measures as may appear to be best adapted for meeting the difficulties and dangers connected with the existing state of public affairs; and whereas, I deem it advisable at this juncture to place before that meeting, as well as before the whole body of the people, what it appears necessary for me to declare in the interest of public order, and of the safety and welfare of the Settlement: Therefore,

I notify all whom it concerns, that, during the last few weeks, large bodies of armed men have taken positions on the public highroad to Pembina, and contrary to the remonstrances and protests of the Public Authorities have committed the following unlawful acts:—

1st. They have forcibly obstructed the movements of various persons travelling on the public highway in the peaceable prosecution of their lawful business, and have thus violated that personal liberty which is the undoubted right of all Her Majesty's subjects.

2nd. They have unlawfully seized and detained on the road at La Rivière Salé, in the parish of St. Norbert, goods and merchandise of various descriptions, and of very considerable value, belonging as well to persons coming into the Colony, as to persons already settled here, and carrying on their business in the Settlement, thereby causing great loss and inconvenience, not only to the owners of these goods, but, as has formally been complained of, also to the carriers of the same, and possibly involving the whole Colony in a ruinous responsibility.

3rd. They have unlawfully interfered with the public Mails, both outgoing and incoming, and by their tampering with the established means of communication between the Settlement and the outside world, have shaken the public confidence in the security of the Mails, and given a shock to the trade and commerce of the Colony, of which the mischievous effects cannot now be fully estimated.

4th. Not only without permission, but in the face of repeated remonstrances on the part of the Hudson Bay Company's Officer in immediate charge of Fort Garry, they have, in numbers varying from about 60 to 120, billeted themselves on that establishment, under the plea of protecting it from a danger which, they alleged, was known by themselves to be imminent, but of which they have never yet disclosed the particular nature; they have placed armed guards at the gates of an establishment, of it which every stick and stone is private property, in spite of the most distinct protest against such a disregard of the rights of property; they have taken possession of rooms within the Fort, and although they have there, as yet, committed no direct act of violence to persons or property beyond what has been enumerated, yet, by their presence in such numbers, with arms for no legitimate purpose that can be assigned, they have created a state of excitement and alarm within and around the Fort, which seriously interferes with the regular business of the establishment.

5th. A body of armed men have entered the Hudson Bay Company's Post at Pembina, where certain gentlemen from Canada, with their families, were peaceably living, and under threats of violence, have compelled them to quit the establishment at a season of the year when the rigours of winter were at hand, and forced them to retire within American Territory. And,

In the last place, they have avowed it as their intention, in all these unlawful proceedings, to resist arrangements for the transfer of the Government of this Country, which have been made under the sanction of the Imperial Parliament, and of virtually setting at defiance the Royal Authority, instead of adopting those lawful and constitutional means, which, under the enlightened rule of Her Most Gracious Majesty our Queen, are sufficient for the ultimate attainment of every object that rests upon reason and justice.

The persons who have been engaged in committing these unlawful deeds, have resorted to acts which directly tend to involve themselves in consequences of the gravest nature, and to bring upon the Colony and the country at large the evils of anarchy and the horrors of war.

Therefore, in the interests of law and order, and in behalf of all the securities you have for life and property, and, in a word, for the sake of the present and future welfare of the Settlement and its inhabitants, I again earnestly and emphatically protest against each and all of these unlawful acts. I charge those engaged in them, before they are irretrievably and hopelessly involved, immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, under the pains and penalties of the law; and whatever in other respects may be the conclusions of those who meet to deliberate upon the present critical and distracted state of public affairs, I adjure you, as citizens having the interests of your country and kindred at heart, to ratify and proclaim with all the might of your united voices this Public Notice, and Protest, and so avert from the country a succession of evils, of which those who see the beginning may never see the end.

You are dealing with a crisis, out of which may come incalculable good or immeasurable evil; and with all the weight of my official authority, and all the influence of my individual position, let me finally charge you to adopt only such means as are lawful and constitutional, rational and safe.

Given under my hand and seal, at Fort Garry, this 16th day of November, 1869.

(Signed) WILLIAM MCTAVISH,
Governor of Assiniboine.

SIR,

I had the honour to receive this morning your Despatch of the 20th November, covering Enclosures A, B, C.

These Papers have been laid before the Privy Council, and will be forwarded by His Excellency the Governor General to England.

THE NORTH-WEST.

(Correspondence of the 'Montreal Gazette'.)

Pembina Village, U.S., 15th November, 1869.

Since my last letter, news has been received by private channels from Fort Garry that the Insurgent party has taken possession of Upper Fort Garry with the arms and ammunition, except the shot and shell belonging to the large guns, which happened to be stored at the Lower Fort, and have been removed and secreted by the loyal and English and Scotch half-breeds. Instead of the public meeting which was to have been held this week, the Secretary has issued the following Manifesto or "Call," a copy of which found its way to Governor McDougall:—

[A copy of this, calling a Council, received by telegraph, appeared in 'The Gazette.']

From a letter which reached the Governor last night, I learn that there is some prospect of a more speedy settlement of the difficulty than was anticipated a few days ago. The letter states that the Secretary has become jealous of the President, Mr. Bruce, and desires to get rid of him. The President has the greater number of followers; but the Secretary is more gifted as a stump orator, and is rather too much for Mr. Bruce in debate. It is expected that the parishes settled by the English and Scotch half-breeds will not respond to the "call" for a Representative to be sent to the new Council. There is no question that the English and Scotch half-breed element in the Settlement is loyal, and that the dissatisfaction which prevails amongst the French half-breeds is caused by imaginary fears and exaggerated and groundless statements of designing men. Amongst the latter it is pretty well understood that settlers from the United States, as well as some Yankees from the Boundary Line not far from this village, have done much to foment this Insurrection, and are in continual communication with the leaders, giving them counsel and encouragement. Even the Postmaster at Pembina has stated that he will not deliver in future any letters to Governor McDougall should they come enclosed to his care, as one did, for safety against the espionage of the Insurgents. The mails are said to be entirely under the control of the Rebel party, both here and at Fort Garry, and suspected letters are detained and opened.

One Pembina sympathiser with the Rebels refused to deliver a letter addressed under cover to him to Col. Dennis, and said he intended to return it to the writer.

Such is the state of things here at present. Governor McDougall takes things coolly; he writes his Despatches with an "eight-shooter" on his table, and a repeating rifle close at hand. All our party go armed to the teeth, as we don't know what sort of "varmint" we may meet at any moment; I think we will fight our way in as soon as the Queen's Proclamation arrives.

The weather fortunately is very mild; the ground barely covered with snow. The frost has not penetrated the soil on the prairie more than three or four inches. All the working men belonging to the Governor's party, including Col. Dennis, sleep under tents; but expect to have the addition to the house occupied by the Governor finished this week, when they will be able to have shelter inside. Cattle feed on the prairies yet; and the Governor's horses, which were greatly used up by the fourteen days' journey here, are rapidly recruiting on the prairie hay, cut and cured in the proper season.

A Special Despatch from St. Paul's, Minnesota, says:—"A letter just received, dated Winnipeg, 16th Nov., says—The Council called by the half-breeds met to-day. The attendance was not large. After a short time, spent mostly in private consultation, it adjourned till Nov. 18. Copies of Governor M'Tavish's Proclamation were issued at Winnipeg on the 16th Nov., in the French and English languages, and were circulated among those present, and produced a marked effect. Business is at a standstill; but little trade is going on, and there is a great scarcity of money among the people, who begin to think seriously on the consequences of the Insurrection." The letter proceeds: "A careful estimate shows only five hundred men engaged in the Insurrection, three hundred of which are armed. They have ceased to interfere with the mails or private business, and the majority of the people await a decisive movement on one side or the other." In answer to an address, signed by a large number of the influential inhabitants, asking him to warn the Insurgents against their present course, Mr. M'Tavish issued a Proclamation, dated Nov. 16th, denouncing the seizure, by the Insurgents, of public and private property, their interference with the mails and ravellers, and other acts against the peace of the country, and charges those engaged in the Insurrection, before it be too late, to peaceably disperse under the penalties of the law, and calls upon the citizens to ratify and proclaim this Protest with all their voice and power, in order to avert the threatened danger.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION PLACED IN SECURITY.

St. Paul, Afternoon, December 6th.

A large amount of arms and ammunition belonging to the Canadian Government, stored at Georgetown, en route under bond to Fort Garry, was recently removed across the borders to Fort Abercrombie for safe keeping, it being understood a conspiracy was on foot to seize it.

RED RIVER.

A HUDSON BAY VIEW.

'The Globe' publishes a long letter, under the above heading, and dated from Winnipeg, 18th November, from which we make the following extracts:—

For the last two or three years sundry attempts have been made to get up public meetings for the purpose of raising sympathy in favour of Annexation to Canada, as it was called, and at the same time to throw discredit on the Hudson Bay Company's rule. These meetings, as they actually took place here, were miserable failures. The men engaged in getting them up were unauthorised in their attempts, at least, as far as was known in the Settlement. The consequence was, that Annexation to Canada became a bye-word of ridicule. The meetings held were scenes of uproarious merriment instead of sober, orderly gatherings for the public weal. But how were those ebullitions of a few reported abroad? Why, as large and influential meetings held, important resolutions adopted and so forth, intended to lead the public of Canada and the rest of the world to suppose that we were a people tyrannized over, and that we were eagerly seeking for a milder and more generous Government to step in and free us from our thralldom. Now this was all erroneous. Whatever may have been the faults of the Hudson Bay Company's rule, they were light ones, and although I admit there was a feeling in the minds of the Settlers that the Hudson Bay Company were not powerful enough to enforce the laws when required, yet there never was to my knowledge a general feeling of discontent towards them or their actions in the government of the Settlement. On the contrary, we felt ourselves a free people in every respect. We had privileges that in other countries were not enjoyed by the people. Our Government was by a Council appointed from amongst ourselves. It is true, we had no direct vote in their election, but the Hudson Bay Company invariably consulted the opinions of a neighbourhood before choosing a Councilman from that part. We, therefore, to a certain degree, had a voice in our own Government, and were content therewith. Our laws, as administered, savoured more of arbitration than law, and in that respect suited our requirements better than if a pack of lawyers had been amongst us, urging us, with all the 'quibbles' best known to them, to eat each other up in useless suits. While speaking of law, I may add here, that in the history of the past few years of this Settlement, it was found that one jail has twice been broken open and prisoners liberated. The first, a clergyman, condemned by twelve of his fellow settlers for a crime unmentionable here; the second, a prisoner for resisting the officers of the law. And liberated by whom? By a small party who, in justice to the law-abiding people of this Settlement, be it said, have not to this day recovered from the stigma the act of jail-breaking has cast on their characters. And who were those engaged in the above acts? Principally Canadians—who have railed most against the existing laws of our Settlement, and tried to set them at defiance. Can you wonder, then, that for a time Canadians were generally looked upon with suspicion in this quarter? Be it known now, however, that, although for a time the feeling was—Can anything good come out of Canada? since the advent of better men from your country—since truer specimens of what Canadians generally are, have visited this Settlement, the reaction is altogether in their favour, and the feeling now is that it is not fair to judge the whole flock from there being one or two black sheep in it. We have many good men here from Canada, and I would be sorry to cast a slur on them. Those for whom my remarks are intended need not take offence at their truthfulness, and those to whom they do not refer need not apply them to themselves.

We now come to another epoch in the tide of events that did much towards causing the present troubles. Our Settlement was suddenly devastated, by means of a plague, in the shape of the grasshoppers. It is needless here to give the already oft repeated tale of how our crops were utterly destroyed; how the buffalo disappeared; the fish failed; in fact, how utterly we were besieged by famine. England came to our aid; the United States assisted us; private contributions from Canada flowed in upon us; and the Hudson Bay Company did more than all the others put together. At this time, the Government in Ottawa, no doubt for praiseworthy reasons, sent in a party to commence the road to the Lake of the Woods; the idea being to pay for their labour in provisions to those from amongst the Settlers who were willing to work. The Ontario Legislature voted 5000 dollars towards the relief of the Settlement, but John Sandfield McDonald could not see it in the same light, for we never received the amount, and Ontario is that much richer to-day. It will be well, however, to allow the appropriation to stand good, as it is likely to be required next year to assist in feeding those emigrants from Canada who may be hardy enough to settle in Red River next summer; there being every reason to look forward to the grasshopper calamity then, and there is not more than enough in the country to feed the people already here for one year without crops. The two parties sent in charge of this end of the Government Road may have acted wisely, but not too well. They employed a certain number of men from amongst the Settlers; and when flour was selling at three pounds sterling per barrel in the stores, they charged the poor men, their employes, three pounds twelve shillings, and four pounds sterling per barrel, and, at the same time, only paid them three pounds per month in that ratio for their work—this created dissatisfaction. The next thing, which caused still more discontent amongst the people, was a concerted plan of a few, in which the Government Officials in charge of the road were implicated, to buy up from Indians (who had no right to sell) parcels of land, on part of which people were actually living, in and around Oak Point, the headquarters of the Government works. This raised such a feeling of indignation against the parties concerned, that the head men in charge of the road summarily received notice from the neighbours around to quit the premises forthwith; and, afterwards, one of the principal actors in the affair (a Government Official) was fined by one petty court ten pounds sterling for giving liquor to those same Indians. These and similar actions on the part of the Government employes, whilst making them unpopular, seriously injured the cause of Canada in the minds of the people here; and matters were not afterwards improved by the doings and writings of the poet, Mr. Charles Mair, who, after having received the hospitalities of many families in the Settlement, saw fit to ridicule in public print those who had entertained him—to speak and write disparagingly of the Settlers as a body, and the ladies in particular. These, you may say, are minor matters, but I only point them out to show the gradual feeling those actions of a few individuals caused of dislike to the Government, who would send such men as samples of their employes. On the top of all these unfortunate occurrences, in comes Colonel Dennis, with his party of surveyors, to divide and subdivide the land into sections as they saw fit. This, at all events, was premature on the part of the rulers at Ottawa, before any arrangements had been made with the people here regarding the incoming Government. And although Colonel Dennis acted in a gentlemanly and proper manner in the discharge of his troublesome duties, still the people looked on the act of his party going to work before the establishment of the new order of rule, as arbitrary and presumptuous. I can believe, however, that if the minds of the Settlers had not been prejudiced beforehand by the previous acts of Government Officials, there would have been no interruption offered to the Colonel and his party in their surveying operations; for everywhere Colonel Dennis was received favourably by the majority of the Settlement, although he, too, unfortunately fell into the same trap as his predecessors, and (if I may use the expression) was “gobbled up” by the men who all along have been the principal cause of trouble in the Settlement. As if everything was fated to be to the disadvantage of Canadian interests, a clique of men, unpopular through their own deeds in this Settlement, have all along taken up the cudgels (it may be unasked) for Canadian Annexation. These men have professed themselves as authority on all subjects concerning the new Government, and have invariably endeavoured to throw discredit on the Hudson Bay Company abroad and at home. Now the fact is, the Hudson Bay Company have been misrepresented. It is not, nor has, for the past twenty years, been unpopular to the majority of the Settlement. Indeed, it has been the best friend to the Settlers, many of whom have reason to feel grateful to our grandmother, as the Company has been called by those desirous of being facetious on the subject. The Canadian Government, too, will do well to not throw aside the advice and assistance the Hudson Bay Company will surely have in its power to give; that is, if it wishes to become popular as a Government with the present inhabitants of Red River. Let the public of Canada beware of report touching the injuries of the Hudson Bay Company to the people here, for such is not the general feeling in the Settlement. I assure you, though I am sorry to say it, the prestige of the men who have figured so far in connection with the Canadian Government here, has tended to make it dreadfully unpopular with the majority of the Settlement.

While feeling was rife we had a visit from the Hon. Joseph Howe; and on his arrival the first act of the clique already mentioned was to invite him to become a guest in the house of one of them, who had made himself singularly conspicuous in Canadian affairs here. The old politician, however, was not to be caught with such chaff, and declined the invitation. Fatigued by his hard trip over the plains, Mr. Howe kept a good deal in his quarters at the hotel. He, however, made a couple of trips up and down the Red and Assiniboine Rivers seeing enough to satisfy himself, I am sure, what the Country was like. Had he come earlier in the season he would have seen the Settlement to much better advantage than he did, as everything while he was here looked bleak and miserable, preparatory to the change from autumn to winter. Many of the principal Settlers visited the Hon. gentleman, and the universal opinion formed of him was, that he was a fine old gentleman, one who could see and act for himself. A great deal of satisfaction was felt throughout the Settlement at Mr. Howe's visit, although it was understood that he merely visited us in the capacity of a private individual irrespective of his public character. This will go to show how much good might have been done had delegates been sent to prepare the way for Mr. McDougall's coming. Although Mr. Howe never favoured us with a speech, or in any other way made a public demonstration, and although he would receive nothing of the latter from our hands, I am of the opinion that he left the Settlement with a pretty correct idea of the people and the situation of affairs as they then stood. I may say, indeed, that he did much in his short visit here to counteract the evil influence that was abroad; but I am sorry to say the seeds of discontent had been too deeply sown to be rooted up so easily, and after his departure the crisis came.

Some idea can be formed of the earnestness of the French people when you learn that many of them have, at the moment I am writing, been out on guard eighteen days; sleeping at night on the snow, with no tent or other covering except their ordinary clothes—and this without the least prospect of pay. The food they eat is the only thing they get, and that is furnished them by the more wealthy of their own people. A meeting is called for the 16th inst., at which delegates from all parts of the Settlement are to meet to discuss the present state of affairs, and the best method of providing for the future. Freight cars were watched for guns, which it is reported the Canadian Government are trying to run into the Settlement.

And now for the future. Who can tell what that may be? It rests altogether on the policy of the Canadian Government, in the adjustment of the present difficulties. It will be useless to split the Settlement on the point of representation. Would it be wise, as we are situated, to endeavour to raise one side of the Settlement against the other? God knows where such a course would end. Extinction on one side or the other would follow; the Indians, heretofore tractable, would be roused, their worst passions inflamed, rapine and massacre would be the result; and, for all this, who would be answerable but the Canadian Government? It will be the same if it is attempted to coerce the Settlement by force. Such an action would be unwise and uncalled for, and the result would be that, instead of a profitable acquisition to the Dominion in this Country, you would have an expensive and unsatisfactory Government to support here for the next five or ten years at least. I would advise, if so humble a person as myself may be permitted to do so, that proper Delegates be sent to this country to find out the exact views of the people. That could be done during the present winter. In the mean-time, let Mr. McDougall return to Canada, to await the decision of the House at Ottawa on the Report furnished by these Delegates. Give the people here their just rights, and no more faithful adherents to the cause of Canada will be found in the Dominion than these same Settlers of ours. Take a new start in the spring in a proper direction, and all will be well; but, for the sake of the fearful consequences that will ensue—a rising of the people generally, united with the Indian troubles throughout the whole North-West—let your actions be those of peace. At present, we are in the greatest uncertainty as to the result of the present difficulties. As long as McDougall remains at Pembina, the Country will be in a state of excitement, especially as he has not vouchsafed to send any message as yet to the people as to what his intentions are. If blood be shed in this cause, may God help those who have been the cause of it! I will write you with further particulars as they develop themselves.

PROCLAMATION.

V. R.

By His Excellency the Right Honourable SIR JOHN YOUNG, Baronet, a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of The Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Knight Grand Cross of The Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Governor General of Canada.

To all and every the Loyal Subjects of Her Majesty the Queen, and to all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

THE QUEEN has charged me, as Her Representative, to inform you that certain misguided persons in Her Settlements on the Red River, have banded themselves together to oppose by force the entry into Her North-Western Territories of the Officer selected to administer, in her name, the Government, when the Territories are united to the Dominion of Canada, under the authority of the late Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom; and that those parties have also forcibly, and with violence, prevented others of Her loyal Subjects from ingress into the Country.

Her Majesty feels assured that She may rely upon the loyalty of Her Subjects in the North-West, and believes those men who have thus illegally joined together, have done so from some misrepresentation.

The Queen is convinced that in sanctioning the Union of the North-West Territories with Canada, She is promoting the best interests of the residents, and at the same time strengthening and consolidating Her North American Possessions as part of the British Empire. You may judge then of her sorrow and displeasure with which the Queen views the unreasonable and lawless proceedings which have occurred.

Her Majesty commands me to state to you, that She will always be ready through me as Her Representative, to redress all well founded grievances, and that She has instructed me to hear and consider any complaints that may be made, or desires that may be expressed to me as Governor-General. At the same time She has charged me to exercise all the powers and authority with which She has intrusted me in the support of order, and the suppression of unlawful disturbances.

By Her Majesty's authority I do therefore assure you, that on the Union with Canada all your civil and religious rights and privileges will be respected, your properties secured to you, and that your Country will be governed, as in the past, under British laws, and in the spirit of British justice.

I do, further, under Her authority, entrust and command those of you who are still assembled and banded together, in defiance of law, peaceably to disperse and return to your homes, under the penalties of the law in case of disobedience.

CANADA.

And I do lastly inform you, that in case of your immediate and peaceable obedience and dispersion, I shall order that no legal proceedings be taken against any parties implicated in these unfortunate breaches of the law.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at Ottawa, this Sixth day of December, in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-nine, and in the Thirty-second year of Her Majesty's Reign.

By Command,

JOHN YOUNG.

The SECRETARY of STATE for the PROVINCES to the GOVERNOR GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

(No. 1074.)

SIR,

Ottawa, 11th December, 1869.

I have the honour to transmit to you, herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, a Copy of a Despatch, with two Enclosures, from the Honourable Wm. McDougall, C.B., giving an account of the transactions which have occurred in the North-West Territories since the date of his last Despatch.

I also enclose Copies of three Letters addressed to Mr. McDougall, and of a Letter addressed to Mr. Donald A. Smith, a Special Commissioner appointed to enquire into, and report upon, the causes and extent of the obstructions offered to the ingress of Mr. McDougall into those Territories.

I have, &c.,

COPY of a REPORT of a COMMITTEE of the Honourable the PRIVY COUNCIL, approved by His Excellency the GOVERNOR-GENERAL in Council, on the 11th December, 1869.

The Committee of Council, on the recommendation of the Honourable the Minister of Finance, and for the reasons given in his Memorandum of the 11th December inst., advise that the Minute in Council of the 7th instant., having reference to the policy to be adopted in Rupert's Land, in the event of that Territory being added to the Dominion, be cancelled.

The Minister of Finance submits that, in his opinion, it is inexpedient to make any material changes in the Customs duties in Rupert's Land until the means of access to the Territory shall have been greatly improved.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

He therefore suggests that the present Tariff should remain in force for, at least, two years from the 1st of January next.

That, if the above suggestion be concurred in, he would further recommend that an announcement of the intention of the Government be made to the people resident in the Territory, who may possibly feel some alarm on the subject of increased duties.

The Committee concur in the foregoing recommendation, and submit the same for your Excellency's approval.

Enclosure 2
in No. 10.

The Honourable Wm. McDougall to the SECRETARY of STATE for the PROVINCES.

SIR, Pembina, United States, 25th November, 1869.

I have the honour to forward a Confidential Report by Major J. Wallace, of Whitby, Ontario, who was sent from this place on the 4th of November on a Special Mission to Fort Garry, and who returned on the 22nd inst. He is the person mentioned in my Report of the 5th inst., as being in the confidence of some of the conspirators here, so far as to obtain a "Pass" from them. Major Wallace was employed by Colonel Dennis in his surveying operations last summer; he is a shrewd Scotchman, has been many years a resident of Canada, and, though a little hot-tempered, may be regarded as a trustworthy reporter of what he saw and heard.

I received, through an employé of the Hudson Bay Company sent by Governor McTavish, information that the Rebels had resolved to send an expedition of horsemen to Georgetown, to burn the Hudson Bay Storehouse there, in order to destroy the arms and ammunition which I had stored at that place. This was to be done at once, if the result of the "Convention" was in favour of the Insurrection. As there was no time to lose, I took immediate steps to have them removed to Fort Abercrombie, some forty miles distant. I wrote a note to General Hunt (Copy A), requesting him to allow them to be stored in the Fort, which I have no doubt he will readily comply with. I caused it to be rumoured, or rather to be stated, as a fact by our party, in their conversation with the conspirators at Pembina, that the arms, &c. had been removed to Fort Abercrombie. This will be reported at Head-quarters, and will probably put a stop to the "raid." But, in any event, the arms, &c., will be at Fort Abercrombie before the raiders can overtake them.

I have received a private Note from Governor McTavish, informing me of his having issued a Proclamation, more, he observes, in deference to my opinion, than from any expectation of a favourable result; and, at the same time, he expresses his satisfaction that I have remained here. He enclosed to me Letters he had received for me from Sir Curtis Lampson and the Secretary of the Hudson Bay Company, and expressed his desire to be of service. I infer that he has received instructions from the Company, and notice of the date of Transfer. I am still without any official notice of the Imperial Order in Council, and must act, if at all, upon the information contained in the private letters from Sir Curtis Lampson, which announces the date of Transfer agreed to by the Imperial Government to be 1st December next.

There is a rumour among the Rebel sympathizers here this afternoon, that the French half-breeds have demanded the "Public Money" from the Treasurer at Fort Garry, and that he had refused, and was thereupon made prisoner—that English and Scotch half-breeds and the Canadians were arming, and that a row was expected. The "Convention," the same rumour informs us, has been adjourned for some days. I expected a private message from the Settlement of the result of Monday's and Tuesday's deliberations, in time for this post, but it has not yet reached me.

The Honourable J. Howe,
Secretary of State for the Provinces,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) Wm. McDougall.

(Copy A.)

To General HUNT, or the Officer Commanding at Fort Abercrombie.

SIR, Pembina, United States, 22nd November, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you that certain French half-breeds, of the Red River Settlement, have assembled with arms, and in sufficient force to overawe, for the time, the Authorities at Fort Garry. They have also erected a barricade to prevent me from proceeding to that place to assume the Government on the transfer of authority from the Hudson Bay Company to the Dominion of Canada. A small band of their men met me at the Hudson Bay Company's Post, near Pembina, and ordered me to return beyond the Boundary Line; as I had no Force to resist them, I was obliged to obey the order, and am now at Pembina, in American Territory.

I have just had information from Fort Garry that these outlaws have decided to send a party of men to Georgetown, in Minnesota, for the purpose of burning the Hudson Bay Company's Store-house at CANADA. — that place. The avowed object of this "raid" is to destroy certain property of the Government of Canada, now stored there, consisting of arms and ammunition, and also clothing and goods belonging to me and to members of my party.

I have the honour to request that you will take such means as may be in your power to prevent this unlawful destruction of property.

I have directed the removal of the arms and other property to Fort Abercrombie, in the hope that you will allow storage in the Fort until this émeute is suppressed.

Any expense which may be incurred in the removal, protection, or storage of this property I shall be ready to make good as soon as I am advised of the amount.

General Hunt.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) Wm. McDougall.

NOTES, by J. W., between 4th and 22nd November, 1869.

I left Fort Pembina for Fort Garry on 4th November, 1869, with a Despatch for Governor McTavish. I was furnished with a letter of "safe conduct" from an American gentleman of this place. Arriving at the Barricade, at Rivière Salé, I was conducted by armed men to the Catholic Church, which I understood to be Headquarters of the Insurgents. In an upper room I found President Bruce, Secretary Louis Riel, Mr. O'Loan, Mr. McKinney, junr., and five half-breeds, whom I did not know. On presenting my "pass" to Riel, he read it in French to Father Ritchot, and said, "It is all right;" but that, although sorry to trouble me, must request me to shew any documents I might have in my possession. None were in view. Several questions were then asked, and promptly answered, as to the position and designs of Governor McDougall and his party. I then passed to Fort Garry, where I found means to have the Despatch placed in the hands of Governor McTavish. On the strength of it, the Council of Assiniboine was called for Tuesday the 8th. Mr. Bannatyne is a Member of that Council, and was present at that Meeting. He told me that when Mr. McDougall's Letter was read McTavish (although sick) raged furiously, and asked what Mr. McDougall meant; that, up to that moment, no official information had reached them of any change having been made in the ownership of Rupert's Land, and that he would let Mr. McDougall know that no such dictation as that indicated by the Letter would, for a moment, be tolerated.

Mr. Mulligan, a Pensioner, and a Police Constable in Winnipeg, told me that he had warned the Hudson Bay Company, on several occasions, that the half-breeds were to rise. This he did, through Judge Black and Dr. Cowan, and suggested that the Pensioners be called out to guard the Fort, but that they declined doing anything in the matter. Mulligan also informed me, that on the 8th inst., after the Fort had been in possession of the Insurgents for several days, that he heard from one of the rebels, whom he could rely upon, that the Arsenal was to be broken open, and the arms taken possession of in a day or two, and informed Dr. Cowan, who replied, "What can we do?" Mulligan answered, "Call out the Pensioners, and others willing to join them, and let them take possession of the Fort." The Judge, who was present, said, "A Council will be called, and an answer given to you at 3 o'clock to-morrow." Next day Mulligan was told that his services were not required, and that evening the arms were taken possession of.

I had several conversations with Mr. McKinney, senior. At first he was somewhat shy—stated that as yet he had nothing to do with the Insurgents, but that he might have; that the United States was the natural outlet for the Settlement, and the people wanted nothing else, as he believed; and that they would never submit to the injustice about to be forced upon them by the Canadian Government in appointing a Council from Canada, &c., virtually ignoring the people of Red River; that if Governor McDougall had come alone, he would have got in and would have been heard; and, if his views did not suit, they would have told him to go. Again, on another occasion, he corroborated what Bannatyne said about the want of official notice, &c.; that the people would not submit to taxes, that they wanted control over their own affairs, and that he approved of the course the half-breeds had taken in keeping the Governor out; and that they had about 700 men under arms. Our other conversations were something similar, until I went in on the Saturday morning before I left, and had about an hour with him. He was reading the Imperial Act ceding the North-West Territory. He opened out frankly, and stated that a blank he saw in the Act meant neither more nor less than that, after a certain time, Canadians could fill it up as they wished; that he was a Delegate for Fort Garry, but that very little would be done by the Convention, unless to draw the two parties closer together; that he would like to see the Country at peace, so that trade might go on as usual, but that he had no hopes so long as the Governor and suite remained at Pembina. What the people now wanted, he said, was complete control over their own affairs; and that, as soon as the Delegates had closed their work, he believed orders would be given to have the census of the people taken—elections to be held, and a Parliament established that the Canadian Government must respect. Why, he asked, should we be any worse dealt with than British Columbia, Newfoundland, or Prince Edward Island? Mr. Howe, he said, told us plainly that we were entitled to the same rights, and that by perseverance we would get them. He further remarked that, "if we fail in our efforts to arrange with Canada, another element would be called in, and the men at the head of this movement just know how to get them—and that is, the Fenians."

I conversed with Hugh Donaldson, of Fort Garry, who was very violent, and stated, with an oath, that a Canadian Government should never rule the Settlement, and threw out hints what they could do in the spring. Mr. O'Loan, Mr. George Evelyn, hotel keeper, and several others, expressed views similar to Mr. McKinney. I talked with many others on that side (I mean of the French half-breeds), and they nearly all spoke to the same purport. A great part of the foregoing was drawn out by questions carefully put by myself.

Mr. * * says the English and Scotch half-breeds are with the Canadian Government, but does not think they would take up arms until they have an army to fall back upon, and some security from the Government that they would be paid for the destruction of their property by fire or otherwise; that he has the promise of 300 stout Indians at any time they are required, but the people generally do not think well of letting the Indians loose until other means have been exhausted.

Mr. Taylor, a wealthy merchant, 12 miles up Assiniboine River presented me with the 'Globe' newspaper, and said, that paper condemns what you say. I must confess that paper has done infinite harm to Canadian interests in the Settlement.

Colonel Robinson is in favour of Government (Canadian), but more so, I think, in favour of the United States. He is an American.

* * * * whose brother * * goes fully with Insurgents, is greatly attached to Canadian Government, and has very great influence amongst Indians, would be a most useful man in any treaty with them. He has put * * from the house he lived in. He said he was a half-breed, and gloried in the name and race, and would never give up the rights he had in the lands. He wanted to see the Governor, and hear what he had to say. He was sure the Canadian Government would never take their rights away.

Mr. William Tait was thought to be favourable to Canada, but from what he said in Hudson's Bay Company's Office to myself and Mr. Grant, we were of opinion that he was changing, as a great many are in danger of doing, who visit the Company's Office, and hear the sentiments and suggestions of John McTavish and Mr. Hargrave. Mr. Tait said—"You may talk; but in that Convention we sit opposite to those who have been born and brought up among us, eat with us, slept with us, hunted with us, traded with us, and are of our own flesh and blood. Gentlemen," said he, "I, for one, cannot fight them. I will not imbue my hands in their blood."

James Ross, another delegate, charged me with speaking against the Governor. He is believed by most people to be staunch in favour of Canadians. He thinks some arrangement may yet be come to by Convention, by which the Governor can be safely brought in. His views do not coincide with a great majority of Council.

Mr. Lowman, another delegate, thinks the present Convention will appease the French half-breeds somewhat. "We have met them," he says, "treated them kindly, and, by continuing to do so, may win them over; but it will take time."

Mr. * * * * thinks no good will come out of the Convention; that nothing but troops, and that immediately, will be of any use; and that if the Canadian Government will send troops by middle of January the English and Scotch will, no doubt, organize. "If troops are not sent, I, for one," he said, "will at any time sign a Memorial to the United States Government, asking their permission to annex ourselves to them." Mr. Boyd is of opinion, that the Indians (Chippewa) will act with the Canadians, but that some steps should be taken at once to have a treaty with them. Trade, he says, is gone, and everything unsatisfactory under the present state of things.

Mr. * * * * a wealthy half-breed, and strongly opposed to the priests, says that soldiers should be sent in immediately to save the Country; that the English and Scotch half-breeds cannot stand this reign of terror much longer, but from want of a leader they are very unwilling to take any steps against their opponents, the French half-breeds; and that 500 or 1000 now would bring the Governor in, and, when once into the Settlement, our people, he says, would rally round him; but, until the Proclamation was issued, there would be nothing done. He had no faith in the working of conventions, as long as McKinney, O'Loan, Riel, and the priests Ritchot and O'Donohue were amongst them, and so long as Bannatyne gave them encouragement as he now does. The latter has more influence amongst the French half-breeds than any one, or perhaps any dozen men in Fort Garry.

Dr. Schultz says he does not approve of speaking anything of troops coming in until all the Canadians have notice, so that they can leave the Settlement. He thinks also that the Convention may result in sending delegates to see the Governor at Pembina—is clearly of opinion that, had proper measures been taken by the Hudson's Bay Company on the first sign of the outbreak, of which they had due notice, no insurrectionary movement would have taken place. He says the Chippewa and Sioux Indians are with the Government, and willing to assist in suppressing the Revolt at any time—that if the people there knew they were to be protected by the Canadian Government, there would be no want of leaders amongst the English and Scotch half-breeds; but he thinks, on the first sign of troops coming in, the Canadians will be all murdered.

Mr. Snow coincides in every particular with Dr. Schultz, was very active and willing to assist me in carrying out the few little matters I had to attend to at Fort Garry—could not have got on well without him.

* * * * says, if Governor would give him authority, he would organize the English and Scotch half-breeds at once—that they could take the Fort any day, and hold it too—is not afraid of the report of troops being sent—would rather like to hear of it—is very much afraid of delay, as he is satisfied a number of Fenians are being raised to come in to the Settlement in the spring—could not give me any reliable authority, but insisted it was a fact.

* * * * wanted to see troops in at once, and the whole thing would be crushed—the French were a noisy, brawling crowd, and would not stand fire—that 1000 men would be a sufficient number to settle the dispute, and, in after times, keep back hostile Indians, if any should turn up; but that too much delay would or might cause a deal of bloodshed, and probably the loss of the whole country.

Mr. Bannatyne is a gentleman with whom, with the exception of Mr. McKinney, I have had more conversation than with any other in the Settlement. He is clearly in favour of the measures taken by the French half-breeds, although he told me one day "that he would rather have paid £50 than have that rising taken place!" On every occasion he had some excuse for the half-breeds, and a word of sympathy at times for Governor McDougall and his family, but that the sooner he left Pembina the better it would be for himself and the Settlement; and he hoped I would advise Colonel Dennis to leave, which I promised to do. I insisted on him going down with me to see the Governor, and take Riel, or McKinney or O'Loan, with him; but he would not consent. By the bye, Mr. McKinney told me that no delegates would be sent from the Convention to the Governor, for a particular reason that he was not at liberty to tell me at present. I could give many other conversations with other parties, but they were all of the same substance; and now, as you desire, I will give you my own opinion of the whole as concisely as possible.

The movement from the first has been of a Republican, Fenian kind. I am fully convinced that no offer that could consistently be made by the Canadian Government would be accepted by the French half-breeds and their friends, the Americans; and that, unless they are forced into it by this Convention, and the threatening of the English half-breeds and whites, or perhaps troops, they will not accept a Governor from the Dominion on any terms.

sic in orig.

Further, I believe the English and Scotch will take no steps to bring the Governor into the Settlement, but that, if once there, they will protect him. This has been expressed to me by many of them. I endeavoured on every occasion to parties, when I could do so with safety, that the present Government or Council was only a provisional one—that, as soon as a franchise was decided upon, a responsible Government would be formed as understood in Canada, that I understood the Governor had it in his power to appoint five of the Council at Red River. Bannatyne and others enquired "how this was not known before?" The former said, "I would give anything rather than that this fine country should fall into the hands of Americans." I further think, from conversing with the friends and foes of the Hudson's Bay Company, that they could in the most easy manner have stopped the whole affair by issuing their Proclamation—calling upon all to obey the laws, that any rising of the kind spoken of would be visited by the severest penalty the law could inflict, and that the whole available civil force would be called out to sustain law and order. They did not do this, nor issue any Proclamation, until in a manner forced into it by the Memorial of the inhabitants of Fort Garry who were loyal. On this Company's head lies a full measure of blame.

The Indians, from what I can learn from * * * * and others, are with the Canadian Government; but there is no trusting to them without a treaty. At present I think some of them are endeavouring to get subsidies from both parties. "Chief Henry Prince," I know has been taking from both.

In conclusion, I would say, if this Convention does not do something towards a settlement in a few days, the cheapest and the safest course, and the one likely to prevent the destruction of life and property, is for the Canadian Government to send a sufficient force at once to take the Governor in, by "at once," I mean, to have them at Pembina by the middle or end of January, for there is great danger of Fenian hordes early in the spring.

I notice in the reports of certain persons, made to you, and forwarded to this Office, reference to expressions said to have been used by me in conversations with inhabitants of the Hudson's Bay Territory; and I think it proper that you should be authorized to contradict all such statements, so far as the inference can be drawn from them, that anything said by me, at Winnipeg, or anywhere else, gave countenance or sanction to breaches of law and order, or to resistance to the peaceful establishment of the Authority of the Dominion in the Territory, under the sanction of Imperial Legislation.

During my visit to the Red River, I never saw Riel, Bruce, Father Ritchot, or any persons said to be the leaders of the insurrectionary movement, but I conversed freely with all classes and orders of the people, from Governor McTavish downwards, and to them all held the same language: That the same Constitution as the other Provinces possessed would ultimately be conferred upon the Country, that in the provisional arrangements to be made the feelings and interests of the resident population would be considered, that leading men enjoying their confidence would be at once taken into the Government, and that the young men, without distinction of blood, would be drawn into the public service, as they were fitted by education, to fill places of trust and emolument.

I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor-General has been pleased to appoint you Special Commissioner, to enquire into, and report upon the causes and extent of the armed obstruction offered at the Red River, in the North-West Territories, to the peaceable ingress of the Honourable William McDougall, the gentleman selected to be Lieutenant-Governor of that Country, on its union with Canada.

Also to enquire into and report upon the causes of the discontent and dissatisfaction at the proposed change that now exists there.

Also to explain to the inhabitants the principles on which the Government of Canada intends to govern the country, and to remove any misapprehensions which may exist on the subject.

And also to take such steps, in concert with Mr. McDougall and Governor McTavish, as may seem most proper for effecting the peaceable transfer of the Country and the Government from the Hudson's Bay Authorities to the Government of the Dominion. You will consider this communication as your letter of appointment as Government Commissioner.

With this Letter you will receive a copy of the Letter of Instructions given to Mr. McDougall on his leaving Ottawa, dated 28th September last.

Copy of a further Letter of Instructions to Mr. McDougall, dated the 7th instant.

Copy of the Proclamation issued by His Excellency the Governor-General, addressed to the inhabitants of the North-West Territories, by the express desire of Her Majesty.

These will enable you to speak authoritatively on the subject of your Mission.

You will proceed with all despatch to Pembina, and arrange with Mr. McDougall as to your future course of action, and then go on to Fort Garry and take such steps as, after such consultation, may seem most expedient. You will, of course, consult Governor McTavish, and endeavour to arrange one system of concerted action in the pacification of the Country, by Mr. McDougall, the Hudson's Bay Authorities, and yourself.

As the information received by the Government here is necessarily imperfect, and as the circumstances at the Red River are continually changing, it is not considered expedient to hamper you with more specific instructions. You will therefore act according to the best of your judgment, in concert with Mr. McDougall, and you will keep me fully informed by every mail of the progress of events.

CANADA. In addition to the more immediate object of your Mission, you are requested to report on the best mode of dealing with the Indian Tribes in the Country, and generally to make such suggestions as may occur to you as to the requirements of the Country for the future.

(No. 156.) Government House, Ottawa, December 17th, 1869.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to state that I lost no time in directing the attention of the Privy Council of the Dominion to your Lordship's Despatch, No. 214,* of the 30th ultimo, recapitulating the series of negotiations about the Transfer of the North-West Territory, and describing the present state of the question.

I have just received in time for post, and transmit herewith, the Minute which, after full consideration, the Council has decided upon submitting in answer, for your Lordship's consideration.

Enclosure in No. 11.

Copy of a Report of a Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council dated 16th December, 1869.

The Committee of Council have had before them the Despatch of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, of the 30th ultimo, on the subject of the two Telegrams sent by your Excellency, on the 23rd and 27th ultimo, to the Colonial Office, on the subject of the disturbances in the Red River Settlement.

The Committee readily acknowledge the correctness of the narrative, in the Despatch, of the proceedings which resulted in the final arrangements for the transfer of the North-Western Territory to Canada.

The circumstances which created the desire of the Government and people of Canada to acquire that country have been so often and so recently stated, that they do not seem to require reiteration. It was alike the interest of Her Majesty's Government, Canada, and the Hudson's Bay Company, that the transfer should be made. Canada still desires to acquire the Territory, and is quite ready to perform all the obligations that she has incurred under the recent arrangements made with Her Majesty's Government and the Company, for the completion of the transfer.

At the same time, it would seem clear that, if Canada is bound to accept the transfer of the Territory, the Company is equally bound to make it. It surely was never contemplated by any of the parties engaged in the negotiations that the transfer was to be a mere interchange of instruments. It must, from the nature of things, have been understood by all parties that the surrender by the Company to the Queen, and the transfer by Her Majesty to the Dominion, was not to be one of Title only. The Company was to convey not only their Rights under the Charter, but the Territory itself, of which it was in possession, and the Territory so conveyed was to be transferred by Her Majesty to Canada.

That there would be an armed resistance by the inhabitants to the transfer was, it is to be presumed, unexpected by all parties; it certainly was so by the Canadian Government.

In this regard, the Company cannot be acquitted of all blame. They had an old and fully organized Government in the country, to which the people appeared to render ready obedience. Their Governor was advised by a Council, in which some of the leading residents had seats. They had every means of information as to the state of feeling existing in the country. They knew, or ought to have known, the light in which the proposed negotiations were viewed by the people under their rule. If they were aware of the feeling of discontent, they ought frankly to have stated it to the Imperial and Canadian Governments. If they were ignorant of the discontent, the responsibility of such wilful blindness on the part of their Officers must rest upon them.

For more than a year these negotiations have been actively proceeded with, and it was the duty of the Company to have prepared the people under its rule for the change; to have explained the precautions taken to protect the interests of the inhabitants; and to have removed any misapprehensions that may have existed among them.

It appears that no steps of any kind, in that direction, were taken. The people have been led to suppose that they have been sold to Canada, with an utter disregard of their rights and position.

When Governor McTavish visited Canada in June last, he was in communication with the Canadian Government, and he never intimated that he had even a suspicion of discontent existing; nor did he make any suggestions as to the best mode of effecting the proposed change, with the assent of the inhabitants.

Lord Granville states that, "Throughout these negotiations it has never been hinted that the Company is to be bound to hand over its territory in a state of tranquillity. Rather its inability to secure that tranquillity, and the dangers resulting from that inability to the neighbouring Colony, is taken for granted as a reason why its responsibilities should be adopted by Canada."

Now the obvious reason why no express stipulation to that effect was made, was, that it was assumed by all parties that the Company had both the right and the power to hand over the Territory. It was in a state of tranquillity, and no suggestion was made of the possibility of such tranquillity being disturbed. Canada did not allege, nor did the Company admit, any inability on the part of the latter to secure the tranquillity of the country, in its present condition.

It is true that Canada had pointed out that in the future, with the population of the United States rapidly pressing forward towards the boundaries of the North-West Territory, such pressure would soon overflow into British Territory, and that the Company would, in such case, be unable to govern or control the large and alien population which might then take possession of the fertile country along the frontier.

But this state of things has not yet arisen, and the resistance comes not from any strangers, or new comers, but from those born and brought up under the Government of the Company, and who have hitherto yielded it a willing allegiance.

These statements are not made as a matter of complaint against the Company, but simply as a justification of the course taken by the Canadian Government which is observed upon in the Despatch. That course has been governed solely by a desire to carry out the transfer under the arrangement in the quietest and best manner possible and in a way that will not leave behind it any cause for discontent or disquiet in the future.

The resistance of these misguided people is evidently not against the sovereignty of Her Majesty or the government of the Hudson's Bay Company, but to the assumption of the Government by Canada. They profess themselves satisfied to remain as they are, and that if the present system of Government were allowed to continue, they would at once disperse to their homes.

It is obvious, then, that the wisest course to pursue is, for the present, to continue the authority of the Company, which the Insurgents affect to respect, while steps are being taken to remove the misapprehensions which exist and to reconcile the people to the change.

Any hasty attempt by the Canadian Government to force their rule upon the Insurgents would probably result in armed resistance and bloodshed. Every other course should be tried before resort is had to force. If life were once lost in an encounter between a Canadian force and the inhabitants, the seeds of hostility to Canada and Canadian rule would be sown, and might create an ineradicable hatred to the union of the Countries, and thus mar the future prosperity of British America.

If anything like hostilities should commence, the temptation to the wild Indian tribes and to the restless adventurers who abound in the United States (many of them with military experience gained in the late Civil War) to join the Insurgents, would be almost irresistible. Already it is said that the Fenian organization look upon this rising as another means of exhibiting their hatred to England.

No one can foresee the end of the complications that might thus be occasioned, not only as between Canada and the North-West, but between the United States and England.

From a sincere conviction of the gravity of the situation, and not from any desire to repudiate or postpone the performance of any of their engagements, the Canadian Government have urged a temporary delay of the transfer.

This is not a question of money; it may be one of peace or war. It is one in which the present and future prosperity of the British Possessions in North America is involved, which prosperity hasty action might permanently prejudice. Even were the £300,000 paid over, the impolicy of putting an end to the only constituted Authority existing in the country and compelling Canada to assert her title by force would remain.

It is better to have the semblance of a Government in the country than none at all. While the issue of the Proclamation would put an end to the Government of the Hudson's Bay Company, it would not substitute the Government by Canada, therefore such a Government is physically impossible until the armed resistance is ended; and thus a state of anarchy and confusion would ensue, and a legal status might be given to any Government de facto formed by the inhabitants for the protection of their lives and property.

On a review of the whole circumstances, the Committee would recommend that your Excellency should urge upon Her Majesty's Government the expediency of allowing matters to remain as they are until quiet is restored, or, in case of failure of all effort to do so, the time shall have arrived when it is possible to enter the country in force and compel obedience to Her Majesty's Proclamation and Authority.

As by the terms of the late Act, the surrender to the Queen must be followed, within a month, by Her Majesty's Order in Council admitting Rupert's Land into the Dominion of Canada, the proper course seems to be that the surrender itself should be postponed, and that the purchase-money should remain on deposit meanwhile.

The Committee would also request your Excellency to assure Lord Granville that the Government here have taken, and are taking, active measures to bring about a happier state of affairs. They have sent on a mission of peace, to the French half-breeds now in arms, the Very Reverend Mr. Thibault, Vicar General (who has laboured as a clergyman among them for 39 years), accompanied by Colonel de Salabery, a gentleman well acquainted with the country and with the manners and feelings of the inhabitants.

CANADA.

These gentlemen are fully informed of the beneficent intentions of the Canadian Government, and can disabuse the minds of the people of the misrepresentations made by designing foreigners.

They have also sent Mr. Donald A. Smith, the Chief Agent of the Hudson's Bay Company at Montreal, as a Special Commissioner. From his position as an Officer of the Company he is likely to obtain ready access to Fort Garry, where he can strengthen the hands of Governor McTavish, now weakened by long illness, and arrange with the loyal and well-affected portion of the people for a restoration of order.

It is confidently hoped that the measures taken will succeed; but, in the event of failure, the Government are making preparations, by the construction of boats and otherwise, for sending a Military Force in the early spring. In these efforts the Canadian Government are glad to believe that they will have the hearty co-operation of Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company.

Copy of a DESPATCH from Governor The Right Hon. Sir J. YOUNG, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., to the Right Hon. Earl GRANVILLE, K.G.

(No. 164.)

Government House, Ottawa, Canada,

MY LORD,

18th Dec.,
1869.

I have the honour to enclose copies of the Letters and Reports by telegram from the Red River, containing the information received from the 25th November to the present date.

I am happy to state that the latest information is more hopeful in the interests of peace than portions of the enclosed Correspondence might lead one to expect.

The Stone Fort, at which the loyal English and Scotch half-breeds have rallied, is seventeen or twenty miles from Fort Garry, of which the French half-breeds hold possession, so the two parties are at a considerable distance from each other.

It is denied that Mr. McDougall has invoked the assistance of the Indians, and Colonel Dennis has not had more than fifty of them with him engaged to assist in the defence of the Stone Fort.

The most authentic accounts are that the Indians generally are disposed to stand true to their allegiance to the Queen, and not to aid the French half-breeds; and, lastly, we are in possession of the fact that the first Despatches of the Canadian Government reached Mr. McDougall on the 7th or 8th instant, and these Despatches deprecated, in earnest terms, the resort to force, and inculcated the policy of not asserting even legal rights by arms until further negotiation had been tried, and all hopes of effecting a peaceful arrangement disappointed.

Under these instructions it seems very unlikely that any collision can take place, and if none take place before the envoys Le Grand Vicaire Thibault, Colonel de Salaberry, and Mr. Smith arrive, as they are expected to do on the 24th or 25th instant, an opening will be given for negotiating, which, seeing how small the difference is between what the half-breeds ask and what the Canadian Government is prepared to grant, can scarcely fail to terminate the difficulty in a peaceful and satisfactory manner.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE PROVINCES TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

16th December, 1869.

SIR,

I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General, copy of a Despatch, with three Enclosures from the Hon. William McDougall, C.B., giving an account of the occurrences which have taken place in the North-West Territories since the date of his Despatch of the 25th ult.

Francis Turville, Esq., Secretary to the Governor-General.

I have, &c.,

JOSEPH HOWE.

Larose's Farm, Pembina, U.S.,
29th November, 1869.

SIR,

I have the honour to report that I am still at Pembina, in the territory of the United States (Messrs. Richards, Provencher and Begg being with me), and unable, in consequence of the continued occupation of the road by armed men, to proceed to Fort Garry.

I have further to report that I have not received any instructions for my guidance on and after the day of the Transfer of the Territory to Canada, nor any notice of the Order in Council, which has no doubt been passed to effect it.

In these circumstances, I am compelled to act upon the general powers and directions of my Commission, and of the Acts of Parliament, Canadian and Imperial, which seem to bear upon the case.

I have accordingly prepared a Proclamation to be issued on the first day of December, reciting so much of the several Acts of Parliament as seemed necessary to disclose the requisite authority, and stating, by way of recital, the fact of surrender by the Hudson's Bay Company, acceptance by Her Majesty, and Transfer to Canada, from and after the 1st December, A.D. 1869. These facts I gather from the newspapers, from a private letter to me of the Deputy Governor of the Company, and my own knowledge before I left Ottawa, that the 1st of December had been agreed upon as the date of the Transfers.

In the present state of affairs in the Settlement, it is of the utmost importance to announce the transfer of Authority in the most authentic and solemn manner possible, in order to give confidence and the protection of legality to the acts of the loyal and well-disposed, and to put the malcontents and their American advisers and sympathizers publically and technically in the wrong. Several messages have been sent, urging me to assume authority and to authorize action at once against the French half-breeds; but, as my previous Reports will show, I decided to keep strictly within my Commission, and referred those persons to the Local Authorities for advice and direction. On the 24th inst., however, Riel and his party took possession, without resistance, of the Public Offices in the Fort, seized the Public Records and Papers, and made prisoners of the Treasurer and Officers in charge of the Public Funds. I have not heard whether they have removed Governor McTavish from his official residence, but he is evidently hors de combat personally and officially. I have had no communication from him since the 19th inst., directly or indirectly, although in his last note he promised to communicate further immediately. As I have found no serious difficulty in sending and receiving from the Settlement communications of a private character, I infer that the Rebels have imprisoned the Governor so closely that nothing is allowed to reach him or proceed from him, of which they disapprove.

On the evening of the same day, Riel made a demonstration of the Government provisions under the charge of Mr. Snow, pretending that he only wanted to make an inventory of them. Some Canadians employed on the Survey being in the neighbourhood, and indignant at this move of the Rebels, as well as apprehensive that the possession of these provisions by them would greatly strengthen their position, determined to remove them, by force if necessary, to the Lower Fort of the Hudson's Bay Company; but, on consideration, they felt that to bring on a collision at that moment, and on such a question, might be impolitic, and as the Local Authorities could not, or would not act, they despatched Mr. Newcombe, a young Canadian, to me the same night with the letter marked "A." He got safely through, having run about half the way on foot, making the whole distance of 67 miles in 20 hours. He was ready to return on foot or on horseback after an hour's rest, if I had deemed it necessary. His energy, courage and zeal, and his account of the feelings of the loyal portion of the inhabitants, inspired us all with the hope that a reaction had set in, and that as soon as the incubus of a moribund and inactive Government was removed, a call might safely be made upon the loyal and well-disposed to rally in defence of law and order. But, in view of the peculiar relations existing between the French half-breeds and the rest of the native population, I thought it very undesirable to allow a "fight" to take place about Government property, until some collision had occurred which would excite the feelings of the English and Scotch half-breeds and exasperate them against the Insurgents. The interruption to business, reducing thereby the price of grain, and enhancing the price of merchandise; the arrest of men like Hallett, of local influence and extensive family connection; the taking of provisions without pay from the Settlers, and occupying their houses without their consent, and the chance of a fray springing out of some of these circumstance, seemed to justify delay in organizing opposition to Riel's designs upon the Government pork and flour, which if seized by him, would not strike the half-breed Settlers as a very heinous offence, or one which they ought to risk their lives to prevent or punish. Moreover, the Hudson's Bay Company's Officers were still the nominal rulers of the Settlement, and as their Sheriff (McKinny) was notoriously in the interests of the Rebels—advising, aiding, and abetting them—it appeared to me better that none of my agents or avowed supporters should provoke or be parties to a collision before the 1st December, and run the risk of finding the Sheriff and other Authorities on the side of the Rebels, or, what would amount to the same thing, issuing warrants against Canadians.

Accordingly I detained Mr. Newcombe for future service, and despatched by a loyal French half-breed the answer marked "B," and by the same hand the letter "C," to Governor McTavish. My plan was to hold the Authorities to their duties and responsibilities as long as possible, and to delay, without wholly prohibiting, the resistance of the employés and friends of the new Government. How far this plan has succeeded I am not yet aware, but I suspect that Riel will have seized the provisions before my directions reached Fort Garry, or, at all events, before the action recommended by me has been taken. I do not regard the possession of the Government stores by Riel and his party as of very much consequence. They cannot eat them up at once, and if the measures I have taken to organize an armed force to seize Riel and his colleagues, and disperse the rank and file of his followers should prove successful, the provisions will soon be again in our possession.

CANADA.

The last two mails brought me only newspapers and two or three small private letters. I am much afraid that official letters are detained at some point between St. Paul and this place purposely, and perhaps read and destroyed. As the Postmaster here openly avows his sympathy with the half-breeds, and permits one Stuttsman, referred to in a former report, to distribute and handle the postal matter in his office, I have no great faith that my letters to Ottawa have been forwarded, if at all, without being first read. I shall therefore abstain from all details as to the operations contemplated after the 1st December. Their discovery and publication here would be sure to defeat them.

I have received a friendly letter from the Indian Chief "Pegwis," who lives at Winnipeg, in which he strongly condemns the conduct of the French half-breeds. He reminds me that they came from my own country, and are "very bad men." He wishes to see me to shake hands and bargain about his land. He has offered his services to the Canadians in the Settlement to put down Riel and his party, evidently foreseeing that if they got the mastery the Indian title to the land in Assiniboine will not be treated with much respect or realise much profit.

I have returned a verbal answer to his letter, expressing the most friendly feelings towards him and his people, and my desire to see them at Fort Garry as soon as possible. I thought it better to put nothing in writing, and indeed to say nothing that should be construed into an invitation to the Indians to arm or attack any class of the inhabitants—not even those now under arms and in a state of insurrection. It is very satisfactory to find that the Indians in all directions, and under different chiefs, are well disposed and unwilling to give any aid to the French half-breeds. I have taken pains, through the agency of loyal persons having influence with them, to arouse the apprehensions of the Indians in reference to the annexation features of the half-breed movement, and its effect upon them and their land claims. They have been quick to perceive that the outbreak bodes no good to them, and they cannot therefore be seduced into any kind of sympathy with it. This fact is already producing a marked effect upon the plans and operations of the Insurgents.

A letter appeared in a newspaper published at Yankton, Dakota, purporting to have been written and delivered to me by two Indian Chiefs, making peremptory demands for a settlement with them before entering the Territory. This letter was concocted by American schemers at Pembina, and read to the Indians who were waiting to see me. At first they consented to it, but the next day went to the village, asked to see it, and tore it up. The veracious correspondent of the Yankton newspaper allowed it, nevertheless, to appear as a bonâ fide communication to me.

In the same newspaper is a communication, under date 23rd September, detailing the plans, grievances, and demands, of the half-breeds with such particularity as to show that the plot has its chief counsellor, if not its originator, in this village. One of these conspirators, the man Stuttsman, lately visited Fort Garry, and is known to be consulting and aiding the insurgents at that place.

As far as I can learn, the priests have withdrawn latterly from active co-operation, and begin to shake their heads and speak doubtfully of the consequences likely to result from the outbreak.

Until I have received more specific instructions for my guidance after assuming the government, and learn the view which His Excellency and Council are likely to take of the events detailed in my Reports, I do not feel myself in a position to make any special recommendation as to the measures which ought to be adopted by the Government of Canada. I have taken, and must continue to take, a large discretion and responsibility in regard to measures which must be initiated and executed within the Territory. I have hesitated to call for troops or volunteers from Canada in mid-winter. The difficulties in the way are enormous, and the chance of disaster, with the present means of transportation, is almost reduced to a certainty. But preparation should undoubtedly be made for a large emigration in the early spring of such Settlers as were offered last fall by Colonel Barivis, of the township of Halifax, and by another gentleman in the county of Bruce. Settlers of this class will be a valuable, almost a necessary, addition to the population of the Territory, and any expense which their transportation hither may involve ought to be readily furnished.

Toronto, 15th December, 1869.

St. Paul Minn., 15th.—Private letter just received from Pembina gives the following information:—The Rebels have placed Governor McTavish under close guard, on account of his recent Proclamation advising them to lay down their arms and submit to the Government. In meantime they continue to issue rations with a regularity which is making serious inroads upon the Hudson Bay goods at Fort Garry and outposts. Captain Campbell, of Governor McDougall's party, attempted to go into Fort Garry, but was confronted at the gate by a sentinel, who, with the assistance of a sergeant, forced him back upon American soil, and, upon pain of being shot, was forbidden to re-enter the lines.

(A.)

DEAR COLONEL,

Winnepeg, Wednesday, 24th November, 1869.

We require definite instructions how to act under the following circumstances:—To-day (about 4 P.M.) we got information that the Government stores in Dr. Schultz were being seized. Captain

Bolton, Mr. Codd, and self, proceeded immediately to ascertain the truth of the matter. We found Riel and an armed guard coming out of the back store with Dr. Schultz. I went up and asked what particular business was going on? The Doctor said, "Mr. Riel is taking an inventory of the stores." I replied, looking at Riel, "They are the Queen's property." He turned about and stamped, exclaiming angrily, "The devil's property!" moving away at the same time. On inquiring about the matter, the Doctor told us that his carts had been stopped at the fort, and he went down to see about them. Saw Riel, who said that "it was merely a matter of form;" but he wished to know, "if the duties had been paid, and there were no arms in the cases." The Doctor answered, "No, there were no arms." Riel, however, accompanied the Doctor to his store for the purpose of examining them. On entering the store Riel said, "Are all these your goods?" The Doctor replied, "No, Government property." Riel then said, "By-the-bye, that reminds me. I may as well take an inventory of them in case any parties should remove any portion, and it would be laid to us." In the mean time an armed guard of four men had come up (as Dr. Schultz says, "A sly mode of getting access to the store"). Riel put two of them in charge, and went off, intending to return. While he was away the Doctor hired the guard for 6d. a-piece, to assist in carrying the cases into the house. They left their arms in the store, and accordingly went to work for the Doctor. While they were so employed, the Doctor sent Smith, who removed the arms and locked up the store. Riel returned some couple of hours afterwards, and found his guard "shouldering cases." He demanded entrance to the store, after soundly rating his men. The Doctor refused, and told them they would have to use force; this he repeated. Finally the key was obtained by them from Smith. The Doctor then put his back to the door and refused entrance, unless Riel promised upon his honour not to remove anything, which Riel did. The Doctor further says that at this moment (that is, after they had entered the store) Hallett showed his nose round the corner, when Riel all at once came to the conclusion that it was rather late to take the inventory, and left an armed guard at the door. It was at this time, while they were coming out of the Doctor's store, that we arrived on the scene.

Now, there are Canadians here willing to protect the property of Canada, and remove the stores to the Stone Fort for safe keeping. We propose the following plan:—We (the Canadians) to proceed in a party of twenty or thirty, with hired sleighs to be procured in the Scotch Settlement, and go to Schultz's store about noon, and remove them (the stores) down to the Stone Fort, and leave * * * (armed of course) in charge. If we meet opposition we will defend the stores, and remove them against all comers. This will have the effect, perhaps, of precipitating matters. On the other hand, if they remove the provisions, which no doubt is their intention, you will at once see that they will have gained a very important advantage over the loyal inhabitants by the possession of these stores. Hallett says that he individually will stand by us and assist: We await the advice and instructions of the Governor to act. This will also give us an excuse to occupy the Stone Fort, where a large amount of ammunition is stored.

Yours, &c.,

(Signed)

D. A. GRANT.

P.S. It is understood that if we act in this matter, we act upon our own responsibility—not wishing to compromise authority—we only desire to have advice.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, 25th November, 1869.

I trust this will reach you safely and in good time. The Governor has determined to retain the bearer of your letter for reasons which will be apparent soon. I should have been with you again long before now but that the Governor required me to remain here for a purpose of which you will soon also be aware. With regard to the provisions and public property which you say are in danger of being seized by a band of lawless men and removed from the custody of those who have been entrusted with them, I am instructed to convey Mr. McDougall's orders as follows:—

1st. Apply to the local authorities for a sufficient police or other force to prevent it.

2nd. If this is refused, or if no such force can be had, apply to Governor McTavish, or the officer in charge of the Stone Fort, for permission to store the property there for safe keeping, and ask him to give you authority to guard and defend it by the voluntary aid of the law-abiding inhabitants.

3rd. If this permission to store in the fort is granted, remove the provisions, &c., there, and hire a sufficient number of persons to remove and defend it against all illegal attempts at appropriation.

4th. But in the event of a seizure, or attempt at seizure, by a considerable force of armed men either before or during the removal above suggested and authorised, you are advised not to risk a collision which may cause bloodshed unless the Local Authorities shall have sanctioned the organisation of an armed force for the purpose of protecting the property.

Mr. McDougall has written to Governor McTavish on the subject, and asked his interference on your written demand.

Believe me, &c.,

(Signed)

J. S. DENNIS.

D. A. Grant, Esq., Fort Garry.

CANADA.

(Copy "C.")

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, November 5th, 1869.

The agents of the Dominion Government in charge of the provisions and other public property of that Government now at Winnipeg, have represented to me that an armed party of lawless persons have attempted to seize and appropriate it. They have asked for instructions from me, and have suggested that this property be removed under escort, if necessary, to the Stone Fort for safe keeping.

I have instructed Colonel Dennis to communicate the following as my directions (see Letter to Mr. Grant, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th.)

May I request that you will give Mr. Grant and Mr. Snow, and any other persons who may have in lawful custody any of this property, such assistance as you can command to protect it from molestation by the lawless persons referred to. If in your judgment the proposal to remove it to the Stone Fort, and to protect it there in the way proposed by the persons who will reply to you, is feasible, and under the circumstances advisable, I should feel obliged if you will give them the desired authority.

I leave the matter for the present entirely in your hands.

W. McTavish, Esq., Governor Hudson's Bay Company.

I have, &c.,

(Signed)

WM. McDOUGALL.

From the GOVERNOR-GENERAL to Mr. SMITH.

MY DEAR Mr. SMITH,

Ottawa, 12th December, 1869.

I learn with satisfaction that you have placed your services at the disposal of the Canadian Government, and that you are proceeding to the Red River to give, not to them only but to both the parties that are at variance, the benefit of your experience, influence, and mediation.

In my capacity as Her Majesty's Representative in Her North American Possessions, I have addressed letters to Governor McTavish, the Protestant Bishop, and the Vicar General, who acts in lieu of the R. C. Bishop during his absence in Rome.

I have sent them copies of the message received by telegraph from Her Majesty's Secretary of State, which forms the staple of the Proclamation I have addressed to Her Majesty's faithful subjects in the North-West.

You will observe that it calls upon all who have complaints to make, or wishes to express, to address themselves to me as Her Majesty's Representative, and you may state with the utmost confidence that the Imperial Government has no intention of acting otherwise, or in permitting others to act otherwise, than in perfect good faith towards the inhabitants of the Red River district and of the North-West.

The people may rely that respect and attention will be extended to the different religious persuasions, that title to every description of property will be carefully guarded, and that all the franchises which have subsisted, or which the people may prove themselves qualified to exercise, shall be duly continued or liberally conferred.

In declaring the desire and determination of Her Majesty's Cabinet, you may safely use the terms of the ancient formula, that right shall be done in all cases.

Wishing you a prosperous journey and all success in your mission of peace and goodwill,

I remain, &c.,

(Signed)

JOHN YOUNG.

From J. A. WHEELOCK to Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State, Ottawa.

Dated, St. Paul, Minn., 17th December, 1869.

I have just received news that Colonel Dennis, Surveyor-General, has succeeded in raising and arming some two hundred swampy Indians, and a number of their Englished half-breed relations, that they have garrisoned the Stone Fort; that McDougall has organized another force of the hostile Sioux of Portage la Prairie, under the lead of Canadians, and that as soon as these forces form a junction they will march on the Insurgent force at and near Fort Garry. General Riel has called in his reserve of French half-breeds, who were temporarily absent. Over three hundred men reported at Headquarters within a few hours from issuing the call, and a collision was hourly expected at the date of my advices.

(No. 1108.) From the Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State, for the Provinces, to
F. TURVILLE, Esq., Governor's Secretary, Ottawa.

SIR, Ottawa, 18th December, 1869.
I have the honour to enclose, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, copy of a Despatch, dated 2nd December, from Hon. William McDougall, C.B., with Enclosures (2), also copies of Telegrams received to-day referring to the state of affairs in the North-West Territories, and also copy of a Despatch addressed to Mr. McDougall on the 17th instant.

I have, &c.,
JOSEPH HOWE.

From the Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State for the Provinces, to
The Hon. WILLIAM McDOUGALL, C.B.

SIR, Department of Secretary of State for the Provinces,
Ottawa, 17th December, 1869.

Your Despatch of the 29th November, reached this Office on the 15th instant, and created some apprehensions that you were about to issue a Proclamation announcing the formal transfer of the Territory, which has not yet taken place, and to organize or countenance movements, which, however well intended, would have been without the sanction of law. The receipt of the Papers A, B, C, which did not come to hand till the following day, relieved this anxiety; and I have now to convey to you the satisfaction with which the numbered paragraphs in the Paper marked "B" were read by the Governor-General and Council.

The Despatches sent to you on the 19th and 29th November, and 7th, 8th, 10th, and 11th of December, will, before this reaches you, have explained the views taken by this Government of the situation of affairs in the North-West, and the nature of the Correspondence with the Imperial Government which has not yet closed. No notice has yet been received here of the issue of the Queen's Proclamation annexing the Territory to Canada, or of the payment of the purchase money. By this day's Mail an elaborate Minute of Council goes to England.

You will, until further advised, abstain from all movements in excess of your authority, and do nothing by which the Governor and Officers of the Hudson's Bay Company may be relieved of the responsibility which now rests upon them.

Should any Telegraphic notice of the issue of the Queen's Proclamation reach you, I am commanded to desire that you will refrain from any action thereupon, until you receive a copy of the Proclamation through this Office.

Hon. Wm. McDougall, C.B., Pembina.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOSEPH HOWE.

SIR, La Rose's Farm, Pembina, U.S., December 2nd, 1869.

By the last mail, under date 29th November, I reported that I was still at this place, and that I had neither received official instructions for my guidance after assuming the Government of the North-West Territories, nor any notice of the passing of the Order of Her Majesty in Council for the Transfer of the North-West Territory to the Dominion. I also detailed at some length the events which had occurred since my previous Report, and indicated some of the measures I had prepared, and proposed to adopt on and after the 1st December. I also enclosed, in a separate Letter, Copies of Correspondence respecting the Government Stores at Fort Garry, and the steps I recommended to be taken for their protection. I hope these letters have reached Ottawa safely, and, assuming they have, I proceed to detail, briefly, what has since occurred.

Fearing, from information I received, that my messenger with copies of the Proclamation announcing the 1st of December as the date of transfer of authority from the Hudson's Bay Company to the Dominion had been intercepted, I entrusted additional copies in English and French to Colonel Dennis, who, with a trusty guide, started on the night of the 29th ultimo (the coldest we have yet experienced) for Fort Garry. I also commissioned him to act as my "Lieutenant," and as a "Conservator of the Peace," in raising the loyal inhabitants in defence of law and order. I gave him large powers, and, as he is fully aware of my views and plans, and the nature of the authority under which he is to act, and is, moreover, acquainted with the leading men of the Settlement, stands well in their estimation, and knows the country, I have every confidence that he will execute his orders with promptitude, discretion, and success. I do not deem it prudent to forward by this mail a copy of my commission to him, as there is some danger that it might go in a wrong direction.

It will be seen from the Paper "A" herewith, that the English and Scotch Settlers and half-breeds have at last discovered that they must choose between Riel and his American allies and advisers, and the authority of Her Majesty and the Canadian Government. Meetings have been held, with more or less secrecy, in all the parishes, except those exclusively French, and a "Committee of Public Safety" organized. The movement has been much aided by the Canadians connected with the Road and Survey, the only persons of intelligence and apparent authority to whom the poor but well-disposed Settlers could look for advice. Mr. James Koss, a Scotch half-breed recently from Canada, and mentioned in a previous Report as apparently in the confidence of the malcontents, has been exceedingly active in refuting the false stories that certain influential traders and other traitors have been busy in circulating. Captain Bolton, who was present at the meeting of the representatives of three parishes when the enclosed letter to me was agreed upon, has also shown zeal and discretion, as well as courage, in his efforts to arouse the loyal people of the Settlement. Colonel Dennis was charged with my answer to these people in the shape of a Commission, which on and after the 1st December he could make known to them. The Proclamation itself, so anxiously looked for by the friends of Canada, will, I trust, settle all doubts in the minds of the well-disposed, and dispel the false, preposterous, but nevertheless dangerous rumours sent out from day to day by the conspirators. One point of considerable importance in the minds of the English and Scotch Settlers, hinted at in the enclosed Paper, but more explicitly stated in other messages which have reached me—is the view which will be taken by Government of the claims of loyalists serving against the Rebels, for any losses to person and property which may result. I have not ventured to make a very specific answer to this question, as any rule on the subject would be liable to abuse; but I have told Colonel Dennis to assure those who agree to serve under his order that the Government will treat them in the same way, and with the same liberality as in Canada, or in other parts of the Empire. I have, moreover, authorized him to allow the same rates of pay, &c., as are allowed under the Canada Militia Act, to Volunteers called out in aid of the Civil power.

Yesterday evening, after finding that the road was clear, I took with me Messrs. Richards and Provencher, and four others of my party, and proceeded to the Hudson's Bay Company's Post near Pembina, in order to execute on British soil, and so far in a public manner, the Proclamation and other documents which are to take effect within the Territory. I have resolved to do no official act on American soil, and have made arrangements to occupy the Hudson's Bay Company's Post, and if necessary repel by force the attack of any such party as the one that drove us from it on the 3rd of November. It is surrounded by a high fence, and with a little improvement may be defended against a considerable force by a few resolute men, with breech-loading rifles. Fortunately we have with us a few such rifles, and a small supply of ammunition. We number about a dozen, and are all good shots. I shall not openly take this position and attitude unless I hear from Colonel Dennis that he has a force in the field, and is thus giving Riel and his party something to do at Fort Garry. In the mean time we go to and from the "Post," well armed and prepared against surprise. The American officials and ex-officials here are a little less jubilant and swaggering in their tone since they have found that the English, Scotch, and Indians, have refused to join Riel, and that resistance is being organized. I enclose a slip, cut from a St. Paul newspaper, which shows the feelings and designs of these people. They assume in their correspondence the air of lookers-on merely, but they are in truth the chief counsellors and directors of the movement. Stuttzman is still at Fort Garry, but will probably move south very speedily, when the loyal Settlers, with Colonel Dennis at their head, come upon the scene.

I have heard from Fort Garry of the safe arrival of the letters conveying my instructions in regard to the Government provisions. Riel had made two or three attempts to remove them, and had pointed two of the guns of the Fort on Dr. Schultz's warehouse, in which a portion of them was stored, in anticipation of resistance, but the firm attitude of the Canadians and others in the vicinity seems to have induced Riel to postpone his threatened seizure. I hope no collision has taken place over these stores, as such an event might prejudice the movement progressing so favourably in the English and Scotch parishes.

I enclose (Paper "B") copy of a second Proclamation which I deemed it my duty to issue. I hope I am right in using the name of Her Majesty as prominently as I have done. The leaders of this movement have studiously represented that they were only resisting the aggressions of Canada and not the Authority of the Crown. It is necessary to meet them on this point explicitly and promptly.

Anxiously awaiting some official directions and information from you,

I have, &c.,

The Hon. Joseph Howe,
Secretary of State, Ottawa.

WILLIAM McDUGALL.

(A.)

To the Honourable Mr. McDUGALL.

SIR,

We, influential members of the English-speaking population and loyal subjects of the British Crown, have heard that you are appointed Governor of this Territory, but we have had no certain or official information that such is the case; in fact, we don't know officially that any change has taken place in the Constitution of this Country. Under these circumstances there is no certainty of movement or any chance of co-operation. We will be glad to be informed officially what is the position of affairs—what are the intentions of the Canadian Government, and what support will be given from Government.

Circumstances are such that names cannot be given, at least it is not advisable; but * * * will testify to the genuineness of this communication.

(L.S.) By His Excellency the Honourable William McDougall, a Member of Her Majesty's Privy Council for Canada and Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, &c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come, GREETING.

A PROCLAMATION ! ! !

WHEREAS Her Majesty THE QUEEN, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Dominion of Canada, bearing date the twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, in the thirty-third year of Her Majesty's Reign, has been graciously pleased to constitute and appoint me, on, from, and after the day to be named by Her Majesty for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, to be Lieutenant-Governor in and over the North-West Territories during Her Majesty's pleasure, and did thereby authorize and empower and require and command me, on, from, and after the day aforesaid, to Do and Execute all things in due manner that shall belong to my said Command and the Trust reposed in me, according to the several powers and instructions granted or appointed me by that Her Majesty's Commission, and of the Act of Parliament passed in the thirty-second year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled "An Act for the Temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory when united with Canada," and the Instructions given me with such Commission or by such further Instructions as may hereafter be given me in respect of the North-West Territories and the Government thereof by Her Majesty's Governor-General in Council, under his Sign Manual, or through one of Her Majesty's Privy Council of Canada, and according to such laws as are now and shall hereafter be in force in the said North-West Territories.

And whereas Her Majesty has declared and named the first day of December instant as the day for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union and Dominion of Canada; and whereas, by virtue and in pursuance of "The British North-America Act, 1867," "The Rupert's Land Act, 1868," the said "Act for the Temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory when united with Canada," and the said Declaration and Order of Her Majesty, Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory have been admitted into Union with and have become and are now part of the Dominion of Canada, and are henceforth to be styled and known as "The North-West Territories."

Now, know ye, that I have thought fit to issue this Proclamation to make known Her Majesty's said Appointment to all Officers, Magistrates, Subjects of Her Majesty and others within the said The North-West Territories; and I do hereby require and command that all and singular the public Officers and Functionaries holding Office in Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory at the time of their admission into the Union as aforesaid, excepting the Public Officer or Functionary at the head of the administration of affairs, do continue in the execution of their several and respective Offices, duties, plaus, and employments, until otherwise ordered by me under the authority of the said last-mentioned Act. And I do hereby further require and command, that all Her Majesty's loving Subjects and all others whom it may concern, do take notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and Seal-at-arms at Red River, in the said Territories, this second day of December, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the thirty-third year of Her Majesty's reign.

By Command,

TELEGRAM

From Mr. H. P. DWIGHT to Sir JOHN A. McDONALD.

Dated Toronto, 18th December, 1869.

Letter dated Pembina, December 6th, says the Red River Mail, just in, brings the most exciting news. Governor McDougall has succeeded in raising body of Indians, who are marching to the Stone Fort, under Colonel Dennis, and it is feared collision has already taken place. The writer says Mail is just closing, and no time to write further particulars. A Letter, same date, from Governor McDougall, says, on December 1st the Government of the Queen was announced through its Canadian Representatives. On same day a force of Loyal men occupied Stone Fort, and the Loyal Whites and half-breeds began rapidly to rally and organise. The Insurgents were beginning to disperse, and had withdrawn their forces from the Printing-office and other places in Winnipeg. Riel, the Chief of Insurgents, still remained in possession of Fort Garry, with 400 of his followers. Another Letter says Mail just in from Garry brings news that Colonel Dennis has a force of 300 men, consisting of Swampy Indians and their half-breed relations, that they have garrisoned the Stone Fort, and are expected to form junction with Canadian and Sioux of Portage la Prairie, and march against Insurgents at Fort Garry. Riel had called in his reserves, who were temporarily absent, and 300 men reported at his headquarters in few hours after issuing the call. A collision was soon looked for. The reports current that McTavish had been taken by Insurgents from his sick-bed, and together with his subordinates confined in prison, and that Insurgents had helped themselves to property of Hudson's Bay Company, was not generally believed. The St. Paul press of this morning editorial on Red River trouble says Governor McDougall has assumed a fearful responsibility in thus subjecting the Settlement to the terrible risks involved in Indian War. It is but just to say that as our Correspondent at Pembina evinces a natural sympathy for the Insurgents, and obtain his information doubtless from Insurgents' side, it is possible they may be to some extent misled. We publish, of course, only such information as we get, and must necessarily base our remarks on the state of affairs as presented to us. There are grounds for belief that McDougall is entering into Indian trouble without consultation with Canadian Government, as it is stated in Ottawa Despatch of yesterday that Dominion Government may not complete purchase of North-West until spring.

CANADA.

Secretary of State for the Provinces to
Mr. Turville,
Dec. 24, 1869.

Ditto, 26th
Dec., 1869.

I have the honour to enclose, for your Lordship's information, copies of Despatches from Mr. McDougall, which give an account of his proceedings and the state of affairs at the Red River up to the 8th instant.

The resort to force, which Mr. McDougall announces he had sanctioned in these Despatches, did not meet the approval of the Canadian Government, and instructions were sent to him deprecating it.

Our latest advices state that he has retired from Pembina, and is on his way back to Canada. On other points we have no certain intelligence.

The two parties of envoys had left Fort Abercrombie, and expected to reach Fort Garry on or about Christmas-day.

Adverting to my letter of the 16th instant, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, a copy of a Despatch, with enclosures from 2 A to 2 D inclusive, from the Hon. HON. WILLIAM McDUGALL to the Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State, &c., Ottawa.

SIR,

Pembina, 6th December, 1869.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch of the 19th November, transmitted, under cover, from St. Paul to the Deputy Collector of this Fort.

It is very satisfactory to me to find that the Privy Council entirely approves of my conduct under the trying circumstances in which I was placed on my entrance into the North-West Territories. The events and the difficulties with which I have had to deal, since the date of the letter to which your Despatch is a reply, have been very fully detailed in the several Reports I have had the honour to forward to you; and I hope my conduct may, in all these difficult circumstances, be found to have equally deserved the approbation of His Excellency in Council. The large discretion and "freedom of action," which almost of necessity have been allowed to me, I have endeavoured to exercise to the best of my ability in the interest of the Canadian Government, and for the maintenance of the Authority of the Crown in this part of the Dominion.

CANADA.

It is not easy, amid the confusion and discomforts of camp life, and the building of winter quarters on the prairie in November, to make a clear and adequate statement of all the facts and circumstances which have from day to day formed the basis of judgment, or supplied the motives for action. I trust, however, that the Papers, Letters, and Reports I have forwarded, with my own observations, have enabled the Privy Council to understand the difficulties of the situation, if not in every case to pronounce as to the best means available for overcoming them.

I enclose herewith (marked 2 A) Colonel Dennis's first Report, from his headquarters at the Stone Fort, 15 miles below Fort Garry. A reference to one of Mr. Dawson's maps will show his position, and its relation to the other places mentioned in his Report. In my Despatch of the 2nd instant, I stated the purpose for which he was sent, and in general terms the powers I had given him. It appears he found that the English and Scotch half-breeds, and the Indians of the Mission, as well as a considerable number of the French half-breeds, were ripe for a movement in support of order and authority. From a confidential report by a person who had access to Riel's council, I learn that the news of the movement at the Stone Fort, and the reading of my Proclamation (which was opportunely produced and read in their meeting on Wednesday) had a most tranquillizing effect. Riel said, "This puts a different face on the matter," and, as my informant says, "expressed much loyalty." He appealed to the English Delegates (some of whom still remained in his Convention, to watch its proceedings), to "help them peaceably to get their rights." The English demanded a statement in writing of "what these rights were;" the French said they must have an hour to consider. At the expiration of the hour they presented a paper, of which a copy is enclosed (marked 2 B). The English refused to be parties to this demand, alleging that the Proclamation showed they had no right to make it, that they must accept the new Government, and trust that all they could justly ask would be granted. Riel was indignant at their refusal to join in a deputation to me with his ultimatum, and declared he would bear it himself. Nothing, however, was decided up to Thursday at noon. Riel's armed guards were withdrawn from the town after the posting of the Proclamation, and also from the Store-house containing the Government provisions. Fort Garry was still held by a force of thirty or forty men.

I enclose (Paper 2 C) a letter of a private character from Mr. Mair, which mentions some further particulars, and also confirms some of the statements I have detailed on the authority of their correspondence.

I feel very confident that this prompt display of vigour, and the determination to assist and maintain by force, if need be, the authority of the New Government from the day and hour of its expected birth, will inspire all the inhabitants of the Territory with respect for your Representation, and compel the Traitors and Conspirators to cry, "God save the Queen," or beat a hasty retreat. The "prime conspirator," Stuttzman, as I anticipated in my last Despatch, did not wait for Colonel Dennis to get his hands upon him, but made his appearance here the day after the Proclamation was issued, very subdued and crest-fallen.

I notice the remark in your Despatch, that I can "claim or assert no authority in the Hudson's Bay Territory until the Queen's Proclamation reaches me through this (your) Office." If I had so read my Commission and the Acts of Parliament, the Rebel Government would have been formally inaugurated during the interregnum which must have occurred between the 1st of December (which the Rebels, as well as the Hudson's Bay Company's Agents knew and believed to be the date of the transfer), and the time when your messenger could reach me. He probably would have met me at St. Cloud or St. Paul, if I had lived to get so far, with no disposition or power to return without an army at my back. You can judge, from the tone of the American newspapers, and the action of the Legislature of Minnesota, at its last session (Extract 2 D), to say nothing of the Fenians who have their emissaries here and at Fort Garry, what facilities would be given for the transportation of a Canadian force in such an event as that stated. My conviction is that we would have had to fight at a much later date, and at a great disadvantage, a very different enemy from that which now melts away before a Proclamation and a "Conservator of the Peace."

I shall await the arrival of your messenger before taking the oaths of office, or performing any but necessary acts for the protection of life and property. I must trust that the same necessity will be my justification, if I have committed an error in assuming that the Transfer of the Territory to the Dominion did actually take place on the 1st December, and that my Commission came into force at the same time.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM McDougall.

The Hon. Joseph Howe,
&c. &c. &c.

(2 A)

Colonel DENNIS to the Hon. WILLIAM McDougall, C.B. :

MY DEAR MR. McDougall,

Stone Fort, Lower Settlement, December 2nd, 5 p.m.

I arrived at William Hallett's, on the Assiniboine, at 5 a.m. yesterday morning, after a more than usually disagreeable trip. I immediately sent up for Mr. * * * and Mr. * * * , who came down shortly after. I gathered from their conversation that there was little doubt that public sentiment would now sustain a movement to put down by force of arms the refractory French. At the same time, it was clear that, personally, they deprecated a movement in that direction, fearing that people like themselves of large property would suffer much injury should hostilities ensue. * * * I found of the opinion that the people would now respond to a call.

CANADA.

I read my Commission, as also the Proclamation, one of the English copies of which I gave to Mr. * * * to be produced at the meeting with the Insurgents, and then came to the village.

On my way up, I should have mentioned, I spent a couple of hours with Mr. * * *, and was pleased to find that his views of the situation, as regards the feelings of his people, had undergone considerable change: so much so that he had been busying himself for the last few days in visiting among his people and making a list of those who were willing to take up arms against Riel's party. These he told me amounted to 96. I arranged with him that, should I find the same feeling to exist among the Scotch and English I would let him know, when he was to organize his men and hold himself in readiness for orders.

I found an uneasy and excited state of feeling in the village. Dr. Schultz felt that himself and family and property, so he told me, were in imminent danger, and advised me not to be seen about the village, and to get out of it as soon as possible, or I would assuredly be made a prisoner. After seeing Mr. * * * and other Canadians, and showing them my Commission, I left, for the purpose of satisfying myself further as to public opinion in the Settlement.

By this time it was six o'clock P.M., and I came on, introduced myself to Mr. Flett, the Master of this Fort, showed him my Commission, and took possession. He was very kind, and showed every desire to further the object in view, placed one large building entirely at my disposal, and undertook at once to see to the lighting and heating of it.

By eight o'clock there were some 70 young men assembled in a large room in an upper part of this building, and one of the gentlemen of * * *, gave them an hour's drill.

I read the Queen's Proclamation to them, which was enthusiastically received. A guard for the Fort volunteered for the night from those present, which was increased by a reinforcement from Chief Prince's band of some 70 men to 120 men. I have sent the Indians home, all but 50, who, with the Chief, I have retained for the present to serve as a permanent guard to the Fort. I proposed to avail myself of their services in that way rather than by allowing the Indian element to be mixed up in any actual fighting just at present.

There was an excellent feeling exhibited by these poor men. They cheered and fired off their guns enthusiastically on being called upon to cheer the Queen, and a distribution of provisions and tobacco sent them away happy.

The Chief relieves his guard without the imposing ceremony observable among regular soldiers; but I doubt not, nevertheless, it will take a very active enemy to get into the Fort without the knowledge of the Red-skinned sentries.

This place is capable of easy defence against anything but artillery, and it must have been nothing but fear of arousing the English half-breeds that prevented its being seized and occupied by the Insurgents.

I have taken pains to make known to-day through the Settlement my presence here, and that my intention is to raise a force from among the people, with which to enforce a restoration of public order, and I expect a response of from 100 to 200 people this evening when I shall commence to enrol and organize.

I find Major Bolton of great service, and have called in Mr. Hart's party, with a view to using himself and the other members of his party, who are all cadets, in drilling and otherwise assisting.

I have ordered 20 fat cattle, which will be ready for use by Monday next, and will have no difficulty in procuring other necessary supplies.

I have sent Mr. Webb, who is surveying up the Assiniboine, and who is a volunteer officer of very considerable experience, full instructions to proceed to the Portage without delay, and there to organize 4 companies of 50 men each, equip and provision them, and then report to me, drilling them in the meanwhile industriously. The other gentlemen in his party, including Mr. Newcombe, are all cadets of the Military Schools, and I have therefore directed him to take them up to assist them in organizing and drilling the companies. I shall, fortunately, have a Military School-man to command each of the companies in the whole force. The other and subordinate officers I will let the men select from among themselves.

The companies will be thrown into one battalion, of which I shall take the immediate command, with Major Bolton as second.

I hope and believe your delivery from the humiliating situation you are now in is a mere matter of a very short time. You had, therefore, better get things in readiness to move in when you may be advised.

I sent Judge Black a request last evening that he would call upon me, and he has accordingly been here a good part of the day. I wished to consult him as to the expediency of my proclaiming Martial Law in the Territory, so as to enable me to seize upon Stuttsman, who still remains at Winnipeg—no doubt aiding and abetting the rioters. The idea of such a thing seemed to frighten him, and he begged of me to delay it for a day or a day or two, as he thought there was strong hope that the Council—still, I suppose, in session (as we have not heard the result)—taking steps to dissolve the whole thing. I agreed to the suggestion; but so soon as I may have a force to back me up, without I am satisfied on consulting Mr. Ross that it would be undesirable, I shall take that course.

Should we succeed in getting hold of the prime conspirator named, I shall put him in a strong room in this place, under the charge of my friend Pima, the Indian Chief, and his warriors, until he may be delivered by some due, but, we shall hope, tedious, course of law.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

I should have liked to have ascertained the result of the Council referred to before closing this letter; but it is now six P.M. of the 2nd, and I am loth to detain the messenger longer, as I know your anxiety to hear from me.

Letter from D. S. MUSKINS, Esq., to the Hon. WILLIAM McDOUGALL, C.B.

SIR, Winnipeg, December 2nd, 1869.

Having received a Letter from Colonel Dennis, from the Stone Fort, where he arrived last night, instructing me to forward a Report of the proceedings of Riel's Council, I enclose the Resolutions passed by the French Delegates, without any concurrence from the English-speaking portion of the Council.

* * * came up this afternoon for Volunteers, and collected all the Canadians to the number of about 22. Riel got wind of the movement, and has guards on the road to Pembina, believing it to be an arrangement to bring yourself in. I am in hopes they will reach the Stone Fort in safety.

Mr. Caldwell states that Riel's Council were deserting him, and that twenty-four hours would settle the thing, if no blood was spilled to-night.

The Rebels seized both of the Printing Offices, and the Proclamation had to be written.

I have, &c., in haste,

The Hon. William McDougall, C.B.

2. The Legislature to have the power to pass all Laws local to the Territory, over the veto of the Executive, by a two-third vote.
3. No Act of the Dominion Parliament (local to the Territory) to be binding on the people until sanctioned by their Representatives.
4. All Sheriffs, Magistrates, Constables, and School Trustees to be elected by the people.
5. A Free Homestead and Freehold Law.
6. A portion of the public Lands to be appropriated for the benefit of Schools, the building of Roads and Parish Buildings.
7. A guarantee to connect Winnipeg by Rail with the nearest line of Railroad;—the Land Grant for such Road or Roads to be subject to the Legislature of the Territory,
8. For a given number of years all public Expenses of the Territory, Civil, Military, and Municipal, to be paid out of the Dominion Treasury.
9. The Military to be composed of the people now existing in the Territory.
10. That the French and English languages be common in the Legislature and Courts; and all public Documents and Acts of Legislature be printed in both languages.
11. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak French and English.
12. Treaties to be concluded and ratified between the Government and the several Tribes of Indians of the Territory, calculated to insure peace on the Frontier.
13. That these Rights be granted to us by Mr. McDougall, before he be admitted into the country. If he have not the power himself to grant them, then he must get an Act of Parliament passed, expressly securing us those Rights; and, until such Act be obtained, stay outside the Boundary Line of the Territory.

“RESOLVED by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:—

“That we regret to be informed of a purpose to transfer the Territories between Minnesota and Alaska to the Dominion of Canada, by an Order in Council, at London, without a vote of the people of Selkirk and the Settlers upon the sources of the Saskatchewan River, who largely consist of

CANADA.

"Immigrants from the United States; and we would respectfully urge that the President and Congress of the United States shall represent to the Government of Great Britain, that such action will be an unwarrantable interference with the principle of Self-Government, and cannot be regarded with indifference by the people of the United States.

"That the Legislature of Minnesota would rejoice to be assured that the cession of North-West British America to the United States, accompanied by the construction of a Northern Pacific Railroad, are regarded by Great Britain and Canada as satisfactory provisions of a Treaty which shall remove all grounds of controversy between the respective countries."

SIR,

No. 1132.

I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, a copy of a Despatch, with three Enclosures, from the Hon. William McDougall, C.B., giving an account of the occurrences which have taken place in the North-West Territories since the date of his Despatch of the 6th instant.

I have, &c.

Governor McDougall to the Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State for the Provinces, Ottawa.

SIR,

Pembina, 8th December, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you that no message or messenger from Fort Garry or from Colonel Dennis has reached me since my Despatch of the 6th instant. A rumour is current here, based on a statement of the mail-carrier (who only travels half the distance to Fort Garry), that there were 600 men under Colonel Dennis at the Stone Fort, and 300 under Riel in Fort Garry. As none of us received letters by the last Mail from the North, I infer that the road, or some part of it, was, up to Sunday at least, under the control of Riel. I did not expect that Colonel Dennis would move from the Lower Fort until the people of "The Portage" had joined him, which could not well have been accomplished before Monday or Tuesday. I am not, therefore, surprised to find the road still obstructed between this place and Fort Garry.

On Monday last Mr. Richards, who lodged with a Mr. Rollette, Deputy United States Marshal at Pembina, reported to me that the officials and residents of the village were very much excited in consequence of a rumour that the Indians were being armed by the Loyalists, and that the aid of the Sioux had been sought by some of the Canadians at Fort Garry. Knowing that the Indians had refused to join Riel's party, and that the Sioux would like an excuse for attacking them, and knowing also that we were aware of the complicity of some of them in the outbreak, it was natural that they should be alarmed by such a rumour. I had previously heard of their attempts to organize a force for the purpose of attacking us in our "winter quarters," ostensibly for the purpose of "driving us out of the country," but really, I have no doubt, with a murderous intent. I had private information of the designs of two or three desperadoes and outlaws, who have found it convenient to reside in this neighbourhood, and who are concerned in the present movements. They had become aware of Colonel Dennis' occupation of the Stone Fort, and of the determination of the English and Scotch half-breeds to resist Riel's party, and they feared for their own safety. They pretended to believe that I had given orders to employ the Indians, and they threatened immediate reprisals unless I revoked the supposed order. Mr. Richards was very much alarmed by these threats, and suggested the immediate return to Fort Abercrombie of the females and children. While this was a humane, I felt it was not a politic, and, at the moment, not a practicable suggestion. We had not yet constructed a sufficient number of sleighs for the journey, although they were in process of construction. I therefore determined to go down to the village and have a conference with the Officials, who I knew would soon make known the result to those more deeply implicated in the Conspiracy. I took Messrs. Richards, Provencher, and my son, with me, and drove to the Custom House. Mr. Nelson, the Deputy Collector, is a very intelligent and respectable person, and, I have reason to believe, has kept himself aloof from Stuttzman and his co-conspirators. I found some of these assembled in his office, evidently much alarmed, and by no means in a friendly mood towards me. I at once explained the object of my visit, and requested that the Postmaster and other official persons in the neighbourhood should be assembled. This was soon done, and I frankly explained their situation and my own, as I understood it. The enclosed (Letter "3 A"), which I afterwards addressed to Mr. Nelson, sufficiently details what took place at this interview.

I found on inquiry the next day that Mr. Nelson and one or two of his neighbours were re-assured by the statements and explanations I had given them, and expressed themselves pleased with my candour and firmness. Stuttzman and Rolette, however, were still talking of vengeance. Messrs. Richards, Provencher and Begg having removed to my house, we established a military régime and prepared to resist an attack from any quarter. We kept watch by night and by day, and had all our arms ready for action. Not having heard from Colonel Dennis since the date of his Report, forwarded with my last Despatch, I deferred my proposed removal from American Territory, but kept up daily communication with the Hudson's Bay Company's Post.

I enclose (Paper "3 B") a translated copy of a Letter received two or three days since by Mr. Provencher, from, as he supposes, the Roman Catholic Priest at Scratching River. It is without signature, and is evidently intended to frighten us away; but we feel that our departure for Canada at the present juncture, much to be approved on personal grounds, would be fatal to the retention of the North-West as a part of the Dominion, and with that view of the case we have determined, at all hazards, to remain a little longer, in the hope of a peaceful solution of the present difficulty.

The friendly disposition of the Indians of this Territory to us, and their antipathy to the Americans, is the great anchor by which we shall be enabled to hold it. While they are with us and properly handled, no enemy from the South will ever venture into these great Plains. This fact is fully comprehended by the Military Authorities at Washington, as well as by the Fenians in New York. Great efforts were made by the Leaders of the present Conspiracy to secure an alliance with the Indians, especially with the bands in the neighbourhood of Red River, before taking the field. Their first step was to persuade them to make demands upon me of such a character that compliance would be impossible, and thus create a casus belli between the new Government and the Indians at the very outset. With this view they kept Chief Ka-wi-ta-osh and a part of his band in and about Pembina for some weeks—much longer than they had bargained for—to meet me at the Boundary Line and to present these demands. I have already, in my Report of the 29th November, referred to the publication in the 'Yankton Dakotian' of the Letter prepared for the Indians by the American plotters here, but repudiated by the Indians as soon as they understood its purport. I observe that this Letter has appeared in several Canadian newspapers, and do doubt has attracted the attention of the Privy Council.

The next step was a summons to the Chiefs of the large Bands to meet Riel and his Confederates at Rivière Salé, for consultation and treaty, with a view to an armed alliance against us. The Chiefs "Fox" and "Gros Oreille" obeyed the summons; but though tempted by very large promises, they wisely and promptly refused to join or aid the half-breed movements, but intimated to our friends that they would be ready to obey a summons from the Authorities.

In these circumstances it was felt to be a wise, as well as a loyal and humane policy, to threaten the Insurgents and their annexation leaders with an Indian as well as a Civil War, if they persisted in their rebellious designs. The alarm, real or pretended, of the neutral and respectable people, few though they are, in this Settlement, as well as the exasperations and murderous threats of the Conspirators themselves, show the power of the engine that they believe has been worked. I believe they have called for troops from the nearest American Post (Fort Abercrombie) to protect them from the dreaded Sioux. I may add that small bands of the Sioux have lately been seen only three or four days' journey from here. Two Chippewa Indians, and a half-breed boy who had gone towards Pembina Mountain on a hunting expedition, were met by six Sioux, who, pretending friendship, suddenly rushed upon the carts of the Chippewas, seized their arms, and fired upon them; one of the Indians fell dead, the boy ran, apparently wounded, while the other escaped unhurt, and, running for his life towards this place, came to the Hudson Bay Company's Post nearly exhausted with hunger and cold—they belonged to the Ke-wi-ta-osh's band, and I hear that, according to Indian custom, a war party has started out to recover the carts and the wounded boy, and to avenge the death of one of their warriors. These attacks and reprisals by hunting parties of the two Tribes are not uncommon; but the present case shows a degree of boldness on the part of the Sioux, and a propensity to travel North instead of West, which are not pleasant to the imagination of our Frontier neighbours. I could not refrain from telling them at our Meeting of Monday evening, when the desperate character of the Sioux was portrayed to me, and I was urged to give immediate orders to the Loyal Settlers not to accept the help of Indians, that the possible consequences of an Indian War, ought to have been thought of by some people in the neighbourhood of Pembina, a few weeks ago. The remark was delivered in a serious tone, and with proper emphasis, and was received in solemn silence. The shot took effect, and seeing they could not frighten me into issuing orders dictated by them, they expressed themselves satisfied with my declaration, as reported in my letter to Mr. Nelson.

I waited for two days and nights after this interview, anxiously expecting a second Report from Colonel Dennis, which I hoped would inform me of the dispersion of Riel and his party, or of a joint deputation to me, and an armistice in the mean time; but as none came, and as the story of the employment of the Indians might, though untrue except as to Prince's band, grow into truth by its own circulation, I thought it well to address a letter ("3 C") to Colonel Dennis on the subject, and entrust it to the Mail under cover of Mr. Nelson's envelope. I instructed the Messenger to allow Mr. Nelson to read it before he sealed the letter, in order to convince him of my desire to avoid as long as possible an appeal to the Indians.

I received a Note from General Hunt, who commands at Fort Abercrombie, informing me that he could not find storage for my goods in the Fort, but he was informed that Mr. McCaulay, a merchant there would store them, and apply to him for protection if (which he did not think likely) any one attempted to molest them. I have also heard from the person sent to remove the arms, &c., from George Town, of their safe arrival at Fort Abercrombie.

Thursday 9th.—I have just heard, as I am closing this Despatch, that two Messengers from the Settlement have been intercepted near this, and their Papers taken from them by Stuttsman and Company, or half-breeds employed by them. I am taking measures to make this operation unavailable for the future.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) WILLIAM McDUGALL.

LETTER from Governor McDougall to N. E. NELSON Esq., Deputy Collector of Customs, Pembina.

Hudson's Bay Company's Post Pembina,
8th December, 1869.

DEAR SIR,

I think it my duty to you as well as to myself to put in writing, though not formally or officially, the principal points of our conversation on Monday evening last. Serious events and complications may possibly arise out of the disturbances which unfortunately still prevail at the Red River Settlement. Exaggerated, and I fear in some cases wilfully false statements, as to the extent, origin, aim, and tendency of these disturbances, have been spread far and wide through the American Press, on the alleged authority of persons living in this vicinity. I have some apprehension that the interview of last Monday evening, and the statements made and views expressed on both sides may be misrepresented through the same channels, and therefore I take the precaution, while the matter is fresh in our minds, to set down the material points of our conversation.

Mr. Richards having reported to me that you had expressed great apprehensions that an Indian War, and consequent danger to the lives and property of American Citizens in this Territory, would grow out of the efforts of the Magistrates and Loyal people of Red River Settlement to disperse the armed half-breeds under Riel, and that you seemed to think I might by some exercise of authority prevent or lessen the danger of these consequences, I thought it only due to you as the Principal Officer of the American Government at this Post, to confer immediately with you. Living for the moment under the protection of American Law, I could not be indifferent to the wishes of one of its most efficient, honourable, and obliging administrators.

I proceeded to your office about 5 o'clock P.M. (of the 6th instant), and explaining why I had come, requested the presence of the other Officials of the place, Mr. Cavalier, the Postmaster; J. Rolette, one of your officers, J. Rolette, his father, who I understand is, or acts as Deputy Marshal; Mr. Harrison, Justice of the Peace; Mr. Lemay, Ex-Collector, and three or four other residents of the village were present. Mr. Richards, Mr. Provencher, and my son were present with me.

After you had finished writing a letter, on which you were engaged when I entered your office, I directed my remarks to you, and stated that Mr. Richards, having reported to me your apprehensions, as already mentioned, I wished to explain the legal position of affairs in the North-West Territories. I stated, that on the 1st December, the powers of Government passed from the Hudson's Bay Company and its Officers, to the Representative of Her Majesty the Queen, appointed by the Governor-General of the Dominion. That this was the result of various Acts of Parliament, and the proceedings lawfully had under them; that I had been commissioned and empowered to represent the Crown as Lieutenant-Governor; but while on my way to Fort Garry, before the transfer had taken place, I was met and ordered away from the Territory by a body of armed men, acting without—and as I subsequently learned, in defiance of—authority; that I had remained on American soil, under the protection of American law up to the present time; that the Proclamations announcing the change in the Government, and notifying public Officers, &c., of the fact were executed at the Hudson's Bay Post, on British soil, and that I had not done, and did not intend to do, any official act, except when in my own jurisdiction. That the movements of the Loyal people of the Territory against the Rioters under Riel were in a great degree spontaneous, and under the direction of Local Authorities as "Conservators of the Peace" exercising only civil power. I stated that in every civilized community the Magistrate and Peace Officer has power to raise the posse comitatus, or whatever force he needs to put down mobs and riots, acting in breach of the public peace, and that so far as I knew, or had sanctioned, this was the only "War" now going on. That I had not authorized the employment of Indians, and, except in the last resort, did not intend to do so; that I had received messages from several Chiefs, expressing disapproval of the conduct of the French half-breeds under Riel, and offering their services in the cause of order and law; that I had sent verbal and brief replies, thanking them for their goodwill, evading the offers of service, and putting off the questions they wished to consult me about, until my arrival at Fort Garry, and, that to be frank and explicit, having seen what I had in the Press, and having heard of various expressions and actions by persons who I knew were listening to me, I must give it as my deliberate judgment, that those white persons on both sides of the line, who had advised, countenanced, and aided the lawless outbreak of the French half-breeds, and had rejoiced at their success in keeping out of the Territory the Representative of authority and law, and the only power which the Indians would be likely to obey or respect, will be held responsible before God and man for any destruction of life or property which may result.

You stated that you had given no countenance to the half-breed movement, had expressed no opinion one way or the other, but had performed the duties of your office with strict impartiality—that you deprecated the putting of arms into the hands of Indians, or raising them in any civil contest, and were much concerned when you heard that they were being employed by the Authorities in the Settlement, and you questioned whether, if I had authorised it, I had not violated the laws of neutrality. That you were glad to hear me say I had not done so, and hoped I would exert my authority to prevent it.

I at once acknowledged your fair and honourable conduct, and my belief that you had neither said nor done anything to provoke or encourage the lawless proceedings of the half-breeds, but I said I feared there were others, on the American side of the Line, of whom the same thing could not be said. That as to using my authority to restore order and restrain the dangerous elements of the country, that was the very thing I was trying to do; but as I had no sufficient force at my command to overcome the armed men who barricaded the road, I was unable to use my authority in the most effective way, and the Local Magistrates and Officers were, therefore, left to their own judgment as to the use of means, and it would be very unreasonable to hold me responsible for their acts until I had an opportunity of controlling or preventing them.

Mr. Cavelier, Postmaster, asked me if I did not know that Dr. Schultz had sent one "Sherman" with goods of a certain kind to the Sioux in the vicinity of Turtle Mountain, and that the purpose was to use them against Riel's party. I said I had not heard of any such thing, and moreover did not believe it. I thought Dr. Schultz too sensible a man, believed he had too much at stake to incur any risk so dangerous. Mr. Cavelier said he knew the statement was true, and in reference to my remark as to Dr. Schultz's position, said he was a reckless and selfish man whose doctrine was that "you could trust no one as a friend, except so far as interest moved him," &c., &c., that "Sherman" was an outlaw, dared not come into American territory, and would be hanged if he did. That the Sioux referred to were not yet reconciled to the Government, and would not hesitate to murder American citizens if they were encouraged by such a man as Sherman to do so, &c., &c.

Mr. Lemay remarked with much emphasis, that if the Indians took part in the war, as he called it, my life would not be safe for five minutes. Mr. Harrison added that, in such an event, I and my party would find ourselves in the hottest place we had ever been in, &c. Mr. Lemay wanted an explicit answer to his question, whether in any case I would countenance or authorize the use of Indians? I declined to make any statement of what I would or would not do, when I assumed the functions of my office, but that I had not authorized, and did not wish to employ even half-breeds in warlike operations. That I was a good deal startled by the statement of Mr. Cavelier, in regard to the Sioux at Turtle Mountain, and I enquired whether they lived in American or British Territory. Mr. Cavelier said they were sometimes on one side and sometimes on the other side, but were known to be hostile to Americans. After some further general remarks, I concluded my interview by observing that, in view of the dangerous position we were all in, I thought the best thing we could do was to restore order and authority at Red River Settlement as soon as possible. And I believed the persons were then in the room, or immediate neighbourhood, who could do it; and that at all events that was my duty and mission, and to the best of my power and ability I intended to execute it. To Mr. Lemay's and Mr. Harrison's remark—some will call it a threat—that if Indians, whom I have never seen, and am in no way responsible for, should go to war, my life would not last five minutes, I replied that such an observation or possibility would not affect my action or course in the least. I had accepted an important office, knowing well its perils, but I meant to do my duty regardless of all personal considerations. I was but one man, and after me would come another, and perhaps one better skilled in the operations of war. I had come to cultivate the arts of peace, to establish telegraph lines, build roads, and encourage emigration, and organise a civilized community. But those who thought it would serve their purpose better to stir up disorder and riot among the French half-breeds—next to the Indian the most dangerous element in the country—must not imagine that they can transfer to me the responsibility of a conflagration which they have fanned, if they have not kindled.

The above is the substance of what was said in your Office, in the presence of the principal inhabitants of the village, and which I desire to remain of record in your hands.

Since my conversation with you I have heard some statements, which I deem it proper to mention in connection with the foregoing. I am told that a person to whom I entrusted copies of a Proclamation, continuing and confirming the authority of all peace and other officers, was arrested on British Territory by two American citizens living in this vicinity, and that these papers were taken from him without law or authority, and in violation of their duty as persons under a temporary allegiance to the Sovereign of the country in which they were travelling. If this outrage has been committed, as reported to me, by those in whose behalf I am asked to exercise my authority over the Indians, I ask you, Sir, how am I to get my orders obeyed if they are not allowed to reach those to whom they are addressed. I can assure you that the persons who have sought to confer with me from the Settlement—official as well as unofficial—have experienced little difficulty, and felt no serious apprehension of obstruction or danger, until they approached the American border, and their fears were, not that they would be interrupted on their peaceful and lawful visits, by Indians or half-breeds, but by white men, one of whom, at least, is an official under your direction. It is in evidence before me that the person alluded to has been endeavouring to incite the half-breeds and others hereabouts "to drive me and my party out of the country." I can hardly suppose that these are done, and threats made, by the son of a Deputy Marshal, and an employé of the Customs Department of the United States, without the knowledge and approval of some one higher in authority. Do not suppose for a moment that I imagine you have countenanced, or will countenance, the acts or threats of your subordinate, but it is well you should know what has been communicated to me respecting him.

I send you the enclosed Letter addressed to Colonel Dennis, in hopes that you may find some means of forwarding it safely. Perhaps you can address it under cover to some one at Fort Garry, who will be able to place it in his hands. You will see by the contents which I have left for your (private) perusal, that my wishes and orders are against the employment of Indians in the present crisis. I shall send a duplicate of the order by the first opportunity, but as my letters have been so often tampered with, I cannot trust the regular post. A letter addressed by you, and to an unsuspected correspondent, might reach its destination more speedily and safely.

In conclusion let me add that, in the event of a "raid" upon this Settlement by the Sioux Indians, you and any other American citizens placing yourselves under my protection may rely upon it that all the influence and authority of my office and all the means of defence at my command will be put forth in your behalf. If that office and authority are as potent with the Indians on the British side of the Line, as some of the gentlemen present at our interview admitted them to be, the threatened danger will be averted.

Believe me, &c.,
(Signed)

WILLIAM McDougall.

3 B.)

When Mr. McDougall arrived here a month ago there were five hundred men under arms; if he had then left the difficulties could have been settled quite easily, now the whole population is on a war-footing, and a serious character of opposition is getting deeper and deeper in the minds as long as Mr. McDougall is giving the Insurgents more trouble. Every attempt at coercion made by Canada, or even by England, will result in the loss of all advantages that you could draw from this country. The half-breeds will take again the road of the prairie, and from there they will prevent any improvement that can be attempted or tried—telegraphs, railroads, settlements; war can be made against them, but the armies will never meet them. There will be thousands who will be elsewhere and nowhere. If the people were left quiet they would soon be ready to listen to propositions that could be made to them by the Canadian Government; but the longer Mr. McDougall will attempt to come in by measures of violence the more difficult it will be. For himself, if he comes into the territory, he will be shot immediately. His principal friends and supporters here are on the eve of being massacred.

MY DEAR COLONEL, Near Pembina, December 8th, 1869.
I commit to the post, under cover to a third party, this Letter, which I trust you will receive and act upon without delay. It has been represented to me that the Authorities who are endeavouring to quell the outbreak of the French half-breeds, have contemplated the employment of Indians for that purpose, and that a band of Sioux, on the Assiniboine, are drilling, with a view to military or warlike service of some kind. I desire and direct you to prevent, as far as you can, any project of this kind. If Indians are sent upon the war-path by any person acting with authority it may be found very difficult for the same, or even a higher authority, to recall them, or to restrain them within the limits allowed to forces acting in aid of the Civil power. It is said, also, that goods "of a certain kind," by which I understand ammunition and arms, have been sent from the Settlement to the Sioux, near Turtle Mountain, with an invitation to them to aid in the suppression of the half-breed disturbance. I can hardly believe this story; but I hope you will inquire into it, and take immediate steps to counteract any movement of the kind. The American residents here are very much disgusted at the prospect of a visit from the Sioux, and it would indeed be deplorable if they should be drawn into a contest that might give them a pretext to re-enact the scenes of 1862.
With regard to the Indians of the Mission under Chief "Prince," a few of whom, I understand, are employed to guard the Stone Fort, I will be glad to hear that their services in that capacity are dispensed with. They may be intelligent and subject to control, but the fact of their employment will soon reach the ears, and possibly excite the war-spirit, of more distant bands, who may not be so easily restrained.
Extreme necessity in a time of riot and anarchy will justify extreme measures, but I hope the loyal inhabitants, who have risen in defence of law and order, will be able to accomplish their object without the active aid of their Indian allies.
I trust to your discretion in the mean time, but hope soon to be nearer the scene of action, and in a position to judge and command.

(No. 4.)

Pembina, Monday, 13th December, 1869.

SIR,

I have the honour to acquaint you that I have received no communication from you since your Despatch of the 19th ult. Two Letters, marked "private," from Sir John McDonald, date of the 23rd November, came to hand safely on the evening of the 11th inst. I have received newspapers from Ottawa and Montreal of 27th and 29th respectively, and from more western cities of a date one or two days later. If the Mails are not delayed on the way, they will arrive here from Ottawa in about fourteen days.

I regret to state that the Insurgents under Riel have developed more strength and determination of purpose in their rebellious movement than the reports from Fort Garry—of every kind—had led me to believe they possessed. They have been able, with the help of their allies on the American side of the Line, to intercept and prevent all communications from Colonel Dennis to me, since his Report of the 2nd inst. I have, therefore, had to trust to the statements of the enemy, and such flying rumours as we could gather from friendly "half-breeds," for the occurrences and movements at Fort Garry and the Stone Fort since the 2nd inst. From these various sources of information I learn that on the 5th or 6th inst. a number of persons (the report says forty or fifty) were assembled in the house of Dr. Schultz, as a guard, or as a portion of the posse comitatus about to join the Force under Colonel Dennis, when they were suddenly surprised by a party of Riel's men and made prisoners. It does not appear that any resistance was made by the Schultz party, whether from the suddenness of the attack or their unwillingness to be the first to shed blood, I cannot learn. It is said they were armed, and had in the house 400 rounds of ammunition. The prisoners were marched to the Fort and detained there, but have been allowed to supply themselves with provisions from the village. The number of Insurgents now under Riel's orders is said to be 400 or 500—as large a body as his friends have at any time claimed for him. If this story should be confirmed, it would indicate great confidence in Riel and his plans by the bulk of the French, and the continued support of the Clergy, and the American and other traders in the Settlement, who are known to have advised and assisted him in the earlier stages of the movement. The same report tells us that this sudden display of force by Riel has discouraged the Canadians and their friends, and that the English and Scotch half-breeds have refused, in any number, to join the party of law and order. This representation of the state of affairs receives some confirmation from the fact that Riel was able to send a force of twenty men to the Hudson Bay Post here, who, since Friday last, have held it, and prevented any of our party from going there. The Americans in our vicinity concerned in the movement are less excited since the arrival of this force, and talk of our being obliged to remove in a few days towards Canada. Hearing that Mr. James McKay, a wealthy and influential resident on the Assiniboine, and one of those whom Colonel Dennis was to consult before taking any decisive measure, had reached the house of Mr. Dease, about twenty-six miles up the Pembina River, on the American side of the Line, I sent my son on the 11th inst. with a verbal message to him, and in the hope that he would be able to give me reliable information of the operations of Colonel Dennis, since I had heard from him; and also whether the story of the arrest at the house of Dr. Schultz was true. The road to the place where Mr. McKay was staying runs, in some places, on British Territory, and the people here (except Mr. Nelson) being all openly leagued with the Insurgents, and keeping guard at night at the bridge over the Pembina River to prevent any messenger from reaching me, I was apprehensive that my son would be intercepted, and therefore directed him to bring no letters or written communications unless Mr. McKay assented. He succeeded in finding Mr. McKay, and getting his version of affairs in the Settlement down to the 5th inst. I enclose his Report to me (4 A).

On reference to Colonel Dennis' Report, forwarded with my Despatch of the 6th inst. ("2 A"), it will be seen that he saw Mr. McKay before taking possession of the Stone Fort, and found him of opinion that the time had come for some kind of opposition to the French; but afraid that people "of large property," like himself, would suffer injury, I am disposed to think he ran away as much on account of the danger to his person as to his property. But his case illustrates the position and feelings of many others who have no sympathy with the French half-breeds, and no objection to the new Government. They will accept the latter, if some one else will do the fighting and pay all the money necessary to establish it.

Major Wallis, who is staying with Peter Hayden, not far from the Hudson Bay Post, reported to me last night that Riel was expected to arrive there during the night. I thought, in view of all the facts as they now present themselves, and especially the fact that communication has been effectually cut off with Colonel Dennis, that I would be justified in opening communication with Riel if he appeared in this neighbourhood. I accordingly wrote the letter enclosed (4 B) and sent it to the Captain of the party in possession of the Hudson Bay Post. It reached him this morning; but up to the present time (5 P.M.) I have not heard of Riel's arrival, nor whether they have sent the letter forward to him.

Dr. Jackes, who belongs to our party, was sent for in great haste this morning by Mr. Rolette, Deputy United States Marshal, and one of our most bitter opponents here, for his professional aid. Rolette's wife was dying (in childbirth). The Indian midwife had given her up, and her relatives, some of whom had been threatening our lives, were now applying to us to save the life of Mrs. Rolette.

CANADA.

The Doctor hurried to her bedside, and, by the exercise of his skill, overcame the difficulty, and probably has saved her life. They all professed to be full of gratitude, and when the danger was over showed him a Proclamation, issued by Riel since the 1st December, in which he announces that the French have established a Government of their own, and intend to resist, by force if necessary, the attempt of any other power to impose one upon them. It denies the right of the Hudson Bay Company to transfer them to Canada, &c., &c. The Doctor could not obtain a copy, as Rolette had only one and would not part with it.

I beg again to express my opinion, that the suggestion I had the honour to make in my Despatch of 29th November, and more fully in previous letters to Sir J. A. Macdonald, is the only practicable plan for establishing the authority of the Dominion Government in this Territory.

I have, &c.,

The Hon. Joseph Howe,
Secretary of State, &c., Ottawa.

MEMORANDUM.

Left Pembina on the morning of 11th December for St. Joe, 26 miles distant, for the residence of Mr. * * *, a half-breed born in Oregon, and a man of considerable wealth and influence amongst the half-breeds at St. Joe. He informed me that Mr. Gingras of St. Joe had, on the evening of the 10th inst., tried to get the half-breeds there to join the Red River insurgent party. He (Gingras) had agreed to raise a party of 130 half-breeds, and, with a portion of them, to drive Governor McDougall away from his house at Pembina. Mr. * * * treated the proposal with contempt, and tried to persuade Gingras not to attempt such a movement. These half-breeds at St. Joe are principally connected with those at Red River Settlement, and many of them were inclined to fall in with Mr. Gingras's plan. Mr. * * * believed that if there was any bloodshed at Red River Settlement, the Governor and his whole party would be in imminent danger and run the risk of losing their lives. Mr. * * * sympathized much with the Governor and his party, and declared his willingness to assist us in any way in his power. I ascertained from him that Mr. McKay, from Red River Settlement, was at a Mr. Charles Grant's, about seven miles distant from Mr. Dease's. I drove there to see him, and found he had brought his family, and had left the Settlement with the intention of remaining amongst his relatives at St. Joe during the present troubles. He informed me that fifty Canadians who were guarding Government provisions at the residence of Dr. Schultz at Fort Garry, were taken prisoners; that Dr. Schultz and wife, Dr. Bown, Mr. Mair, and Mr. Hallett were amongst them. Mr. Hallett was taken prisoner while endeavouring to procure some medicine for his wife. Mr. McKay also informed me that Colonel Dennis, on his arrival from Pembina, first called on him, and that he (McKay) advised him strongly not to incite the one portion of the population to take up arms against the other, and that one hundred of the principal French half-breeds had signed a document agreeing to allow the Governor to come in. He also stated that if hostilities were commenced and blood spilt, the lives of the Governor and his party would almost certainly be sacrificed. He said that other men of property and wealth in the Settlement held the same views and expressed opinions similar to his own. Mr. McKay intended to have called on the Governor at Pembina, but was overtaken on his way by a party of insurgents going to take possession of the Hudson Bay Company's Post at Pembina, and was forced to change his course and cross the prairie to St. Joe. He was under the impression that Colonel Dennis had gone to Portage la Prairie, and that Stone Fort was still held by the Indians and others under Colonel Dennis.

SIR,

Pembina, December 13th, 1869.

I hear from the Hudson's Bay Post that you are expected to arrive there from Fort Garry to-night. I send this note to inform you that I am anxious to have a conversation with you before answering Despatches which I have recently received from the Dominion Government.

I have not yet had any communication from you or from any one else on behalf of the French half-breeds, who have prevented me from proceeding to Fort Garry, stating their complaints or wishes in reference to the new Government.

As the Representative of the Sovereign, to whom you and they owe, and, as I am told, do not wish to deny, allegiance, it is proper that some such communication should reach me. It will be a great misfortune to us all, I think, if I am obliged to return to Canada and hand over the powers of Government here to a Military Ruler.

This will be the inevitable result unless we find some solution of the present difficulty very soon.

I have full powers from the Government, as well as the strongest desire personally, to meet all just claims of every class and section of the people. Why should you not come to me and discuss the matter?

I beg you to believe that what occurred will not affect my mind against you or those for whom you may be authorized to speak.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

73

The interview proposed must be without the knowledge or privity of certain American citizens here who pretend to be en rapport with you.

I trust to your honour on this point.

Louis Riel, Esq.,

Very faithfully yours,
(Signed)

WILLIAM McDUGALL.

Enclosure 2
in No. 14.

SIR, Ottawa, 3rd January, 1870.
I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, Copy of a Despatch (No. 5), with seven Enclosures, from the Honourable William McDougall, C.B., dated Pembina, 16th December, 1869.

F. Turville, Esq., Governor's Secretary.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOSEPH HOWE,
Secretary of State for the Provinces.

(No. 5.)

SIR, Pembina, 16th December, 1869.
I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch of the 29th November. Events have occurred since that Despatch was written which, when the account of them reaches you, will justify, I think, the decision I have arrived at, to return as far as St. Paul, and communicate with you from that point.

The state of affairs at and near Fort Garry, which was described in my last Despatch (13th December) on the information of persons not much to be depended upon, is now substantially confirmed by the arrival last night and report of Colonel Dennis. He left the Stone Fort on Saturday morning at 2 o'clock, having ordered the payment and discharge, at noon of that day, of the persons who had volunteered to hold and defend it.

I enclose two short Reports ("5 A" and "5 B") which were, with other papers, safely brought to me by two of Chief "Prince's" messengers, two nights ago. I was on the look-out for the Colonel himself sooner than he promised, because I was satisfied his attempt to arrange a deputation to me from the leaders of the Riel party would fail. I detained the Indians as recommended, secreting them from observation as much as possible, and have found them of very great service. As I intend to start on my return journey to-morrow, I shall defer until I arrive at Fort Abercrombie, the communication of further details, which might, if known here, interfere with our future operations.

I enclose a Letter ("5 C") from Mr. * * *, who knows well the character and habits of the half-breeds of both origins. He has acted as guide to several expeditions into the interior, and was my guide from St. Cloud to this place.

As soon as I had decided to quit this neighbourhood I thought it prudent, in view of future possible questions and responsibilities, to write the enclosed Letter to Mr. McTavish ("5 D"), which I have committed to the custody of my faithful Indians, who will find the means to put it in proper hands.

We are still closely watched, and prevented from obtaining supplies from the Hudson Bay Company's Post. I have heard nothing in answer to my private Letter to Mr. Riel, and have no reason to believe that he will soon come near me.

I enclose ("5 E") a Copy of the Declaration of Independence, which was adopted on the 24th November, and printed on the 8th instant. Also ("5 F") a "List of Rights," which was distributed two or three days before the "Declaration," and produced a cooling effect upon many of those who had professed a day or two before a willingness to put down the Riel party by force of arms. As soon as it had served its purpose the "Declaration" was issued, and the English found themselves caught in a trap. In the mean time parties had been sent to all the important points, and the arms of the English-speaking Settlers were taken from them.

None of the messengers mentioned in your Despatch have yet arrived.

I have, &c.,
The Honourable Joseph Howe, Secretary of State, &c., (Signed) WM. McDUGALL.

P.S.—Please find enclosed ("5 G") Copy of Notice issued by Colonel Dennis at the Stone Fort.

Stone Fort, Red River Settlement, North-West Territory.
December 9th, 1869.

SIR, I beg to report my proceedings under the Commission which I had the honour to receive from you on the 1st instant, and would refer you to the accompanying record thereof, in which full details are given.

CANADA.

It is a matter of sincere regret to me to be obliged to express the opinion, deliberately given, that as a body the English-speaking portion of the Red River Settlement proper, in their present frame of mind, cannot be counted on in any measures of an aggressive character which may be necessary to put down the French party now in arms against the Government.

I shall remain here a few days longer, to be at hand should there be any prospect of arranging with the French to send a Delegation to you, of which, however, I have little expectation, and, on finding that no further object is to be gained by my remaining, will return to Pembina,

I have, &c.,

The Hon. W. McDougall, C.B.,
Lieutenant-Governor, &c.

(Copy 5 B.)

9th December, 1869.

MY DEAR MR. McDOUGALL,
I expect to learn this evening yet, finally, whether there is any chance of the Rebel party showing any disposition to send you a Delegation.

If satisfied that there is none,—that they have gone in fully for their new Government as an independent people, then I shall at once discharge the guard from this Fort, and leave for Pembina. This will be taken by Chief Prince's messenger, and he had better remain with his friends the Indians below Fort Pembina for a few days, till I get down, so that any Letters or Instructions may be carried back here for the guidance of the Canadians in the Settlement.

I shall be with you in a week, even supposing I delay to have an interview with the Rebel Council, as I should leave immediately after. Let this messenger wait therefore for a week at Pembina. You may rely upon it these people are fully in possession for the winter, and say themselves that, with the promises they have of Fenian and Filibusters' support, they will be able to hold the country. I should not be surprised but they may get many people here to join them too. I think they would do anything, many of them, rather than offend the French now (as they say) they see per "list of rights" that the French ask nothing very unreasonable.

Believe me, &c.,
(Signed) J. S. DENNIS.

The Honourable William McDougall,
Lieutenant-Governor.

(Copy 5 C.)

Red River, December 8th, 1869.

Your Excellency will no doubt learn from other sources the state and feelings of the English-speaking population of this Settlement just now. I should have written you before this time, but, I postponed the matter, as I at one time was made to believe that I should see you personally; but as matters stand at present, I am extremely sorry to inform your Excellency that I fear my prospects are hopeless. Since the past two days the people, I fear, have made a dead stop in taking any steps whatever. What their objects are I cannot say at present. I tried my best to get a force formidable enough to assist in carrying out Colonel Dennis's orders, but I fear the whole scheme will be a failure. Even among our English-speaking population we have to contend with worse characters than the French half-breeds, which I am sorry to inform you, but nevertheless too true. The Scotch Settlement won't join us or any other parish of the Protestant population, so that it would be the height of folly for us to take any aggressive steps, for we would be overpowered by numbers. We have in these two parishes all the disadvantages, both in numbers and arms. I think it is on no other foundation the people stand—for standing back is want of arms,—as a matter of course the half-breeds have taken possession of all our arms. However, if the people were willing, they could muster arms enough to put down the half-breeds, but they will not do it. The fact of the matter is they are cowards, one and all of them. Although they are my countrymen, I must speak the truth about them.

Colonel Dennis is writing you, and your Excellency will learn from him the present political state of affairs. I was sorry to hear of the accident to your son, but I hope he is better, and not suffering now.

Yours, &c.,
(Signed) * * * *

Will your Excellency allow me to remain,
His Excellency the Honourable W. McDougall, &c., Pembina.

(Copy 5 D.)

Pembina, 16th December, 1869.

MY DEAR SIR,
In consequence of the continued occupation of Fort Garry by the Insurgents, under Mr. Louis Riel, and the submission of the Local Authorities to his orders, and having no force at my command to re-establish the supremacy of the law in that neighbourhood, I have determined to return as far as St. Paul, and await there the Orders of Her Majesty's Imperial and Canadian Governments.

I have not had the honour to receive from you any message or communication since your private Note of the 19th of November. The roads at this point have been so effectually watched and guarded by the Insurgents that I have not ventured to send to you any official or other communication that could, if it fell into their hands, betray the situation or give information or encouragement to them. I send this by the hands of Indians whom I have found loyal and faithful where so many others have proved the reverse. I have little doubt it will reach you safely.

I am advised by the Secretary of State for the Provinces that His Excellency the Governor-General has communicated to Lord Granville my Despatches up to the 9th of November, and has also telegraphed the more recent events, including, I presume, the occupation of Fort Garry by the half-breeds under Riel. I observe by a paragraph in the 'Montreal Gazette' that the Dominion Government have telegraphed their Agent in London to withhold the payment to the Hudson Bay Company of the purchase money agreed to be paid to them for the transfer of their rights in Rupert's Land. I have no official confirmation of this statement, but will not be surprised if it should prove true.

Under these circumstances, it becomes important to consider carefully the legal position of all parties in the present crisis. I venture to submit my views of the case as it stands in the North-West Territories.

If, in consequence of the action of the Dominion Government, the surrender and transfer of the Country did not take place on the first day of December, as previously agreed upon, then you are the Chief Executive Officer as before, and responsible for the preservation of the peace, and the enforcement of the Law.

If, on the other hand, the transfer did take place on the first day of December, then, I take it, my Commission came into force, and the notice in the form of Proclamation issued by my authority on that day, correctly, recited the facts and disclosed the legal status of the respective parties. I learn from Colonel Dennis that a Notice or Proclamation issued by me on the 2nd day of December, confirming and continuing all Public Officers in the duties and functions excepting (in the words of the Canadian Act, "the Public Officer or Functionary at the head of the Administration of Affairs") was duly printed and published in the Settlement, although it was reported here that the messenger who carried it forward was arrested, and his papers taken from him by Riel's party. You will observe by reference to the 5th Section of the Rupert's Land Act, that "until otherwise enacted by the Parliament of Canada" all the Powers, Authorities, and Jurisdiction of the several Courts of Justice now established in Rupert's Land, and the several Officers thereof, and of all Magistrates and Justices, are continued in full force, and by the 6th Section of the Canadian Act "for the temperate Government of Rupert's Land," &c., "all Public Officers and Functionaries holding offices in Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory, with the exception already mentioned," shall continue to be "Public Officers and Functionaries of the North-West Territories, with the same duties and powers as before, until otherwise ordered by the Lieutenant-Governor."

My Proclamation of the 2nd instant, intended to notify all these Officers that I had not "otherwise ordered," and that by force of both Acts they still held and were bound to exercise their "powers," "jurisdiction," and "duties" as before. Whether the transfer has been delayed or not, I think it is clear that the present "Magistrates" and "Authorities" are still legally in office, and bound, as far as they can, to perform the duties of their respective offices, as before. In your case, the continuance of your powers and jurisdiction as Governor depends upon the transfer. If, as I am inclined to think, has happened, the Company surrendered, and Her Majesty transferred, on the 1st day of December, notwithstanding the events occurring on this side of the Atlantic, the gentleman who acted as Deputy-Governor, or would have assumed that Office under the laws of Assiniboia prior to December 1st will in my absence, and without special deputation by me, be and become the Chief Executive Officer of the Territories.

I have thought it my duty to explain to you, as I understand it, the legal position of affairs within the Territory at the present time. I do not know whether Judge Black will concur with me, but I trust you will show him this Letter, and be guided, as I have no doubt you will, very much by his view.

I notice that Riel, in his printed papers, speaks for a very large part of the earth's surface, as well as for all the people who now inhabit it. You will no doubt agree with me that he rules only the "Territory" within the range of his guns, and such "people" as take service in his ranks, or willingly submit to his orders,

W. McTavish, Esquire, &c.,
Fort Garry.

I am, &c.,

W. McDougall.

DECLARATION OF THE PEOPLE OF RUPERT'S LAND, AND THE NORTH-WEST.

Whereas it is admitted by all men as a fundamental principle that the Public Authority commands the obedience and respect of its subjects. It is also admitted that a people, when it has no Government, is free to adopt one form of Government in preference to another, to give or refuse allegiance to that which is proposed. In accordance with the above first principle, the people of this country had obeyed and respected that authority to which the circumstances surrounding its infancy compelled it to be subject. A company of adventurers, known as the Hudson Bay Company, and invested with certain powers granted by His Majesty Charles II., established itself in Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory for trading purposes only. This Company, consisting of many persons, required a certain constitution, but as there was a question of commerce only, the Constitution was framed in reference thereto; and yet since there was at that time no Government to see to the interests of a people already existing in the Country, it became necessary for judicial affairs to have recourse to the Officers of the Hudson Bay Company. Thus inaugurated that species of Government which, slightly modified by subsequent circumstances, ruled this country up to a recent date. Whereas that Government thus accepted, was far from answering to the wants of the people, and became more and more so as the population increased in number, and as the Country was developed and commerce extended until the present day, when it commands a place among the Colonies; and this people, ever actuated by the above-mentioned principles, had generously supported the aforesaid Government, and gave to it a faithful allegiance, when, contrary to the laws of nations, in March, 1869, that said Government surrendered and transferred to Canada all the right which it had, or pretended to have, in this Territory, by transactions with which the people were considered unworthy to be made acquainted. And whereas it is also generally admitted that a people is at liberty to establish any form of Government it may consider suitable to its wants, as soon as the Power to which it was subject abandons it, or attempts to subjugate it without its consent to a foreign Power, and maintain that no right can be transferred to such foreign Power.

Now, therefore, first, we, the Representatives of the people in Council, assembled in Upper Fort Garry, on the 24th of November, 1869, after having invoked the God of nations, relying on these fundamental moral principles, solemnly declare, in the name of our constituents, and in our own names before God and man, that from the day on which the Government we had always respected abandoned us, by transferring to a strange Power the sacred authority confided to it, the people of Rupert's Land and the North-West became free and exempt from all allegiance to the said Government.

Second: That we refuse to recognise the authority of Canada, which pretends to have a right to coerce us, and impose upon us a despotic form of Government still more contrary to our rights and interests, as British Subjects, than was that Government to which we had subjected ourselves, through necessity, up to a recent date.

Third: That by sending an expedition on the 1st of November ultimo, charged to drive back Mr. William McDougall and his companions, coming in the name of Canada to rule us with the rod of despotism, without previous notification to that effect, we have but acted conformably to that sacred right which commands every citizen to offer energetic opposition to prevent his country being enslaved.

Fourth: That we continue, and shall continue, to oppose with all our strength, the establishing of the Canadian Authority in our country, under the announced form, and in case of persistence on the part of the Canadian Government to enforce its obnoxious policy upon us by force of arms, we protest beforehand against such an unjust and unlawful course, and we declare the said Canadian Government responsible before God and man for the innumerable evils which may be caused by so unwarrantable a course.

Be it known, therefore, to the world in general, and to the Canadian Government in particular, that as we have always heretofore successfully defended our Country in frequent wars with the neighbouring tribes of Indians, who are now on friendly relations with us, we are firmly resolved in future, not less than in the past, to repel all invasions, from whatsoever quarter they may come, and furthermore we do declare and proclaim, in the name of the people of Rupert's Land and the North-West, that we have on the said 24th of November, 1869, above-mentioned, established a Provisional Government, and hold it to be the only and lawful authority now in existence in Rupert's Land and the North-West, which claims the obedience and respect of the people; that meanwhile we hold ourselves in readiness to enter into such negotiations with the Canadian Government as may be favourable for the good Government and prosperity of this people. In support of this Declaration, relying on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge ourselves on oath, our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honour to each other.

Issued at Fort Garry, this eighth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

 { LOUIS RIEL, Secretary.

LIST OF RIGHTS.

1. That the people have the right to elect their own Legislature.
2. That the Legislature have the power to pass all Laws local to the Territory over the veto of the Executive by a two-thirds vote.
3. That no Act of the Dominion Parliament (local to the Territory) be binding on the people until sanctioned by the Legislature of the Territory.
4. That all Sheriffs, Magistrates, Constables, School Commissioners, &c., &c., be elected by the people.
5. A free Homestead and pre-emption Land Law.
6. That a portion of the public Lands be appropriated to the benefit of Schools, the building of Bridges, Roads, and Public Buildings.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

7. That it be guaranteed to connect Winnipeg by Rail with the nearest line of Railroad within a term of five years; the Land Grant to be subject to the Local Legislature.

CANADA.

8. That for the term of four years all Military, Civil, and Municipal expenses be paid out of the Dominion Funds.

9. That the Military be composed of the inhabitants now existing in the Territory.

10. That the English and French languages be common in the Legislature and Courts, and that all Public Documents and Acts of the Legislature be published in both languages.

11. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak the English and French languages.

12. That Treaties be concluded and ratified between the Dominion Government and the several Tribes of Indians in the Territory to ensure peace on the frontier.

13. That we have a fair and full representation in the Canadian Parliament.

14. That all privileges, customs, and usages existing at the time of the transfer be respected.

All the above Articles have been severally discussed and adopted by the French and English Representatives without a dissenting voice, as the conditions upon which the people of Rupert's Land enter into Confederation. The French Representatives then proposed, in order to secure the above Rights, that a Delegation be appointed, and sent to Pembina to see Mr. McDougall, and ask him if he could guarantee these Rights by virtue of his Commission; and if he could do so, that then the French people would join to a man to escort Mr. McDougall into his Government seat. But on the contrary, if Mr. McDougall could not guarantee such Rights, that the Delegates request him to remain where he is, or return till the Rights be guaranteed by Act of the Canadian Parliament.

The English Representatives refused to appoint Delegates to go to Pembina to consult with Mr. McDougall, stating they had no authority to do so from their constituents, upon which the Council was dissolved.

The Meeting at which the above Resolutions were adopted was held at Fort Garry, on Wednesday, December 1st, 1869.

ARMS.

To all whom it may concern.

Lower Fort Garry, Red River Settlement,
December 9th, 1869.

By certain printed Papers of a late date, put in circulation by the French party, communication with the Lieutenant-Governor is indicated with a view to laying before him the alleged rights on the part of those now in arms. I think that course very desirable, and that it would lead to good results. Under the belief that the party in arms are sincere in their desire for peace, and feeling that to abandon for the present the call on the loyal to arms, would, in view of such communication, relieve the situation of much embarrassment, and so contribute to bring about peace, and save the country from what will otherwise end in ruin and desolation. I now call on and order the loyal party in the North-West Territories to cease further action under the appeal to arms made by me; and I call on the French party to satisfy the people of their sincerity in wishing for a peaceful ending of all these troubles, by sending a Deputation to the Lieutenant-Governor at Pembina without unnecessary delay.

Given under my hand at the Lower Fort Garry, this 9th day of December, 1869.

EXTRACT from a DESPATCH from Governor The Rt. Hon. Sir J. YOUNG, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., to The EARL GRANVILLE, K.G., dated Government House, Ottawa, Canada, 8th January, 1870. (Confidential.)

I send extracts from two Newspapers, the Toronto 'Globe,' and the Ottawa 'Citizen.' The latter is a Ministerial paper; the former bitterly the reverse, but very influential in Ontario.

Mr. McDougall has arrived in Canada, and is expected to reach Ottawa in a day or two.

CANADA.

We learn from American sources that Dr. Tupper, who went up with Mr. Smith in order to bring his daughter back, is on his way home from Pembina, and, though we have no certain intelligence, the inference is that the envoys have been permitted to continue their route to Fort Garry.

EXTRACT from the Toronto 'Globe,' Newspaper, Dec. 31st, 1869.

THE NORTH-WEST.

It is no pleasant task to pass in review the recent policy of the Dominion of Canada towards the North-West Territory; yet, under the circumstances, it cannot be avoided. The original fundamental error of the Government lay, in ignoring altogether the opinions and feelings of the inhabitants of the Selkirk Settlement. The people may be divided politically into three classes: the Hudson Bay Company officials and adherents; the English and Scotch Settlers, with their half-breed connections; and the French, principally half-breeds. The Hudson Bay Company were naturally inclined to view with jealousy the introduction of a new order of things, forced upon them by Imperial Authority. The other two classes, although, in the main, favourable to Canadian Annexation, were jealously on the watch lest the new system should fail to give them the perfect right of self-government which they had been hitherto denied; and for the attainment of which they had gladly welcomed the change. The French were doubly jealous, however, inasmuch as some of them feared to be over-run by British Canadians, aliens to them in race and religion.

It is impossible to say whether the Ottawa Authorities had any sinister motives for so acting; whether they desired to parcel out the Lands of the Territory to suit their own purposes, without interference from its old occupants; but certain it is that they ignored the people of Selkirk altogether in the formation of the first Government. In spite of the warnings of the Opposition in the House of Commons, and of this Journal, they refused to introduce at once a Representative system of Government, and left the control of the affairs of the Territory, for an indefinite period, to a Governor and Council. In the selection of a Governor they were guided by motives of temporary political expediency; Mr. McDougall had answered all the purposes for which he was retained in the Cabinet, after the retirement of Mr. Brown; the elections of 1867 were carried by the Conservative party; Mr. McDougall had no friends in the House of Commons, and he not only was troublesome in matters of policy within the Cabinet, but his presence caused jealousy and ill-will among the Conservative followers of the Premier in Parliament. The time had arrived for getting rid of Mr. McDougall, and he was shunted off to the North-West, without consideration for the feelings of the people there. No one can deny that Mr. McDougall has some qualities of head which, under favourable circumstances, would render him a fair Governor; but one more unsuitable for the crisis could hardly have been selected. There is a considerable body of Reformers in the Settlement, who are the truest friends of Canada there; but no enthusiasm was excited among them by the presence of one whom they were accustomed to regard as a traitor to his party and the principles he formerly professed. As to the Hudson Bay Company's officials, unfriendly as they are to Canadian rule, there was nothing in Mr. McDougall's antecedents, character, or position, to recommend him to them; while to the French he was specially obnoxious, on account of the old quarrel about Manitoulin lands. Mr. McDougall's lack of frankness and bonhomie was an effectual stop to the removal of any of the prejudices, ill or well founded, which had been formed against him in the Settlement. His appointment was generally received in Canada with the remark, that if the people of the North-West were satisfied to receive him, we could have no objections, since we were about to get rid of him.

In the choice of a Council, the Government were equally unfortunate. They undoubtedly designed at one time to form it by the selection of two Representatives from the larger Provinces, two from Selkirk itself, and one each from the smaller Provinces. The Government organ at Ottawa openly defended this scheme when it was assailed by the Reform press. As it was, two Members of the Council, the Attorney-General, and the Secretary, one from Ontario, and the other from Quebec, were sent up with Mr. McDougall. Captain Cameron, Dr. Tupper's son-in-law, went up as a kind of Chief of Police, we believe, and it is to be presumed was intended to represent Nova Scotia. The Surveying party, which preceded the Governor and began work, was exclusively composed of Canadians; and, evidently, it appeared to the people of the Territory that every good thing in the gift of the new Government was to be absorbed by strangers, and that those who had penetrated far from civilization, and lived for forty or fifty years in the hope of attaining the blessings of self-government, were about to be placed under the control of a set of foreign officials, as grasping as those of the Hudson Bay Company. Let our readers in Ontario put themselves in the place of the people of Selkirk, and say whether they also would not have felt indignant when so treated.

It is unquestionably true that—whatever might be the motives of the Government, or the character of their proceedings—the people of Canada would never have tolerated any injustice being inflicted upon the people of Selkirk. The more intelligent people of the Settlement were well aware of the fact, and were willing, in spite of the errors of the Government, to receive Mr. McDougall; but their hands were weakened by those errors, and they have been compelled to succumb to the rule of the less intelligent and more headstrong.

The errors which marked the inception of the new Government are, however, less than those of its after progress. Without any intimation to Governor McTavish of his approach, Mr. McDougall was sent up to the Territory. If he had gone when first appointed in summer, he would have been comparatively well received, the half-breeds being then on the plains; but he waited to air his honours through Ontario, the buffalo-hunters returned, the causes of discontent festered and rankled in the minds of the people, and he was stopped at the frontier. Before he left Toronto, Mr. McDougall was told what would happen if his Council was not better constituted than the Government journals proposed that it should be; but he disregarded the warning. Mr. Howé had been at Red River before him, and surely could not have failed to perceive the extent of the dissatisfaction which existed. There is a characteristic story told of him which shows that, at all events, some portion had come under his notice. It is said that a resident of Red River declaiming loudly against Confederation, appealed to him as one of its ancient opponents. "Yes," said the member for Hants, "I did oppose it, till I got a fat office, and so, I suppose, will you." The Government did not hold out to the people of Red River even a prospect of the fat offices which have so great an effect upon the opinions of the Howes of politics.

Mr. McDougall was stopped at the frontier, and then commenced a series of remarkable proceedings at Ottawa and Pembina. It had been agreed that, on the 1st December, the purchase money of the Territory should be paid over to the Hudson Bay Company, the Queen's Proclamation should issue, annexing the North-West to Canada; and that Mr. McDougall should on that day assume the duties of his Governorship. Mr. McDougall faithfully carried out the programme laid down for him. Although he was cooped up in the village of Pembina, unable to enter the promised land; although his subjects were in rebellion against his authority, and his messengers obliged to steal into his seat of Government under disguise, he boldly proclaimed the transference of the Territory to Canada, and claimed the loyal obedience of the inhabitants. But what, in the mean time, had been the course of the Government at Ottawa? While McDougall was issuing his Proclamation of the annexation of the Territory to Canada, they had put a stop to the annexation altogether!—they had prevented the payment of the money in England, and indefinitely postponed the issue of the Queen's Proclamation. We look upon this act as a wrong to Mr. McDougall; but, what is much more important, a great injury to the Dominion. It has been said by one Government Journal that, as Canada is purchasing the Territory, it is the duty of the Hudson Bay Company and the Imperial Government to give peaceable possession; but our claim has always been that the country has belonged to Canada since the Conquest, and that the payment of £300,000 is made to extinguish the claims which the Hudson Bay Company had acquired by temporary occupation. To ask the Hudson Bay Company to give us possession of the Territory, is to ask an impossibility—they have not men nor money enough at command. To ask the Home Government to put down the Insurrection, is to ask what will not be granted. The answer will be, "You did not wait for us to hand over the Territory; you sent in your Surveyors, and other officials, in the most injudicious way you could have chosen; the difficulties which exist, you have yourselves created—get out of them the best way you can."

This is the aspect in which the Government have placed us before the Imperial Authorities. But, in regard to the people of Red River, the position they have selected is still more disastrous. Counting upon the co-operation of the Government, Mr. McDougall issued his Proclamation, and called upon the loyal people of the Settlement to support this authority. But whilst preparing his organization, intelligence of the change of policy at Ottawa seems to have reached him. The proffered services of the loyal people of Winnipeg were declined, and the Insurgents allowed to pursue their career unchecked. The Territory does not belong to Canada; the Hudson Bay Company has ceased to govern, and Messrs. Bruce and Riel may hoist any flag they please without special charge of disloyalty being raised against them. A third of the series of Letters from a Hudson Bay Company source, which we publish to-day, expresses as strongly as ever the absence of any desire for annexation to the United States on the part of the Insurgents; and, in fact, the absence of any other desire except for union with Canada on fair terms. But the end of an insurrection cannot be predicted from the views of the actors at the beginning. The first Declaration of the American Revolutionists of 1776 was filled with expressions of loyalty to George the Third. We cannot, therefore, view without alarm the present position of affairs. The Ministry, apparently, have entirely abandoned the North-West for the time being. One of their Journals, in Kingston, declares that Canada does not want the Red River Settlement; that the idea of building a Pacific Railroad through British Territory is chimerical; and that the Territory can never be aught else than a bill of expense, with no prospect of future benefit. Another organ in Toronto, the 'Leader,' thus treats the matter:—

"BACK AGAIN—'The King of France marched up the hill, and then marched back again.' Mr. Albert Richards, with some members of Mr. McDougall's family, have already left St. Paul en route for Canada, the implacable half-breeds having refused to let them cross the border. Mr. McDougall himself is expected at St. Paul in a few days, and will probably be in Toronto next week. It would be a ludicrous affair altogether if it had not a serious side. But it will be all right when the trees begin to bud. Then Canada will own the Territory, and then, too, Mr. McDougall, or some one else, as Lieutenant-Governor, will surely exercise gubernatorial powers in the new Territories. Till then Bruce, Riel, and Co., may make high carnival unmolested."

The actors in the scenes of the last two months have certainly placed themselves in a position ludicrous enough, but we can not find it in our hearts to laugh at folly which has endangered the future of this country. Mr. McDougall's position may furnish many a merry jest for boon companions at Ottawa; but the people of Ontario cannot view without indignation and alarm the fair hopes of securing the North-West Territory for themselves and their children blasted by the recklessness and incapacity of their rulers.

The policy of abandonment, of relinquishment of the Territory for an indefinite period, will not satisfy public opinion. The Government selected a bad Governor and a bad Council to carry out a bad system. A portion of the people of Red River have committed grave errors, but the Ottawa Government were the first to do wrong, and ought to be the first to acknowledge it, and make restitution. When Mr. McDougall's progress was stopped at Pembina, we pointed out that it was the duty of the Government to recall him, and send up in his place a British Officer of rank and position, who would command the respect of all classes of the people.

That was our advice six weeks ago, and it would have been well if it had been followed then. It is our advice still. Judging by the communication published to-day from one who understands, and is, to a certain extent at least, in sympathy with the disaffected at Red River, a British Officer, empowered to listen to the complaints of the people at Red River, and to grant redress—subject, of course, to the decision of our Parliament—would be willingly received, and all danger would be passed. To leave the matter as it is until spring, with all the dangers that may intervene in the meanwhile, is, in the last degree, unwise. Enough mistakes have already been committed. We sincerely hope the Government will acknowledge these errors in the past by adopting a very different policy in the future.

CANADA.

From the 'Ottawa Citizen,' Jan. 6, 1870.

We give elsewhere an article respecting the Red River difficulty, which appears to be written in a fairer and more moderate spirit than most of those which have appeared. The reports have been, as our readers would see for themselves, contradictory, and for the most part written from an American point of view, and therefore by no means too favourable to Canada. Whilst we have published most of the statements that have appeared, we have felt it necessary to warn our readers that they ought not to be accepted implicitly. Many or most of them resemble the story of "The Black Crows," which had for its foundation "as black as a crow."

In the large number of articles and letters that have been written respecting the Red River trouble, some grains of truth have no doubt been mingled; the difficulty has been to separate the wheat from the chaff. We have ourselves abstained, in the present state of affairs, from any remarks calculated to throw difficulty in the way of the negotiations now going on with the inhabitants of Red River. In the absence of positive information, it is difficult to arrive at any satisfactory conclusions respecting the origin and extent of the difficulty, and the claims of the Insurgents. The Members of the Government are particularly reticent with respect to Red River matters, and evidently desire to preserve a discreet silence during the progress of the pending negotiations. It might be as well, perhaps, if the press were to observe the same caution. A little patience and discretion now may save a vast amount of trouble hereafter. When Parliament meets the whole matter will, no doubt, be thoroughly investigated. Meantime, it is the part of prudence, as well as of patriotism, to refrain from any utterances which might hamper the action of the Government, or tend to increase the irritation which prevails amongst a considerable section of the inhabitants of Red River.

THE RED RIVER TROUBLE.

From the 'St. Paul Despatch,' 31st.

Governor McDougall, appointed by the Dominion Governor of the Red River Country, his Commission dating December 1st, reached this city at 1 P.M. to-day, on his way from Pembina to Ottawa, having been unable to assume the duties of his office. He was accompanied by Colonel Dennis, Surveyor-General of the Territory, and Alexander Begg, an officer of the Canadian Customs. The party left Pembina on the 19th, and had a comparatively comfortable journey.

A representative of the 'Despatch' promptly called upon the Governor to learn his version of affairs in the politically tempestuous country from whence he came. Governor McDougall is a tall, large-framed man, of commanding appearance, and evidently an able gentleman. He received our reporter cordially, and, in reply to an enquiry relative to his side of the difficulty, said he had not much to report, as his duty was to state the situation to his Government, and there was much he would not be justified in now making public. A very entertaining conversation followed, wherein he gave an interesting statement of affairs, of which we give an outline.

He characterized the reports sent by the correspondents at Pembina as false in many respects, and said they were mainly gotten up by Enos Stuttsman and Joseph Lemay, who were really in the insurrection over the border, though Americans, and living on American soil. All manner of false reports were circulated among the Red River half-breeds, to induce them to take up arms against him. Among other ridiculous reports, was one that he had killed two priests on his way up, and had insulted the Pope and Bishop Taché, two personages he says he never saw. The Catholic Priests used their influence against him, and more than all gave a practical turn to the Rebellion.

He was accordingly met by a delegation when he reached the Border, and informed he must not enter the Territory. When he did enter, he was met by a party of twenty armed horsemen, who made him a prisoner and escorted him back. All was done very politely, no insulting language being used. The Governor said he was not, of course, prepared to use force. His party consisted of non-combatants, there being ladies among them, and also gentlemen visiting the country, having no connection with the Dominion. He had, accordingly, no alternative but to return to the American side.

He considers that the real origin of the difficulty lies in the fact of the dissatisfaction of the Hudson Bay Company's agents in the Red River Territory with the division of the profits, made by the Officers of the Company in England. This has existed for some time, and has been a source of controversy. The English Officers finally sold their interest in the Territory to the Dominion, without in the least consulting their Agents at Winnipeg. The Dominion knew only the officers in England in the transfer, and could, of course, have no official communication with the Company's Agents in the country itself. He admits that the English Officers erred in not consulting their Agents at Red River, but this was a matter over which the Dominion had not control.

In addition to this, the priesthood of the Territory were fearful that the change of Government would be disastrous to their spiritual power, that the half-breeds, so fully under their control, would be crowded back, and a different class of Settlers be introduced. Designing men, ambitious of political power, made use of these agencies to stir up the revolt.

The Governor gives Colonel Stuttsman, of Pembina, credit of having organized the Insurrection, and says he is really the brain of the movement, and Riel's documents are sent to him before they are issued for revision. When the Governor was captured, Colonel Stuttsman was present in a buggy, counselling and directing the movement. The Governor talked with his captors, stating his intentions, &c., and they were inclined to allow him to proceed to Fort Garry, but, after gathering at the village with Stuttsman, adhered to the original order of expulsion. Stuttsman's connection with the affair is entirely open and unconcealed.

The English and Scotch Settlers sent the Governor word that, if he would so direct, they would take up arms, and put down the Insurgents. The Governor shrank from taking the responsibility of causing bloodshed among former friends and neighbours, and argued that, as no troops could be brought there this winter, all efforts should be to prevent violence.

He did send Colonel Dennis to advise with the friendly Settlers and see what could be done. If the difficulty could be overcome by a show of authority, he was anxious it should be, but did not wish to precipitate a conflict.

With this end in view, Colonel Dennis organized an armed force of about 150. He armed fifty of what the Governor said were improperly called Swamp Indians, but who, he alleges, are civilized, and living on and cultivating farms. These Indians were placed in possession of the Stone Fort, and told to hold it, but instructed not to go outside. Colonel Dennis had a small printing press, and issued a proclamation from the Fort.

Heretofore the Insurgents had made no statement of what they desired; but, in view of this situation of affairs, they published what they called a Bill of Rights. Many, in fact most of their requests, would have been complied with by the New Government, if it had gone into operation, and knowing this, Colonel Dennis arranged for a conference between them and Governor McDougall. He ordered the Indians to disband, and return to their homes. Some Sioux Indians, who were engaged in the Minnesota massacre and fled across the Border, learning that there was no danger of annexation, offered their services to Colonel Dennis, but he very positively declined their aid.

When, by this strategy, the supporters of Governor McDougall were off their guard, they were taken prisoners, some fifty in number, and taken to Fort Garry, where nearly all are still held in confinement. Colonel Dennis both entered and left the Territory secretly, and at one time was within twenty feet of General Riel, but, being unknown, was not captured.

Learning, as he supposed according to Colonel Dennis' arrangements, that Riel was coming down to meet him, Governor McDougall sent him a private note inviting an interview. It proved that he was not on the way down; but the note reached Riel at Fort Garry, and though he had had it a week when the Governor left, he had deigned no reply whatever.

It was the programme of the malcontents throughout to prevent any conference with the Governor, as they feared that an explanation would result in their overthrow. Those who came individually said they did not think the leaders of the movement would object to his assuming control, if they understood his intentions.

In reply to our enquiry, relative to the annexation feeling, the Governor said he did not think it existed to any extent. Stuttsman was anxious to bring that about, and he thought General Riel was similarly inclined; but the priests, who really have more control than either, were opposed to it, because it would be disastrous to their power, as though they were governed by the Dominion.

All the American officials at Pembina were uncivil and discourteous, except the Deputy Collector of Customs, Mr. Nelson. The Postmaster was notoriously in the interests of the Insurgents, and tampered with the mails.

The Governor said, with a quiet twinkle in his eye, that there had been some remarks in relation to his remaining upon American soil, but he did not know what the people of Maine would say if residents of Canada should conduct an insurrection over the Border. He did not think it would be international courtesy. He said, of course, he did not hold the Government responsible for the acts of a few individuals.

Another trouble was that all the Local Authorities were in sympathy with the Insurgents. The Sheriff was one of the prominent movers, and no legal steps could be taken to put down the Insurrection, though there were never more than 150 men under arms at one time.

Governor McTavish's illness prevented his doing anything, though it is claimed that he would have been unable to have quelled the trouble if he had been well.

When the news reached the Governor that his Government declined to complete the purchase of the Territory while it was in insurrection, it placed him in a position where he felt that he had no authority to proceed further. His situation at Pembina being extremely unpleasant, he resolved to return, report the situation, and ask further instructions of the Dominion Government.

As one of the results of this difficulty, he said the Dominion would abandon all idea of trade in this direction over our railroad lines, but would be obliged to incur more expense than had been intended, and open routes through their own Territory. He had made a contract with Mr. Simmons of the North-Western Telegraph Company, to construct a line of telegraph to Fort Garry next summer, but that would not now be done.

The Governor thinks all will be settled by spring. He met Governor Smith going up as he came down, and also Vicar-General Thibault.

Governor Smith is sent by the Hudson Bay Company to succeed Governor McTavish, and endeavour

CANADA. — to settle the trouble. The Vicar-General will urge the priests to change their course, and portray the consequences which will result from a continued revolt. These efforts, the Government thinks, will be successful.

Governor McDougall joined his family in this city, whose previous arrival had been noted, and is stopping at Park Place Hotel. He will remain here till some time next week, and is awaiting the arrival of baggage from Pembina, when he will leave again for Canada.

MY LORD,

(Received 24th February, 1870.)

1. I have the honour to forward herewith copies of further communications with reference to the North-West Territory, which complete the correspondence down to the present date.

2. The Letter of the 24th December, from Mr. Howe to Mr. McDougall was despatched by a special messenger. A day or two, however, after he had left Ottawa, the Government received news of Mr. McDougall's departure from Pembina. The Messenger was therefore recalled by telegraph, and the Letter handed to Mr. McDougall on his arrival here.

3. This Letter, as your Lordship will perceive, expresses strong disapproval of certain acts of Mr. McDougall. In justice, therefore, to that gentleman, I kept it back until I could send you his reply along with it. But the Ministers inform me that Mr. McDougall has not yet made any reply. Probably, he is reserving his statement for what he deems a more fitting opportunity. However this may be, I feel that I can no longer delay sending the correspondence to your Lordship.

4. I also enclose a Copy of a portion of the former Correspondence, which the Ministers have published through the Papers; and extracts from Papers which give an account of the proceedings at Fort Garry on the 19th and 20th January. A further Meeting was to be held on the 25th January, but we have not yet received the account of it.

The SECRETARY of STATE for the PROVINCES, to the GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR,

Department of Secretary of State for the Provinces,
Ottawa, 25th December, 1869.

I have the honour to transmit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General, Copy of a Despatch addressed to the Honourable William McDougall, C.B., on the 24th instant.

J. Turville, Esq., Governor's Secretary,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOSEPH HOWE.

Department of Secretary of State for the Province,
Ottawa, 24th December, 1869.

SIR,

Your Despatch, dated Pembina, 2nd December, and its Enclosures, A and B, reached this office on the 18th instant, and were promptly laid before the Governor-General and Council.

As it would appear, from those documents, that you have used the Queen's name without Her authority, attributed to Her Majesty acts which she has not yet performed, and organised an armed force within the Territory of the Hudson Bay Company without warrant or instructions, I am commanded to assure you that the grave occurrences which you report have occasioned here great anxiety.

The exertion of Military force against the misguided people now in arms, even if under the sanction of law, was not to be hastily risked, considering the fearful consequences which might ensue, were the Indians—many of them but recently in contact with the white inhabitants of the neighbouring States—drawn into the conflict. But, as the organization and use of such a Force by you was, under the circumstances, entirely illegal, the Governor-General and Council cannot disguise from you the weight of responsibility you have incurred.

Acting on the belief that the country would be quietly transferred, with the general assent of the inhabitants, all the preparatory arrangements were made, as you are aware, in anticipation that on or about the 1st of December the Territory would be surrendered by the Company to the Queen; and that, thereupon, Her Majesty would issue Her Proclamation, fixing a day for the union of the country with Canada.

The Proclamation, when officially communicated to you, would enable you, under the commission and authority given in anticipation of that event, to enter legally, upon the appointed day, on the discharge of your official duties as Governor of the North-West.

In the Commission, issued on the 28th September, you were empowered to enter upon the duties of government only “on, from, and after the day to be named” in the Queen's Proclamation; and in the Instructions handed to you with the Commission, you are directed to proceed to Fort Garry and “be ready to assume the Government of the Territories on their actual transfer to Canada.”

That you clearly understood this limitation of authority was hoped from your Letter from Pembina, of the 7th November, addressed to Governor McTavish, and communicated to this Department, in which you say, “I shall remain here until I hear officially of the transfer of authority, and shall then “be guided by circumstances as to what I shall say and do;” and, because in your Letter of the 14th November, addressed to this Department, you thus refer to some injudicious proposal made by your friends:—“The recommendation that I should issue a Proclamation is not made for the first time; “but I have uniformly replied that, until the transfer of the Territory has taken place, and I am “notified of the fact, I shall not assume any of the responsibilities of government.”

The peaceful surrender of the country was assumed throughout the negotiations, and this Government never claimed, or pretended to exercise, any authority within the North-West, until invested with the Sovereignty by the terms of the Queen's Proclamation.

The transfer of the Territories would, no doubt, have been proclaimed on or about the 1st day of December, had not your Report of the 31st October, and the Documents which accompanied it, changed the whole position of affairs, and thrown upon this Government grave responsibilities of a very novel character. In those Papers you represented that serious obstruction had been opposed to your entrance into the country; that a large number of persons were opposed to the establishment of the authority of the Dominion; that a Provisional Government had been formed, and the roads barricaded and guarded; that some of the “Catholic Clergy” were openly abetting these movements; and that the Officers of the Hudson Bay Company, if not aiding the revolutionists, were unable to control them.

Your Despatch was received here on the 19th November; and, on the 26th, those of the 5th and 17th November came to hand, from which it appeared that the insurrectionary movements still continued without check; that the Hudson Bay Officers were powerless; and that you had been driven out of the country.

The facts disclosed in those Despatches entirely changed the basis upon which the negotiation—in perfect good faith upon the part of the Dominion—had, up to that time, been conducted with the Hudson Bay Company, and with the Imperial Government.

If, with those facts before them, the Canadian Government accepted the responsibility of governing, or rather of assuming the Government, a country that could only be recovered by conquest, at a vast distance from the base of operations, and which, for many months, could only be approached through the United States, they could hardly justify an act of such precipitancy to Parliament and the country; while it was equally clear that, if you were invested with the legal title to govern without being able to get into Rupert's Land, or exercise any authority, the revolutionary government would be strengthened by your weakness, and would, in fact (the Proclamation having superseded Governor McTavish), be the only Government in the Territory till put down by the force of arms.

It was a matter of necessity then, rather than of choice, to delay the issue of the Queen's Proclamation, and it was assumed here that the necessity would be as apparent to you as it was to the Privy Council.

To postpone the surrender by the Company until it was able to transfer not only its own rights but the Territory itself to Her Majesty, to stay the issue of the Queen's Proclamation, and to leave with the Hudson Bay Company and the Imperial Government the obligation of enforcing order, and asserting the rights of the Sovereign, was the first duty of this Government, and the Governor-General and Council had hoped that this would be as obvious to you as to them.

They had another duty, and to that they addressed themselves without delay. It was to disabuse the minds of the people of Rupert's Land of the erroneous impressions under which there was too much reason to fear that they had acted, and to restore tranquillity by peaceful means. The measures taken with this view were explained to you in my Despatches of the 19th and 29th November, and of the 7th, 8th, 10th, 11th, and 17th December. In none of these Despatches will there be found any warrant or authority for the proceedings reported in your Despatch of the 2nd December. It is to be regretted that they had not reached you sooner, but the sanguine hope is entertained here that if no collisions have taken place, or blood been shed, till you have read those Despatches, and conferred with the gentlemen who have been sent to the Red River, matters may yet wear a more cheerful aspect, and the government of the Territory be assumed with some guarantee for order, and with all the formalities of law. Whether this hope is realised or not your duty is plain, and I am commanded by His Excellency to instruct you to remain at Pembina until you can get peaceable access to Fort Garry, with the assent and under the protection of the Hudson Bay Company's authorities, that you are to take every means of removing the misapprehensions that exist in the minds of the residents, by explanation and otherwise, and that you are to exercise no acts of authority on behalf or in the name of the Government of Canada until officially informed that the Queen's Proclamation has issued, and until you shall have assumed the Government and taken the oaths of office, on or after the day fixed in it for the union of the countries.

As the course of action proposed by you in your Despatch of the 2nd of December was to be carried out before an answer could possibly reach you, I have delayed replying for some days, in order to learn, if possible, the result of your policy; but the receipt of your Despatch of the 6th instant, which reached me on the 23rd, with its enclosures 2 A, 2 B, and 2 C, and the course taken by Colonel Dennis, as described in those papers, make it necessary without further delay to send this Despatch by a special messenger.

I wish I could inform you that this Report had entirely relieved the Governor-General and Council from the anxiety already expressed. It is true that no blood had been shed up to the 6th, and you had not carried out your intention of occupying the stockade near Pembina with an armed party; but the proceedings of Colonel Dennis, as reported by himself, are so reckless and extraordinary that there can be no relief from solicitude here while an officer so imprudent is acting under your authority.

Had the inhabitants of Rupert's Land, on the breaking out of the disturbances, risen and put an end to them, or had Governor McTavish organised a force to occupy his forts and maintain his authority, all would have been well, and Riel and his people would have been responsible for any bloodshed, or property destroyed. But Colonel Dennis, with no legal authority, proceeds to seize a fort then in possession, not of the insurgents, but of the Hudson Bay Company, and to garrison it with a mixed force of whites and Indians, and proposes to give battle to the insurgents, should a junction be formed with some forces which he has ordered to be drilled on the Assiniboine. He appears never to have thought that the moment war commenced all the white inhabitants would be at the mercy of the Indians, by whom they are largely outnumbered, and, divided as they would be, might be easily overpowered.

It is impossible to read the Colonel's account of his attempt to persuade Judge Black to aid him in proclaiming martial law without strong feelings of regret that you should have been represented in the settlements by a person with so little discretion. It is no wonder that Judge Black was "frightened" at the proposal, as he must have known that Colonel Dennis would have to answer at the bar of justice for every life lost by such an assumption of authority, and that the illegal seizure of an American citizen, would at once provoke interference in the quarrel and lead to very serious complications,

I have, &c.,

Secretary of State for the Provinces.

Hon. Wm. McDougall, C.B., Pembina.

(No. 8.)

SIR,

Ottawa, 20th January, 1870.

I have the honour to transmit herewith the Report of Col. Dennis (A 8), detailing his proceedings in the Red River Settlement from the 1st to the 10th December, under instructions from me, which I supposed I had authority under my commission to issue. The copies of the papers referred to in this Report did not reach me until yesterday, in consequence of the illness of Col. Dennis, from an injury he received on his journey from Pembina.

I have also received and enclose herewith (B 8) Colonel Dennis' final Report, detailing the arrangements he made for storing and disposing of the supplies, &c., collected at the Stone Fort, and his visit to the Sioux, who were said to be making preparations for war on their own account.

I have, &c.,

The Hon. Joseph Howe, Secretary of State for the Provinces.

Record of Proceedings under Commission from Lieutenant-Governor McDougall, dated 1st December, 1869.

Wednesday, December 1st.

Arrived at Mr. William Hallett's, on the Assiniboine, at five o'clock A.M. Sent messengers for Mr. James Mackay and Mr. Robert Tait, with whom and Mr. Hallett discussed the present situation of affairs in the Settlement. Read them the Proclamation of 1st December and my Commissioners. Explained to them that my orders from Mr. McDougall were to ascertain the state of feeling at the present time among the loyal people, and should it be found such as to warrant the belief that an appeal with a view of organizing a force to put down the malcontents would be responded to in such a manner as to leave little or no doubt of a avourable issue, I was to make such an appeal, organise a force, and put down the outbreak. On the other hand, should there be any doubt in my mind as to the result, I was not to make any call, but return to Pembina and report accordingly.

Learned that the English-speaking delegates were to attend a meeting of the French Council called for to-day, to make known the result of a reference to the several parishes of the French proposition to form a Provisional Government. It was said this result would show a majority of some hundreds over the French party. Mr. Tait said he intended being present at the meeting, and I gave him a copy of the Proclamation, with the understanding that he would have it read on the occasion.

Mr. Hallett was decided in his opinion that the English-speaking people would now eagerly turn out to put down the emeute. The other two gentlemen agreed with him that the people were not disposed to tolerate any longer the rule of that party, but feared the result of any appeal to arms would be certain ruin to men of property, whose stock, crops, &c., the French would be sure to destroy. They admitted at the same time, that there would be no other course open if the French insisted on establishing their Provisional Government.

The interview at Mr. Hallett's over, Mr. Tait drove me down to the town of Winnipeg.

I found Dr. Schultz and the rest of the loyal party in the village, in a condition of much anxiety in regard to the immediate future. The French party had, a day or two previously, pointed two six-pounder guns on Dr. Schultz's house, and the men stood with port-fires lit ready to fire into his premises, in consequence of the Doctor's refusal to hand over to Riel's possession the provisions in his charge belonging to the Canadian Government. Riel, however, thought better of it, and finding that the Doctor was not to be intimidated, withdrew the guns.

Public feeling was in a very excited state. Both printing offices had been seized, and were in possession of Riel's party; Mr. Grant, however, of my office, aided by a number of other Canadian gentlemen, made a lot of manuscript copies, which were distributed during the afternoon and evening, some being despatched to Prairie Portage and others posted up in the town of Winnipeg.

Called on the Bishop, Archdeacon McLean, Mr. James Ross, Rev. Mr. Black, Judge Black and others, in the Lower Settlement. Mr. Rose and the Rev. Mr. Black, of Skidmore, were not in when I called, nor did I see Judge Black, who was up at Fort Garry. * * * * *

I learned that Major Boulton, of Mr. Hart's surveying staff, had been in communication with these gentlemen; that men had been enrolled and had commenced to drill at several places in the settlement.

I met, at the Rev. Mr. Gardiner's, in the Parish of St. Andrews, Archdeacon Cowley of St. Peter's, below the Stone Fort. Both these gentlemen had previously given proof of a strong desire to assist in bringing in and establishing the Government. Their opinion agreeing with those previously expressed; and furthermore, having had the assurance from Mr. William Dease, who represents the loyal French, at whose house I passed a couple of hours last evening on my way to Fort Garry, that over ninety men of that party could be relied on to fight alongside of the loyal English and Scotch for the establishment of order, I concluded it to be a duty under my commission to make the call, satisfied that there was every prospect that it would be very generally responded to. I may say here that in answer to my question, Mr. Dease informed me that he did not think that the reliable men in Riel's party would exceed three hundred in number.

Under the conviction that the Insurgents would seize upon the Stone Fort, so soon as my arrival in the Settlement, and the nature of my orders became known, I proceeded on to that point, arriving about 6 o'clock P.M. A guard was raised for the night through the exertions of * * * a few other loyal people, who sent messengers through this part of the Settlement. The locality, considering the short notice, turned out very well. The parish of St. Peter's particularly, in which the people consist for the most part of civilized and christianized Indians, under the Rev. Archdeacon Cowley and Mr. Cochrane, and who acknowledged Henry Prince as their Chief, were prompt in responding. By the morning there were about 120 men in the Fort, a majority of whom came from below. A number of young men, some forty in all, had been in the habit for several days back of assembling for drill in one of the Company's stores here; the drill-instructor being Mr. William Durie, a Military School Cadet, also of Mr. Hart's surveying party, who had been working in this part of the Settlement. These men also had remained in the Fort for the night. I read the Proclamation, having assembled those in the Fort for the purpose, which was well received, and also explained the object of the present call upon them, and desired that they should make the same known as widely as possible.

Thursday, 2nd December.

I find that many of the men are deficient of arms, and those who have arms have only the trading gun. Have sent requisitions to whatever points I have reason to believe arms are to be obtained, but anticipate that before sufficient can be had will have to send from house to house through the Settlement.

CANADA.

Despatched a messenger to Mr. Hart and party to cease surveying operations, and join me to assist in organising. Reported my arrival and occupation of the Stone Fort to Governor McTavish, mentioning the object of such occupation, and enclosing him also a copy of my Commission. Communication with the officer named is with much difficulty effected, as no letters are permitted, if known, to pass in or out of Fort Garry.

Sent for Major Boulton, who has been very active lately assisting the people to organise, and gave him definite instruction as to enrolment. With his aid, together with that of Mr. Inkster for St. John's, Mr. Gardiner for St. Andrew's, Mr. Bunn for Mapleton and St. Peter, divided the parishes into Company districts, fixing the central points in each for meeting to drill.

Some twenty-one Canadians reported themselves in a body from the town of Winnipeg this evening, and enrolled their names. They tell me the Canadians in the town number about thirty, and are all anxious to serve. I have therefore instructed Dr. Lynch, a Military School Cadet, to enrol a company in Winnipeg, to be made up of Canadians and other men in the vicinity. As the Canadians are all more or less acquainted with drill, I directed Dr. Lynch simply to organise, and then let the men remain quietly in their usual lodgings until further orders. Their presence there in that way, having fully instructed them to avoid being any cause of offence to the French, it seemed to me could be no cause of irritation, and the knowledge that they were there might tend to prevent any outrage on person or property of loyal people in the town. The enrolment here I placed under Mr. William Dwire, and charged Mr. A. N. Muckle, Military School Cadet, with that duty in the upper part of St. Andrew's and the north end of St. Paul's. Kildonan and the south end of St. Paul's I entrusted to Mr. Cowland, an English volunteer officer.

Judge Black was with me for several hours during the day.

Sent Captain Webb, a Canadian volunteer officer and M.S.C., who was surveying up the Assiniboine, full instructions to cease surveying, and with the staff of his party, who are all cadets, proceed to Prairie Portage and organise a force of four companies there. When organised, equipped, and provisioned, to advise me express and await orders—drilling industriously in the meantime.

Assembled Chief Prince's men in the Fort to-day. * * * * * The Proclamation was read and explained by * * * to the men in Indian; it was also read in English, many of the men having a fair understanding of that language; after which I explained, as interpreted by * * * the manner in which the country had become connected with Canada, and the object of the incoming Government. They all seemed loyally disposed, cheering heartily for the Queen, and those of them who had guns firing them off with evident enthusiasm.

Knowing the views of the Lieut.-Governor to be opposed to the employment at the present time of the Indians in putting down the Insurgents, and such being my own feelings also, while at the same time it would not be politic to dampen the dawning loyalty of these men by refusing their services entirely, I made the Chief select fifty of his best men to come into the Fort as a guard. I have explained to him that neither he nor his men will be called upon to fight excepting in case the Fort is attacked, and as he is an intelligent man I made him acquainted with the reasons. He expressed himself as perfectly satisfied, and left me with his pride evidently gratified by being entrusted with the service. The rest of his men I paid and sent home, having thanked them in the name of the Government for their promptness in turning out.

Wrote to the Lieutenant-Governor (see letter to him of this date). Mr. Dease and Dr. Schultz were with me during the evening. Mr. Dease still sanguine as to the stand which will be taken by the loyal French.

The printing presses in the town remaining in the armed custody of the French, sent Mr. Laurie, a practical printer, up to Winnipeg for a small hand press and type, lent by Dr. Schultz.

Friday, December 3rd.

Made inspection of the Fort, investigating contents of magazine, &c. Ordered removal of some large Hudson Bay boats, which had been laid up for winter, close to outside of Fort walls. Directed bastions to be cleared out. Made working drawings of a sled for mounting a brass six pounder gun found in a corner of one of the stores. Gave order for this sled to be built by Mr. Avel, the Company's engineer at Lower Fort.

The return of men enrolled in the several parishes, giving a satisfactory assurance that the requisite force would be raised, I gave orders for the delivery of beef and other supplies to be stored in the Fort. Mr. Hart, P.L.S., an excellent man of business, was appointed quarter-master, and entered at once upon his duties. The hand printing-press having arrived this morning, Mr. Laurie set up and printed the Proclamation, a number of which were at once distributed through the Settlement.

There would appear to have been a good deal of excitement in the town of Winnipeg last night, judging from a note received from Dr. Schultz, in which he states that his premises were entered about midnight by Riel, with twenty-four men; but having delayed a few hours at Mr. John Tait's on his way up, he thus escaped being made prisoner. He states also that search was made throughout the town for Dr. Brown, but Brown had escaped, and was in hiding, where no one appeared to know.

About the middle of the day, Dr. Brown arrived, in company with Mr. Stewart Mulkins, of my office, in a room over which he (Brown) had been concealed during last night, and had escaped detection, although the premises had been searched by Riel and his party.

Wrote Dr. Schultz that the Canadians in Winnipeg were to keep perfectly quiet, and remain in their lodgings, and not to invite either by word or deed, any attack from the French; to bear even insult without resenting it, not to fire upon any of the insurgents without being first fired upon. I represented to him that a collision at present would, in consequence of our not being fully prepared, possibly result disadvantageously.

Wrote Governor McTavish, asking orders to receive such arms as were at the following posts of the Company, viz., 1st. Fort Alexander; 2nd. White Horse Plains; 3rd. Prairie Portage; 4th. Oak Point, Manitobah. In the evening received his reply, marked "B."

Received numerous calls from people in the Settlement, expressing a strong desire to co-operate in putting down the French now in Fort Garry.

Learning that Mr. Boyd, of Boyd and Inkster, had a large supply of powder, a lot of arms, stock of blankets, and a considerable quantity of beef; sent an order for them, and they arrived during the day; the guns were at once distributed among the men who were deficient in arms, I also made it known that wherever there were any spare arms, I wished them sent to the Fort for the use of the Government.

Saturday, December 4th.

Received a note from Dr. Schultz this morning, in which he states that a number of the enrolled Canadians and others collected at his house last evening, it is presented on his request, anticipating a possible attack upon his property and the Government provisions in his charge. That in the course of the night, bodies of men of the French party repeatedly made their appearance around the outside of his house and premises, evidently inviting attack from the party inside. That they repeatedly adjourned for liquor to O'Lone's saloon. That they were there harangued by Riel; finally, that they came to the front of his house, went through various manœuvres, detaching parties to the rear, &c., and then went off to the Fort, leaving the Doctor and his party, between one and two o'clock A.M., unmolested.

From the occurrences of last night it is evident to me, that a very critical condition of affairs exists at Winnipeg. A single shot which may be fired by either party would precipitate possible deplorable results. As yet the force I am organising is not, nor will it be probably in a condition to justify a collision for ten or twelve days. I shall, therefore, give orders to the Canadians to withdraw from Winnipeg, and with that view have written to order, a copy of which is marked "A 1." Wrote also instructions to Major Boulton on this subject, marked "A 2." Wrote also Dr. Schultz to same effect (see copy marked "A 3.")

* * * * *

Towards evening, Mr. James McKay and a Mr. Nolin, a French half-breed, arrived, bringing a copy of the French List of Rights—the first I had seen—and stating, that their object was, as individuals, anxious to see peace restored, to ascertain how far I could put them in position to assure the French party that these Rights would be granted by Mr. McDougall.

I explained to them, that I could give no assurance whatever—that I could only say that some of those "Rights" as they were called, I had reason to believe it was the Governor's intention to have embodied in his policy, but that others of them could not in my opinion be allowed.

Mr. McKay begged that the order to arm on the part of the rest of the Settlement, should be delayed further, as his belief still was that matters could be settled amicably, and represented in strong language the outrages that would ensue owing to the savage and revengeful instincts of these men in case of hostilities. He expressed the opinion that if blood were shed in the Settlement, Mr. McDougall and his family at Pembina, would be murdered; and further, that even at the present time my own life was in danger from assassination, and cautioned me from what had come to his knowledge to be very careful in my movements outside of the Fort.

With regard to the prospect of a peaceful settlement, he said he was convinced that even now, if the French party could be satisfied that Mr. McDougall actually held a parchment Commission under the Great Seal, and that he had been duly sworn into office as Lieutenant-Governor, they would no longer oppose his entry into the Settlement.

I then gave Mr. McKay the Memorandum marked "A 4," and he and Mr. Nolin left the Fort, sanguine that my proposition might lead to the disbanding of the French.

Mr. Alexander McKenzie, of Mapleton Parish, a Scotch half-breed, who had formerly been for some years the master of a post in the Hudson Bay service, was introduced to me to-day, and expressed his willingness to enrol a company in that parish, and I gave him the requisite authority.

Received note from Major Boulton, marked "E;" also another from Dr. Schultz, marked "F."

Sunday, December 5th.

Sent up orders for enrolment of a company in St. James', also one in Headingly, that for the latter being enclosed to Rev. J. Carrie (see Mr. Carrie's note previously received, marked "G," enclosed with Mr. Carrie's letter to me, was an address of welcome from inhabitants of High Bluff, Assiniboine, to Lieutenant-Governor, marked "G. H.")

Mr. Joseph Marion, French half-breed of the loyal party, * * * * * and who had been sent to Prairie Portage with Mr. Farmer, to post the Proclamation on the 1st, arrived during the day. Sent him up to Mr. Dease's, directing the latter to have his men armed and await orders.

Received a second letter from Major Boulton, marked "I." This officer and Mr. Snow called in the evening,—Mr. Snow very desirous to have Canadians allowed to remain in Winnipeg to guard Government provisions, &c. I told him that whoever staid there after the orders that I had given, assumed the responsibility, that as representing the Government, I did not desire a guard continued on the provisions at the risk of its causing a collision at the present time.

CANADA.

Monday, December 6th.

It having been represented that the response would be more complete if I would make a public call, and accompany it with evidence that all could see as to my authority, I put the same in type yesterday, on the C. M. S. press coming to hand, and to-day it was printed and distributed (see copy marked "K 1.")

Received letter from Major Boulton as to state of affairs at Winnipeg, marked "K." At once wrote and sent off peremptory orders, reiterating those of the 4th inst., for the Canadians to leave the town (see copy marked "K 2.")

Wrote Mr. James Ross, in reply to his note (copy marked "K 4.") Reply marked "K 3."

Understanding that Mr. Grant, of Sturgeon Creek had a small howitzer—wrote him, sending a messenger for it.

Judge Black was with me for an hour or two to-day. Mr. Sutherland, a member of the Council of the Colony, and an officer of the Kildonan Company, with Mr. McBeth, called also. Mr. Sutherland seemed strongly of opinion, that if I would meet the French Council, it might result in their sending a delegation to the Lieutenant-Governor. I expressed my willingness to do so, and he left with the understanding that he was to see the French leaders to-morrow morning, and if possible, arrange for a meeting.

Tuesday, December 7th.

Last evening, about eight o'clock, a Mr. Alexander Black and his wife called upon me.

Mrs. Black had been up to town to consult Dr. Schultz professionally, and had had much difficulty, so she informed me, in getting into the village, and still more in getting access to the Doctor, in consequence of close investment of the place, and particularly of the house of the latter, by the French party.

She brought a verbal message from Dr. Schultz to me, as he told her he was afraid to trust a letter, to the effect that some forty Canadians were in a state of siege in his house. That they could not go out either to get food, wood, or water, and begged for help. This, it is clear, would not have occurred, had my previous orders, repeatedly given for the Canadians to leave the town, been obeyed. My force in the Settlement was not as yet organised, and not having heard so far from Captain Webb, I felt that the crisis was one involving very grave consequences.

Thinking, however, of the moral effect on the object I had in view, should the Canadians be captured, it seemed a duty to relieve them if possible, and believing, as Mrs. Black said, the French in the town were not more than fifty in number, that on the mere appearance of a considerable body of men coming up from the direction of the Lower Fort, the French guard would fall back on Fort Garry, and so leave time for the besieged party to come out and return with us, and that the relief could be effected in this way, without necessarily having had a collision, I determined on that course.

About forty men of the Company, the headquarters of which are at the Stone Fort, were drilling at the time, and expressed their readiness to go, and I then got a sleigh and drove up the Settlement to gather, if possible, sixty additional volunteers from among the enrolled men, believing that I should have little or no difficulty in getting that number in St. Andrew's. I found, however, that the requisite force would not be forthcoming. Indeed, there appeared to me to be an entire absence of the ardour which existed previously. Some of the leading men in St. Andrew's, who are filling the position of officers in the two companies in this parish, viz., Mr. D. Gunn, Mr. Joseph McDonald, Mr. Thomas Sinclair, met me at the Rev. Mr. Gardiner's, and it became evident that the project for the relief of the Canadians must fall to the ground.

I expressed a conviction that some agency was at work which had produced a change in the feelings of the people, and the gentlemen present agreeing with me, remarked, that it might probably be accounted for by the distribution, through the parishes, during yesterday, of the French "List of Rights." It was stated that up to the time of the dissemination of this document, no one but themselves knew what the demands of the malcontents were, and now that they had been published, some of them proving reasonable in their character, and the whole accompanied by expressions of a willingness to send a deputation to Pembina, to treat with the Lieutenant-Governor, it might readily be conceived that the effect on the rest of the people would be to make them less jealous of French domination, and more hopeful of seeing peace brought about by other means than by a resort to arms.

Returned to the Fort at 2 A.M., finding a messenger had arrived during my absence, bringing from the Lieutenant-Governor a Proclamation, directing the former officials of the Colony to continue to discharge their several duties, as previous to the first instant. As the messenger returned at once, I wrote the Lieutenant-Governor hurriedly in return, giving an account of the changed situation, and the evident effect of the French "List of Rights," a copy of which, as also a copy of note received from Mr. James Ross, I enclosed with letter.

Sent off at 3 A.M. a verbal message to be conveyed, if possible, to the besieged party, telling them of my inability to relieve them, and that if obliged to surrender, they must only get the best terms they could.

Desiring to investigate further the evident change in the feeling of the people in regard to aggressive measures, I drove up to the Rev. Mr. Black's, and convened a meeting there of leading men in the Scotch Settlement. There were present Judge Black, Rev. Mr. Black, Mr. James Ross, Mr. Bernard Ross, Chief Factor, H. B. C., Mr. Sutherland, Member of Council, Messrs. John and William Fraser, also members of the Council, and Mr. Polson.

I speedily became satisfied that the only condition on which the Scotch people would now arm and drill, would be to act strictly on the defensive. Indeed, I was informed that a public meeting held in the vicinity, had just broken up, at which delegates were appointed to visit me at the Stone Fort, without delay, to request that aggressive measures might for the present be abandoned. This attitude on their part, just at the present time, strengthened the conclusion I had come to as to the change in sentiment of the people of the lower parishes.

A strong desire was expressed by those present that I should agree, if the Rebels were willing, to meet their Council, and see if communication could be opened up with the Lieutenant-Governor, in hopes that it might bring about peace.

I explained that Mr. Sutherland was authorized by me last evening to see the leaders of the French party, and arrange for such meeting this morning. Mr. Sutherland said there was so much excitement among them all in reference to the seizing of Dr. Schult's house, that he had found it impossible to get an interview with Riel. It was settled then that Mr. Sutherland should arrange such meeting, if possible, to-morrow morning, and, in any case, let me know what had been done in that direction.

Taken altogether, it appears to me probable that the resort to arms to put down the French party at the present time must be given up. I shall not, however, discontinue the drill going on in the several parishes, believing that such will not be without good moral effect on probable negotiations.

While at the meeting at Mr. Black's, the town was represented as being in a state of great excitement; and, before I left, news came that the Canadian party had been obliged to surrender, and were taken to Fort Garry as prisoners.

As regards this unfortunate affair, there was no force with which the party could have been relieved; and the French, being in overpowering numbers, there was no alternative but to surrender; indeed, it was an act of folly their remaining there to be made prisoners of, as I have reason to believe they could have made their escape a few hours previously, without danger or difficulty (see Major Boulton's report on this subject, marked "L.")

My constant anxiety since issuing my first orders, on Saturday last, for them to leave the town, has been to get them away quietly, feeling that at any hour, through their indiscretion, the entire objects of the Government might have been frustrated.

A young gentleman, Mr. Mulkins, belonging to one of the surveying parties, and whom I sent up to Fort Garry during the forenoon to convey a message in connexion with the besieged Canadians, I learned had also been taken prisoner, and confined with Dr. Schultz's party.

While at Mr. Black's, Mr. Caldwell arrived from the town, bringing a Copy, in French, of what may be styled a "Declaration of Independence," and bearing, unmistakably the mark of American manufacture. Mr. Caldwell said he had been forced to print it; that the French were not satisfied with keeping his press from him, but, in addition, forced him to work for them by threats from armed men who were placed in possession.

Wednesday, December 8th.

Received a Letter from Bishop Macrae this morning (see Copy marked "N"). This Letter, evidently, corroborates the fact of the change of sentiment among the people. This is further strengthened by the remarks of people who called upon me; these, however, I observe, are few in number compared with those of last week. In the course of the day received another Letter from the Bishop, marked "O," in which his Lordship is joined by Archdeacon McLean, in begging that no aggressive measures may be taken. It is unnecessary to say that measures of this character are out of the question, as the people evidently will not sustain them at present.

Printed and distributed the Lieutenant-Governor's Proclamation, confirming the former officials in office.

Have heard nothing as yet from Mr. Sutherland regarding the prospect of a meeting with the French Council.

Thursday, December 9th.

Having become convinced that it is useless longer to entertain any expectation of being enabled to get a reliable force with which to put down the party in arms, decided to abandon the call upon the English-speaking people, and take advantage of the disposition of the French, as expressed by them, to send Delegates to Lieutenant-Governor, and so withdraw from a situation which the change in sentiment during the last few days has rendered a false one. I therefore, this morning, issued a notification, marked "P," sending a manuscript Copy early in the day to Mr. Bannatyne, at Winnipeg, with a note (see Copy, marked "K 5"), asking him to lay it before the French Council.

Shall detain Chief "Prince," and his fifty men, to guard the Fort for a few days until events further develop themselves.

In course of day received Copy of French "Declaration of Independence," marked "R." Received, this evening, Joseph Marion's Letter, containing message from Mr. Dease, marked "S;" by it the French party, it will be seen, have also determined to act only on the defensive.

Gave orders to cease drill and stop receipt of any further supplies.

Gave Major Boulton orders to go to Prairie Portage and stop the drilling there; also to convene a Council of the Indians in that neighbourhood, particularly of the Sioux, who, I have been informed, are disposed to anticipate a call from the Government, by making war on the French party, and tell them to be quiet.

No communication has, as yet, reached me from Captain Webb, and the only conclusion I can arrive at is, that his message has been intercepted.

Friday, December 10th.

Two of the chief warriors of Henry Prince's Band were introduced by him to-day. There were the usual protestations of loyalty to the Queen, and readiness to fight her enemies. These men live up on the Red River, in the disaffected district, and say that their families are in fear of the French half-breeds.

To do the Indians justice, they will, I believe, be found loyal to the Government throughout the Territory.

Messrs. Arkland and Elwood arrived from Winnipeg to-day. They report the French continuing to arrest Canadians wherever they find them, and that even they themselves, although having taken no part, feel that they may be arrested any moment. They bring no news regarding the imprisoned Canadians, but report that the French have commenced the search for and taking possession of, arms in private houses, asserting their intention of going through the Settlement for that purpose.

Reported to the Lieutenant-Governor sending this Record up to the present time, and stating my intention to join him at Pembina at an early day; and trusted the Papers to two of Henry Prince's Indians, selected by him for that purpose.

SIR,

Pembina, December 17th, 1869.

I have the honour to report my arrival at this place on the evening of the 15th instant, having come from Prairie Portage across the Plains.

Having received, on the evening of the 10th instant, a message from Mr. Sutherland, to say that there was no prospect of getting the French leaders to agree to a meeting, I decided to leave the following day to report to you in person, in accordance with my instructions, and completed the necessary arrangements, engaging a guide, &c. &c.

In informing Mr. Hart as to my intentions, I directed him to pay off Chief "Prince," and his Band, the day of my leaving, and vacate the Fort. With regard to the supplies which had been obtained, the provisions, Mr. Hart was given to understand, would be taken and credited in account by the Hudson Bay Company.

All blankets issued were to be collected and stored. The arms and ammunition which had been distributed, where the parties were reliable men, to be allowed to remain in possession, individual receipts being given therefor, as being held subject to Government order. The powder and bullets which had been called in I directed Mr. Hart to say to the parties from whom obtained, that they were at their service again, not being required by the Government; that if thought safer at the Magazine at the Fort, they could remain there till expedient to be removed.

I directed Mr. Hart to return to the survey upon which he had previously been engaged, advising him not to go beyond the limits of the English portion of the Settlement. At the same time, I fear he may have been interrupted, and, possibly, arrested by the French party.

During the night a report reached me that a body of Sioux, said to be 500, were on their way to the Settlement, and had got as far as Poplar Point, bent upon commencing war "upon their own hook."

Believing that matters in the Red River Settlement were sufficiently complicated without adding in a raid from the Sioux; and fearing that, should the report have had good foundation, Major Boulton, who left at 4 A.M. on the 10th instant, might not meet the "war party," as he was to go straight through to the Portage by the "Gros Isle," I decided to investigate the matter, and, if the report proved true, to use my best endeavours to turn the Indians back, and thus prevent a calamity in which, probably, French and English might all be involved. I therefore left the Fort at 2 A.M., changed horses at the town of Winnipeg, and drove through, without meeting interruption of any kind, to Poplar Point, arriving at Mr. George Taylor's about 1 P. M.

At Mr. Taylor's I met Captain Webb, and Mr. Newcombe, actively engaged in connection with the Company, which had its head-quarters at this point.

Captain Webb handed me his Report (see Copy herewith, dated 11th December), which he had prepared, and was intending to send off to-day.

I found about 100 Lodges of Sioux encamped here and between here and Prairie Portage; and at the time of my arrival Major Boulton, who reached this point the evening previous, and at once acted upon the orders given him, was holding a Council with them, at which "Little Fox," Head Chief of the Cree nation, was also present.

The reports which had reached the Settlement as to the Sioux were entirely without foundation. They asserted themselves as on the Government side, but said they had had no intention of "making war" without being first asked to do so by the Governor.

"Little Fox," who visited me at Mr. Taylor's, after the Council, is a man of considerable mind, and may be fully relied on as loyal. He is much respected by both whites and Indians; and, independent of the control he has over his own people, has a great deal of influence with the Sioux, and other tribes of the Plains.

Major Boulton, at my request, distributed some presents to the Chiefs, dividing among them, also, a small supply of provisions.

Wishing to call on the leading people at High Bluff and the Portage, to explain the reason why the movement was to be given up, I continued my journey, and called, during the afternoon, on some of the principal men at the first-named place, who took part in the address to the Lieutenant-Governor, and who have latterly identified themselves with the Volunteer movement.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

CANADA.

Mr. Hamilton, M.S.C., under Captain Webb, was zealously drilling the Company here, and reported very favourably of the men.

Arrived at the Portage at 6 P. M. * * * * *

In view of abandoning the call, it is fortunate that Captain Webb had, so far, accumulated no surplus supplies. The beef and flour, not more than a barrel or two was presented to the "Fox" and the Sioux. I gave Captain Webb instructions similar to those of Mr. Hart as to blankets, guns, and ammunition.

It was evident that the abandonment of the movement did not meet with much favour in that Settlement; the numbers of men enrolled, however, were only ninety-nine, and alone would have been insufficient to effect anything of consequence.

The Force altogether organized, and, more or less, drilled under my commission, stands very nearly as follows:—

No.	Head Quarters.	Officers.	Men.	Approximate Days' Drilled.
1	Stone Fort	3	71	4½
2	St. Andrew's	3	50	3
3	St. Paul's	3	35	1
4	Kildonan	3	74	3½
5	Winnipeg (supposed)	3	40	No return either of Strength or Drill.
6	Poplar Point	3	31
7	High Bluff	3	32
8	Portage La Prairie	3	36
	Chief Prince and Men	1	50	10
		25	419	Average 4 days.

Gave Captain Webb instructions similar to those of Mr. Hart as to continuing the survey through the present winter. His operation, however, will necessarily be limited to that part of the Settlement from Poplar Point to Prairie Portage.

Finding that a guide could be obtained to take me direct from the Portage to Pembina, I made the necessary arrangements, and left the following morning at 7 A. M.

The trip across the Plains occupied more time than expected, the ponies being in many places impeded by crust on the snow. The third day, also, was stormy, and it was not till the evening of the fourth day that I arrived at my destination.

SIR,

Fort Garry, 4th December, 1869.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 3rd instant, making inquiries as to the number of guns which might be had from the Hudson Bay Company's posts near the Settlement. In reply I beg to say that at present I cannot give any very definite information, as the stock, at no time very large at any of those posts, will at present entirely depend on what the wants of the Indians have been in the autumn, but there may be still on hand at those posts as follows:— At Fort Alexander, possibly ten; at White Horse Plain, from ten to fifteen; at Point du Chine, from four to six; at Portage la Prairie must be very few. From here I could supply a very large number if I could get them out, which for more than a week past I have been watching an opportunity to do. Had it not been for the excitement about the pork there would have been in all probability sixty guns in one of the outhouses here, which is without the wall, besides a good supply sent to Oak Point, but which, owing to the appearance of the people here, Dr. Cowan caused to be countermanded when the sledges were loading. I enclose four orders for the delivery of all arms to your messengers having authority from you to receipt for them.

Memorandum of Orders for the Enrolled Canadians now in the Town of Winnipeg.

Stone Fort, December 4th, 1869.

These men are not in a position where they can be supported by any force of which I am at present aware should they be attacked by the rioters under Riel, which seems to me likely to occur. I am convinced the object of the latter is now to provoke them beyond endurance, and so precipitate a collision, in which he would try to show that the Canadians were the aggressors, with the hope that in such case he might obtain the aid of the rest of the French party.

I have therefore to request that the Canadians will withdraw from the village and come down to the Scotch Settlement, where I will meet them, and establish them in defensible quarters, in which they will serve as an outpost, and under circumstances where they can be readily reinforced if necessary.

They had better come down this evening, and report to me or to Major Boulton at the Rev. Mr. Black's.

To the Enrolled Canadians at Winnipeg.

MY DEAR DR. SCHULTZ,

Stone Fort, December 4th, 1869.

From the occurrences of last night the anxiety of Riel is evident to have the Canadians draw the first blood, which latter would be anything but desirable just now. I have come to the conclusion that they must be withdrawn, and have therefore ordered it by bearer. I shall go up and meet them at the Scotch Church, and establish them there as an outpost, under Major Boulton. I see no other course for you to pursue but to send Mrs. Schultz to a friend's house as you propose, shut up your premises, and let the property take its chance. As to the Government provisions, should the guard be still over them, I shall not, as representing the Government, require them to remain there any longer. They had better therefore lock up the place and leave. I would be glad to have them come down with the others and enrol in the force at the outpost, but will leave that to themselves.

Were my force organized I would not allow Canadians to be used as you have been there, but I am not at all in a position to act, and regret to say things move but slowly here. You speak of enthusiasm. I have not seen it yet with any body but Prince's men.

Dr. Schultz.

MEMORANDUM from Major Boulton.

Lower Fort, 4th December, 1869.

I have instructed Canadians to withdraw from the town, and propose to put them,—say in the Scotch Church, if the Rev. Mr. Black is willing. They will remain there with as many additional men as you may think necessary, obtained in the neighbourhood. They will serve as an outpost and a rendezvous for the loyal in case of any demonstration being made by Riel's party in the Lower Settlement. This post will be under your immediate command. I have sent forward a supply consisting of fifty blankets, 20 guns, 2 quarters of beef, 4 bags of flour, 1 cooking stove, furniture and pipes, 10 lbs. of tea, 1 bag of bullets, 2000 caps.

Anything further required you can probably procure there; if not let me know. Organize the men as you think best. Report to me every day if possible. Should Mr. Black not be willing, and you can find any other easily defensible house take it instead of the Church. Let your sentries be particular to note movements along the high road, and send forward advices of any such at once. I have received from parties now with me who left Fort Garry late this afternoon information that such a move in this direction is contemplated.

J. S. DENNIS.

P.S.—Write me fully and candidly the present feeling in the Scotch Settlement to-morrow. Hire any transport necessary.

MEMORANDUM.

Stone Fort, Lower Settlement, December 4th, 1869.

Mr. James McKay tells me the French party say they are willing to obey the Queen's Commands, but assert that the Honourable William McDougall is not duly appointed and sworn into office as Her Majesty's Representative, and he thinks if they could be satisfied of this they would offer no further opposition to that honourable gentleman entering the Settlement.

If there is any doubt upon this point humiliating to the Queen's Representative to be called on to show his Commission, Mr. McDougall, I think, would be disposed to consent to even this rather than be the cause of bloodshed among the people. I would, therefore, make the following proposition. I will go to Pembina and obtain the Commission, and place the same in the hands of Governor McTavish, together with the Certificate of the Crown Law Adviser at present with the Lieutenant-Governor, that the latter has been duly sworn into office; upon this the French party at once to disband, and offer no further opposition to Mr. McDougall's entering the Settlement. Upon the leaders of the French party signing an agreement to the above effect, I will give orders to cease any further steps towards arming by the English-speaking people in the Territory.

SIR.

Winnipeg, December 4th, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you that I have received your communication containing Memoranda to the Canadians. Dr. Lynch, Mr. Snow, Dr. Schultz, and myself have consulted together, and have come to the conclusion that under the circumstances (that we have 70 men and 65 good arms on the premises), we have a strong position, and could resist successfully a strong attack. It is now 9 o'clock, the men are all posted, and the Rebels know it. There are no men moving about, and no indications of any attack, and a retreat would or might inspire the Rebels with more confidence than they appear at present to possess. Your Memorandum to the Canadians says "they had better come down this evening," which apparently gives us the opportunity of using our own judgment under existing circumstances. I wrote to you this afternoon Mr. Prudhomme's house is a large one and empty, and could be occupied and filled with provisions and stores. I will go down to-morrow and see you, and receive your further orders. I have written a letter to Mr. Pinkham, at St. James's, to call a meeting, that I might enrol volunteers and drill them,

DEAR COLONEL DENNIS,

Town Winnipeg, Saturday night.

Events have a good deal changed since the writing of this morning. The firm stand seems to have had its effect, and to-day nothing of moment occurred. This afternoon President Bruce visited me (no guard) at 4 p.m. Said he had come to explain to me and to ask explanation, reminded me of the "bon accord" in times past, and of the services I had rendered in times of sickness, and he asked me where was the sticking point in their resolutions. On my mentioning the insulting nature of the last one he said that they had not so meant it, and that I must have an incorrect copy,—spoke slightly of Riel; said they could not go to see Governor at Pembina, but would like to see you. I told him that I thought you would see him alone, as he proposed, without Riel, but thought that Riel would spoil everything; assented to this, and said that after he returned from Stinking River to-morrow he would see me and arrange a meeting. I give this for what it is worth; other indications point to its probability; with thanks for your kind wishes as to Mrs. Schultz.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,

P.S.—Captain Boulton writes the news of most of the Canadians here, and I think the altered circumstances will probably induce you to countermand or modify order.

DEAR SIR,

Headingley, December 3rd, 1869.

As Mr. Farmer, who brought the Proclamation here, intimated to me that you wished me to give some information concerning the loyalty of this parish, I have the honour to inform you that nearly all the people are loyal to the Queen, and wish to become a part of the Dominion of Canada. I have spoken to a number of persons lately about the matter, and all have expressed their willingness to enlist as volunteers, to bring in and establish the Honourable William McDougall as Governor in these Territories, and also to assist in preserving British law and order amongst us. A paper to that effect is now being signed at Mr. John Taylor's house. I am sure if you were only to come among us, or if any one were to come with proper authority to call out volunteers, I do not think any one in the parish would refuse to go, except a few individuals who are of no account anywhere, and who would do well to vanish into "thin air" as soon as possible. I enclose a copy of Resolutions passed at a public meeting held at Mr. Tait's house, November 29th, i.e., before the Proclamation was issued. You will see from them that the parish proved loyal then,—it is much more so now since the Proclamation has been issued.

CANADA.

I may remark that in reference to the first Resolution it is apparently defective. To express the wish of the meeting the latter part of it would read thus:—"until the entry of the Canadian Government, and then we will support and strengthen the said Canadian Government."

With best wishes for the success of your undertaking,

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,

(I)

SIR,

Winnipeg, December 4th, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you I proceeded to Kildonan School-House. Owing to a break down on the road I was detained an hour. I found the School-House full, and proceeded at once to explain the object of my coming. I read your commission and Service Roll heading. After concluding speaking, some of the older men questioned me as to the legality of it. I argued the point, and failed quite to satisfy them, though the majority were against the legal quibble, but I judged it best to satisfy parties, and agreed to postpone the meeting till 10 o'clock this morning, to allow said parties to get Judge Black's opinion (I told them the only legal authorities—the Governor, Mr. Richards, and Judge Black—were satisfied of the legality).

I met them again this morning at 10 o'clock, though not so numerous. Judge Black had given his opinion. These men were perfectly satisfied, and came forward and headed the roll. I took down sixty names then and there, formed a company, appointed officers and four sergeants. One officer and two sergeants to the district in which their squad or subdivision reside. The people were numerous, and are to assemble on Monday at 1 o'clock, when I expect over 100 men to be there, and I will have two companies officered and formed, and ready to turn out at a call from their lieutenants and ensigns. I have come up here to assist Dr. Schultz and the party. I shall put the men here in a thorough state of organisation, and find out the amount of ammunition and arms. We are going to assemble here and keep guard all night, and resist attack, but I shall not allow any one to provoke it. Will you send up ammunition, &c., to Mr. * * *, as we ought to have it handy near here. I think we ought to have provisions, &c., stored there for necessity. It will hold a great number, and when the Portage people come down it will be required.

The people here are very anxious, and everywhere wish the organisation to be completed as soon as possible, for the French gain strength by time. There was quite a demonstration last night. Mr. Boyd's place also was placed at our disposal for stores or men.

If you send me any orders to carry out I will do so without delay. We shall have about seventy to-night to defend this place, I think. Owing to my break down last night and hurry I had not time to leave your letter for Judge Black, but sent it this morning. Everything is cheering for numbers. Guns are wanted. If the spare arms from the Fort were sent to Mr. * * *, or elsewhere, they would be handy, and many men want them. I will take steps to have them securely stored when they arrive.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.,

C. W. BOULTON, Major.

(K)

SIR,

Mr. * * *, December 6th, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you I arrived here last night about 11 o'clock, and was met by a messenger telling me to be careful how I went into town. I accordingly left my horse and cutter at Mr. * * *, and went on foot and got around by the river, and entered Dr. Schultz's house about 12 o'clock. The town was full of Frenchmen, and they kept parading about, and placed sentries all around the Doctor's, and kept us on the alert all night. There were about seventy or seventy-five in the Doctor's house. The greatest number of French who left the Fort and entered the town was ninety-six. They were counted as they passed up. They kept coming and going all night. I assembled the officers of the company, with Dr. Schultz and Mr. Snow, and told them your orders, and pointed out the reasons why they should not remain on the premises any longer, so they agreed to leave. I left directions as to their mode of procedure, and gave strict orders not to be later than two or three o'clock at the outside in leaving.

I then left with Hallett to go to St. James' Parish meeting at nine o'clock, and came across the Prairie to Kildonan, and I drilled about 100 men, and had the provisions, blankets, &c., put into Mr. * * * as the most convenient place to put them in to await your further orders. I then went back to town about four o'clock, but could not enter to see what was delaying them, and heard that

Dr. Schultz house was closely invested, at least that men were all around it. I met Mr. * * * going in, and asked him to let me know what was going on.

CANADA.

I went over to his house, and he tells me he did not get in either, at least he thought it imprudent to enter. I feel a little apprehension about them. I do not know why they have not come out. If they were to leave, I do not think the French would fire the first shot, but they are beginning to look very ugly, and Bishop McCrae tells me there cannot be less than 600 armed men in connection with the Fort. It is thought that some attempt at a peaceful solution should be made by a discussion of their rights as printed. Riel has showed such strength of force, that as an enemy he is now not to be despised. I am only giving now to you opinions that I hear in conversations. The people about here express willingness to take a stand—but apparently a panic is easily created. There will be two companies nearly in this parish, St. Paul's had forty-three names subscribed, Hallett's Parish only gave sixteen names—all good ones.

The meeting was small. Mr. * * * says that the Parish is a good deal in the hands of Bannatyne and Mr. McKenny, which accounts for it. I was intending to go into town to night to see if I could reach Dr. Schultz's house, or hear anything of them, but as Mr. * * * has gone in I have thought better to remain here, as I am an object of suspicion, and would be detained a prisoner.

I have strictly enjoined repeatedly all the Canadians to suffer insult rather than provoke attack or fire a shot; and I think they all see the necessity of it, and will be very careful. I heard they do not number over twenty-five or thirty to-night, as several left, I suppose, when it became known it was decided to evacuate—though I told Dr. Lynch not to let it be known till the preparations were made. I enclose a letter from the Bishop. The French apparently wish to avoid clashing with the English and Scotch, and if a bold stand is made through the organization it may bring about a peaceful solution. They say the French cannot continue in force as their families will be left or are left in a very destitute state. I will be about in the morning to find out the state of affairs. If the Canadians do leave, the town as well as the Fort will be entirely in the hands of the French. I have given you an account of everything I think of worthy of note.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,

(Recites Commission from Lieutenant-Governor McDougall to Lieutenant-Colonel Dennis).

By virtue of the above Commission from the Lieutenant-Governor, I now hereby call on and order all loyal men of the North-West Territories to assist me by every means in their power to carry out the same, and thereby restore public peace and order, and uphold the supremacy of the Queen in this part of Her Majesty's Dominion. Given under my hand at the Stone Fort, Lower Settlement, this 6th day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1869.

MEMORANDUM.

Stone Fort, 2:30 P.M., 6th December, 1869.

I am told the rebels are paraded in force in the Town of Winnipeg, and are acting in a manner calculated to provoke a collision with the loyal party.

I cannot be a party to precipitating such an event just at the present time, and must therefore reiterate my orders of the 4th instant to the enrolled Canadians to leave the town, and establish themselves at Kildonan School-House, where there is a supply of provisions, and where they will have assistance at hand if attacked.

Major Boulton or, in his absence, Dr. Lynch, must see to this being done. Of course, if the attempt to come down would bring on a fight, they may remain where they are, but not encouraging hostilities. Let them come down under cover of the evening.

To the Enrolled Canadians at the Winnipeg.

Lieutenant-Colonel.

DEAR SIR,

6th November (December), 1869.

As an opportunity offers, I drop you this line to express my strong conviction that you should not make any aggressive movement at present.

CANADA.

Pray do nothing aggressively, I am still hopeful of peace; a civil war is altogether too dear a price to pay for anything wanted on either side—many others think so too.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,
&c. &c. &c.

Yours, &c.,
(Signed) JAMES ROSS.

P.S.—You may have a deputation from the English-speaking people to-day or to-morrow, urging that you should make no aggressive movement. I say you may. I cannot tell till this afternoon.

In haste, &c.,
(Signed) J. R.

(K 3.)

MY DEAR SIR,

Stone Fort, 6th December, 1869.

I have this moment received your note. I think it my duty, under my Commission, not to relax preparations, to put down, by force of arms if necessary, the present outrageous condition of things in the Settlement. At the same time, I will be glad to see the gentlemen of whom you speak. I will not act on the aggressive so long as there is to my mind a satisfactory reason for further delay. It would be the greatest possible relief to me to see peace restored without resorting to force, but there has been so much temporizing that it would almost seem to me the Insurgent party are now actually drawing moral strength from that very source.

Believe me, &c.

James Ross, Esq., Winnipeg.

(L.)

SIR,

Lower Fort Garry, December 9th, 1869.

I have the honour to state for your information my knowledge of the occurrences of the past few days. According to instructions, I proceeded, on Friday the 3rd, to the Scotch Settlement for the purpose of organizing companies in the parish. The following day I received a letter asking me to come up to Dr. Schultz's—that a number of men had assembled there the previous evening to defend the place, as an attack was feared from the French. I arrived there in the evening after my other duties had been performed, and found they had been re-inforced, and numbered about sixty men, Canadians and others. The cause assigned to me for the assembling was that the French had been drinking in the Saloons, and in that state might make an attack. I took down the names of all the men, and divided them into subdivisions and sections. They chose their officers and non-commissioned officers, and I distributed them about the houses so that they might all be held in command. Between nine and ten your orders came for the men to withdraw. As it was late, and the town was quiet, and there were a number of ladies and women in the house, I thought better to remain where we were. The Memorandum was not communicated to all the men, as they were distributed and sleeping in three houses. The town was quiet all night, and the following morning I went down with Mr. Snow, to see you, leaving everything quiet.

As it was Sunday, I told those who had no houses to go to, to remain quiet till I returned. I did not return that night until 12 o'clock, owing to my horse breaking down. I got into Dr. Schultz's, and found that the French had increased in numbers, and the position was assuming an aspect of hostility, and one detrimental to the interests of the cause you were engaged in, and that night ninety-six French left the Fort, and entered the town and paraded about. I gave all the men orders on no account to provoke attack. The night passed away without any demonstration on the part of the French. On the following morning I assembled the officers of the company, and some others, and communicated your orders, and pointed out the futility of remaining there. That they were acting on their own responsibility and contrary to your orders. I took the opinion of each one, and they all agreed to leave. I accordingly requested Dr. Schultz to take immediate steps to remove his family and the other ladies, and told the officers to let the men either go singly with their arms throughout the day, or, if not with their arms, to wait till all was ready, and march out in a body, which I was satisfied could be done with ease, as the French wanted them to leave the premises and nothing more. I told the officers not to give the orders to the men till all was ready, lest it might get out and a demonstration be made by the French; and as there was a number of females on the premises, they had to be looked after first. I told them to leave as soon as possible, but on no account to be later than three o'clock. I then left with Mr. Hallett to attend a meeting at St. James's Parish, and afterwards to drill some companies at Kildonan Parish. I took possession of Mr. Prudhomme's house for the reception of the men, and made a few arrangements. I then made an attempt to get into town again about four o'clock, but could not. I then wrote a letter to you, informing you of the state of affairs, and that I felt a little apprehensive about them but not much, as I was satisfied if they would retire they might do so. Knowing the French would not fire the first shot. When the position was first assumed it was only to protect the premises and Government property from a comparatively few French, but on Sunday night they appear to have increased greatly. Several men left,* on Monday,

DEAR COLONAL DENNIS,

Bishop's Court, December 6th, 1869.

I grieve to say that the state of things is assuming daily a graver aspect. I am greatly disappointed at the manifestations of loyalty, and a determination to support the Government of Mr. McDougall on the part of the English population. Instead of a breaking down of the force of the Insurgents, I feel certain from my observations at Fort Garry to-day, and from information from Mr. McTavish, and others, I can fully rely on, that over 600 men are now in arms, and that they are well armed. I see no reason to depend upon want of courage or determination on the part of these men. In addition to this strong exhibition of force, there is a belief, apparently on good authority, of a determination to revenge loss of life if they are attacked, by house to house massacring, or at any rate by individual assassination.

I feel, therefore, that success in an attack with such forces as you can bring together, with nothing of the common action the Insurgents have, is very problematical, and that the warfare is likely to be such that a victory will only be less fatal to the Settlement, and the interests of the Canadian Government than a defeat.

You must not suppose that this comes from one who is timorous; though I never said it before, I went to the first meeting of the Council of Assiniboia prepared to recommend a forcible putting down of the Insurrection, and when you came in I hoped that the exhibition of force would be sufficient, but the force of the Insurgents has only grown with opposition, and is now, I believe, quite a match for all that can be brought together against them. I would earnestly advise, therefore, the giving up of any idea of attacking the French position at Fort Garry at present, and also any idea of seizing by stealth on any rebel. Put away such counsels for a time at least. I feel that the result to be anticipated would be very disastrous. I see everything to be gained by delay—at any rate, there would be some opportunity perhaps of bringing about some direct communication between Governor McDougall and the disaffected people. I think you should on every account bring that about—further it would be well not to act till you ascertain clearly the mind of the Canadian Ministry and people on the way of settling this affair; and I think something is due to the people from Governor McDougall. I, for one, am this moment, perfectly ignorant of any detail of the character or policy of his Government. Personally, I do not care for this, I am not only fervently loyal to the Queen, but I have unquestioning confidence in the management of Canada. I know all will be right, still there is not less a great want—a very conciliatory attitude is what is wanted from Governor McDougall, and a plain setting forth of how the Government is to be conducted, meeting as far as possible any of the wishes expressed by the disaffected persons, and perhaps referring others to Canada—but promising a generous consideration of the whole grievances.

This may not be altogether palatable, but the crisis is a grave one for Canada, and much wisdom is needed. I would not so write, did I not feel certain that if the present numbers of Insurgents keep up, an attack is not feasible; and did I not also feel that some attempt should be made by those having authority and knowledge to enter into explanations with them before making any attack. The late Government of Assiniboia could not do this, for it had no information—all that could be done was to counsel loyal obedience, but at this time something more is called for than that.

With kindest regards,

I am, &c.,

Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Dennis,

DEAR COLONEL DENNIS,

Bishop's Court, December 7th, 1869.

There is a report that you think of coming up at once with the force you have. I do not suppose that this is the case, but I am sure any effort at present is hopeless. They now hold about 60 prisoners, and are more than 600 in number, and elated. You must be quiet, probably the lives of the prisoners may depend upon this; the truth is I am afraid nothing can be done by you, only evil is now to be apprehended from action.

I am very sincerely, &c.,

DEAR COLONEL DENNIS,

I most fully concur in all the Bishop says.

THE RED RIVER MASS MEETINGS.

OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS.

(From the report of the 'New Nation'.)

A grand mass meeting of the inhabitants of the Settlement was held at Upper Fort Garry on the 19th ult. So many were present that the assembly had to be held in the open air, and this, when the thermometer stood at about 20 deg. below zero. The meeting lasted some five hours.

On motion of President RIEL, seconded by PIERRE LEVIELLE, Mr. THOMAS BUNN was called to the chair.

In opening the meeting, the CHAIRMAN expressed it as his opinion that this was the most important meeting ever held in the Settlement. The most vital interests were at stake, and he therefore hoped that the utmost order and good humour would prevail.

Mr. RIEL was elected Interpreter; and, on the motion of Mr. ANGUS McKAY, seconded by Mr. O'DONOGHUE, Judge BLACK was appointed Secretary to the meeting.

Colonel DE SALABERRY was present both days.

The CHAIRMAN introduced to the meeting Mr. DONALD A. SMITH, who came forward and read the following document, which, he said, had been handed to him in Canada:—

" SIR,

" Ottawa, Dec. 10th, 1869.

" I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor-General has been pleased to appoint you Special Commissioner to inquire into and report on the cause and extent of the armed obstruction offered at Red River, in the North-West Territory, to the peaceable entrance of the Hon. W. McDougall, the gentleman selected to be Lieut.-Governor of the Territory, and to bring about its union with Canada. Also, to inquire into and report on the cause of the discontent and dissatisfaction at the proposed changes which exist there. Also to explain to the inhabitants the principle upon which the Government of Canada intend to govern the country, and remove any misapprehensions which may exist on the subject. And also to take such steps, in concert with Hon. Mr. McDougall and Governor McTavish, for effecting the peaceable transfer of the Government from the Hudson Bay authorities to the Government of the Dominion.

" You are to consider this communication as a letter of appointment as Government Commissioner. With this letter you will receive a copy of the letter of the instructions given to Mr. McDougall on leaving Ottawa, dated the 28th September. Also a copy of a further letter to Mr. McDougall, dated the 7th inst., and a copy of the Proclamation issued by His Excellency the Governor-General, addressed to the inhabitants of the North-West Territory by command of Her Majesty.

" You will proceed with all despatch to Pembina, and arrange with Mr. McDougall as to your future course of action, and then go on to Fort Garry, and take such steps, after such consultation, as may seem most expedient. You will, of course, consult with Governor McTavish, and endeavour to arrange one concerted scheme between Mr. McDougall, the Hudson Bay authorities, and yourself, for the pacification of the country.

" As the information coming here is necessarily imperfect, and the circumstances at the Red River are continually changing, it is not considered expedient to hamper you with more specific instructions.

" You will therefore act, according to the best of your judgment, with Mr. McDougall, and keep me fully informed as to the progress of events there. You will also offer suggestions as to the best mode of dealing with the Indian tribes in the country.

" I have, &c.,

" JOSEPH HOWE,

" Secretary of State for the Provinces."

Mr. RIEL translated the letter into French.

CANADA. Mr. SMITH then read the following letter sent by the Governor-General of Canada to him (Smith) personally. It was handed to him in Ottawa:—

“MY DEAR MR. SMITH,

“Ottawa, Dec. 12th, 1869.

“I learn with satisfaction that you have placed your services at the disposal of the Canadian Government, and that you are proceeding to Red River to give the parties that are at variance the benefit of your experience—

Mr. RIEL is that letter public or private?

Mr. SMITH.—It is a letter to me as Commissioner.

Some confusion ensued, several people spoke at the same time, and ultimately the CHAIRMAN ordered silence, and said that the document was public and ought to be read.

Mr. SMITH continued the reading of the letter: “Give the parties that are at variance the benefit of your experience, influence, and mediation.

“In my capacity as Her Majesty’s representative in the British North American possessions, I have addressed letters to Governor McTavish, the Protestant Bishop of Rupert’s Land, and the Vicar General, who acts in lieu of the Roman Catholic Bishop, during his presence in Rome. I have sent them copies of the message received by telegraph from Her Majesty’s Secretary of State, which forms the staple of the Proclamation addressed to her subjects in the North-West Territory. You will observe that it calls upon all who have any complaints to make or wishes to express, to address themselves to me as Her Majesty’s representative. And you may state, with the utmost confidence that the Imperial Government has no intention of acting otherwise—or permitting others to act otherwise—than in perfect good faith towards the inhabitants of the Red River district of the North-West.

“The people may rely upon it that respect and protection will be extended to the different religious persuasions, that titles to every description of property will be perfectly guarded, and that all the franchises which have existed, or which the people may prove themselves qualified to exercise, shall be duly continued or liberally conferred.

“In declaring the desire and determination of Her Majesty’s Cabinet, you may very safely use the terms of the ancient formula, that “right shall be done in all cases.”

“Wishing you a prosperous journey and all success in your mission of peace and good will,

“I remain faithfully yours,

“JOHN YOUNG.”

Mr. RIEL.—It is not signed “Governor.”

Mr. SMITH.—It is written and signed “in my capacity as Her Majesty’s representative.

Mr. RIEL translated the letter into French.

Mr. SMITH then asked Vicar-General Thiebault for some letters from the Government of Canada to Governor McTavish and the Bishop of Rupert’s Land, which had been confided to his (the Vicar-General’s) care in Canada. I (said Mr. Smith) have been authorised by Governor McTavish to make this request. In explanation I would say that the Vicar-General and Colonel De Salaberry preceded me from Canada by a few days. It was intended that we should have had communication on the way, and that being the case, for convenience sake the letters were given to the Vicar-General. The letter to Mr. McTavish is explanatory of the views of the Canadian Government, and shows what the Queen wished to say to her faithful subjects here.

Mr. RIEL.—I do not want the documents to be read. (Cries of “We will have it,” and cheers.)

CHAIRMAN.—Silence.

Judge BLACK protested against the documents being withheld from the meeting.

A VOICE.—Who has the documents?

ANOTHER VOICE.—Mr. O’Donoghue has them.

CHAIRMAN.—The Vicar-General states that Mr. O’Donoghue seized them, and has got them.

A VOICE.—We want them.

Mr. RIEL.—I ask the Vicar-General if either of the letters alluded to belong to Mr. Smith?

The VICAR-GENERAL.—No.

Mr. SMITH.—Mr. McTavish authorised me to ask for his letter.

Bishop MACHRAY.—I will ask my letter from Mr. O’Donoghue, and I think he will give it.

Judge BLACK urged the production of the letters.

Mr. RIEL said that the Judge was out of his rôle as Secretary in addressing the meeting.

Judge BLACK said he had no idea that Mr. Riel could teach him his duty.

The CHAIRMAN addressed the meeting, and Mr. O’Donoghue protested.

Judge BLACK.—If business is not allowed to proceed regularly, I will resign.

Mr. O’DONOGHUE complained that the Chairman would not allow him to address the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN said he had no objection to Mr. O’Donoghue’s doing so, when he was in order.

Mr. BALLANTYNE.—As a Red River settler, I ask the Chairman to put the question to the meeting, whether Mr. O’Donoghue is to be requested to produce the letters.

The CHAIRMAN put the question in the form of a resolution, and it was carried amid cheers.

Mr. BALLANTYNE, in the name of the people of Red River, then demanded of the Vicar-General that he should ask Mr. O’Donoghue for the letters.

Mr. RIEL seconded the demand.

The VICAR-GENERAL made the required demand.

Mr. O’DONOGHUE.—Since the demand is made in its present form, I may say that I took the letters by order and delivered them to Secretary Schmidt.

Some debate ensued as to whether it would not do to hunt up these letters next day. But ultimately Mr. O’Donoghue and Pierre Levielle went in search of the documents and found them. He then delivered them up to the meeting.

Before reading any additional documents, Mr. SMITH said he wanted one which was in Mr. McTavish's possession and had been sent for.

Mr. RIEL moved that any other documents Mr. Smith had to produce should be read in the meantime.

Bishop MACHRAY moved in amendment that if it did not suit Mr. Smith to proceed with the reading he should be allowed to await the arrival of the documents he wanted.

Rev. Mr. BLACK seconded the amendment.

Mr. SMITH.—The paper I want is a Proclamation from the Governor-General, copies of which came into the Settlement, but where they are I do not know.

Archdeacon McLEAN said that if Mr. Smith was willing it might be well to hear what he had to read at once.

Mr. SMITH.—One of the documents I have is a copy of a paper delivered to me. It is a communication from the Queen, our Sovereign. It is the telegraph message referred to in one of the papers addressed to me, and which was put in my hands in Canada, very shortly after being received from England. It is a message from Earl Granville to Sir John Young, dated "Nov. 26."

"Make what use you think best of what follows:—The Queen has heard with surprise and regret that certain misguided persons have banded together to oppose by force the entry of the future Lieutenant-Governor into our Territory in Red River. Her Majesty does not distrust the loyalty of her subjects in that Settlement; and can only ascribe to misunderstanding, or misrepresentation, their opposition to a change planned for their advantage.

"She relies on your Government to use every effort to explain whatever misunderstandings may have arisen,—to ascertain their wants, and conciliate the good-will of the people of Red River Settlement. But, in the meantime, she authorizes you to testify to them the sorrow and displeasure with which she views the unreasonable and lawless proceedings which have taken place, and her expectation that if any parties have desires to express or complaints to make respecting their condition and prospects, they will address themselves to the Governor-General of Canada.

"The Queen expects from Her Representative that, as he will be always ready to receive well-founded grievances, so will he exercise all the power and authority she entrusted to him, in the support of order, and the suppression of unlawful disturbances."

On motion of Mr. ROBERT TAIT, seconded by Mr. MERCER, the Meeting adjourned till 10 o'clock the following day.

At noon, the following day, a still larger assemblage gathered at Fort Garry, further to hear Mr. Commissioner Smith.

Mr. THOMAS BUNN was again called to the chair.

Messrs. C. NOLIN, GRANT, JOSE MILIEN, TOUSSAINT LUCIE, VERMET, C. LARONEE, XAVIER PAGET and C. LAFONTAINE were appointed to keep order in the crowd.

Mr. RIEL moved that JUDGE BLACK resume the office of Secretary.

JUDGE BLACK declined.

On motion of Mr. R. McBEATH, seconded by Mr. A. DAHL, Mr. A. G. B. Bannatyne was appointed Secretary.

FATHER LESTANE came forward and said, amid cheers:—We have been good friends to this day in the whole Settlement, and I want to certify here that we will be good friends to-night.

Mr. Riel translated the remarks into French, and the Rev. Henry Cochrane into Indian.

Mr. SMITH again came forward to finish reading the documents. This, he said, is a Letter from the Governor-General to Mr. McTavish:—

SIR,

"Government House, Ottawa,
"December 6th, 1869.

"I have the honour to address you in my capacity as Representative of the Queen, and Governor-General of Her Majesty's British North American possessions, and enclose, for your information, a Copy of a Message received from Earl Granville, in reply to the account which I sent officially of the events occurring in Red River Settlement. The Message conveys the matured opinion of the Imperial Cabinet. The Proclamation I have issued is based on it; and you will observe that it refers all who have desires to express, or complaints to make, to me, as invested with authority on behalf of the British Government. And the inhabitants of Rupert's Land, of all classes and persuasions, may rest assured that Her Majesty's Government has no intention of interfering with, or setting aside, or allowing others to interfere with, the religion, the rights, or the franchise hitherto enjoyed, or to which they may hereafter prove themselves equal.

"Make what use you think best of this communication, and of the enclosed.

"I have, &c.

"W. McTavish, Esq.,
"Governor of Assiniboia."

"(Signed) JOHN YOUNG.

Mr. SMITH.—The next Document I will read is a communication from Mr. Howe to Mr. McDougall. I read it, not because I have any connection with Mr. McDougall, but because it is referred to in my Commission:—

"Office of the Secretary of State of the Provinces,
"Ottawa, December 7th, 1869.

SIR,

"I had the honour to address to you Despatches on the 19th and 26th November, but for fear they have miscarried, I duplicate them to you. I have the honour also to send you an Order-in-Council, passed this day, on the subject of customs duties.

"You will now be in a position to assure the residents of the North-West Territories:

"1. That all their civil and religious liberties will be sacredly respected.

CANADA.

"2. That all their properties, rights, and privileges of every kind, as enjoyed under the Government of the Hudson Bay Company, will be continued.

"3. That in granting titles to land now occupied by the settlers, the most liberal policy will be pursued.

"4. That the present tariff of customs duties will be continued for two years from the 1st of January next, except in the case of spirituous liquors, as set forth in the Order-in-Council above alluded to.

"5. That in forming your Council, the Governor General will see that not only the Hudson Bay Company, but the other classes of the residents are fully represented.

"6. That your Council will have the power to establish municipal self-government at once, and in such a manner as they may think most beneficial to the country.

"7. That the country will be governed, as in the past, by British law, and according to the spirit of British justice.

"8. That the present government is to be considered as merely provisional and temporary, and that the Government of Canada will be prepared to submit a measure to Parliament, granting a liberal constitution, so soon as you, as Governor, and your Council, have had the opportunity of reporting fully on the wants and requirements of the Territory.

"You had, of course, instructions on all the above-mentioned points, except the tariff, before you left Ottawa. But it has been thought well that I should repeat them to you in this authoritative form.

"Trusting that before long you may be enabled to carry these liberal propositions into practice, in administering the affairs of the North-West.

"I have the honour, &c.,

"JOSEPH HOWE,

"Secretary of State for the Provinces.

"Hon. William McDougall, Pembina."

Mr. REIL translated the above.

Mr. SMITH said—As reference has repeatedly been made in these papers to Mr. McDougall, I may say, that neither with that gentleman nor any of his party have I any, even the slightest acquaintance, having never seen him or any of his people, save for a few minutes on the road from Pembina to Georgetown. And at this present moment I have not written a single word either to him or any of his party. My commission is simply alone from the Government of Canada. Though personally unknown to you, I am as much interested in the welfare of this country as others. On both sides I have a number of relations in this land—not merely Scotch cousins—but blood relations. Besides that, my wife and her children are natives of Rupert's Land. Hence, though I am myself a Scotchman, people generally will not be surprised that I should feel a deep interest in this great country and its inhabitants. I am here to-day in the interests of Canada, but only in so far as they are in accordance with the interests of this country. Under no other circumstances would I have consented to act. As to the Hudson's Bay Company, my connection with that body is, I suppose, generally known; but I will say that if it could do any possible good to the country, I would at this moment resign my position in that Company. I sincerely hope that my humble efforts may in some measure contribute to bring about peaceable union and entire accord among all classes of the people of this land.

Mr. SMITH next read the following document, which was printed in English and French:—

"Office of the Secretary of State for the Provinces.

"SIR,—As you have been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, in anticipation of the formal transfer of these Territories by Her Majesty to the Dominion of Canada, and as it is expected that such transfer will be made within the course of the next two or three months, I have the honour, by command of His Excellency the Governor-General, to inform you that it is desirable that no time should be lost in making the necessary preliminary arrangements for the organisation of the Government of the Territories.

"2. With this view I am to instruct you to proceed with all convenient speed to Fort Garry, in order that you may effectually superintend the carrying out of the preliminary arrangements indicated in the preceding paragraph, and be ready to assume the government of the Territories on their actual transfer to Canada.

"3. On your arrival at Fort Garry, you will place yourself in communication with Mr. McTavish, the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, and notify him of your appointment. You will at the same time offer seats in your Council to Mr. McTavish, and to Mr. Black, or other chief judicial officer of the Hudson Bay Company now in the Territory. And should either or both of these gentlemen decline to accept office, you will submit to the consideration of His Excellency, the names of one or two other officers of the Company whom you consider eligible to act as members of the Council. You will, at the same time, submit the names of several of the residents, and of their character and standing in the Territory, unconnected with the Company, qualified to act as Councillors, giving particulars respecting them, and stating their comparative merits.

"4. You will have the goodness to report, with all convenient speed, for the information of His Excellency, on the state of the laws now existing in the Territories, transmitting copies of any laws, ordinances, or regulations of the Company now in force there, together with a full report as to the mode of administering justice, the organisation of the Courts, number and mode of appointment of Justices of the Peace, and the plans, arrangements, and means adopted for keeping the peace there.

"5. In preparing the report on the matters referred to in the preceding paragraph, it will be well that you meet and confer with the chief judicial officer of the Company in the Territories.

" 6. You will have the goodness to report also upon the system of taxation, if any, in force in the Territories, the system of licensing shops, taverns, &c., the mode of regulating or prohibiting the sale of wines, spirituous and malt liquors. Further, as to the mode of keeping up the roads; and generally, on the municipal organization, if any, existing in the Territories.

" 7. You will also make a full report upon the state of the Indian tribes now in the Territories, their names, numbers, and claims, the system heretofore pursued by the Hudson Bay Company in dealing with them, accompanied by any suggestions you may desire to offer with reference to their protection and the improvement of their condition.

" 8. You will have the goodness to report, also, on the nature and amount of the currency or circulating medium now employed in the Territories, and of the probable requirements of the Territories in that respect for the future.

" 9. You will also report on the system of education, if any, which obtains in the Territories.

" 10. You will also please to report as to such lands in the Territories as it may be desirable to open up at once for settlement, transmitting a plan of such survey as may be necessary, with an estimate of the cost of survey, a statement of the condition of grants of land and settlement. The plan should show the number of townships it is proposed to lay out at once, the size and position of the townships, and the size of the lots, marking the necessary surveys for churches, schools, roads and other purposes.

" 11. You will also report upon the regulations at present existing between the Hudson Bay Company and the different religious bodies in the Territories.

" 12. You will also report as to the number of officers now employed by the Hudson Bay Company in the administration of their Government of the Territories, stating the duties and salaries of such officers and specifying those who should in your opinion be retained. You will also report as to the number of persons whom it will be necessary hereafter to employ in the administration of the Government; and you will report generally on all subjects connected with the welfare of the Territory upon which it may seem to you desirable to communicate with the Government of the Dominion.

" 13. It is desirable that you should take immediate measures for the extension of the Telegraph system from the Territories to Pembina, and for its connection at that place with the system of the American Telegraph Company or Companies, making any provisional arrangements for that purpose which may be necessary, and forwarding a copy of such arrangements to this Department for confirmation to His Excellency.

" I have the honour to be, &c.,

" Hon. W. McDougall, C.B., Ottawa."

" E. A. MEREDITH, Secretary of State.

After the reading of this document an adjournment for half an hour was proposed and adopted.

Business being resumed, Mr. Riel, seconded by Mr. Bannatyne, moved that 20 representatives shall be elected by the English population of Red River, to meet 20 other representatives of the French population, on Tuesday the 25th instant, at noon, in the Court House, with the object of considering the subject of Mr. Smith's commission, and to decide what would be best for the welfare of the country.—Carried.

Cheers were then given for Father Lestane, Bishop Machray, Father Richot, Mr. Riel, Mr. O'Donoghue, and the Commissioners.

A voice—That resolution seems to cast a doubt on Mr. Smith's commission.—We do not doubt it.

Mr. Riel and Mr. O'Donoghue—We accept the commission as genuine, and are merely to consider what is to be done under it.

On motion of Judge Black, seconded by Mr. O'Donoghue, it was resolved that a committee, consisting of Thomas Bunn, Rev. J. Black, the Bishop of Rupert's Land, John Sutherland, and John Frazer, be appointed to meet and apportion the English representatives for the different parishes in the Settlement, and to determine the mode of election. Committee to meet to-morrow at noon, at the Bishop's.

Father Richot said that he was glad to be present, with the Bishop of Rupert's Land and the clergy of various denominations. All, he believed, came there with the best interests of the people at heart. They came there to see that order and good feeling prevailed, and to influence the people as far as they could in the direction of what was right and just. The clergy were also citizens, and as such, they were glad to be present and promote those objects.

Bishop Machray was sure that everyone would heartily respond to the kind feeling expressed, and do what was possible to promote union and concord. The rights of all present were the same, and on all reasonable propositions there could not be very much difference of opinion. For his part he had the greatest hope that their coming together on that occasion, and their gathering next week, as proposed, would lead to a happy settlement of public affairs. And therefore he hoped we would be as united in the future as we had been in the past.

Mr. Riel then addressed the meeting as follows:—Before this assembly breaks up, I cannot but express my feelings, however briefly. I came here with fear. We are not yet enemies, but we came very near being so. As soon as we understood each other, we joined in demanding what our English fellow-subjects in common with us believe to be our just rights. I am not afraid to say our rights; for we all have rights. We claim no half rights, mind you, but all the rights we are entitled to. Those rights will be set forth by our representatives, and, what is more, gentlemen, we will get them.

The meeting then adjourned.

CANADA.

Saint Paul, February 4th, 1870.

The 'New Nation' of the 21st contains a full report of a mass meeting held at Upper Fort Garry, continuing for two days, January 19th and 20th.

The crowd assembled on the 19th being very large, they adjourned into the open air, where the meeting was continued for five hours, notwithstanding the thermometer stood 20° below zero. Among those present were Donald Smith, Riel, Judge Black, De Salaberry, Thiebault, O'Donoghue, and others.

Riel moved, seconded by Pierre Leville, that Thomas Burns take the chair. Carried.

Judge Black was appointed Secretary, and Riel Interpreter.

The Chairman introduced Donald G. Smith, who came forward and read a document handed him in Canada, dated Ottawa, December 10th, and signed by the Hon. J. Howe, appointing him Special Commissioner to enquire into the cause and extent of the armed resistance to Governor McDougall, and requesting him to consult with and arrange matters with Governor McDougall and Governor McTavish, and ascertain what the people demanded.

He also read a letter handed to him at Ottawa signed by Governor-General Sir John Young, dated Ottawa, December 12th, which stated that Her Majesty's Government had no intention of acting, or permitting others to act, otherwise than in perfect good faith towards the inhabitants of the Red River district of the North-West; that fair protection would be extended to religious denominations of every persuasion, and the titles to every description of property would be perfectly regarded, and franchises which have existed shall be duly continued and allowed, that right shall be done in all cases, and would be carried out.

Mr. Smith then asked that Grand Vicar Thiebault should read the letter he brought with him from Canada, addressed to the Bishop of Rupert's Land and Governor McTavish.

Riel objected, and said he did not want the documents read. (Cries of "we will have them," and cheers).

The question as to who had these arose, and it was ascertained that O'Donoghue had taken possession of them.

Mr. Bannatyne moved that O'Donoghue be requested to produce the letters. (Motion carried amid cheers).

Mr. Bannatyne demanded that the letters be delivered up. Riel seconded the demand, and the letters were thereupon hunted up by O'Donoghue, and handed over by that worthy.

Mr. Smith then asked that a letter now in Governor McTavish's possession be produced.

It was read to the meeting. It was a letter containing a copy of a telegram from Earl Granville to Sir John Young, dated November 26th.

It says "Her Majesty does not distrust the loyalty of her subjects, and hopes all question of rights and wrongs may be carefully discussed, and hopes an amicable spirit may prevail and a satisfactory understanding be arrived at."

The meeting then adjourned till next day. The meeting re-assembled on the 20th, and was still larger than on the first day.

Judge Black refused again to act as Secretary. Mr. Bannatyne was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

Donald G. Smith then read a letter from Sir John Young to Mr. McTavish, December 6th, accompanying Earl Granville's message, declaring that Her Majesty's Government had no intention or idea of setting aside the titles of the Red River settlers.

The document was read amidst loud cheers from the assembly.

Mr. Smith then addressed the meeting at some length, and said "he had many friends and blood relations in the Red River country, and, as a Scotchman, felt some interest in the country, and wished to see it prosper. He was not acting in the interests of Canada, but only so far as they were in accordance with the interests of the Red River country. He believed a calm discussion of affairs could do no harm, but clear up everything satisfactorily."

He then read a copy of instructions given by the Canadian Government to Governor McDougall, signed by Secretary Meredith.

After recess, business was resumed.

Riel moved, seconded by Mr. Bannatyne, that twenty representatives be elected by the English settlers to meet twenty French representatives, on Tuesday, the 25th, at noon, at the Court House, to consider the Commission, and decide what would be best for the welfare of the country.

Cheers were then given for Fathers Lestune, Mahrey, and Richot; Mr. Riel and O'Donoghue, and the Commissioners.

A Voice—"The resolution seems to cast doubt on Smith's Commission."

Riel and O'Donoghue—"We accept the Commission as genuine. The Council is merely to consider what should be done."

Fathers Mahrey and Richot briefly addressed the meeting, and said they hoped an amicable arrangement would be arrived at, and that their present uncertain state would be ended as soon as possible.

Riel then said: "Before the meeting breaks up I cannot but express my feelings. I came here with fear. We are not enemies. But we came near being so. As soon as we understood each other, we joined in demanding what our English fellow-subjects, in common with us, believe to be our just rights. I am not afraid to say our rights. We claim all the rights we are entitled to. Those rights will be set forth by our representatives, and what is more, gentlemen, we will get them."

The meeting then adjourned.

Another despatch of the same date is as follows:—

the Administration of Canada, for its folly in ignoring the wishes of the 15,000 inhabitants of Red River, saying that any other Government would have at least thought of delegating some Agent or Commissioners to enquire into the wants and wishes of a people whom they expected to rule.

The same paper contains a call for a meeting in the different parishes to elect delegates to join a convention of all classes of citizens to meet on the 25th, to consider Mr. Smith's commission and decide what shall be done under it.

The annexation tone of the 'New Nation' is quieting down.

(Received 11th March, 1870.)

MY LORD,

I had the honour to send to your Lordship to day the following telegraphic message:—

"The latest news from Red River is, that a Convention, half French, half English, met on the 25th January. Riel opened the proceedings with a loyal speech. Smith joined in the proceedings as Commissioner for Canada. After a discussion which lasted three days, a joint Commissioner was appointed to draw up a new and modified Bill of Rights. Dominion to have ample time allowed it to consider terms. Appearances are highly satisfactory."

CANADA.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, QUEEN, Defender of the Faith, &c., &c., &c.

To DONALD A. SMITH, of the City of Montreal, in the Province of Quebec and Dominion of Canada, Esquire, and to all others to whom the same may in any wise concern.

GREETING: !

WHEREAS by an Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed in the thirty-second and thirty-third years of Our Reign, intituled, "An Act for the temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory when United to Canada," it is recited that it is probable that WE may be pleased to admit Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory into the Union of the Dominion of Canada before the then next Session of the Canadian Parliament, and that it is expedient to prepare for the transfer of the said Territories from the Local Authorities to the Government of Canada at the time appointed by Us for the Civil Government of such Territories, until more permanent arrangements can be made by the Government and Legislature of Canada; and it is by the said Act in effect enacted that our Governor may authorize and empower such Officer as he may appoint as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, and who shall administer the Government as by the said Act contemplated.

CANADA.

And whereas in the preparation for the transfer of the said Territories our Governor of Canada was pleased to send the Honourable William McDougall, the Gentleman selected to be the Lieutenant-Governor as aforesaid on its Union with Canada, in advance and in anticipation of the Union, and his entry into the said Territories was obstructed and prevented by certain armed parties, who had declared their discontent and dissatisfaction at the proposed Union, and their intention to resist the same by force.

And whereas it is expedient that inquiry should be had into the causes and extent of such obstruction, opposition, and discontent, as aforesaid.

Now know ye that, having confidence in your honesty, fidelity, and integrity, We do by these presents nominate, constitute, and appoint you, the said Donald A. Smith, to be Our Special Commissioner to inquire into the causes, nature, and extent, of the obstruction, offered at the Red River in the North-West Territories to the peaceable ingress of the Honourable William McDougall, and other parties authorized by Our Governor-General of Canada to proceed into the same, and also to inquire into the causes, and discontent, and dissatisfaction, alleged to exist in respect to the proposed Union of the said North-West Territories with the Dominion of Canada, and further, to explain to the inhabitants of the said Country the principles on which the Government of Canada intends to administer the Government of the Country according to such instructions as may be given to you by Our Governor in Council in this behalf, and to take steps to remove any misapprehensions which may exist in respect to the mode of Government of the same, and to report to Our Governor-General the result of such inquiries, and on the best mode of quieting and removing such discontents and dissatisfaction, and also to report on the most proper and fitting mode for effecting the speedy transfer of the Country and Government from the authority of the Hudson's Bay Company to the Government of Canada, with the general assent of the inhabitants.

And further, to consider and report on the most advisable mode of dealing with the Indian Tribes in the North-West Territories.

To have and to hold the said Office of Commissioner for the purposes aforesaid unto you, the said Donald A. Smith, during pleasure.

In testimony whereof

Department of the Secretary of State of Canada, Registrar's Branch,
Ottawa, 26th January, 1870.

I hereby certify the foregoing to be a true and faithful Copy of the Record of the Original Letter Patent as entered in Lib. 1, Folio 30.

the Right Rev. Bishop TACHÉ.

MY DEAR LORD BISHOP,

Government House, February 16th, 1870.

I am anxious to express to you before you set out the deep sense of obligation which I feel is due to you for giving up your residence at Rome, leaving the great and interesting affairs in which you were engaged there, and undertaking at this inclement season the long voyage across the Atlantic, and long journey across this Continent, for the purpose of rendering service to Her Majesty's Government, and engaging in a mission in the cause of peace and civilization. Lord Granville was anxious to avail of your valuable assistance from the outset, and I am heartily glad that you have proved willing to afford it so promptly and generously. You are fully in possession of the views of my Government, and the Imperial Government, as I informed you, is earnest in the desire to see the North-West Territory united to the dominion on equitable conditions. I need not attempt to furnish you with any instructions for your guidance beyond those contained in the telegraphic message sent me by Lord Granville on the part of the British Cabinet in the Proclamation which I drew up in accordance with that message, and in the letters which I addressed to Governor McTavish, your Vicar-General, and Mr. Smith. In this last letter I wrote, "All who have complaints to make, or wishes to express, to address themselves to me, as Her Majesty's Representative, and you may state with the utmost

Department of the Secretary of State for the Province,
 January 24th, 1870.

SIR,

In your official report from Pembina, under date the 29th November last (No. 1089) you mention your having "prepared a Proclamation to be issued on the first day of December," in reference to the transfer of the North-west Territories to Canada. In a subsequent letter (No. 1108), dated the 2nd December last, you report having given copies of this Proclamation in English and French to Colonel Dennis to take with him to Fort Garry. It is also stated in the last mentioned letter that you had commissioned Colonel Dennis to act as your Lieutenant, and as a Conservator of the Public Peace, but that you deemed it prudent not to forward at that moment a copy of the commission.

As up to the present moment I have not received a copy of either the Proclamation or the Commission above referred to, may I request that you will have the goodness to furnish me with copies of both of those documents, with a view to their being added to your other communications in relation to the North-west Territories.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

Ottawa, January, 29th, 1870.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt, while at Toronto, of your letter of the 24th instant, informing me that you had not, up to that date, received copies of two documents, a Proclamation and a Commission, referred to in my official reports from Pembina of the 29th November, and of the 2nd December last, and requesting me to furnish you with copies of those documents.

Until I received your letter, I was under the impression that you had received printed copies of both the papers referred to, and as they had appeared in Canadian as well as American newspapers before I left Pembina, it did not occur to me that written copies would be deemed necessary.

I have now the honour, in accordance with your request, to enclose a copy of the Proclamation (A 9), and also a copy of the Commission to Colonel Dennis (B 9).

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by "The British North America Act, 1867," it was (amongst other things) enacted that it should be lawful for Her Majesty by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, on Address from the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, to admit Rupert's Land and the North-western Territory, or either of them, into the Union or Dominion of Canada on such terms and conditions as are in the Address expressed, and as Her Majesty thinks fit to approve.

And whereas for the purpose of carrying into effect the said provisions of "The British North America Act, 1867," "The Rupert's Land Act, 1868," enacted and declared that it should be competent for "the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson Bay," to surrender to Her Majesty, and for Her Majesty, by any Instrument under her Sign Manual and signet to accept a surrender of all or any of the Lands, Territories, Powers, and authorities whatsoever, granted or purported to be granted by certain Letters Patent of His Late Majesty King Charles the Second to the said Governor and Company within Rupert's Land upon such terms and conditions as should be agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company.

And whereas by "The Rupert's Land Act, 1868," it is further enacted, that from the date of the admission of Rupert's Land into the Dominion of Canada, as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the Parliament of Canada to make, ordain, and establish within the said Land and Territory so admitted as aforesaid all such laws, institutions, and ordinances, and to constitute such courts and officers as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others therein.

And whereas, it is further provided by the said Act, that until otherwise enacted by the said Parliament of Canada, all the powers, authorities, and jurisdiction of the several Courts of Justice now established in Rupert's Land, and of the several Officers thereof, and of all Magistrates and Justices now acting within the said limits shall continue in full force and effect therein.

And whereas the said Governor and Company have surrendered to Her Majesty, and Her Majesty has accepted a surrender of all the Lands, Territories, Rights, Privileges, Liberties, Franchises, Powers, and authorities granted, or purported to be granted by the said Letters Patent, upon certain terms and conditions agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company.

And whereas Her Majesty, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and on an Address from both the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, in pursuance of the One hundred and forty-sixth Section of "The British North America Act, 1867," hath declared that Rupert's Land, and the North-western Territory, shall from the first day of December, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, be admitted into and become part of the dominion of Canada, upon the terms and conditions expressed in the said Address of which Her Majesty has approved, and Rupert's Land and the said North-western Territory are admitted into the Union, and have become part of the Dominion of Canada accordingly.

And whereas the Parliament of Canada, by an Act entitled "An Act for the Temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-western Territory when United with Canada," enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor by any order or orders to be by him from time to time made, with the advice of the Privy Council (and subject to such conditions and restrictions as to him should seem meet) to authorise and empower such officer as he may from time to time appoint as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Territories, to make provision for the administration of justice therein, and generally to make, ordain, and establish all such Laws and Institutions, and Ordinances as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others therein.

Now know ye that we have seen fit by our Royal Letters Patent bearing date the Twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, to appoint the Honourable William McDougall, of the City of Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, in our dominion of Canada, and member of our Privy Council for Canada, and Companion of our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, on, from, and after the day to be named by us, for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-western territory aforesaid into the Union or Dominion of Canada, to wit, on, from, and after the first day of December, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, to be during our pleasure the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Territories.

And we did thereby authorise, and empower, and require, and command him in due manner to do and execute in all things that shall belong to his said command, and the trust we have reposed in him according to the several provisions and instructions granted or appointed him by virtue of our said Commission and the Act of the Parliament of Canada herein before recited, and according to such instructions as have been, or may from time to time be given to him, and to such laws as are or shall be enforced within the North-west Territories.

Of all which our loving subjects of our said Territories, and all others whom these presents may concern, are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

In testimony whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our North-west Territories to be hereunto affixed: Witness our trusty and well beloved the Honourable William McDougall, member of our Privy Council for Canada, and Companion of our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Governor of our North-west Territories, &c., &c., at the Red River, in our aforesaid North-west Territories, this First day of December, in the year of Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the Thirty-third year of our Reign.

By His Excellency the Honourable WILLIAM McDOUGALL, a Member of Her Majesty's Privy Council for Canada, and Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the North-west Territories.

To JOHN STOUGHTON DENNIS, Esquire, Lieutenant-Colonel Military Staff, Canada.

GREETING :

WHEREAS large bodies of armed men have unlawfully assembled on the high road between Fort Garry and Pembina, in the Colony or District of Assiniboine, and have with force and arms arrested and held as prisoners numerous private and official persons, and preventing them from proceeding on their lawful journey and business, and have committed other acts of lawless violence, in contempt and defiance of the Magistrates and local authorities: And whereas William McTavish, Esquire, Governor of Assiniboine, did on the Sixteenth day of November last publish and make known to these armed men, and all others whom it might concern, that the lawless acts aforesaid, and which were particularly set forth in his Proclamation, were "contrary to the remonstrances and protests "of the public authorities," and did therein himself protest against each and all of the said unlawful acts and intents, and charged and commanded the said armed persons to immediately disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations or lawful business, under the pains and penalties of the law.

And whereas, since the issue of the said protest or Proclamation, certain of the armed men aforesaid have taken possession of the Public Records and papers at Fort Garry, and have seized and held as prisoners the public officers or persons having charge of the same, and, as I am credibly informed, still keep unlawful possession of the said Records and public property, and with force and arms continue to obstruct public officers and others in the performance of their lawful duty and business to the great terror, loss, and injury of Her Majesty's peaceable subjects, and in contempt of Her Royal authority: And whereas Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Dominion of Canada, bearing date the Twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, has been graciously pleased to appoint me to be, from and after the First day of December instant, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Territories, and did authorise and command me to do and execute all things in due manner that should belong to my said command.

CANADA.

Know you that reposing trust and confidence in your courage, loyalty, fidelity, discretion, and ability, and under and in virtue of the authority in me vested, I have nominated and appointed, and by these presents do nominate and appoint you, the said John Stoughton Dennis, to be my Lieutenant and a Conservator of the Peace in and for the North-west Territories; and do hereby authorise and empower you as such to raise, organise, arm, equip, and provision a sufficient force within the said Territories, and with the said force to attack, arrest, disarm, or disperse the said armed men so unlawfully assembled and disturbing the public peace; and for that purpose, and with the force aforesaid, to assault, fire upon, pull down, or break into any fort, house, stronghold, or other place in which the said armed men may be found: And I hereby authorize you, as such Lieutenant and Conservator of the Peace, to hire, purchase, impress, and take all necessary clothing, arms, ammunition, and supplies, and all cattle, horses, waggon, sleighs, or other vehicles which may be required for the use of the force to be raised as aforesaid: And I further authorize you to appoint as many Officers and Deputies under you, and to give them such orders and instructions from time to time as may be found necessary for the due performance of the services herein required of you, reporting to me the said appointments and orders as you shall find opportunity for confirmation or otherwise.

And I hereby give you full power and authority to call upon all Magistrates and Peace Officers to aid and assist you, and to order all or any of the inhabitants of the said North-west Territories in the name of Her Majesty the Queen, to support and assist you in protecting the lives and properties of Her Majesty's loyal subjects, and in preserving the public peace, and for that purpose to seize, disperse, or overcome by force the said armed men, and all others who may be found aiding or abetting them in their unlawful acts.

And the said persons so called upon in Her Majesty's name are hereby ordered and enjoined at their peril to obey your orders and directions in that behalf, and this shall be sufficient Warrant for what you or they do in the premises so long as this commission remains in force.

Given under my hand and seal at arms at Red River, in the said Territories, the First day of December, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the thirty-third year of Her Majesty's reign.

WILLIAM McDougall.

The SECRETARY of STATE for the Provinces to the GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR,

Ottawa, 24th February, 1870.

I have the honour to transmit to you, herewith, for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General, copies of documents on the subject of the recent disturbances in the North-West Territories.

J. Turville, Esq., Governor-General's Secretary, Ottawa.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOSEPH HOWE.

Department of Secretary of State for the Provinces,
Ottawa, 16th February, 1870.

MY LORD,

I am commanded by His Excellency the Governor-General to acknowledge and thank you for the promptitude with which you placed your services at the disposal of this Government, and undertook a winter voyage and journey, that you might, by your presence and influence, aid in the repression of the unlooked for disturbances which had broken out in the North-West.

I have the honour to enclose for your information:—

1. A copy of the Instructions given to the Honourable William McDougall on the 28th September last.
2. Copy of a further Letter of Instructions addressed to Mr. McDougall on the 7th November.
3. Copy of a Letter of Instructions to the Very Reverend Vicar-General Thibault on the 4th December.
4. Copy of a Proclamation issued by his Excellency the Governor-General, addressed to the inhabitants of the North-West Territories by the express desire of the Queen.
5. Copy of a Letter addressed to the Secretary of State, by Donald A. Smith, Esq., of Montreal, on the 24th November.
6. Copy of a Letter of Instructions addressed by me to Mr. Smith on 10th December last.
7. A semi-official letter, addressed by the Minister of Justice on the 3rd January, 1870, to Mr. Smith, also
8. Copy of the Commission issued to Mr. Smith on the 17th January, 1870.

Copies of the Proclamations issued by Mr. McDougall, at, or near Pembina, and of the Commission issued to Colonel Dennis, having been printed in the Canadian papers, and widely circulated at the Red River, are, it is assumed, quite within your reach, and are not furnished; but it is important that you should know that the proceedings by which the lives and properties of the people of Rupert's Land were jeopardized for a time, were at once disavowed and condemned by the Government of this Dominion, as you will readily discover in the Despatch addressed by me to Mr. McDougall, on the 24th of December, a copy of which is enclosed.

Your Lordship will perceive, in these papers, the policy which it was, and is, the desire of the Canadian Government to establish in the North-West. The people of Canada have no interest in the erection of institutions in Rupert's Land which public opinion condemns, nor would they wish to see a fine race of people trained to discontent and insubordination by the pressure of an unwise system of government, to which British subjects are unaccustomed or averse. They look hopefully forward to the period when institutions, moulded upon those which the other Provinces enjoy, may be established, and in the meantime would deeply regret if the civil and religious liberties of the whole population were not adequately protected by such temporary arrangements as it may be prudent at present to make.

A Convention has been called, and is now sitting at Fort Garry, to collect the views of the people as to the powers which they may consider it wise for Parliament to confer, and the Local Legislature to assume. When the proceedings of that Conference have been received by the Privy Council, you may expect to hear from me again; and in the meantime, should they be communicated to you on the way, his Excellency will be glad to be favoured with any observations that you may have leisure to make.

You are aware that the Very Reverend the Vicar-General Thibault, and Messrs. Donald A. Smith and Charles de Salaberry, are already in Rupert's Land, charged with a commission from Government. Enclosed are Letters to those gentlemen, of which you will oblige me by taking charge, and I am commanded to express the desire of his Excellency that you will co-operate with them in their well-directed efforts to secure a peaceful solution of the difficulties in the North-West Territories, which have caused his Excellency much anxiety, but which, by your joint endeavours it is hoped may be speedily removed.

The Very Reverend the Bishop of St. Boniface.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) JOSEPH HOWE.

SIR,

Ottawa, 19th February, 1870.

I have the honour to transmit you herewith the copy of a Letter addressed to the Hon. the Minister of Public Works as to the occupation of a certain portion of my time while in the North-West Territory during the past season.

CANADA.

As my connection with late events in that country has, I am led to believe, been misunderstood by many people, I would respectfully ask that the letter referred to may accompany the other papers on this subject should the latter be sent down to the House of Commons.

The Hon. the Secretary of State for the Provinces, Ottawa.

I have, &c.,
(Signed)

J. S. DENNIS, P. S. S.

SIR,

Ottawa, February 12th, 1870.

I have the honour to report to you as to the occupation of my time in the Red River Territory during that portion of the past season when not personally present superintending the surveys in progress under my instructions of the 10th July last.

With the exception of conferring with Mr. Hart and Mr. Webb, the Surveyors in charge of parties in the field, in the beginning of December, when sent into the Settlement by Mr. McDougall as to the progress of the work, and giving them instructions for the future, the above period embraces all the time subsequent to the 29th of October.

During this time my services have been, at his request, given to the Hon. William McDougall, to aid, by different means, as suggested by himself, to obtain his admission to the Territory of which he was sent to administer the Government.

It may be asked,—

1. Why, when I was sent to the Territory to take charge of and superintend the surveys, I left my work to go to meet Mr. McDougall at all? And
2. Why I did not return, having seen that gentleman, and go on with my surveying operations?

I answer as follows:—

I acted entirely from a sense of duty, as the only officer or representative in any way of the Canadian Government at the time in the Settlement, to prevent, if possible, a threatened outrage on the person of a gentleman sent to the Territory with a Commission as Lieutenant-Governor; which sense of duty was enhanced by the fact that, as Minister of Public Works, the same gentleman had up to that time given me all my orders, and from him also, as told me by himself, I was to receive all future orders in the event (which when I left Canada in July had been spoken of) of his being appointed Lieutenant-Governor.

In order to show the ground for assuming that duty required me to take the above course, I beg to submit the following:—

The outbreak of a portion of the population in the Settlement having for its ostensible object the preventing, at all hazards, the Honourable Gentleman named from entering the Territory, occurred on the 21st October, and was of a character to call forth the liveliest apprehensions as to the personal safety of that gentleman should he continue his journey north of the boundary line.

The Council of Assiniboine, with members of which I was in daily conference, held several meetings in the emergency, and advised that Mr. McDougall should, if possible, be communicated with, and requested to stop at Pembina until informed that it would be safe for him to continue his journey to Fort Garry, and at the meeting of Council on the 29th October, it was resolved to send Mr. McDougall a despatch to that effect.

I had myself written Mr. McDougall fully as to the state of affairs, enclosing the affidavit of Mr. Walter S. Hyman, showing that his (Mr. McDougall's) life might be endangered by his coming on till advised that the opposition was withdrawn, but by this time the party in arms had seized the mails and subjected all travellers to such a rigid examination, that it was very uncertain whether my letters had reached their destination.

It was a time of much excitement.

It was evident to me that the Hudson Bay Company were powerless to deal with the outbreak.

Time was pressing, as Mr. McDougall was expected to reach Pembina at about that date. I was a stranger then, and, under the peculiar circumstances, knew not whom I could safely trust, and I therefore charged myself with the duty of delivering Governor McTavish's despatch, and of advising Mr. McDougall personally as to the impending danger, and further to inform him as to the views and feelings (with which I had made myself acquainted) of the English-speaking people in the Settlement.

The despatch referred to was put into my hands at 10:30 p.m. on the 29th October. On the following morning at 3 o'clock I left Fort Garry, and, passing the camp of the malcontents by a détour, rode through to Pembina, meeting Mr. McDougall at the Hudson Bay Company's fort there the morning of the 1st November.

I delivered the despatch and informed him fully of the situation of affairs, and intended returning again to my office. The horses my guide, Mr. Wm. Hallett, and myself had ridden through were, however, so exhausted that it was necessary to allow them two or three days to recruit, and while remaining at the Hudson Bay's post at Pembina with that view, an armed party arrived on the 2nd November, despatched from the main body at the River Sale, and ordered me out of the Territory with Mr. McDougall and party.

My guide, Mr. Hallett, was seized, bound to a cart, and driven off a distance towards Fort Garry.

After a few days, I expressed the desire to Mr. MacDougall to return to Winnipeg, feeling confident I could get in, in some way, and that only in my office, and not interfering in any way with the refractory party I might probably be allowed to go on with my duties without being molested.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

113

CANADA.

The honourable gentleman named, however, expressed the wish that I should remain with him, stating that as I knew the character and temper of political parties in the settlement, he desired to make use of me; and further, that he was advised his commission would take effect on the 1st of the ensuing month, and when that time came around, should the malcontents still be in arms, he might require me to aid him in some measure by which his authority would be established.

Under the peculiarly harassing circumstances in which Mr. MacDougall was placed, I felt it incumbent on me from every point of view to comply with his request, and I remained with him till the evening of the 29th November.

During this time I arranged and kept up, through loyal French half-breeds, a regular and frequent, though necessarily secret, communication with my office, by which Mr. MacDougall was kept advised of events as they transpired in the settlement, and further was actively engaged the whole time in endeavouring to contribute to the comfort of that gentleman his family and party.

As the month drew to a close, I was informed by him that he had determined to send me through to the settlement with a Proclamation to be promulgated there on the 1st December, announcing the transfer of the Territory, and the taking effect of his commission as Lieutenant-Governor; and further, the advices from there at this time going to show that the English-speaking portion of the people had become so fearful as to the ultimate designs of the French party, that they would readily obey any call made upon them with authority to put down the outbreak; he also expressed the intention of giving me full magisterial powers to be used with that object should I find the temper of the people as above indicated. Mr. MacDougall stated his intention, as he said to give legal effect to the documents, to go to the Hudson Bay Post, or some point in British territory, on the morning of the 1st December, and execute the originals in the presence of Messrs. Provencher and Richards.

Accordingly, in order to arrive at Fort Garry on the 1st December, I left Pembina at 10.30 P.M. on the 29th November, travelled all that night, all the next day, and all the following night, the greater part of the time through the coldest storm experienced by me during the winter, and arrived in the Settlement at 5 o'clock A.M. on the day expected.

I made the Proclamation public, and, after consulting a number of the prominent residents, finding the people in favour of forcible measures, I took action under the commission issued to me by Mr. MacDougall.

As my proceedings in this matter are fully detailed in the report thereon now in the hands of the Government, it is unnecessary for me to repeat them here; it is sufficient to say that, finding it inexpedient after all to attempt aggressive measures, I returned to Pembina in accordance with Mr. MacDougall's instructions to that effect, arriving there on the 15th of the month. I would only say that during these fifteen days (and I may say nights also), I was occupied in a zealous and faithful discharge of what I conceived to be the highest duty I could render to the Government, that of endeavouring from day to day by such means as at the time seemed most likely to effect it, to bring about peace and order in the colony.

I acted in good faith throughout, not being aware till I met Colonel De Salaberry on the 23rd December on the plains, while on my way to Canada, that the Proclamation and Commission had been issued by Mr. MacDougall under a misapprehension of the facts (the transfer of the Territory not having taken place on the 1st December as supposed), and were worth no more than waste paper.

I may be permitted to say here, that although I had previously felt mortified and disappointed at not having been able to bring about peace by means of any kind, on hearing the statement of Colonel De Salaberry that feeling changed at once to one of heartfelt thankfulness that my proceedings had not been the cause (even to the extent of a drop) of bloodshed among the people.

Mr. MacDougall decided to return to Canada, and wished me to return with him. As he said he thought the information I had acquired in the Settlement might be made available by the Government here, I came away also without hesitation.

We left Pembina on the 18th December. Having met with an accident at Abercrombie, I was detained a few days on the way, arriving finally at Toronto on the 13th ult.

Since my return I have been occupied (that is to say when able to work, as I was laid up for a fortnight at home from the accident) during the whole time in preparing the accounts, reports, &c., for the department.

Trusting that the foregoing statement and explanation may be satisfactory,

I have, &c.,

The Hon. the Minister of Public Works, Ottawa.

MY LORD,

Government House, Ottawa, Canada,
March 3rd, 1870.

I have the honour to transmit for your Lordship's information a newspaper extract which contains a correct account of recent transactions at the Red River:—

CANADA.

'Ottawa Citizen,' 2nd March, 1870.

With the general features of the Bill of Rights passed by the Convention at Fort Garry, our readers are generally acquainted. It demands that duties remain as at present for three years; that there shall be no direct taxation, except by the local legislature; that Canada shall bear all military, civil, and general governmental expenses so long as the country remains a territory; that during the same time the country shall be governed by a Lieut.-Governor, and a Legislature, three members of which may be nominated by the Governor-General, the remaining thirteen or seventeen to be elected by the people, as we learn from the New Nation, just come to hand; no interference in local affairs other than in Ontario and Quebec; that the Legislature shall have the right to pass laws over the Governor's veto; a homestead and pre-emption law; 25,000 dollars a year for schools and bridges; all public buildings to be erected by the Dominion; steam communication to Lake Superior in five years, and by rail to the American boundary; that English and French be spoken in the Legislature, the Courts, and by the Judge of the Supreme Court; that treaties be concluded between the Dominion and the Indians; three representatives in Parliament, one in the Senate, and two in the House of Commons; the guarantee of all present rights and privileges; the recognition of local customs, and that the two-mile hay privilege be converted into fee-simple ownership.

These are pretty extensive demands, and, in some respects, may require modification, although most of them can be conceded. The change in the form of government from that proposed by the Dominion is not great, except the demand for the unconstitutional privilege that the Legislature shall override the Governor's veto by a two-third vote. This is American, not British. We gather from the report of the Convention in the New Nation, that the delegates will be empowered to yield some of their demands; thus the Committee reported to the Convention to ask 15,000 dollars a year for schools and bridges, with the remark that they might as well ask plenty if they did not get it all. This looks as if they expected to abate their demands.

Another point noticeable was that the people of Red River did not wish to become a province at once like Ontario or Quebec, but to remain for some years like an American territory. This was shown by the substitution of territory for province, wherever the latter occurred in the resolutions, and by the form of government they demand a Legislature instead of a Council. It seems likely, from the moderate tone of the Convention, that all difficulties will be satisfactorily removed by negotiation.

Also a summary of the telegraphic news since received:—

It appears that Riel and his partizans, though often outvoted, and apparently outnumbered in the Convention, procured their own election to the principal offices of a provisional Government; or, as it may be surmized, seized them by force. To these proceedings a number of the English speaking inhabitants are opposed, and an appeal to arms on their part is threatened. On the 15th ultimo Major Boulton had raised a force of loyal Canadians, English and Indians, and proposed marching on the Fort which Riel held—trouble was expected.

MY LORD,

I had the honour to send to your Lordship to-day the following Telegraphic Message:—

“Mr. Smith from Red River is on his way to Ottawa, and expected to arrive on Saturday next. He reports all quiet up to the 14th instant. Bishop Taché arrived on the 11th. The Convention are in Session, discussing plans of adjustment with Canada. Smith says nothing about Delegates.”

I regret that I can give no positive information as to the Delegates, but Mr. Smith is silent on the point. All the information we have from him is a short Telegram to Sir J. A. Macdonald from St. Cloud. Neither do we yet know whether or not a rumour which has appeared in several papers, that Riel caused a man, of the name of Scott to be shot, is or is not true. I shall, however, get full particulars from Mr. Smith directly he arrives, and shall hope to be able to communicate them to your Lordship by the next Mail, or earlier, by Telegram, if of importance.

A Canadian, called Scott, was by Riel’s orders tried by court-martial and shot, with the view, it is supposed, of compromising Riel’s followers before Taché had arrived. They say the Delegates are coming, but it is quite clear Riel will yield to nothing but force. Things now look, I think, very bad.”

With reference to my Despatch (No. 76)* of yesterday’s date on the North-West,
I have the honour to state that General Lindsay was in Ottawa last week, and that he and I had several conversations with the Ministers, as to the composition of and arrangements connected with the force to be sent to the Red River in case the expedition be finally decided on.

Nothing definite, of course, was settled, but several preliminaries were discussed, without so far as I am aware eliciting any differences of opinion between the views of General Lindsay, myself, or the Ministers of the Dominion.

and of their readiness to accept the transfer of the Territory simultaneously with the movement of the Troops, their proposing to pay three-fourths of the cost of the expedition, and of their impression that they have complied with the condition of giving fair terms to the Roman Catholics, inasmuch as Bishop Taché has stated his contentment therewith.

the Delegates from the Red River—Pere Richot and Mr. Scott.

2. It is with much regret that I have now to inform your Lordship, that these two gentlemen have been arrested, at the instance of the brother of the unfortunate man Scott, who was shot. He laid information on oath against them, as accessories before the fact. The details of the case, which is still pending, are set forth in the accompanying Memorandum, which has been prepared in the Department of Justice, and I also send a newspaper account, extracted from the 'Globe.'

3. Nothing could well have been more untoward than this turn of affairs. In addition to the feelings to which it may give rise within the limits of the Dominion, it cannot fail to arouse anger, and possibly the desire for retaliatory measures, in the minds of Riel and his followers when the news reaches Fort Garry. It has prevented me from seeing the Delegates, and delayed the opening of negotiations. The Ministers join with me in deploring the event, but are unable to prevent a private individual, over whom they have no control, from availing himself at his discretion of the ordinary forms and process of law.

4. Judge Black has arrived, and I have had two unofficial interviews with him, and perused the papers with which the Delegates have been furnished by Riel and his advisers.

5. I enclose a copy of a further letter which I have received from Dr. Lynch, and also two leading articles from the 'Globe,' an Ontario Opposition paper, having the largest circulation of any newspaper in Canada.

Enclosures in No. 32.

Enclosures in
No. 32.

Department of Justice, Ottawa, April 21st, 1870.

The undersigned, in accordance with the desire expressed by your Excellency, has the honour to report that the facts connected with the arrest of the Rev. Mr. Richot (commonly known as Father Richot), and Mr. Alfred H. Scott, who had recently arrived from Red River, appear to be as follows:—

An information was laid by Hugh Scott, brother of Thomas Scott, who, it was stated, had been shot by order of Riel, in the North-West Territories, before Police Magistrate McNab, of Toronto, at that city, who thereupon issued a warrant.

It was transmitted by mail to Ottawa, and there, was received by a Constable, who executed it.

CANADA.

The charge was, that the Prisoners actually aided and abetted in the murder of Thomas Scott, a British subject, in the Red River country.

They were arrested at Ottawa, on the morning of the 14th instant, and were brought before the Honourable Mr. Justice Galt, one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas for Ontario (who happened at the time to be holding the Assize Court, in Ottawa), by virtue of a writ of Habeas Corpus.

The Honourable J. Hillyard Cameron, Q.C., appeared for the Prisoners, and demanded their release, on the ground of illegal arrest. The warrant, he presumed, had been issued under the Imperial Statutes, 43 George III., cap. 138, and 1 and 2 George IV., cap. 66, by which, general powers were given to arrest and try persons charged with capital felonies, committed in the Red River country. He further argued that the Act provided that, as in the present case, while the parties had a temporary residence in Ottawa, Toronto Magistrates had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that the document should be executed by an Ottawa Magistrate.

The Judge remanded the Prisoners to nominal custody, under 32 and 33 Vict., cap. 30, sec. 42, and on the morning of the 15th gave judgment, discharging the Prisoners, on the ground that a Police Magistrate of the city of Toronto, had no jurisdiction in such case to issue a warrant, and that where an offence had been committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Canadian Courts, the warrant ought to be issued by a Magistrate, within whose jurisdiction the accused were residing.

Immediately upon the discharge of the Prisoners, they were re-arrested on a warrant signed by Mr. O'Gara, Police Magistrate of the city of Ottawa, issued upon information laid before him by the same Hugh Scott, the brother of the Scott deceased,—to the effect that there was reason to suspect that some person or persons unknown, on the 4th day of March, last past, on land out of Canada, to wit, at Fort Garry, &c., did feloniously kill and murder, one, Thomas Scott; and that one, Richot, known as Father Richot, and one, Alfred H. Scott, both of Fort Garry aforesaid, but then being in the city of Ottawa, and both being British subjects, did advise, aid, and abet, the said person or persons unknown, in the said murder and felony.

Upon this re-arrest, application was again made to Mr. Justice Galt, for a writ of Habeas Corpus. The writ was granted, and the Reverend Mr. Richot, and Mr. Scott, were remanded into nominal custody as before.

Subsequently, however, Scott (it is alleged, at his own request), was placed in close custody at the Police Station, in charge of the officer to whose custody he had been committed.

The matter remained over, in consequence of the absence of the Prisoners' Counsel, the Hon. J. H. Cameron, until the 20th instant, when the Prisoners were again brought before Mr. Justice Galt.

Mr. Cameron then stated, in effect, that the points upon which the second writ of Habeas Corpus had been moved, in his absence, were not tenable, and the Prisoners were therefore remanded until this day, the 21st instant, when they were to be brought up for examination before the Police Magistrate of Ottawa.

It may be added, that the prosecution did not originate with, nor is it in any way under the control of the Government of Canada, or of the Minister of Justice, who is the Attorney-General of the Dominion.

Under the "British North-America Act, 1867," the administration of criminal justice rests with the Attorney-General of the Province, and the prosecution having, in this case, originated at the instance of the brother of the deceased Scott, in the Province of Ontario, the official representation of the prosecution of the case would rest with the Attorney-General of that Province.

Since writing the foregoing, it appears that the Reverend Mr. Richot and Mr. Scott were brought up at 3 o'clock this afternoon, before the Police Magistrate, and, on application by the professional gentlemen representing the Prosecutor, were remanded until Saturday next, the 23rd instant, bail being taken in the meantime.

A copy of the evening paper, showing the evidence as taken, is herewith transmitted to your Excellency.

JOHN A. MACDONALD.

TRIAL OF THE DELEGATES.

This afternoon at three o'clock the delegates, Father Richot and Alfred Scott, were arraigned before M. O'Gara, Esq., in the Police Court, on charge of being accessory to the murder of Thomas Scott.

The police had great difficulty in keeping the stairway landing to the court clear, so great was the rush of persons to get in.

His Worship the Mayor and Judge Black sat beside the Magistrate.

Messrs. Lees and Boulton appeared for the prosecution. Mr. J. H. Cameron appeared for the defence.

Mr. Boulton said that one of the most important witnesses, Mr. Donald M. Smith, was absent in Montreal; they would however go on.

Judge Black sworn—My last place of residence was seven miles from Fort Garry, on the lower side of the river. I knew one Thomas Scott, residing in Fort Garry. The last time I saw him was in the month of November. Of my own personal knowledge I knew nothing of the shooting of Scott. I was not at Fort Garry the day before the shooting, or on the day of the shooting. I was at Winnipeg the day before Scott was shot. To my knowledge I have not seen Scott since November. I have seen Alfred Scott, the prisoner, several times on the road from Red River. I have had no conversation with Scott on the subject of the shooting. If we ever mentioned the subject it was in the most casual way. Mr. Boulton requested the witness not to leave the room, as he might want him.

William Drever sworn—I am a storekeeper at Fort Garry. I left Winnipeg the 2nd February. One Thomas Scott was in jail at Fort Garry when I left. I did not see him arrested. I was a prisoner myself for a short time. I was not confined in jail with Scott. He had escaped before I was arrested. I know Alfred H. Scott, one of the prisoners; he resided in the town of Winnipeg. I saw him there shortly before I left. I did not see him until I saw him in Ottawa. I have had very little conversation with him on the subject of the shooting of Scott. I asked him if he knew anything about the death of Thomas Scott, and he replied, "I was present when he was shot." This conversation took place on the road from the Russell House. I have had no further conversation with him. I knew long before I left Fort Garry that there was a rising of the people. I knew Scott was among the people rising, but I do not know if he was concerned in the rising. I was arrested by an order from Riel. There was a guard at the court-house and jail. I was about a week in jail. I see Alfred Scott present in Court. I could not say I saw Alfred Scott among the armed men. The prisoner (Scott) was never arrested by Riel. I do not know whether Scott was in the employ of Riel or not.

I have seen Father Richot at different times in the Settlement. I saw him at a mass meeting of the French and English people. I have never seen Father Richot taking any part in the rebellion. He (Father Richot) said something at the mass meeting, but I couldn't say what it was.

Frederick Davis, detective, sworn:—I know Alfred Scott, the prisoner; I have heard him converse on the subject of the murder. I heard him say that he saw them bringing out Scott, and he followed them. I think it was to Mr. Hubertus and Mr. Ryan he made this remark. I think he said it was at Fort Garry the occurrence took place. Scott said he saw the deceased fall. He said that six persons fired at deceased, and the men shooting were not far away. He also said after Scott fell a man shot him in the head with a revolver. I heard him say nothing further. I heard prisoner say the occurrence took place on the 4th March. I heard him also say that he didn't believe deceased was alive in his coffin after he was shot.

Mr. Cameron wanted the part about prisoner's following the parties leading Scott out explained.

Detective Davis:—Prisoner Scott said that he could not resist the temptation to see, and followed the crowd some distance. Some five or six balls took effect.

Charles Garret sworn:—I have resided eleven years in Fort Garry. I left there on 22nd March last. I was there on the 4th March last. There was a disturbance against the authority of the Queen going on at the time. None of the parties were Lapierre and others. I know the prisoner Alfred H. Scott. I have seen him in Fort Garry. I was a prisoner myself. I saw Thomas Scott last on the 7th December. I was taken prisoner on the same day with him. I was released on the 7th February last. I was looking out of my window towards Fort Garry on the 4th March, and I saw a person led out of the north gate of the Fort. He was kept there for some time. I then saw the smoke from some guns, and saw the body fall. I saw this from my own window. I heard no report from the guns, being too far away. I could not tell whether it was a man or woman that was led out of the Fort, or fell. I was seven or eight hundred yards away at the time. I saw nothing more afterwards. I was in Winnipeg all the time afterwards. I was released on Saturday, and the rest of the prisoners on Tuesday following. I did not see Thomas Scott among the released prisoners. I did not see Scott at this time about Fort Garry. I saw Father Richot. On the 23rd of March, the time I left, the insurgents were in possession of the Fort. The prisoner, Alfred Scott, last March, I think, was in Mr. McKenna's employ. Mr. McKenna kept a store. Mr. McKenna told me he had resigned from being sheriff. He resigned, I think, about November last. On the 7th December last I saw Father Richot very active directing the actions of the insurgents at the arrest of prisoners at Dr. Schultz's house. I was pretty far off at the time, but I recognized him. Dr. Schultz, Dr. Lynch, Dr. Darling, and Mr. Hamilton, were among the arrested. About forty or fifty were arrested. I was arrested an hour afterwards. Father Richot was about forty or fifty yards from Dr. Schultz's house. I have not seen Father Richot taking an active part since. I never saw Alfred Scott, the prisoner, taking an active part at any time. I have seen him speaking to Riel. Father Richot lives about five miles from Fort Garry, from Pembina, forty-five miles. Stinking River is about five or six miles from Fort Garry. There is no fort there, but a house. I got a pass from the Adjutant-General Lepine. The armed people were in possession of the fort when I left.

Mr. Cameron:—Father Richot was about fifty yards from me on the 7th December. I was in my own house looking out of the window; I could not hear a word of what was going on. I saw him taking an active part, but could not say whether inciting or soothing.

To a question from Mr. Boulton, the witness said Father Richot appeared to be inciting the people on.

Witness resumed: I have had conversation with Scott, but nothing was said about the shooting.

Arthur Hamilton, sworn—I reside in Ottawa, but have been in Fort Garry. My occupation is that of a land surveyor. I recollect the 7th December last. I was arrested on that day by a party of insurgents apparently under the leadership of Riel. I was arrested about 4 o'clock p.m. I saw the parties arresting me. I did not see Father Richot among them. I do not know Father Richot. I saw Riel there. I did not see Alfred H. Scott among them. The crowd numbered about 300. Riel was the only man in the crowd I recognized. I was liberated on the 6th of January.

Major Charles Boulton, sworn:—I was at Red River last winter. There was an insurrection against the Queen. Among the insurrectionists were Riel and some other leading spirits. I was arrested about the 18th February. I had been living at Portage du Prairie, about sixty miles distant; was about a month in custody. I was in custody about the 4th March. I knew Thomas Scott; he was a prisoner on that day. I saw Scott on the day of the shooting. I saw him in the hall of the prison, used as a guard-room. It was about midday when I saw him. He was confined in the next room. He was kept in custody by the insurgent party. In the hall, after Scott had been brought out, Scott came to my door, and said "Good-bye" to me and to others whose doors were open. He was taken out and shot. This was publicly talked about there. After Scott was taken out I heard a volley fired about ten or twelve minutes afterwards. I could see nothing of what was going on. I never saw Thomas Scott again. About ten days afterwards I was released. I remained in the Fort two days after I was arrested. Scott's hands were tied behind his back as he was led out. There was a white thing hanging from the back of his head. I saw Father Richot for the first time at the Bishop Tache's palace after my release. I saw Alfred H. Scott for the first time during my custody. He came into my room to pay me a visit. From the time I was arrested until I was released Fort Garry was in possession of Riel and his party. I made no inquiry about Scott after my release, for I was quite satisfied that he was shot. The prisoner Scott never spoke to me about the prisoner shot. The answer to all my inquiries about Scott was always answered by the statement that he was shot dead. I was told by Riel to prepare for death. I was told in the morning, about ten o'clock, that I was to be shot at twelve. I was told next day at 4:40 P.M. that I was not to be shot. There was no form of trial in my case.

CANADA.

Mr. Boulton asked a remand in order to procure the testimony of Mr. D. A. Smith, and of two other parties named McArthur and Young. He also wanted to get Dr. Schultz and Mr. Mair. These gentlemen were out of the city at present.

Mr. Cameron said, if Mr. Boulton could prove that there was something in their testimony to prove directly the complicity of the prisoners he would make no objection to the remand.

Mr. Boulton said he could get a party to make affidavit that Young could give information to prove that Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott were concerned in the shooting of Scott.

Mr. Cameron: Then produce that party, and I will subject him to a cross-examination.

Hugh Scott, brother of the deceased, then stepped into the dock, and made affidavit that George Young, lately from Red River, gave him, when in Toronto, such information as would lead to the implication of Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott in the shooting of his brother, Thomas Scott; and further, that he had received a letter from the Rev. Mr. Young, of Red River, that led him to believe that the Rev. gentleman could give testimony that would prove that Richot and Scott were actively concerned in the insurrection, and in the murder of Thomas Scott.

The court then remanded the prisoners till Saturday at three o'clock, awaiting the arrival meanwhile of further witnesses.

Application was then made by Mr. Cameron for bail, which was accepted for Father Richot, himself in 500*l.*, and Ald. Martineau and Dr. Beaubien in 250*l.* each. For Alfred Scott, himself in 500*l.*, and Andrew Riopelle and Horace Lapierre, in 250*l.* each.

From the Toronto 'Globe' of April 15th, 1870.

Ottawa, April 14.

The warrant from the Police Magistrate of Toronto for the arrest of Mr. Scott and Father Richot was received yesterday by Detective O'Neill, and backed by the signature of the Police Magistrate here.

Scott was arrested about midnight last night. Father Richot could not be found at the Roman Catholic Bishop's Palace, but gave himself up to-day.

Before Judge GALT in chambers, at one this afternoon, A. H. Scott and Father Richot were heard by Counsel on return to a writ of Habeas Corpus.

Mr. MARTIN O'GARA, J.P., Ottawa, was in Court.

Detective O'NEILL had charge of the prisoner Scott. The information on which the warrant issued, was that the prisoners were accessories to the murder of one Thomas Scott in the country called Red River.

Mr. J. H. CAMERON appeared for the prisoners, and Mr. LEES, County Attorney, for the Crown.

After some waiting for the appearance of the two prisoners, they were at length brought in.

Scott, who has been already fully described in the 'Globe,' was smiling, and looked perfectly unconcerned.

Father Richot, accompanied by Father O'Connor, the Bishop's Secretary, was present. Father Richot looked very serious.

Mr. Cameron read the papers in the case, which were—1st. An information laid by Hugh Scott, of Toronto, stating that the said Scott and Richot had been accessories to the murder of Thomas Scott in Red River. 2nd. A warrant issued by Mr. McNab, J.P., Toronto, directing the peace officers of Toronto to arrest said Scott and Richot, which warrant bears an indorsement to the peace officers of Ottawa. 3rd. A writ of Habeas Corpus, setting forth that the party, Scott, was in custody, and directing the custodian to bring up the body before his Lordship.

Father Richot having surrendered, it was understood that Mr. Cameron appeared for him also.

The following is a copy of the warrant and information:—

"City of Toronto, to wit: To the Chief Constable and all other Constables of the City of Toronto, and to all or any of the Constables or Peace Officers within the County of the City of Toronto—
 "Forasmuch as Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott, at present residing at Ottawa, in the County of Carleton, have this day been charged before me Alexander McNab, Police Magistrate of the said city on oath of Hugh Scott, for that they the said Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott, being British subjects, on the 4th day of March in the year of our Lord 1870, at Red River,

"in that part of Her Majesty's British American possessions known as the North-West Territory, actually aided and abetted in the murder of Thomas Scott, a British subject, or were accessories thereto. These are, therefore, to command you in Her Majesty's name forthwith to apprehend and bring before me or the sitting Alderman at the City Police Office the bodies of the said Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott, to answer the said charges and to be dealt with according to law. Herein fail not.

"HUGH SCOTT."

Mr. CAMERON stated the facts:—Scott had been arrested last night; he now demanded his discharge, on the ground of the illegality of his arrest. He supposed the person of the prisoner had been attached under the authority of the 43 section of George III., cap. 138, and cap. 66 of 1 and 2 of George IV., in which power was given in the one to try Indians or persons from British North America, in which there was no other jurisdiction, in Upper and Lower Canada; and the second of which transferred the power in certain cases to Upper Canada. The latter Act—an Act passed last year by the Dominion Parliament regulated the proceedings to be taken in such cases as should hereafter occur of the foregoing nature. The warrant issued by the Toronto Police Magistrate must have been issued under the authority of the Dominion Act, and it would be seen that the latter had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as the parties for whose arrest the warrant was issued were described in the document itself to be at present residing in Ottawa. To apprehend those persons it would be necessary, he submitted, to make an information on oath, in Ottawa and that an Ottawa Magistrate should issue the warrant. The simple endorsal of a Toronto warrant to Ottawa peace officers would scarcely be sufficient. The fact that both the Toronto Magistrate and the person who had laid the information, knew perfectly well that the men were living in Ottawa, and were not hiding or fleeing their place of abode, was proved by the words of the information, itself. The most material point, however, was the last, that this was not shown to be a murder at all. In stating a murder, it would be necessary to say so and so was murdered by so and so. It was stated somebody was murdered; Scott and Richot aided and abetted the murderer, but there was no murderer. The parties could not be accessories to a murder if there was no murderer to be accessory to.

Judge GALT said he understood the warrant was delivered by post, and no affidavit made. Was that the fact, and was it regular?

Mr. CAMERON thought it was a matter of procedure that was not of much consequence just now. The matter would likely have to be considered at another time.

Mr. LEES, the County Attorney, in replying to Mr. Cameron, was not sure that the objections were good. He had only just received information of the case, and was scarcely prepared with an opinion. He apprehended, however, that the most important point was, that if the warrant was illegal at all, it might be because it was based on information laid in Toronto covering people living in Ottawa. As far as the endorsement of the warrant from the peace officers of Toronto to the peace officers of Ottawa was concerned, he had little doubt that that was a perfectly legitimate transaction.

After some conversation it was agreed to adjourn till one o'clock next day, in order to enable his Lordship to go on meanwhile with the business of the Assizes.

From the Toronto 'Globe' of April 16th, 1870.

OTTAWA, April 15.

Judge GALT gave his decision in Chambers this morning on the question of the legality of the arrest of Father Richot and Alfred H. Scott, the two Red River Delegates, on a Toronto warrant.

Considerable interest was taken in the case, the Court being crowded.

His LORDSHIP said.—In this case I order the prisoners to be discharged, the Police Magistrate of Toronto having no jurisdiction in cases of this kind to issue a warrant where an offence has been committed beyond the jurisdiction of our Courts. The warrant ought to be issued by a Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the accused are now residing. On the face of this warrant it appears that the accused are residing in the city of Ottawa, consequently the Police Magistrate of the city of Toronto had no jurisdiction to issue warrants, and therefore they are discharged.

The prisoners were accordingly discharged, but were immediately re-arrested by Detective O'Neill on another warrant, issued by Mr. O'Gara, Police Magistrate of Ottawa, on the information of Mr. Hugh Scott, the brother of the murdered man. The warrant was as follows, with the customary technicalities:—"Whereas, information has this day been laid before the undersigned, one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the city of Ottawa, in the county of Carleton, for that there is reason to suspect some person or persons, to informant unknown, on the 4th day of March last past, in land out of Canada, to wit, at Fort Garry, in that part of British North America known as the North-West or Red River Territory, did feloniously, wilfully, and with malice aforethought, kill and murder one Thomas Scott, and that one Richot, known as Father Richot, and Alfred H. Scott, both of Fort Garry, aforesaid, but both now being in the city of Ottawa, in the county of Carleton, aforesaid, and both being British subjects, did advise, aid, and abet the said person or persons unknown, in the said murder and felony, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided upon these is this general warrant issued for their arrest."

The two prisoners were again removed to the Police Station.

From the "Toronto Globe," 16th April, 1870.

We observe with regret that the French Canadian Press is endeavouring to make the North-West question one of hostility between Ontario and Quebec. We may except "La Minerve," and "Le Pays," which are singular in the moderation of their tone. The remainder have determined that the question at issue is whether or no French Canadians shall be obliterated from the North-West Territory. We need not allude to any particular journals, for we publish elsewhere remarks from a number, and all are alike. Against that assumption we protest. It is not founded on truth. To say that Ontario would force the Government into war for the purpose of removing French Canadians from the Territory is not justified by anything contained in the press of this Province, nor in the speeches of her public men; and the assertion that Ontario desires to visit the younger Colony with "fire and bloodshed" because of one man's fault, is at variance with all that the leading newspapers of Upper Canada have uttered on the subject. These authorities have always held—and now find themselves supported by the best abused man of the Quebec press, Dr. Schultz—that the following of Riel comprises only a portion of the French half-breeds. They have always said that the loyal English and Scotch, who are opposed to the acts of Riel, possessed the sympathy of a portion of the French, and from first to last the Reform press, at least has advocated the immediate extension of perfect freedom and constitutional government to the settlers of Red River. Not until Canadians were unlawfully held in prison did any one talk of coercing Riel and his followers, and not until the murder of Scott did the idea of vengeance enter into the minds of the people of Ontario. The cry against Riel was doubtless intensified by the circumstances attending his crimes. Viewed even as a political execution, it was unnecessary, but it was known to be the result of a vindictive hatred against Scott; and Riel's refusal to listen to the intercession of the clergy and other settlers, and his haste to complete his revenge before the arrival of Bishop Taché, to whom he would have been compelled to submit, demonstrated the nature of the deed. No man really fails to see that Riel used his temporary and illegal power to gratify a personal spite by the murder of his enemy.

We do not attach much importance to the recent effusion of M. Lemay, the poet of "Le Canadien." All poets draw more or less upon their imaginations, and Lemay's production, which is in singular bad taste, gives a colour to the adage, that all poets are more or less crazy. Lemay merely took his view of the matter, while we have had another epic on the same subject, and one more sensible and clever, from the advertising poet of the Mammoth. We are more concerned to find the prose writers of Lower Canada endeavouring to stir up ill-feeling between the two sub-divisions of the Dominion. There is not the least occasion for drawing any dividing lines between English and French Canadians. Riel has taken the life of a Canadian, and we intend to put the laws of Great Britain in force against him. We should do so if he were an Englishman or a Scotchman, perhaps with greater anger than we now feel. We look upon the immediate followers of Riel as mistaken men, misled through their ignorance; but we have no very irate feelings against any, except the immediate accomplices of Riel in the murder of Scott. The people of Ontario desire and are determined that Canada shall possess the North-West. They do not want it for themselves alone, but for all Canada. They look upon a large emigration from Lower Canada as certain, and as desirable. Mixed communities always thrive better than those which are homogeneous, and there is no wish to do a particle of injustice to French Canadians, half-breeds now in the Territory, nor to put obstacles in the way of French Canadians entering it.

Matters have arrived at that pass which makes it necessary to occupy Fort Garry with British Troops; but we sincerely trust that this may be done without a shot being fired. Ontario desires to see Red River with the same popular institutions as she herself possesses. She would have compelled this before Riel was heard of, had not Reform representatives at Ottawa been opposed by those who had the support of Lower Canada; and she purposes to fight very hard to prevent anything like favouritism or class legislation for any section of the inhabitants, be they English or French, Catholics or Orangemen. The idea of anything like unfair treatment to the French half-breeds is a phantom of Quebec's own imagination. Ontario desires nothing better than to see a peaceful occupation of Fort Garry by the troops, the formal trial of Riel and Lepine, the re-assertion of the Queen's authority, and the immediate rush into the Territory of as many Canadians, French and English, as may be disposed to try their fortunes there. For Riel we have, of course, no sympathy; and we charge the Lower Canadian press with creating discord, retarding peace, and distorting the true view of the question by attempting to shield him and draw indignation upon his accusers. They should lend their voice to the cause of law and order, to the support of the Queen, and the defence of a flag which has given them a civil and a religious freedom possessed by no other French-speaking people in the world, to the overthrow of tyranny and the restoration of security, and to mollifying the differences which arise from the continuity of two religions and two languages. They may aid in the re-establishment of peace, and it will be greatly to be regretted if they continue in a course calculated to widen an opening breach, and turn those against one another who should and might work side by side in the cause of liberty and order.

CANADA.

From the same, 20th April.

'La Minerve' of the 18th has some very sensible remarks on the prosecution of Messrs Richot and Scott. It urges that they have come at the reiterated invitation of our Government, and after our authorized agents in the North-West had again and again urged their departure for Canada. The Telegram of Howe to Bishop Taché made former invitations still stronger, so that substantially, these men came under a flag of truce, and for the time being—whatever they are personally—are under the protection of the State; and all charges against them for crimes formerly committed are to be held in abeyance till their characters as Deputies are at an end, and they have returned to the place from which, at the solicitation of the Canadian Government, they came. There can be no doubt that 'La Minerve' is right in this line of argument. So much has it been understood in official circles that these men were deputies invited by our Government and its representatives, that poor de Salaberry has been concerned about nothing so much as that he might not get sufficient credit for having been the great agent in inducing their appointment and their despatch to Canada. On his return journey he tried to impress the importance of his services in that regard upon several of his fellow-travellers, and asked that they should do all they could to secure him credit for what he regarded as a stroke of the highest statesmanship. It was wrong for our rulers to do anything of the kind; but it would not look well now, that it has been done, to refuse to give these delegates the protection which they were led to expect. Let them not be received officially—for what that would imply, every one now understands—but let them go without molestation till they can be called to account for their personal proceedings in circumstances more favourable for their fair and full trial.

'La Minerve' thinks that the Ministry have not taken the proper course of protecting these men from arrest, on the plea of their representative-ambassadorial character, because the law on the subject is so plain, that there is no possibility of having them brought to trial or even detained in custody for more than a day or two. There are, it says, three imperial Statutes giving Canadian Courts of law a certain amount of jurisdiction over crimes committed in the North-West. The first of these is the 43rd of George III., chap. 138, which gives Courts of Upper and Lower Canada power to try criminal cases which have originated in the North-West. There is, however, a very important proviso in the 3rd section of that chapter, which gives primary jurisdiction in such cases to the Courts of Lower Canada. A case of the kind, in short, cannot be tried in Upper Canada, unless Lower Canadian authority determines that it is proper that it should be.

This law was amended by the 1st and 2nd of George IV. chapter 66, but it is contended that it did not abolish the original law, but only put Courts of Upper and Lower Canada on the same level, as far as the trial of civil cases in those territories were concerned; so that the special authority of Lower Canadian Courts in criminal cases, it is urged, continues as before. The first law says nothing of civil cases, the second nothing of criminal.

The 3rd Statute, which is that of the 22nd and 23rd Victoria, chap. 26, is that under which it is urged the present prosecution is made; but it is argued by 'La Minerve' that in order that there should be even a show of plausibility for this, it would have been necessary for the warrant of the Canadian Magistrate to have been sent out by the hand of a proper officer, and the murderers, supposed or real, to have been there asserted, and thence brought to Canada for trial. This, at any rate. But a saving clause puts this enactment out of Court, for that provides that the enactment in question shall not apply to the territories of the Company of Adventurers trading to Hudson Bay.

The case, accordingly, of an individual arrested actually in Canada under a charge of crime alleged to have been committed in the North-West comes still under the old law of George the Third, and must pass through the hands of the Attorney-General of Lower Canada in the first place.

The lawyers will determine whether the view of the law taken by 'La Minerve' is the correct one; but whether or not, with all our horror of the murder of Scott, and with very pronounced opinions as to the complicity of Richot and Scott in the transactions which culminated in that murder, as well as in the proceeding itself, we are strongly of opinion that the Government's pledge should so far be respected, and that these men should be free from personal molestation so long as they are in this country in a capacity to which our rulers have virtually given their sanction.

I have the honour to forward herewith a copy of a communication which I received from Father Richot, together with a copy of my reply. At the same time, I am happy to be able to enclose an extract from the newspaper, from which you will perceive that the proceedings against the two delegates, Father Richot and Mr. Scott are at an end as the case was dismissed by the magistrate.

I also forward a copy of a Proclamation issued by Riel, and an extract from a newspaper which states that he had "arrested and imprisoned the United States Vice-Consul for refusing to take the oath of allegiance." This extract must be taken for what it is worth. I have received no particulars on the subject.

(Translation.)

SIR,

St. Boniface, March 17th, 1870.

In compliance with instructions furnished to us by the Canadian Government, Colonel De Salaberry and myself left Ottawa on the 8th December last for Red River. About midway between Georgetown and Pembina we met the Hon. Wm. McDougall, who had left the latter place some days previously, and who was on his way to Canada. We immediately handed him the papers which we were directed to give him, and we informed him in a few words of the object of our mission which did not prevent him from continuing his journey.

The circumstance of his departure changed almost entirely the nature of our mission which was to endeavour to procure his admission into the country by pacifying the people.

We nevertheless continued our journey, and arrived at Pembina on the 24th December. We there found the people full of distrust against all those who came from Canada; in fact even against us notwithstanding that they had been for a long time aware of our entire devotion to the interests of the country. It is probable that orders had already been given to arrest us on the frontier, for we had trouble in finding a guide to conduct us to St. Boniface. In view of these manifestations of feeling, and, in accordance with sound advice from Messrs. Cameron and Provencher, we decided that it would be more prudent were Colonel De Salaberry to remain there with all the papers with which the Government had entrusted us, and I to enter alone into the Territory. Accordingly at ten o'clock at night I started on my journey with an employé of the Provisional Government, who accompanied me as far as St. Norbert where I met Riel and some of his employés. As I was much fatigued, having travelled the whole of one night and one day in a very uncomfortable vehicle, I obtained permission, but not without difficulty, to sleep at the house of the Curé of St. Norbert, and to present myself the next day. I at once informed the President that I had been sent by the Canadian Government with Colonel De Salaberry, and that I wished to know at once whether that honourable gentleman would be permitted to enter Red River. After some moments reflection, in view of the assurance that I gave him that one might count upon his loyalty, I was told that he would be sent for, and that he might enter as soon as possible; and according, on the 6th of January, I had the pleasure of welcoming my amiable companion. We immediately communicated our instructions to the President and his Council, and they were taken into consideration.

Some days afterwards, we were invited to appear before the Council, and the President then said that he was sorry to see that our papers gave us no authority to treat with them, but that they would at the same time be very glad to hear us, trusting that we had only good news to tell them.

"Since you have kindly done us the honour of hearing us," said we to them, "we will commence by telling you that we are in truth the bearers of good news, and we are enabled to assure you that the instructions of the Government who have sent us to you are altogether those of peace and goodwill. It desires to respect your persons and your rights, to labour for the improvement of your country by making a road in order to communicate more easily with Canada, &c.

"It acknowledges that it has been deceived in the choice of those employés whose foolish conduct may possibly have compromised it in the Territory; but it strongly condemns the arbitrary acts of these particular employés who have so shamefully abused its confidence."

At the close of the conference, which lasted some hours, during which we were listened to with much attention and respect, we ventured to take upon ourselves to propose a delegation as being the surest means of arriving most speedily at a conclusion satisfactory to both parties. Then the President, after thanking us very courteously, without indeed giving us any official assurance, gave us reason to hope that he might arrive at a satisfactory settlement, telling us that he would look into the matter with his Council, which seemed sufficient for us at the moment, and that he would give us an answer later. What contributed not a little to inspire us with hope was the few words which the President whispered to Colonel De Salaberry as he was leaving the Hall. "Colonel," said he, "don't be in a hurry to leave, it is probable I may entrust you with a commission which cannot but be agreeable to you."

Such was the position of affairs when an unlooked for occurrence not only threw back matters, but caused us, for some time, to lose all hope. I shall not undertake to give you in this letter the details of this incident which so nearly kindled a flame throughout the settlement and perilled for ever the hope of friendly relations between Canada and the Red River. Colonel De Salaberry, who, as well as myself, has seen and heard everything which has been said or done in the Territory since this unhappy occurrence (which so nearly rendered our Commission fruitless) will be able to explain to you the reasons for our delay, and how we have had to reason with the leaders and with the people, always, however, by conversations with single individuals, as that seems to me the best and, probably, the only way of effecting any good result. Fortunately, also, almost all persons of any influence sided with us, and if we have been able to arrive at a satisfactory result it is to the generous efforts and kind assistance of these persons that we owe it.

I think I may say that now the greatest obstacle in the way of a settlement has been removed, and that the people are content to join with Canada, because they believe Canada sincere when she says that she desires their welfare.

Colonel De Salaberry's presence here, and the loyal conduct of that amiable gentleman, has not a little contributed to revive our ancient sympathies for the land of our fathers. I constantly heard it said, "Oh! if Canada had sent in from the first men like this gentleman, we should be satisfied and should feel that they really loved us, and desired our good."—"Yes," I said, "you are right, my good friends, but the Government know all that, and I am satisfied that it is disposed to do anything in its power to content you and make you happy."

It was on the 8th of February that we had the satisfaction of learning that they had decided to treat with Canada, and that they had addressed to us the accompanying letter informing us that they had accepted our invitation to send delegates authorised to come to a satisfactory settlement.

The Colonel was on the point of leaving with the delegates when we received the gratifying intelligence that the Bishop of St. Boniface would shortly arrive. As we were aware that His Lordship had been commissioned by the Government of Canada, it was decided to await his arrival, and that the delegates, if necessary at all, should not leave until after his return. The Bishop's return has already done much good in the Territory, and peace and tranquillity are being generally re-established. As however the Bishop had not sufficient authority to arrange matters, the delegates are to leave this on the 21st, and the worthy Colonel will place this letter in your hands with the assurance of the profound respect of REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PEOPLE OF THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

GENTLEMEN,

St. Boniface, 10th January, 1870.

Having to communicate with the Canadian Government, in whose name, and by whose authority we have come here to treat with the people on the subject of the troubles created in the country by certain persons who are said to have been sent by the Canadian Government, and also to ascertain the conditions demanded by the inhabitants of the North-west Territories in consenting to become part of the Canadian Confederation, we ask of you, the representatives of the people in this territory, to be kind enough to give us in writing, and formally, all these conditions and privileges in order that we may submit them for the examination of the Government by which we have been sent.

Yours, &c.,
(Signed) J. B. THIBAUT,

GENTLEMEN,

Fort Garry, January 11th, 1870.

The President and the representatives of the people of Rupert's Land have given their consideration to the papers which you have communicated to them on the subject of your visit to this country. The President and the representatives of the people do not find in these papers any of the requisite powers to treat, as you say, with the people; and perhaps it would be preferable, in order that you may be properly understood, that you should present yourselves before the Councillors of the people. Should you decide upon doing so, you must name the day and the hour upon which you would wish to be heard.

By order of the President,
(Signed) L. SCHMIDT,
Secretary.

Fort Garry, Court House, February 8th, 1870.

Moved by Mr. Jas. Ross, seconded by Mr. Riel, and resolved unanimously, that as the Canadian Commissioners have invited a delegation from this country to Canada to confer with the Canadian Government, as to the affairs of this country, and as a cordial reception has been promised to said delegates, be it therefore resolved that the invitation be accepted, and that the same be signified to the Commissioners.

By order,
(Signed) WM. COLDWELL,
L. SCHMIDT,
Secretaries to the Convention.

THE DELEGATES' TRIAL.

According to adjournment the Police Magistrate, Martin O'Gara, Esq., sat on Saturday afternoon at the Police Court, to resume the investigation into the charge alleged against the Rev. Father, Richot and Alfred Scott, accused of being accessories to the murder of the late Thomas Scott, at Fort Garry.

A large crowd assembled about the Court House, and the interest in the proceedings was considerably increased by the fact that it was Mr. Young and Mr. Smith, stated by the prosecution to be the most important witnesses in the matter, were in the city.

Shortly after three o'clock his worship took his seat, and immediately afterwards the prisoners came in.

Among others present in court were J. M. Currier, Esq., M.P., Robert Lyon, Esq., M.P., R. Stephenson Esq., M.P., Hon John Ross, M.P., Hon. Mr. Cauchon, M.P., Hon. Mr. Irvine, M.P., Mr. McKeagney, M.P., Hon. Colonel Rankin, M.P., Mr. McDonald, M.P., Hon. T. Anglin, M.P., Mr. Robitaille, M.P., Father O'Connor, Father Collins, Mr. Provencher, Alderman Goulden, Alderman Lapierre, and His Worship the Mayor.

The County Attorney, Robert Lees, Esq., appeared for the Crown, and Mr. Boulton for the private prosecution. Mr. John Hillyard Cameron, Q.C., appeared as counsel for the prisoners, and Mr. D. O'Connor as solicitor for them.

Mr. Lees, after the opening of the Court, informed his Lordship that he had had a conversation with the witnesses intended to have been called, and with the private prosecutor. He was satisfied that the evidence he could produce would not justify a committal, as neither the Crown nor the private prosecutor could produce any further evidence on the charge, he begged to withdraw it.

Mr. Cameron said that of course the prisoners would be fully discharged, and he wished it understood that they were so on account of the Crown not being able to procure evidence to support the charge made. After such a serious crime had been imputed to the prisoners the course now taken was not the most satisfactory, especially after the strong affidavit which the private prosecutor had made on Thursday last.

The case was dismissed, and the prisoners were discharged.

From the Ottawa 'Citizen,' April 25th, 1870.

ARRIVAL OF Mr. HILL.

His interview with Bishop Taché and Governor McTavish.

A special to the 'Toronto Telegraph,' from St. Paul, Minn., says—

James J. Hill, who arrived from Fort Garry, yesterday, had an interview with Riel, Bishop Taché, Governor McTavish and others. They and the company believe that if strange Indians come into the country with the Canadian Force, that all the Indians of the North-West will unite in a fierce resistance; and the friends of Canada are especially apprehensive of the direful effects of such a policy.

CANADA.

Mr. Hill thinks the Scotch and English settlers insincere in their acquiescence to the Provisional Government, and that they would rise against Riel if an opportunity offered. One of them declared that he would give 50% each for the four heads of the Provisional Government. Riel had surrendered the Mackenzie River furs, fifty thousand dollars' worth, in payment of three thousand dollars ransom by Governor McTavish, and two thousand dollars more when needed. Riel had arrested and imprisoned the U. S. Vice-consul, Major Robinson, and Captain Donaldson, for a few hours, because they refused to take the oath of Allegiance. Mr. Hill brought down despatches from Major Robinson to the U. S. Government, protesting against the imprisonment of an American citizen. The 'Pioneer' ridicules the report that the Fenians are operating in Red River waters, and says that the idea of a formidable expedition of Fenians being permitted to muster at St. Paul, and proceed across the State, is preposterous. The only troops preparing to join that expedition are United States soldiers, who will go to Pembina as soon as quarters are built, for the purpose of preserving peace.

Riel has given up to the Hudson Bay Company all property confiscated, and has issued the following proclamation:—

PROCLAMATION.

To the People of the North-West—

Let the assembly of twenty-eight representatives which met on the 9th of March be dear to the people of Red River; that assembly has shown itself worthy of confidence. It has worked in union; the members devoted themselves to public interests, and yielded only to the sentiments of good will, duty, and generosity. Thanks to that noble conduct public authority is now strong; that strength will be employed to sustain and protect the people of the country. To-day the Government pardons all those whom political differences led astray only for a time. An amnesty will be generously accorded to all those who will submit to the Government; who will discountenance or inform against dangerous gatherings. From this day forth public highways are open, and the Hudson Bay Company can now resume business. Themselves contributing to the public good, they circulate their money as of old. They pledge themselves to that course. The attention of the Government is also directed very especially to the northern part of the country, in order that trade may not receive any serious check, and that peace in the Indian districts may thereby be all the more securely maintained. The disastrous war which was at one time threatened has left among us foes, and various deplorable results, but the people feel reassured; and elected by the grace of Providence and the suffrages of my fellow-countrymen to the highest position in the Government of my country, I proclaim that peace reigns in our midst this day. The Government will take every precaution to prevent this peace from being disturbed. While internally all is thus returning to order; externally also matters are looking favourable. Canada invites the Red River people to an amicable arrangement. She offers to guarantee us our rights, and to give us a place in the Confederation equal to that of any of the other Provinces. As defined by the Provincial Government, our national existence will be based upon justice, and shall be respected. Oh, happy country! to have escaped many misfortunes that were prepared for her in seizing her children on the point of war. She recommends that old friendship which used to bind us, and by the ties of the same patriotism she has renewed them again for the sake of preserving their lives, their liberty, and their happiness. Let us remain united and we shall be happy, with the strength of unity. We shall retain prosperity. Ah, my fellow-countrymen, without distinction of language, or without distinction of creed, keep my words in your hearts. If ever, in time, division should unfortunately take place amongst us, as foreigners have heretofore sought to create, that will be a signal for all the disasters which we have had the happiness to avoid. In order to prevent similar calamities the Government will treat with all the severity of the laws those who dare again to compromise the public safety. It is ready to act against the disorder of parties, as well as against that of individuals; but let us hope, however, that extreme measures will be unknown, and that the lessons of the past will guide us in the future.

(Signed) LOUIS RIEL.

COPY of a LETTER from FATHER RICHOT to His Excellency SIR JOHN YOUNG, Bart., Governor-General of Canada.

EXCELLENCE,

Je m'adresse directement en ce moment à vous, le représentant de la Souveraine et le gardien de l'honneur Britannique dans cette contrée. Pourrions demander de vouloir faire respecter, en ma personne, le privilège qui appartient à un parlementaire d'être exempt de toute ingérence hostile, et de toute molestation jusqu'à retour en lieu sur.

CANADA.

Je suis ici en compagnie de Mr. le Juge Black et de Mr. Scott, comme représentant le territoire du Nord-Ouest, sur la foi d'une Proclamation de votre Excellence, sur l'assurance donnée par les commissaires du gouvernement de votre Excellence, et notamment par M. Smith et M. le Colonel de Salaberry et avons été à la frontière rencontrés par un magistrat qui a offert comme il appartenait dans les circonstances présentes, le sauf conduit de son escorte.

Malgré le caractère d'inviolabilité dont nous sommes revêtus—caractère respecté de tout temps et par toutes les nations du monde, indépendamment de toutes circonstances ou complications nous nous voyons soumis à des poursuites et à des indignités que le Gouvernement de votre Excellence connaît, et qu'il deplore, je n'en ai pas de doute, mais qui ne paraissent pas devoir cesser.

Je suis accusé de participation dans une mort d'homme—la chose serait aussi vraie qu'elle est radicalement fausse que cela ne changerait pas ma position comme parlementaire, invité et accepté par le Gouvernement de votre Excellence, car je suis ici en vertu de la foi jurée à la garde de l'honneur Anglais et de l'honneur Canadien.

Pour ma propre satisfaction je déclare à votre Excellence, devant Dieu et devant les hommes, que je n'ai en aucune manière contribué à une mort d'homme. Je ne sais le fait que de l'exécution d'un nommé Scott (si toute fois elle a eu lieu), que comme le sait ou le croit savoir tout le monde à ce moment même, je serais incapable de donner le moindre témoignage de cette affaire; mais je le répète ceci ne concerne en rien mon caractère de parlementaire, qui me rend inviolable, et par lequel j'échappe à toute juridiction civile ou criminelle.

Comptant sur l'honneur public, et sur l'honorabilité de votre Excellence, et de ceux qui avec votre Excellence en sont les gardiens, j'ose demander qu'on fasse cesser la persécution et les insultes auxquelles nous sommes livrés. Cette demande j'ai retardé de la faire pour ne pas ajouter aux difficultés de la circonstance; mais je sais que la dignité de ma mission souffrirait d'un plus long retard.

Enclosures in No. 36.

From the Ottawa 'Globe' of 23rd April, 1870.

Enclosures in
No. 36.

This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the two so-called delegates, Father Richot and Scott, were again brought up on the Ottawa warrant, charging them with aiding and abetting in the murder of Thomas Scott at Fort Garry on the 4th March. Considerable interest was taken in the proceedings—the Court being inconveniently crowded. Several prominent members of the House of Commons being present.

The various gentlemen recently arrived from Red River were also in Court.

Mr. Lees appeared for the prosecution on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. Boulton on behalf of Mr. Scott, on whose information the warrant was granted. Mr. Hillyard Cameron appeared for the accused.

On the Magistrate taking his seat, Mr. Lees said that, after consultation with the counsel of the private prosecutor, and considering the evidence of the witnesses who had been examined, they had come to the conclusion that any evidence that they would be able to produce would not be of such a nature as would justify the committal of the prisoners. The private prosecutor had consented to withdraw further prosecution; and as the Crown had no further evidence to offer, the Crown had no wish to press the matter further.

Mr. Hillyard Cameron said he had nothing to say, of course, about the withdrawal, but a charge had been made against these parties of complicity in the crime of murder—from all they had heard, a murder of a very barbarous character—and they must be unconditionally discharged, because there was no ground whatever to proceed against them. What he would like to understand was, that his clients were discharged because there was no further evidence to be called. They should fully understand that the parties were discharged because the Crown could not proceed further, and that it let the matter drop because they had no evidence whatever to offer. If Mr. Lees thought there was other evidence but could not produce it, the prisoners could only be remanded for a certain time, and then they would be entitled to a discharge.

Mr. Lees said he was informed by the counsel of private prosecutor that he did not wish to call any further evidence, and the Crown had none to call either.

Mr. Cameron said that was all he wanted, and, under those circumstances, the Magistrate's duty would be to discharge the prisoners. These parties had been arrested, and it appeared that there was nothing whatever against them. He thought they had in that respect been very improperly treated.

His honour ordered the prisoners to be discharged, as there was no case against them.

The defendants were accordingly discharged, and left the Court amid the congratulations of several friends. The crowd which had assembled quietly dispersed.

A list of Terms and Conditions referred to in your Commission and in your letter of Instructions.

(Signed) THOS. BUNN,
Secretary of State.

To John Black, Esq.

1. That the Territories, heretofore known as Rupert's Land and North-west, shall not enter into the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada, except as a Province, to be styled and known as the Province of Assiniboia, and with all the rights and privileges common to the different Provinces of the Dominion.

2. That we have two Representatives in the Senate, and four in the House of Commons of Canada, until such time as an increase of population entitle the Province to a greater representation.

3. That the Province of Assiniboia shall not be held liable, at any time, for any portion of the public debt of the Dominion contracted before the date the said Province shall have entered the Confederation, unless the said Province shall have first received from the Dominion the full amount for which the said Province is to be held liable.

4. That the sum of eighty thousand dollars ($80,000) be paid annually by the Dominion Government to the Local Legislature of this Province.

5. That all properties, rights, and privileges enjoyed by the people of this Province, up to the date of our entering into the Confederation, be respected, and that the arrangement and confirmation of all customs, usages, and privileges be left exclusively to the Local Legislature.

6. That during the term of five years, the Province of Assiniboia shall not be subjected to any direct taxation except such as may be imposed by the Local Legislature for municipal or local purposes.

7. That a sum of money equal to eighty cents. per head of the population of this Province be paid annually by the Canadian Government to the Local Legislature of the said Province, until such time as the said population shall have increased to six hundred thousand (600,000).

8. That the Local Legislature shall have the right to determine the qualifications of members to represent this Province in the Parliament of Canada, and the Local Legislature.

9. That, in this Province, with the exception of uncivilised and unsettled Indians, every male native citizen who has attained the age of twenty-one years, and every foreigner, being a British subject, who has attained the same age, and has resided three years in the Province, and is a householder; and every foreigner other than a British subject who has resided here during the same period, being a householder, and having taken the oath of allegiance, shall be entitled to vote at the election of members for the Local Legislature and for the Canadian Parliament. It being understood that this Article be subject to amendment exclusively by the Local Legislature.

10. That the bargain of the Hudson Bay Company with respect to the transfer of the Government of this country to the Dominion of Canada be annulled, so far as it interferes with the rights of the people of Assiniboia, and so far as it would affect our future relations with Canada.

11. That the Local Legislature of the Province of Assiniboia shall have full control over all the public lands of the Province, and the right to amend all acts or arrangements made or entered into with reference to the public lands of Rupert's Land and the North-West, now called the Province of Assiniboia.

12. That the Government of Canada appoint a Commission of Engineers to explore the various districts of the Province of Assiniboia, and to lay before the Local Legislature a report of the mineral wealth of the Province within five years from the date of our entering into Confederation.

13. That treaties be concluded between Canada and the different Indian tribes of the Province of Assiniboia, by and with the advice and co-operation of the Local Legislature of this Province.

14. That an uninterrupted steam communication from Lake Superior to Fort Garry be guaranteed to be completed within the space of five years.

15. That all public buildings, bridges, roads, and other public works be at the cost of the Dominion Treasury.

16. That the English and French languages be common in the Legislature and in the Courts, and that all public documents, as well as all acts of the Legislature, be published in both languages.

17. That whereas the French and English speaking people of Assiniboia are so equally divided as to number, yet so united in their interests and so connected by commerce, family connections, and other political and social relations, that it has happily been found impossible to bring them into hostile collision, although repeated attempts have been made by designing strangers, for reasons known to themselves, to bring about so ruinous and disastrous an event.

And whereas after all the troubles and apparent dissensions of the past, the result of misunderstanding among themselves, they have, as soon as the evil agencies referred to above were removed, become as united and friendly as ever.

Therefore as a means to strengthen this union and friendly feeling among all classes we deem it expedient and advisable—

That the Lieutenant-Governor who may be appointed for the Province of Assiniboia should be familiar with both the French and English languages.

18. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak the English and French languages.

19. That all debts contracted by the Provisional Government of the Territory of the North-west, now called Assiniboia, in consequence of the illegal and inconsiderate measures adopted by Canadian officials to bring about a civil war in our midst, be paid out of the Dominion Treasury; and that none of the members of the Provisional Government, or any of those acting under them, be in any way held liable or responsible with regard to the movement or any of the actions which led to the present negotiations.

20. That in view of the present exceptional position of Assiniboia, duties upon goods imported into the Province shall, except in the case of spirituous liquors, continue as at present for at least three years from the date of our entering the Confederation, and for such further time as may elapse until there be uninterrupted railroad communication between Winipeg and Saint Paul; and also steam communication between Winipeg and Lake Superior.

"I have now the honour to forward extracts from the Ottawa 'Times,' containing a report of the debate which took place on the introduction of the Bill making provision for the government of the North-West country when it shall be transferred to the Dominion."

I also enclose copies of the Bill, which varies in some particulars from the announcement made in Sir J. A. McDonald's speech. For instance, the boundaries of the new province of Manitobah have been enlarged, so as to include Portage La Prairie. It was at first thought that the people of that settlement were averse to being joined to the Red River, but subsequently information of an opposite tendency was received from gentlemen acquainted with the wishes and feelings of its inhabitants, and it was determined to include it.

I annex the brief printed account of the remarks of the Prime Minister, and of Mr. Mackenzie, the leader of the opposition on this topic.

Mr. Mackenzie said the House was not in a position to proceed with the discussion of this Bill to-night, not having read it.

Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald would not press upon the House the consideration of the Bill, but hoped he might be permitted to explain wherein the Bill differed from that which was first introduced. He mentioned that the Government had been informed by Judge Black that the people of the Portage La Prairie, would prefer remaining as they are now, but since they had received other information from gentlemen who had come from Portage La Prairie, that the people of that settlement would not object to being included in Manitobah, and to get rid of a charge that that settlement had been purposely left out of the new territory, the Government had come to the determination of including it. There had been, too, a broad statement to the effect that the Portage La Prairie being left out of the new province was attributable to priestly influence, which he denied. The line would have to run through the lands of a tribe of Indians called the Shoshonees, a very friendly tribe, and to avoid anything disagreeable, they had carried the line by the 96th parallel; the population to be included by the first proposed scheme was 15,000, now it would be 17,000. He stated that the new province, not being in debt, could receive from Canada interest at the rate of 5 per cent on 472,000 dollars a-year, and that 30,000 dollars should be paid yearly by Canada to Manitobah for the support of its Government, and an annual grant equal to 80 cents per head of a population of 17,000. The Custom's duties now chargeable on Rupert's Land to be continued for ten years, as if the tariff of Canada were now applied to Manitobah, the imports being principally by Hudson Bay and Pembina, the charges on imports would be ruinous. He then alluded to the appropriation of 1,400,000 acres of ungranted lands for the benefit of the families of the half-breeds. He explained that there were few pure Indians in the Territory—their descendants were chiefly half-breeds, and were none the less, however, inheritors of the soil, and, therefore, entitled to compensation for any loss which might accrue to them on account of the erection of the new Government. It was worthy of attention, how carefully the interests of the Dominion had been looked to in the reservation made of the lands for all purposes.

Mr. Mackenzie was glad that the hon. gentleman had been compelled to include the settlements previously left out, and which strong circumstantial evidence pointed out had been done at the suggestion of certain parties. He did not care who had caused the change in the scheme, but it was a good one. There were some matters in the Bill conflicting with Confederation Act, which he would endeavour to have amended. A certain paper had been published threatening the perpetual banishment of the hon. member for North Lanark, and several other members of his party. He complained of the state of ignorance in which the House was kept, and thought the Bill contained still many objectionable clauses.

You will observe that the enlargement proposed by the Ministers meets the views and the approval of the opposition as expressed by their leader.

I annex a brief extract from the parliamentary summary

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

133

PARLIAMENTARY SUMMARY.

CANADA.

4th May, 1870.

Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald stated that the Bill for the Government of the North-West was not yet printed, several clauses of the copy from which he had read last night not being completed.

Mr. Mackenzie attacked the Government for having received Father Richot and Mr. Alfred Scott in an official capacity as delegates from the people of the North-West, while in reality they were the mere nominees of Riel and his gang, and the Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, who was always insinuating that those opposed to him were rebels, and was in the habit of charging them with disloyalty, had left a stain upon his own loyalty.

Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald stated that those gentlemen were received as delegates in accordance with instructions from Her Majesty's Imperial Government, and that His Excellency the Governor-General, as an Imperial officer, had given him leave to state as they knew all along that he intended to receive these delegates, and consider their representations, as well as those of other parties coming from Red River; that the sole object the Government had in view was the peaceable acquisition of the country at as little expense as possible; and he had no doubt if their efforts were not defeated by the Opposition that they would frame a Bill, which would satisfy the House and the inhabitants of the North-West.

Mr. Bellrose stated that Dr. Lynch, whom he had esteemed as an honourable man, had been guilty of falsehood in charging Father Richot with being present at the execution of Thomas Scott, it having been proved before the magistrate that he had nothing to do with it.

* * * * *

The Ministers held repeated conferences with the delegates, and arranged the terms with them, which are set forth in Sir J. A. Macdonald's speech and the clauses of the Bill. I was kept constantly informed of all details, and of the progress made or the difficulties raised on any particular point, and on Tuesday last the conditions of the arrangements having been fully discussed and agreed to by the delegates on the one part, and the Ministers on the other, the delegation was introduced to me by the Premier, Sir J. A. Macdonald, and I had a lengthened and interesting conversation with them. I need not trouble you with details, but Sir Clinton Murdoch was present, and the impression left upon his mind, as upon mine, was that the delegates considered the terms accorded to them such as would satisfy the people and ensure peace.

The printed extract which follows gives an accurate summary of the terms of the agreement.

(Wednesday, May 4, 1870.)

THE PROVINCE OF MANITOBAH.

The Bill for the erection of a portion of the North-West Territory into a Province to be confederated with the Dominion of Canada received a first reading on Monday last. In extent the new Province will consist of 10,000 square miles, stretching from the 49th to the 50th parallel of latitude, or 60 miles north, including the Red River and the Assiniboine River, where they meet together; or, to be more particular, the Province is to include that region commencing at a point on the frontier of the United States Territory, 96 degrees west of Greenwich, and extends to a point 98 degrees 15 minutes west, being bounded on the north by the 49th parallel of latitude, and on the south by latitude 50 degrees 20 minutes. The name of the new Province is to be Manitobah, or, "The God who speaks." Its extent is by no means great, and the present inhabitants not over 15,000. For governing and legislative purposes there is to be a Lieutenant-Governor, under a commission from the Governor-General of Canada, with power over that portion of the North-West not at present embraced, but intended to be embraced, in the new Province of Manitobah, ruling by instructions received upon Order in Council from Canada; a Legislative Council consisting of seven members, and a House of Assembly consisting of twenty-four members, from which bodies a ministry, responsible to the people, will be selected to assist the Lieutenant-Governor in the conduct of the Government. The new Province will also form an integral part of Confederated Canada, and have two Senator representatives and four Commoners in the Dominion Parliament, the Senate representation to be increased when the population shall reach 75,000 to four. In addition to this transcript of the British Constitution, or rather of the Canadian Constitution, to be bestowed upon the little Province of Manitobah, the English and French languages are to be considered legal languages, and all the possessions of the present resident populations secured to them in free and common soccage, while there shall be a reservation for the purpose of extinguishing the Indian title of 1,200,000 acres out of lands which, not being the property of individuals, shall belong to the Dominion of Canada. This is the scheme as concisely and briefly as it can be put. That it will meet with favour there is scarcely any doubt. No one can question the disposition to do full justice to the present inhabitants and to provide for the requirements of future generations. There is nothing indeed wanting to make Manitobah a prosperous and happy land but order,—that sense of security which a belief in the majesty of law over prejudice and passion produces. This desire for order is strong among the law-abiding residents of Red River as it is determined upon here. There must be freedom to go to and freedom to return from that country to all honest men. There must be freedom to dwell there. All classes and sects, and degrees and conditions of men must be permitted to do as they please within the bounds of the laws made upon the spot for local government, and within those laws, which will affect the Province as a part of the Dominion Confederation. There will be freedom of opinion in all matters, and no supremacy in any. All men, in the eyes of the law, will be equal. The men within the gates and the stranger without will be on an equal footing, so far as law is concerned, and to secure this desirable aim 390 regular soldiers of the Queen, with a force of Canadian Militia, fully organised, equipped, and disciplined, three-fourths greater, will proceed to Winnipeg, the nucleus of the capital of Manitobah on a mission of peace.

CANADA.

This miniature government may seem to Mr. Mackenzie to be like something which he has seen described by the Dean of St. Patrick's in 'Gulliver's Travels'—A House of Lords consisting only of seven persons, and a Commons of two dozen smacks of littleness; but the honourable gentleman should remember that his own great Province of Ontario had even a smaller beginning under Governor Simcoe than the Province of Manitobah. In Rogers' 'Canada' we find the following account of the first Parliament of Upper Canada, on the 18th September, 1792:—

"The capital of the Province was at Newark, now Niagara. The seat of Government, according to the Duke de la Rochefoucault Liancourt, who visited it in 1795, consisted of about a hundred houses, "mostly very fine structures." Governor Simcoe apparently did not occupy one of them, but a miserable wooden house," formerly occupied by the Commissaries, who resided there on account of the navigation of the lake,—his guard consisting of four soldiers, who every morning came from the fort, to which they returned in the evening. It is difficult even to guess at the appearance of the Parliament building. Assuredly it did not require to be of great size. When the time arrived for opening the session only two, instead of seven members of the Legislative Council, were present. No Chief Justice appeared to fill the office of Speaker of the Council. Instead of sixteen members of the Legislative Assembly five only attended. What was still more embarrassing, no more could be collected. The House was, nevertheless, opened. A guard of honour, consisting of fifty soldiers from the fort, were in attendance. Dressed in silk, Governor Simcoe entered the hall, with his hat on his head, attended by his Adjutant and two Secretaries. The two members of the Council gave notice of his presence in the Upper House to the Legislative Assembly, and the five members of the latter having appeared at the Bar of the two Lords, His Excellency read his speech from the throne. He informed the honourable gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and the gentlemen of the House of Assembly that he had summoned them together under the authority of an Act of Parliament of Great Britain, which had established the British Constitution, and all that secured and maintained it to Upper Canada. That the wisdom and beneficence of the Sovereign had been eminently proved by many provisions in the memorable Act of Separation, which would extend to the remotest posterity the invaluable blessings of that Constitution. That great and momentous trusts and duties had been committed to the representatives of the Province, infinitely beyond whatever had distinguished any other British Colony. That they were called upon to exercise, with due deliberation and foresight, various offices of civil administration, with a view of laying the foundation of that union of industry and wealth, of commerce and power, which may last through all succeeding ages. That the natural advantages of the new Province were inferior to none on this side of the Atlantic. That the British Government had paved the way for its speedy colonization, and that a numerous and agricultural people would speedily take possession of the soil and climate. To this speech the replies of the Council and Assembly were but an echo. The seven gentlemen legislators proceeded actively to business."

* * * * *

I enclose copies of the reports of Donald Smith, Esq., and of the Reverend J. B. Thibault; * also a proclamation recently published by Riel, which is construed in most quarters as dictated by the feeling that power is slipping away from his grasp, and that he is desirous of concealing growing weakness by the resort to exaggeration and menace.

Proclamation.

The remarks in the paragraph introductory to the Proclamation are worthy of attention. They prove the necessity for sending a well organised force to the Settlement, in order to restore the confidence of the peaceable inhabitants and calm down by the prestige of British authority the numerous Indian tribes whose fears or expectations have been excited, and their minds unsettled by the rumours of disturbances and revolution at Fort Garry.

Enclosure 1 in No. 40.

CANADA.

From the Ottawa 'Times' of 3rd May, 1870.

House of Commons, Ottawa, 2nd May, 1870.

The SPEAKER took the chair at 3 o'clock.

Hon. Mr. TILLEY, in the absence of the Hon. Sir Francis Hincks, presented the eleventh Report of the Committee on Public Accounts, containing the following Resolution adopted by the Committee: "That as it appears there are great irregularities in the return of mileage, in some cases amounting to a difference of 100 miles with the Members residing in the same place, the attention of both Houses is drawn to this fact with a view to connecting the distances, so that the actual distances travelled shall be paid, and no more."

Hon. Mr. LANGEVIN presented the returns to various addresses adopted by the House.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—I rise, sir, with the consent of the House, to submit the result of our deliberations for the framing of a Constitution for the country heretofore known as Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory. In moving for leave to introduce this Bill, of which I have given notice, I may premise by stating that there has been a discussion going on as to whether we should have a Territory or a Province. The answer we made on behalf of the Canadian Government was that such a thing as a territory was not known to the British colonial system, that the expression was not recognized, that the expression was colony or province, and that we thought it would be better to adhere to the old and well known form of expression—well known to us as Colonists of the Empire—and not bring a new description into our statute book. It was not, of course, a matter of any serious importance whether the country was called a province or a territory. We have provinces of all sizes, shapes and constitutions; there are very few colonies with precisely the same constitution in all particulars, so that there could not be anything determined by the use of the word. Then the next question discussed was the name of the province. It was thought that was a matter of taste, and should be considered with reference to euphony and with reference also as much as possible to the remembrance of the original inhabitants of that vast country. Fortunately, the Indian languages of that section of the country give us a choice of euphonious names, and it is considered proper that the Province which is to be organized shall be called Manitoba. The name Assiniboine, by which it has hitherto been called, is considered to be rather too long, involving confusion, too, between the river Assiniboine and the Province Assinibonei. I suppose, therefore, there will be no objection to the name that has been fixed upon, which is euphonious enough in itself, and is an old Indian name, meaning "The God who speaks—the speaking God." There is a fine lake there, called lake Manitoba, which forms the western boundary of the Province. A subject of very great importance, which engaged much of our consideration, was the settlement of the boundaries of the Province we are organizing. It is obvious that that vast country could not be formed into one Province. It is obvious that the Dominion Government and the Dominion Parliament must retain, for Dominion purposes, the vast section of that country, which is altogether or nearly without inhabitants, and that the Province must be confined to the more settled country that now exists. We found, happily, that there was no great difficulty in regard to this matter, that there was no discussion upon the subject, and I may read a description of the boundaries which have been settled upon:—"The region which is to form the new Province of Manitoba commences at a point on the frontier of the United States Territory, 96 degrees West of Greenwich, and extends to a point 98 degrees and 15 minutes West, being bounded on the South by 49th parallel of latitude, and on the North by latitude 50 degrees and 30 minutes."

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD here placed a map on the table, showing the boundaries of the new Province, and the members gathered round to examine it.

Hon. Colonel GRAY.—How many square miles are there in the new Province?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—Elven thousand square miles. It is a small Province, as the House will observe, but yet it contains the principal part of the settlements which are ranged, as those who have studied the matter know, along the banks of Red River and the banks of Assiniboine from the point of their confluence at or near Fort Garry up westward towards Lake Manitoba. One of the clauses of the Bill which I propose to lay before the House, but which is not yet in such a position to go into the printer's hands preparatory to the second reading, provides that such portions of the North-West Territory, as are not included in this Province, shall be governed as an unorganized tract by the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, under a separate commission under the great seal of the Dominion, and that until they are settled and organized they shall be governed by Orders in Council.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—Does the Bill provide a Constitution for that Territory?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—No. It simply provides that the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba shall be Governor of the remaining portion of the Territory under directions of Orders in Council, and action upon separate commission issued under the Great Seal. In settling the constitution of the Province, the question of how far representative institutions should be properly conferred at this time has been fully discussed. The House knows that this subject was discussed last Summer by the Press in all parts of Canada, and that there was a good deal of objection that the Bill of last Session, provisional as it was, and intended to last only a few months, did not provide representative institutions for the people of that Territory. That Bill provided that the Lieutenant-Governor should have an Executive Council, and that that Council should have power to make laws, subject, of course, to the veto power, the paramount power of the Governor-General here. It was passed simply for the purpose of having something like the rudiments of a Government, from the time the Territory was admitted into the Dominion, it being understood that the Act should continue in force only until the end of the present Session of Parliament. On the introduction of that Bill by the Government, it was received in that particular, and I think in every particular, with the almost unanimous sanction and approval of Parliament. The Government felt they were not in a position from acquaintance with the circumstances of the country and wants of its people, to settle anything like a fixed constitution upon the Territory. They thought it, therefore, better that they should merely pass a temporary Act to last for a few months, providing for the appointment of a Lieutenant-Governor, for which office my honourable friend for North Lanark was selected, who, when he arrived upon the spot, would have an opportunity of reporting upon the requirements of the country, and, after discussing the matter with the principal men of the settlement, to suggest what kind of institutions were best suited to those requirements. Unfortunately, no opportunity was offered for entering into that discussion or getting that information. One result, however, of the enquiry that was instituted in this country, was to pour a flood of light upon the Territory; and I have no doubt every honourable member of this House has taken advantage of it, so as to enable him, with a greater degree of certainty, to approach the subject of what the Constitution ought to be. Besides that, we have discussed the proposed Constitution with such persons who have been in the North-West as we have had an opportunity of meeting, and the result has been as I will shortly describe. In the first place, as regards the representation of the Province of Manitobah in the Dominion Parliament, the proposition of the Government is that the people of the Province shall be represented in the Senate by two Members until the Province shall have a population at a decennial census of 50,000. From thenceforth the people there shall have representation in the Senate of three Members; and subsequently, when the population shall amount to 75 000, they shall have representation of four Members. That will give them the same representation in the Upper House of the Dominion Legislature as has been proposed for Prince Edward's Island, and agreed to by the representatives of that Province at the Quebec Conference—Prince Edward's Island being the smallest of the Provinces, having a population of about 85,000. The Bill does not provide for any increase of numbers beyond four. It is not likely that, in our day at any rate, the Province will have a population which will entitle it to more. With respect to its representation in the House of Commons, it is proposed that it shall have four Members in this House—the Governor-General having, for that purpose, power to separate and divide the whole of the Province into four electoral districts, each containing as nearly as possible an equal number of the present community of settlers. The executive power of the Province will, of course, as in all the other Provinces of the Dominion, be vested in a Lieutenant-Governor, who shall be appointed like the other Lieutenant-Governor, by commission from the Governor-General, under the Great Seal of the Dominion. He shall have an Executive Council, which shall be composed of seven persons, holding such offices as the Lieutenant-Governor shall, from time to time, think fit, and, in the first instance, shall not exceed five in number. The meetings of the Legislature, until otherwise ordered by the Legislature itself, shall be held at Fort Garry, or within a mile of it. With respect to the Legislative body, there was considerable difficulty and long discussion whether it should consist of one chamber or two; whether, if one chamber, it should be composed of the representatives of the people and of persons appointed by the Crown, or Local Government, or whether they should be severed and the two chambers constituted—all these questions were fully discussed. After mature consideration, it was agreed that there should be two chambers. I see my honourable friend (Honourable Mr. McDougall) laughs, but, being a true Liberal, he will not object to the people having a voice in the settlement of their own Constitution, and to determine whether they shall have one or two chambers, or even three if it suits their purpose to have them. It is proposed, then, to have two chambers, but the Legislative Council is not a very formidable one. It is to be composed, in the first place, of seven Members. After the expiration of four years it may be increased to twelve, but not more than that number. The object of making that provision is this, that we could not well have a smaller Legislative body than seven; and yet it might be well that the Government of to-day—the Lieutenant-Governor having a responsible Ministry—to have the power of meeting the difficulty arising from a possible dead-lock between the two chambers—the Legislative Assembly and the Legislative Council. It is therefore proposed that after the end of the first four years—after the first Parliament of the Province—the Lieutenant-Governor may, if he thinks proper, upon the advice of his Executive Council, who have the confidence of the people and of their representatives, increase the number up to twelve. The Legislative Assembly shall be composed of a body of twenty-four members—the Lieutenant-Governor dividing the Province for that purpose into twenty-four Electoral Districts having due regard to the various communities into which the settlement is at present divided. All these clauses and stipulations are, of course, subject to alterations by the people themselves, except so far as they relate to the appointment of the Lieutenant-Governor, which, of course, rests upon the same authority as in the other Provinces of the Dominion. In all other respects they may alter their Constitutions as they please. It is provided in the Bill that all the clauses of the British North America Act, excepting as altered by the Bill itself, or excepting those clauses which apply only to one or two Provinces, and not to the whole of the Provinces, shall apply to the new Province. The Bill contains various other clauses, with which I will not now trouble the House, because they refer to matters of no great interest, except as they are requisite to carry on the machinery of the Executive and Legislative bodies. Until the Legislature otherwise provides the qualification of voters for Members, both of House of Commons and Local Legislatures, shall be the same as provided by the Confederation Act for the District of Algoma. I think the House will agree with me that no other qualification can be provided. The clause runs that every British subject who has attained the age of 21 years, and who is and has been a householder for one year, shall have a right to vote. The duration of the Legislative Assembly shall be four years, as in the other Provinces.

CANADA.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—What is the qualification of candidates?

Hon Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—We have said nothing of that in the Bill. With respect to pecuniary clauses of the Bill it is provided that as Manitobah has, fortunately, no debts, it shall be entitled to be paid by and receive from Canada, by half-yearly payments, a sum which is to be ascertained in the same way as the sum settled was on Newfoundland last session—that is, fixing the whole of the population at 15,000, and at that rate comparing the difference between that population and the population of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, anybody can ascertain the amount payable to them per head, namely, 27l. 27s. The Bill then proposes that the same annual subsidy of 80 cents per head of the population, estimating it at 15,000, shall be paid as in other Provinces, and that that rate shall continue until the population is 400,000 as also in other Provinces. There is the further provision that the sum of 30,000 dollars shall be paid for the support of the Government. Although it is not at all required that the next clause should be in the Act, yet it is inserted, for some reasons,—as it was inserted in the Act respecting Newfoundland—in order to satisfy the people that certain services will be provided for, those services being thrown on the Dominion Government by the Confederation Act, such as the salary of the Lieutenant-Governor, postal service, collection of customs, &c. There are also provisions to satisfy the mixed population of the country inserted in the Bill for the same reason, although it will be quite in the power of the Local Legislature to deal with them. They provide that either the French or English language may be used in the proceedings of the Legislature, and that both of them shall be used in records and journals of both Chambers; that provision, as far as the Province of Quebec is concerned, is contained in the Union Act. With respect to the lands that are included in the Province, the next clause provides that such of them as do not now belong to individuals, shall belong to the Dominion of Canada, the same being within boundaries already described. There shall, however, out of the lands there, be a reservation for the purpose of extinguishing the Indian title of 1,200,000 acres. That land is to be appropriated as a reservation for the purpose of settlement by half-breeds and their children, of whatever origin, on very much the same principle as lands were appropriated to U. E. Loyalists for purposes of settlement by their children. This reservation, as I have said, is for the purpose of extinguishing the Indian titles and all claims upon the lands within the limits of the Province. There is a question, however, which, although small in itself, excites a great deal of interest among the purely white inhabitants, the descendants of the Scotch and English settlers, who are not half-breeds, and do not come within this category. It is, perhaps, not known to a majority of this House that the old Indian titles are not extinguished over any portion of this country, except for two miles on each side of the Red River and the Assiniboine. The lands that have been granted by deed or license of occupation by the Hudson Bay Company, run from the water or river bank on each side for two miles. But, from a practice that has arisen from necessity, and that has been recognised by the local laws there, in the rear of each of these farms, or tracts of land, held by the farmers or settlers, there is a right of cutting hay for two miles immediately beyond their lots. That is a well understood right. It is absolutely required by these people, and excites in them equal interest. The entire extent and value of those rights cannot be well established or fixed here, and it is therefore proposed to involve the assistance of the Local Legislature in that respect, and to empower it to provide, with the express sanction of the Governor-General, for the use in common of such lands by those inhabitants who may wish to avail themselves of it. My honourable friend (Honourable Sir George E. Cartier) reminds me of the question of the confirmation of the legal occupation of the people there. It is so obviously the interest of the people of this country to settle that Territory as quietly as possible, that it would be most a unwise policy for a new government to create any difficulties as to the rights of property—it would be most unwise to allow those difficulties to arise which might spring from one man having a title to a freehold, while his neighbour would only have to say he held under a lease of occupation. But as these settlers are not numerous, and it is of great importance that they should be satisfied. It is proposed to insert a clause in the Bill, confirming all titles of peaceable occupation to the people now actually resident upon the soil. But in the absence of necessary information here, it is proposed to invoke the aid and intervention and the experience of the Local Legislature upon this point, subject to the sanction of the Governor-General. The Government hope and believe that this measure, or a measure involving the principle which I have just mentioned will be satisfactory to the people of all classes and races in that country. This Bill contains very few provisions but not too few for the object to be gained, which is the quiet and peaceable acceptance of the new state of things by the mass of the people there and the speedy settlement of the country by hardy emigrants from all parts of the civilized world. While, Sir, we believe that this measure will receive the acceptance of the people of the North-West, that it will be hailed as a boon and convincing proof of the liberality of people and the Legislature of the Dominion; while we believe it will have that effect, it is quite clear that order must be restored; that peace must be kept in that country; and that the Government, which in future is to obtain control there, must be respected. It is necessary, also, that the fears of an Indian war and foreign aggression, which have been raised, very naturally, in the minds of the people of that country, from recent unhappy events, should be allayed. For all these reasons it is fitting and proper that a force should be there to cause law and order to be respected. I am glad to say that events have recently resulted in an arrangement by which, for the purposes I have mentioned, and in no hostile spirit, but with the desire, and the resolve at the same time, to establish law, and peace, and order—an arrangement, I say, has been made between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Canada for the despatch of an expedition. That expedition will be a mixed one, comprised partly of Her Majesty's regular Troops, and partly of Canadian Militia; and from all those whom we have had an opportunity of seeing from the North-West, we are told that a force sent in that spirit, and commanded by an Officer of Her Majesty's service, under Her Majesty's sanction, will be received not only with kindness, but with gladness, and that the people will be glad to retain them much longer than, as a force, there will be any necessity for their staying. For so soon as these unfortunate feelings of fear and jealousy are removed, it will be, of course, proper that a force should be on as economical and limited a scale as due regard for peace and order will permit. These arrangements must, of course, be submitted to Parliament, and a vote of the House sanctioning the necessary expenditure obtained. For this object, I have no doubt, such a vote will be obtained. The force will be comprised of about one-fourth of her Majesty's Regular Troops, and three-fourths Canadian Militia, and the expenditure will be borne in the same proportion, her Majesty's Government paying one-fourth of the expenditure and the Dominion three-fourths. My honourable friend beside me

CANADA.

(Honourable Sir George E. Cartier) reminds me that, since the written arrangement was entered into, which I have just mentioned, a proposition was made to increase Her Majesty's contingent by, perhaps, 140, making the number of regular Troops about 390, the balance being made up of Canadian Militia. This Militia was called upon to volunteer from different districts, and such has been the alacrity displayed, that if a force was proposed to assume the proportion of an army there would be no trouble in getting the men. Happily, that necessity does not, I am fain to believe, exist. It was only on Saturday that the final arrangement with respect to this force was carried out, and the House, therefore, could not any earlier than now receive this information. On Saturday the Order in Council was passed embodying the provisions I have mentioned. The cable has been in active operation on this subject for some considerable time, but it is only within a few days that the final arrangements I have indicated were made. When this measure comes up for the second reading, and when the Resolutions are proposed in Committee of the Whole, of course, explanations will be given in full detail upon every possible head of expenditure. I now move the first reading of the Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE said it was manifestly impossible to discuss the Bill at that time, but he looked upon the whole proposal of the Government as one that was open to great objection, and that the whole course taken in the North-West matter was one exceedingly disastrous to the country. The House was informed at the beginning of the Session that the Government had declared taking possession of the country, and had not paid the amount agreed to with the Hudson Bay Company, in order to throw the expense of settling the disputes on the Imperial Government, and to force them to take possession for us, and to hand it over to us as a new purchase. He had always looked upon the Territory as their own, and the payment as a payment simply to obtain a quiet claim deed to us of that Territory. He looked upon the proposal of the Government as most reprehensible, and calculated to bring our Government and people into dispute with Imperial statesmen, as a refusal, under the circumstances, they had no right to make. He was now convinced, after much careful examination of the evidence of every one who had come from that Territory, that had the proposition been carried out, with good faith, that insurrection, with all its consequent troubles, disasters, and murder would have been avoided. In consequence of this conduct of the Government, they had been threatened with a war of races and nations; and now, as the result of all this political tergiversation and bad faith, the pitiable compensation of the Imperial Government being willing to pay one quarter part of the expenses attending the restoration of Government. This showed, more than anything he could name, the results of the policy the Government pursued, and the want of national faith which had characterised the Government in their dealing. With regard to the Government of the country he must, of course, examine the Bill in detail before he could venture even to give an opinion as to its merits, but it did seem a little ludicrous to establish a little municipality in the North-West, of 10,000 square miles—about the size of two or three counties in Ontario—with a population of about 15,000 people, having two Chambers, and a right to send two Members to the Senate, and four to the House here. The whole thing had such a ludicrous look, that it only put one in mind of some of the incidents in "Gulliver's Travels." It may be, on more close investigation, that more palliating circumstances might be brought to light for this extraordinary Constitution, but at the present moment he could only say that he looked upon it as one of the most preposterous schemes that was ever submitted to the Legislature. There was one or two matters in Sir John A. Macdonald's statement to which he would refer. He had told the House about the land policy; further than this, that lands in occupation held under license or agreement of the Hudson Bay Company were to be retained by those in possession, or the present local authorities, while the Dominion are to exercise control over the remainder of the Territory. A certain portion to be set aside to settle Indian claims, and another portion to settle Indian claims that the half-breeds have. But these half-breeds were either Indians or not. They were not looked upon as Indians, some had been to Ottawa, and given evidence, and did not consider themselves Indians. They were regularly settled upon farms, and what the object could be in making some special provision for them that was not made for other inhabitants was more than he could well understand. They were also told that clause in the Bill was to affirm all grants of lands, licenses, and other claims granted by the Hudson Bay Company. They were unable to pronounce an opinion upon the particular kind of claims embraced, but, if his information was correct, the Hudson Bay Company had dealt with a certain portion of the lands in that Territory in a way which we could not possibly justify nor recognize. If we had so dealt with lands as to bestow on certain corporations, whether secular or religious, tracts of land that would interfere with the settlement of the country, that question had to be met by the House if the Government had not had the moral courage to deal with it. He had no hesitation in saying that the statement made by the Premier was in that respect most unsatisfactory, or, at best, exceedingly incomplete. He had seen it stated in papers that a gentleman who had been employed under the Lieutenant-Governor—

Hon. Mr. McDougall.—No.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that he was being employed by the Government to purchase stores and organizing a corps of mounted police, but they had received no statement on the point by the honourable gentleman, and, in the absence of any answers, he would not comment upon the fact at present. There was another point to which the honourable gentleman had not referred. He had not said whether the Government had paid the money to the Hudson Bay Company. Without waiting for a formal answer might he ask that information now?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—It has not been paid, but it is to be paid immediately.

Hon. Mr. McDougall.—Before the expedition starts?

Mr. MACKENZIE.—I presume before the Bill passes this House.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—Yes.

Mr. MACKENZIE was glad of it, and would be ready to support the Government in it, and could only regret that it was not made sooner. He trusted that the Government would bring down such a statement as to the claims which were to be recognized in the clauses of the Bill; because in absence of the knowledge as to the extent of these claims, it was manifestly impossible to pass any such claims. Everything must be done so as to retain the liberty of every class and creed of Her Majesty's subjects on the same footing, and that no one shall have any special claims or privileges recognized in that new Territory. He would look with very grievous apprehension on anything that would introduce into that new Territory the divisions which were for so many years so disastrous in our own country, and which kept many of the denominations concerned in these disputes in a state of internecine warfare, which produced so disastrous results to society generally, and particularly to the churches engaged. Anything that effect preventing this, we must insist on here; and that no legislation shall be initiated by this House which has a tendency to initiate, permit or perpetuate anything of that sort. If this was provided for it would, of course, obviate some of the objections to many clauses of the Bill. With regard, however, to the excessive expenditure which was to be imposed upon the Dominion by the arrangements of the Bill, it involved an amount of debt of 416,500 dollars.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER.—21,000 dollars a year.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—Yes. There would then be 12,000 dollars to make up the 50 cents per head, and, in addition, the Government propose to pay annually 30,000 dollars for Local Government. He could scarcely conceive that that amount was necessary. He thought if the amount was capitalized it would admirably provide for the interest of the Province. Roads were not required there as they were in other districts, and the expenses for building would not at all compare with that which was imposed on larger Provinces. If they were to carry on Government economically, it must be in the shape rather of one large Municipal Council than a Provincial Government. He should discuss the Bill more particularly when they had it before them; but it was necessary that the House should be in possession of all information the Government had had in preparing to discuss the measure. It was certainly unfair that certain Members of the House should be in possession of M. Thiebault's report, which he understood had been in print a fortnight.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—I can only say that it was not by the sanction of the Government.

Hon. Mr. MORRIS said it had not been sent to the printer's a fortnight.

Mr. MACKENZIE said, at any rate he had known it was in the possession of Members, and the way the House was treated in this matter was only on a par with their treatment from first to last. In the whole question the sense of the Government was most extraordinary, and he could not refrain from charging the Government with having, by their misconduct of this matter, thrown an enormous expense on the country, brought the Government into disrepute with the Imperial Authorities; and that, in refusing to keep faith in carrying out an agreement for a Territory, which we have always regarded as our own, they have plunged us into expenses which we cannot possibly conceive.

Enclosure 2 in No. 40.

DOMINION OF CANADA.

From the 'Ottawa Times,' May 4th, 1870.

Ottawa, May 2nd, 1870.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER said it would have been more opportune to have taken the objections at the second reading, rather than now. He himself would not enter on the merits of the Bill, but make a few prefatory observations in answer to those of the Member for Lambton. He had found fault with the Constitution of the Territory, and there being two Houses for so small a portion of the Territory. He referred to Prince Edward Island, with its population of only 85,000, and an area of only 1,300,000 acres, which, from the first, had a political organization and all the machinery of a Government, and to New Brunswick, which, at the time of its separation from Nova Scotia, had a population not larger than that of Nova Scotia. Manitobah was the key to the whole territory, and when they had defined its limits they had done a good work. This Bill had, as it were, disclosed the policy of the Government, for it was evident there was room between Ontario and the Rocky Mountains for several Provinces, and Manitobah was made the model or starting point for the Provinces to be erected to the Pacific Ocean. As to the objection that there was too large a subsidy, he said the new Province was entitled to be placed on the same footing as any other. If the people had waited till they were 50,000 or 75,000, instead of being entitled to $21,000 a year from the Government, they would have been entitled to double or perhaps treble that amount. There was room in the Territory for a million of inhabitants, and yet for some time all the expenditure for this would be only $21,000 for local wants, and a subsidy of $30,000 a year for the Local Government. The land, except 1,200,000 acres, was under the control of the Government, and these were held for the purpose of extinguishing the claims of the Half-breeds, which it was a desire to leave unsettled, as they had been the first settlers, and made the Territory. These lands were not to be dealt with as the Indian reserves, but were to be given to the heads of families to settle their children. The policy, after settling these claims, was to give away the land so as to fill up the country. As it did so emigration would go westward, fill up other portions of the Territory, and so the grand scheme of Confederation would be carried out. Instead of, as in Newfoundland, where they were to pay $150,000 a year for these lands, those in the North-west had been given up for nothing. It must be in the contemplation of the Members of the House that these could be used for the construction of the British Pacific Railway from the East to the West, and yet the Member for Lambton complained of the grant of $30,000 at the beginning of the existence of the Province. Then they were to get 80 cents a head till the population amounted to 400,000, and at the greatest estimate there never would be more than $425,000 a year ever going to that Province, and that not for many years hence, but the sooner the better, as the greater would be the contributions to the exchequer. The population was now only 15,000, but the consumption was not for them alone, but for 200,000 Indians, who consumed an immense quantity of dutiable articles. After a few other observations, in which he said he would not enter into the question of the appointment of an officer of constabulary, and stated that he believed, when the Member for Lambton read the Bill carefully, he would recognize the wisdom of its provisions.

Mr. MACKENZIE said he had not entered into any explanation as to the mounted police, and the appointment of Captain Cameron.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said that it was intended to have a body of mounted rifles to protect the people from the chance of an Indian war. Under the beneficent rule of the Hudson's Bay Company there was peace in the Territory, while across the line there were frequent wars, and the Indians were shot down by emigrants going West—shot down ruthlessly. As the expectation was that there would be a large influx of emigrants from Europe or from Canada, and there was a fear that emigrants from the American States, accustomed to deal with the Indians as enemies, would be shooting them down and causing great disturbances. The necessity, therefore, arose to have a small but active force of cavalry to act as mounted police, so that they could move rapidly along the frontier to repress disturbances; and it was not proposed to make the force more than 200 men. They would be drilled as cavalry, or rather as mounted riflemen, and be disciplined as a military body, but act as constabulary. Such a force would be amply sufficient for the purpose, and be enough to secure order.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that the question as to whether Captain Cameron was employed had not been answered. If he was raising a force, how and where was he doing so?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said Captain Cameron had not received a commission. The Government had employed Mr. McMicken and Mr. Coursol as Police Commissioners, the latter of whom was engaging men in Lower Canada speaking French, and able to read and write, and to speak both French and English if possible. He intended to raise 50 men in Canada altogether, and 150 more in the Territory, commingling the different races, as had been done in India so successfully. It was the best force that could be raised, and by the commingling no predominance would be given to either.

Mr. MACKENZIE said he was glad to find that the Government had not employed Captain Cameron.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said he did not say that. He said that a Commission had not been issued. He might say, however, that he was a most efficient officer.

Mr. MACKENZIE said he might be in his own place, but not in the position proposed. He had a further question to ask. A number of persons had lost their all in these disturbances, and had all their goods seized and used. Were they to receive compensation?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said he did not know what he meant. He did not see how this House could deal with such a question. That might be a matter to be settled in England.

Mr. MACKENZIE did not see how they could go to England for compensation. He presumed they would not deny some remedy should be provided.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said they had not yet reached that point, as this Bill was simply one for the Government of the country. The other was a separate matter, and will be so considered either here or in England, but it was premature to discuss it now.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER explained in French, in the course of which,

Mr. GODIN asked if the Constitution was to be submitted to the people before being passed.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER—No.

Hon. Mr. McDougall said he spoke with some reluctance on account of the position he had unfortunately held with respect to the Territory. With respect to the Bill, he might say he was both pleased and displeased. Pleased at its having been brought down, and displeased at its unsatisfactory character. It must be displeasing to every one to know that the bargain settled with the three Governments, had been refused to be carried out on the pretence of the motive, which it was said actuated the Government. It was known that the reason given was that the Government desired to compel the Imperial Government to put them in peaceable possession of the country. They had been so far successful that the Imperial Government had promised to send 200 or 300 troops into the country and to pay one-fourth of the expenses. He apprehended there would be some condition attached to that agreement which would probably lessen its value to this country. Were they to understand that the Imperial Government agreed to pay one-fourth of all the expense, no matter what might be the extravagance of our Government? Were they to bear one-fourth of the expense of constructing boats, many of which were constructed in Lower Canada upon the miserable rule that everything done must be distributed between French and English. The transportation of these boats to Collingwood would cost as much as the boats themselves. Were they to understand that the Imperial Government agreed to bear one-fourth of that extravagance? He believed not. With regard to the leading features of the Bill they did not commend themselves to his judgment. People were not prepared for, and did not want so cumbrous and intricate a system of Government, and it was absurd to impose it upon them. A cheap simple and direct system of Government such as that provided for in the Bill of last Session would answer every purpose, and would meet the almost universal approval of the people. He objected to the system of two Chambers, and was astonished to find the system proposed for Red River in view of its expense in Quebec and the success of one chamber system in Ontario. He hoped the Government would consent to change in this respect. In looking over the map of the new Province laid on the table, he noticed that an important Canadian settlement containing some four or five hundred families, namely: Portage la Prairie, had been left beyond the limits of the Provinces, though the boundary line diverged fifteen minutes to take in a small settlement marked on the map "Roman Catholic Mission." It was just as well there should be a little plain speaking on this point at an early day. It was known by the Government and the country that the rebellion in the North-west originated with the Roman Catholic priesthood. ("No, No," from French Members). That fact was substantiated by the Commissioners of the Government who had been sent to that country. The priesthood desired to secure certain advantages for themselves, their Church or their people. And they advised their people to take the course they did. These facts could be proved beyond doubt if the House would grant a Committee of enquiry. He believed the respectable, wealthy, intelligent portion of the Roman Catholic population were opposed to that course and loyal to this Government, and would willingly accept the Government that was provided for in the Bill of last session. He warned the Government that amendments would be proposed to this Bill. With regard to the claims of loyalists from the Territory, he understood the Minister of Militia to say that they must look to England.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER said he had not stated that. He had mentioned when the Minister of Justice was speaking that these claims might fall on us or perhaps on England. He did not say decidedly that they would have to be settled by England.

Hon. Mr. McDougall accepted the explanation, and went on to argue the justice of these claims, and the necessity of their being attended to by the Government. The Imperial Government were under no obligation to settle these claims. He concluded by denouncing the appointment of Captain Cameron to the head of the police for Red River as the most unfortunate selection that could be made.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said the Hon. Member for North Lanark seemed unable to comprehend the policy of the Government. With regard to the non-payment of the money, he would only ask the House to consider the position of the Government when the unfortunate interruption to the hon. gentleman's entrance into the Territory took place. They should look at the season of the year and the surrounding circumstances. What would have been the consequences of the payment of the money on the 1st December last? The inevitable consequences would have been the immediate transfer of the country to Canada. They had been told by the press that they should have sent up a military officer, who would have gone to the country by railroad, as did the hon. gentleman, and entered the country alone.

Hon. Mr. McDougall—An absurd suggestion.

Hon. Sir F. HINCKS said the Government at once saw that at that season of the year, in the first place, it was impossible that Canada should take the government of that country. It was essentially important, and every day had made them more convinced of the view they took, that without reference to the paltry question of expenses, that we should have the prestige of the Imperial Government in getting up and sending an expedition there, to establish the Queen's authority, instead of leaving Canada to commence the war with that people on its own account and on its own responsibility, thereby inviting fillibusters and sympathisers from the neighbouring States to come in and join in, and thus involve the country in an expenditure of which no one can have any conception.

Hon. Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER—Hear, hear.

Hon. Sir F. HINCKS said, when the Government first heard of these circumstances, before the lamentable events which subsequently occurred had taken place, they at once took the very best means to allay the discontent which existed more particularly among a certain portion of the population. We were unsuccessful because—he was sorry to say it and regretted to have to go into that question—of the unfortunate mistake committed by the hon. gentleman.

Hon. Mr. McDougall—No, no.

Hon. Sir F. HINCKS could readily understand, and feel that it was his bounden duty to stand up and defend himself. But if things had been allowed to remain until the Government of this country had been able to prescribe a policy which, under the circumstances, if they had been allowed to employ the agencies which they at once took steps to employ—if Father Thibault had gone up, and the proclamation never been issued, and the force not been invited to go on, he was perfectly certain that in a very few days Father Thibault would have settled matters. If the hon. gentleman had remained quiet until he had known the views of the Government, there would have been no difficulty whatever. It was not a question of expediency. The time of paying the money was the question. They thought that the right time for paying the money was when the Queen's authority had been restored. Then it was quite right that quiet should be restored by a force acting under the Imperial officers, and having the prestige of our Sovereign, thus presenting the appearance of its being a war between one section of the Dominion and the people. It was a view taken by the Government, it was not a mere question of expenditure. If the Territory, of course, had been transferred to Canada, they could not expect England to contribute any share of the expenses. We have got to maintain peace in our own Territories, but under the peculiar circumstances of the case, it was important that the force should be essentially an Imperial force, and not a Canadian force.

It being six o'clock the House rose for recess.

AFTER RECESS.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS resumed the debate. He said he was bound to place on record his opinion of the Act which had produced the most disastrous consequences in the Territory, that was the issue of the proclamation by the Member for North Lanark, when sent as Governor of the Territory. The intentions of the Government were most liberal. The Legislature was only provisional in its nature, and they had sent one who had been a warm advocate of the policy of acquiring that Territory to be settled in great part from the four older Provinces. The Government had given instructions which in his (Sir Francis') judgment, no exception could be taken. His object was to get there, to place himself in communication with all parties, to obtain all the information possible and inform the Government what kind of constitution was most suitable. Notwithstanding what he conceived to be the wise course taken by the Government, the strongest opposition was offered by the leading organs of the Opposition in Ontario. Every means was taken to excite distrust in the Canadian Government. It was said they intended to ill-treat the inhabitants of that country, that they had no intention to regard their wishes, and he believed that a great deal of the discontent was due to these efforts. He was disposed to make every allowance for errors of judgment in the performance of the duties imposed on the Member for North Lanark. But when the Government as a Government expressed their disapproval of his course which they firmly believed led to the consequences which they had all seen, he could not but deplore the action which led to such a disastrous result. It was the duty of hon. Members, and they could not but sympathise with those who were acting in that Territory in sympathy with the Canadian Government, but there could be no doubt they took a course which led to evil results. Honourable Members talk of claims, but he could not see how the Government could deal with claims which had not been presented. No such claims had been made, but even if they had that was a question entirely apart from that of the Bill brought in by the Minister of Justice. It had nothing to do with it, and it was unfortunate that the question should be raised. He would deal with representations made by those persons peculiarly distinguished as Canadians, as opposed to what some honourable gentlemen were pleased to call the rebel party, but which he would distinguish as the mixed French and Indian race, chiefly Catholic in religion. Could it be made clear to him that those against whom the honourable gentleman protested had asked exclusive privileges he could understand it. But he had read a letter in one of the papers to-day, addressed to the Governor-General, and signed James Lynch, a gentleman assuming, and no doubt correctly assuming to represent the wishes of a large portion of the population, and one for whom he had the highest respect. He had carefully read the letter, and had endeavoured to see if there was any real grievance against these persons, or if the Government had committed any error from the point of view of those whom Dr. Lynch represented. It had already come out in the course of the discussions that in all questions coming before the Government, they had not considered the question whether the delegates were representatives of the majority or minority. Admit that they represented the minority; admit even that as alleged in the letter, had been the appointed by gentleman Mr. Riel. It was admitted that one delegate did not represent him. That was Judge Black who was brought to accept the mission with great reluctance, his name having been given as the letter states, as a sort of sop to those not under Mr. Riel's influence. Assume that all the statements made by Dr. Lynch were correct, and he would ask if the Bill was open to the objection of pressing on those whom Dr. Lynch represented. What were the points in contention? First, these delegates would have desired—as stated in the Bill of Rights—that they should have the whole lands of Manitoba into their possession, that is into the possession of the Local Government. What he wanted to establish was simply this; that all those identifying themselves with the Province of Manitoba were all equally interested in getting all they could out of Canada whether by way of subsidy or otherwise. He did not understand that any of them were afraid of elective institutions. On the contrary they were quite ready to assent to them. Put aside for the moment the second chamber and elective institutions with an elective chamber as in other Provinces, he was satisfied they would not object to. His experience in the Dominion Government satisfied him that the Governments of all the Provinces and the people desired to get all they could out of the Dominion.

CANADA.

Hon. Mr. CHAUVEAU—Except Quebec.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said he excepted neither Quebec nor Ontario. On the other hand the Dominion Government were there to protect the Dominion Treasury. Well, as far as he was aware, all points had been fully discussed between the Dominion Government and the gentlemen who had been sent as delegates. He believed the Dominion Government could have made better terms with those representing Canadian interests, than with those representing the Convention. Whether they had been freely elected or elected under terror he would not discuss, and, so far as he could find, they did not come to ask any special legislation for any class, Canadians as well as others being equally protected.

Mr. MACKENZIE—At whose instance was the English settlement excluded?

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS—He would come to that by-and-by, that was a small question. But on all points no particular party claimed any special interest; the best terms were to be obtained for all parties. The Member for Lambton had argued that the Dominion Government had given too much. That was a fair subject for criticism, but not as between one section of the population there and another, for the arrangement was made for the good of all. It was perfectly clear that when the difficulties were settled and the Queen's authority established that a vast emigration would be pouring into the country, from the four Provinces but principally, there was no doubt, from Ontario, and the original inhabitants would thus be placed in a hopeless minority, and of this, they themselves had no doubt. If this were correct it was perfectly obvious that those who had been occupying the Territory all their lives would naturally take this view: That they were to be entirely swamped and their influence destroyed, that all their lands were to be taken, not as in the other Provinces, and that they would have to take simply a moderate portion of land for the settlers and their children, not for one class but for all. There was not one point he could discover in which the delegates—representing a minority if you will—took a sectarian view. There had been a good deal of sneering at large institutions for a small number of people in the Territory. Although he could cite constitutions granted by the Imperial Government to places with populations smaller, and without the least prospect of increasing, as there was likely to be an increase here with a representative chamber, yes, and with a second chamber. Yet he would readily admit the perfect absurdity of the whole scheme if they were providing for the total of 15,000, instead of the population which would go there. Before the month they were now entering was well advanced, they would be flocking in, and in so short a time that he was afraid to say how short an immense population would be enjoying the institutions of a free British people. His hon. friend, the Minister of Militia, had correctly pointed to the fact that in 1791 when Upper Canada was made a Province its population was less than the population in the Northwest now. He had great faith in the future of that country. Unfortunately the gentleman to whom the Government looked to for responsible advice had from circumstances been unable to afford this, and the Government were compelled to deal with it on their own responsibility. Therefore, it was not dictated, nor had the result been brought about by any delegates, although they were consulting with them, and were happy to believe they were prepared to acquiesce in the decision at which the Government were arrived.

Mr. MACKENZIE—Then they saw the Bill before we did.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS—They have not seen it yet.

Mr. MACKENZIE—How could they acquiesce?

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS—They knew its general principles. Did he mean to say it was wrong to communicate with these persons?

Mr. MACKENZIE—He did mean to say so. Drs. Schultz and Lynch and Mr. Fletcher were as much entitled to be consulted as the rebel delegates, and they never had been so.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said he must know that the whole object was to make such condition as would be for the interests of the friends of Drs. Schultz, Lynch, and Mr. Fletcher. They were quite satisfied with the policy of the Government, and acquiesced in it for the Canadians.

Mr. MACKENZIE said they were not satisfied.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said he held in his hands proof of it in the letter of Dr. Lynch, in which he said he had confidence that the Government would deal fairly with the people. They were not the dissatisfied party. Did the hon. gentleman mean that it would be a statesman-like policy to force the people into war. The Government policy was to get the country peacefully, and when it became thoroughly Canadian the people now there must necessarily be in the minority. But, not satisfied with getting the country, they must also have war.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—Who says that?

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said, it was not only the opinion of the Canadian Government that no policy could be more adverse than that to the interests of Canada, and, if they had adopted a policy against conciliation, they would not have had the confidence of the Imperial Government. They had taken the course, from first to last, which was wise and prudent, and in consonance with a majority of this House. The Imperial Government had, at first, found fault with the Government for not paying over the money, but when they saw the reasons that were given, that they were wise and statesman-like, they approved of them, and were now acting in close co-operation.

Mr. MACKENZIE said they had never said so.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said they had acted in a manner to show that they were satisfied. It would have been an act of madness if they had paid over the money in December, in the depth of winter, to be left on the hands of Canada, who would be compelled to enter on the war in the Spring, and exposed to meet all kind of filibustering, and an expensive and disastrous war. He was not going to enter into any details of the Bill. That would be better done on the second reading, but he had called attention to the remarks on the unsound policy of the Government to show that it had been an unsound policy throughout.

Mr. FERGUSON asked how 190 families had been left out at Portage la Prairie, as laid down in the map.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said the object of the residents had been to obtain possession of the whole country. They wished Rupert's Land made into one Province, and to have all the land within the boundary as in other Provinces. The Government thought, as he believed did the majority of Parliament, that that great country should be divided into Provinces with as restricted a boundary as possible, and the only reason that led to the exclusion was the belief that the settlement would form the nucleus of the new Province altogether British. It was pointed out that it was impossible to hand over the country to be legislated for by the present inhabitants. He pointed out that the Territory had been purchased for a large sum from the Hudson's Bay Company, that settlement had to be made with the Indians, the guardianship of whom involved, that the land could not be handed over to them, it was of the greatest importance to the Dominion to have possession of it, for the Pacific Railway must be built by means of the land through which it had to pass. He could assure them that in discussing with the delegates from the Convention they did not suggest this division. They wanted the whole country, but they insisted at last on so arranging that they should touch and obtain access to Manitobah Lake on the one side, and Lake Winnipeg on the other.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—And exclude the English?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said if they were excluded from that Province they still belonged to the Dominion, and if asked man by man they would prefer Government by the Dominion to be governed from Fort Garry. But the Bill provided that the Province should be extended if Parliament should insist on a different policy, and instead of a series of Provinces extend the boundaries.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said there were other gentlemen in the Province not included.

Mr. MACKENZIE.—No. Several Members. Name them.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said the posts of the Hudson's Bay Company were settlements.

Mr. FERGUSON was exceedingly sorry to have given the honourable and gallant Knight, the Minister of Justice, the trouble of making so lengthy an explanation, which was, nevertheless, he regretted to say, not quite satisfactory to him. He should have desired that the whole people of the North-west should have been included in the new Province. This, he perceived, was not the intention of the Government. He, however, could not help believing that the 3000 English-speaking settlers at Portage la Prairie should have formed part of the Province of Manitobah, coming thereby within the new Government, and taking a share in it. Nay, he would go further, and say that he had hoped that even those posts of the Hudson's Bay Company, within reasonable bounds, where there were 200 settlers, should not have been left out of the pale of the proposed Government and Legislature of Manitobah. The determination at which the Government, apparently, had arrived of leaving out the settlement of the Portage la Prairie, and the settlers at the posts, had no doubt been come to after mature consideration, and was the result of the best information which they had obtained. That information, nevertheless, may have been, to some slight extent, one-sided, and he might be excused for entertaining the idea that on this point the opinions of gentlemen representing the loyal people of the country were entitled to as much weight as were those of the men whom Riel had delegated to express his views and wishes. With some of those loyal gentlemen he had come in contact, and he could not refrain from stating that he had never heard them express any wish to the effect that the people of La Prairie, or any other of the English settlers in the North-west, should be left out of the proposed Government. He, indeed, thought that they could not do otherwise than desire to be included in it. Fort Garry, which was the capital, the chief, and he might say the only city in the proposed Province of Manitobah, was not more than sixty miles distant from La Prairie. There was every reason why they should form a part of the new Province, and no good reason whatever that they should be excluded. The idea of excluding them was preposterous. The exclusion of an English-speaking settlement so near the chief city—the capital, in fact, of the new Government—could not be carried into effect without causing the remark, and suggesting the inference that there were other reasons besides those alleged for so short-sighted a proceeding. The cutting off of these people was not a mere temporary expedient, but an arrangement which might last for years.

CANADA.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said there were other settlements in the Province not included.

Cries of "Name."

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said the posts of the Hudson's Bay Company were settlements.

Mr. FERGUSON repeated that, in his opinion, all the settlements should be included in the new Province. At Portage la Prairie there were 3000 settlers, and at the posts there were 200 settlers at the lowest computation. These should all come within, and be included in the Province of Manitobah. Setting that matter aside for the moment, he might further be permitted to remark that there seemed to him to be no necessity for a Legislature with two Chambers—an Upper and a Lower House—for 11,000 people—the balance of the whole population of 15,000, when La Prairie and the posts were left out of the question. Indeed, he very much doubted whether this House had authority under the Act of Confederation, to constitute an Upper Chamber. There did not seem to him to be the slightest necessity for two Houses, and he could not conceive it to be possible that two Senators should be permitted to so very few people as their representatives in the Upper House of the Dominion Parliament. The new Province, in his opinion ought to embrace far wider limits than was intended, and, without the power of attaining his wishes in this respect, he could not resist the temptation of giving expression to his views upon what seemed to him to be a very important matter. There was one other matter to which he would allude before sitting down. Heretofore, in all his transactions, he had always found the Hon. Minister of Militia liberal towards the whole English-speaking race, and he (Mr. Ferguson) had never failed to defend him—and that too, at a time when his name did not stand so high in Ontario as it now does, when he was attacked. He admired the honourable gentleman for his undoubted pluck, public spirit and liberality, and only regretted that he could not now go so fully along with him in this measure as he could have desired. He had no hesitation in remarking further that he had, on excellent authority, ascertained that the origin of the outbreak was not attributable, as had been alleged, altogether to priestly influence. There were possibly some priests, who had from mistaken motives, taken part in the resistance to Canadian authority, but there were other parties besides Roman Catholic priests, who had no mean share in instigating the outbreak. He certainly trusted that the Bill was open to amendment, as unless it were so open, he could not afford to give it his support.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said the Bill, of course, was open to amendment.

Mr. FERGUSON hoped that it might be so amended as to include the Portage La Prairie in the new Province.

Mr. MASSON (Terrebonne) had found it impossible to agree up to the present moment, with the Government on the North-west embroglio. Had always thought that the Government had made a great mistake in not consulting the inhabitants of the Territories, in not taking the advice of persons of standing, who would have been most happy to tender advice if required. He had not one word to discover in all he had said on this question, and had remarked with pleasure some time ago, that the Hon. Minister of Militia had manfully admitted himself, that the Government had been mistaken as to the nature of the Government existing in the Red River settlement, thereby admitting what he (Mr. Masson) had contended for, that the rule of common prudence had been discarded. He had always thought one of the greatest faults of the Government had been the nomination of the Hon. Mr. McDougall as Lieutenant-Governor. He was sure that many an Englishman, both in the House and in the country, who by their liberal turn of mind, would have been most acceptable to the population. The hon. Member for North Lanark had this evening by his attack on the Catholic clergy fully justified the opinion that no worse nomination could be made to govern a people composed of men of different religion and races. He (the Member for North Lanark) had found fault with the Government for having granted a liberal representative Government to the new Province. The accusation came badly from a Member of the great liberal party of Ontario, and would be resented by all men in the country, who believed in liberal institutions. The accusation came badly from a gentleman belonging to the then small Province of * which had obtained representative institutions when only inhabited by a few thousand people. He (Mr. Masson) was grieved to hear the Member from North Lanark attacking the Roman Catholic clergy in this very moment, when it is perfectly known that the pacification of the Red River was due to the untiring efforts of the Right Rev. Bishop Taché, a most patriotic, able, and liberal-minded gentleman, who had by his loyal influence induced Riel and his followers to hoist the English flag on the bastions of Fort Garry, and had it saluted by the guns of the Fort. He (Bishop Taché) had brought to submission men who had taken from their fathers those principles of freedom, of which the two great races inhabiting this country are so proud, and their interests of liberty of the wild men of the desert. The Member for North Lanark had charged the Government with being the cause of the disasters which occurred in the North-west, and were responsible for all damage done. He (Mr. Masson) was of opinion that the Government were not blameless in this matter; he held them responsible for a great part of the mischief done, but it did not come well from the Member to charge them with it, when it was known that his unfortunate and unauthorized proclamation had more to do with the continuance of the disturbance than the mistakes of the Government. Had his proclamation been acted upon, he would have been responsible for the lives and property of Her Majesty's subjects, and the weight of damages done by the Government, would have been still greater, and told more heavily on those, and wherever they may be, who will be obliged to pay the indemnity. As to the measure, he (Mr. Masson) thought it was a liberal-minded measure so far, and would be considered by the people of Red River as an atonement for their disregarded rights. He would not now examine the question of the expedition further than to state that he thought every Member of the House felt that the Imperial Government had not dealt fairly with us, and our Government in the proportion they assumed of the expenditure required for that expedition, when it was considered that the country had never been ours. He would support the Bill as a whole with all reserves as to the expediency of the expedition, and our share of the contribution.

Hon. Mr. HOWE said the discussion might be carried out on some of the questions that had arisen during the debate. He could not expect to be entirely silent on the subject of the North-West, and strange criticisms and remarks had been passed on him. With regard to the charge made against the Government that they acted dishonourably in not paying the 300,000*l.* for the possession of the country. If they had paid that money, under the circumstances, was it likely that they should have got possession of the Territory? He wondered what would have been said if the money had been paid and lost the Territory too. He would have liked to hear the member for Lambton speak on that if it had occurred at the following Session. They had some reason to apprehend that not being then well satisfied with the transfer of the Territory that there was some uneasiness among the employés of the Hudson's Bay Company. Will they have to pay over that money to strengthen the hands of those men? No, they paused in their action. They raised the money, put it in deposit, and in a few days they had a strong confirmation of the wisdom of their proceedings in the telegrams from Hon. Mr. McDougall relating that disturbances had taken place, and showing the want of action of the Hudson's Bay Company, ascribing it to the weakness and imbecility of the Governor. This was evidence of the weakness of the Company furnished to them on the 13th of November, and he put it to the hon. gentleman, that matter not being cleared up during the whole winter, whether they would not have incurred grave responsibilities? The Company would have said, we have got the money and there is nothing for us to do in the matter of preserving peace, let us leave it entirely to the Government of Canada. They, therefore, did not pay, and were there to answer for it. The position if they had paid the money to have resulted in circumstances which would have merited the application, to them of being worse than abusive. They would have been in a position of having nominal authority and possession of a country for the whole winter, in which they could not place their foot. They threw the responsibility on the Hudson's Bay Company and the Imperial Government. They wisely held on to the money; that was the first point. He did not think that the honour of the country had been tarnished by that action. If the British Government did not come to maintain their power in this Territory it was a very difficult course to that which he had always associated with the name of Great Britain. If that ancient empire was to be held together, if the loyalty of the country inhabitants were to be maintained, this was not the course to be adopted. The spirit with which the British people met the Abyssinian outlay gave strength and prestige to the present expedition. It was something to have the Queen's authority for passing out of our own limits to that country where we expect to have our power maintained and enforced in the future. If from any cause the Queen's Government were to refuse to participate in this expedition of peace, he would not like to advise the people of Canada to embark in it. The Hon. Mr. McDougall seemed to throw on the Government the whole blame. He (Hon. Mr. Howe) had been in the Territory for several days without knowing that there was a danger of insurrection; but the blame rested on the Hon. Mr. McDougall as Minister of Public Works, who had constant communication with his employés in that country, and yet did not inform him (Hon. Mr. Howe) in the fall that there was a danger of insurrection in the Province. Mr. Snow was there fifteen months, but did not say anything about it; and Colonel Dennis, who started in August, and was selected by Hon. Mr. McDougall, and was responsible to Mr. McDougall, but neither of them had given the slightest intimation that there was to be any conflict or any serious interruption to the progress of the Canadian Government. And yet he was expected to find it out in a single day. The inhabitants were not savages.

Hon. Mr. McDOUGALL—Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. HOWE said the intelligence of the people was remarkable. The Bishop of Rupert's Land invited him to come to his house, and he found him a prelate of the highest character and intelligence, and his second man a hard-headed Scotchman. They had Sabbath and day schools. He crossed the river and found in the Catholic diocese of St. Maurice the same intelligence and beautiful structures. He did not like the term half-breed, but they were told that because of that they were to be crushed down.

Hon. Mr. McDOUGALL—Who said that?

Hon. Mr. HOWE—I don't know, but we will assume that the idea is in some one's head, and is deserving of being crushed out. He thought at the time of the Norman Conquest that the English were half-breeds, but out of these mixtures came the noblest breeds. With regard to the system of two Chambers, as an individual member of the Government he would prefer a single Chamber if the people desired it; but in giving them two Chambers they were only giving them what was given to every British Colony, and would give the people of Manitobah no cause of complaint. Of course the Local Legislature would have power to do away with one Chamber if they did not want it. He would not undertake to say that perhaps two or three priests had not aided in the insurrection; but supposing that was so, the plain duty of the Government was to do what was right irrespective of the conduct of two or three priests. Let us not mar the glorious work of founding a Province, which would one day be an honour to the Empire, by any reference to each other's religion. The hon. gentleman went on to defend the appointment of Captain Cameron, and intimated that had he owned or controlled a newspaper his conduct would have been regarded in a different light. With regard to the claims of the loyalists, he would state that this Government and Parliament might be trusted to do justice in a matter of this kind. All claims would have to be investigated before they were considered.

CANADA.

Hon. Mr. McDougall said the Hon. Secretary of State endeavoured to shield himself from the just indignation of the country, by throwing the blame upon Colonel Dennis and himself. He would admit that the Government had no information, when he was appointed, of a threatened uprising against the authority of the Canadian Government. On the contrary the Government had an interview with Governor Mactavish not long before his appointment, and he gave no hint of any prospect of trouble. But when the Secretary of State went to Red River there was trouble exhibited, but yet he did nothing to allay it, but on the contrary had told them that they were right in resisting entrance to the coming Government, and he charged that hon. gentleman with being the chief instrument in the whole matter resulting so seriously. He had informed the people, in effect, that they had only to do as Nova Scotia did and they would succeed. The rebellion would have been a mere trifling affair had it not been sustained by the advice and recommendation of the Secretary of State. These facts he could prove before a Committee of the House, if one were appointed. With regard to his own conduct, he held that he was justified in assuming that the day agreed upon for the transfer, the transfer would take place, and that his commission would come into effect. But he discovered, a few days after the first of December, from a paragraph in a newspaper, which was the first intimation he had, that the Government had failed to keep their promise, and that the money would not be paid over. Why was not a messenger sent to him to inform him of the intention of the Government to break up the arrangement with the Imperial Government. With regard to the despatch of the Secretary of State to him, about which so much had been said, he would take this opportunity of replying as he had never done, it being understood that it would not be laid on the table along with the other papers. He explained that at the time the proclamation was to be issued, the loyal people were ready to admit him, were anxious in fact for him to come, and under the circumstances he felt he had a right to assume that the royal proclamation had been issued. Acting on that assumption he sent Colonel Dennis ahead, but as Riel had promised that he only wanted the rights of the people, Colonel Dennis acting on the advice of leading men, had decided not to keep the people in arms. He (Mr. McDougall) admitted he had no authority to act, but how was he to know? It was absurd to say that the Hudson Bay Company should have maintained order, as they were in a moribund state of existence. With regard to the remarks of the Minister of Finance, he contended that the action of Colonel Dennis had not the effect of prolonging the rebellion. The insurgents had their plans all laid, and were determined to carry them under all circumstances. He was not disposed to accept any more than his share of blame in the matter. He acted faithfully with the Government, and he never for a moment dreamed that they would go back from the agreement they had entered into. He believed that if Bishop Taché, when he returned, had exerted his full authority to induce the followers of Riel to return to their homes, Riel would not have a corporal's guard left to sustain him. He referred to the recommendations of Mr. D. Smith that a force should be sent to keep the Indians quiet, and characterized it as a libel on the Indians, who were thoroughly loyal to the British Crown. Referring to the Bill, he hoped the boundaries would be changed so as to include the country lying between the Red River and Lake Superior, and also the English Settlement of Portage La Prairie.

Hon. Mr. CHAUVEAU replied to the remarks for the Member for North Lanark, that Quebec was on the verge of bankruptcy owing to the burden of the two Chambers. He asserted that Quebec had a balance on hand of 500,000 dollars, and explained the different position Quebec occupied to that of Ontario. He went on to argue that half-breeds were not an inferior race, and contended that no proof had been produced of the charges against the Roman Catholic priesthood that they had fomented the insurrection. He proceeded to criticise at length the action of the Member for North Lanark in the North-West, and the despatches and subsequent conduct of that honourable gentleman.

Mr. MILLS asked if the Dominion Government would retain the right to appoint Senators from Red River, or would that right be left to the Local Government.

Hon. SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD said it was impossible at the time the address was passed for the admission of Rupert's Land, to know what representation should be given in the Dominion Parliament, and, therefore, he had put it in the original Constitution—so representation was provided for in the present Bill. It would be hopeless to expect that freemen would consent to be united to Canada without a representation in the Canadian Parliament being provided for. Hence the necessity for such a provision in that Bill. He regretted the nature of the discussion that had taken place with regard to the principles and details of the Bill. Government would be glad to have full and free discussion. He hoped that the honourable gentlemen in ventilating their private grievances would take care not to use any expression that would throw any obstruction in their way, expressions which would be reported in the North-West; that they would take care that by throwing words across the floor of the House they did not wound the sensibilities of a high-minded and jealous people. With regard to the question of boundary and the size of the new Province, the Government would fully consider it, but he considered it would be injudicious to have a large Province which would have control over lands, and might interfere with the general policy of the Government in opening up communication to the Pacific, besides the land legislation of the Province might be obstructive to immigration. All that vast Territory should be, for purposes of settlement, under one control, and that the Dominion Legislature. Another consideration was that by obtaining the control of these lands they would be able to obtain means by which they would be in a position to obtain repayment of the disbursement of the 300,000*l.* for the purchase and of the expenditure which they might be hereafter put to. The expense would be defrayed by that means instead of being charged against the people of the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. That could be done, however, only by carrying out that policy of keeping the control of the lands of the country, and that they had determined to do. The Government thought it was a wise policy that the limits of the Province should not be too large. These considerations, however, they would place more strongly on the judgment and discretion of the House on the second reading.

Mr. STIRTON asked if the Minister of Justice had any authority for the statement that the people of Portage la Prairie desired to be left out of the new Province?

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said he had, and would give it to-morrow if he obtained permission.

Mr. STIRTON said some of the people settled there had gone from his neighbourhood, and he happened to know that their sentiments did not bear out the assertion of the honourable gentleman. He (Mr. Stirton) thought one objection to the creation of small Provinces was that it involved farther increase in the number of Cabinet Ministers, so as to give them all representation in the Privy Council. He also objected to leaving a large area of Territory between Lake Superior and Red River without any organization. It would be a sort of no man's land, belonging neither to the Province of Ontario nor Manitoba, and would probably become the refuge of every outlaw in both Provinces, and a source of constant trouble and difficulty.

Mr. MACKENZIE said he was not inclined to submit to the exclusion of the Portage la Prairie country from the new Province; and unless the Government yielded upon that point, he would offer an amendment on the second reading. He also objected to the smallness of the Province, and said, if the whole of the fertile belt were to be cut up in that way, it would make some twenty or thirty Provinces; He demanded that the Government should bring down further information on the subject, so that the House might be able to discuss it intelligently, with the aid of all the facts which have enabled the Government to form the conclusions it had reached.

Dr. GRANT said it would wound the sensibilities of the people at Portage La Prairie if they were excluded, and he urged the Government to reconsider its conclusion on that point.

Hon. Mr. WOOD said the general features of the measure met his approval; but there was one point to which the attention of the Government, it seemed to him, had not been sufficiently directed, and that was the care and guardianship of the Indian tribes. He referred to the laws which had been passed in Canada with regard to Indian annuities, which were now placed upon the civil lists in obedience to the requirements of the Imperial Government, and asked if the Minister of Justice had stated that 1,200,000 acres of land were to be reserved and placed at the disposal of the Local Government of the Province for the extinction of the Indian titles. Now he (Honourable Mr. Wood) wanted to know if the Government proposed to entrust to this new Province, unaccustomed to the exercise of the functions of a Government, the payment of the Indian annuities, which would have to be made for the purpose of extinguishing those Indian titles, or did the Dominion Government intend to retain in its own hands the power of dealing with those Indians and seeing whether contracts or undertakings made with them should be faithfully carried out. There was an apprehension that, under the pretence of confirming grants made by the Hudson Bay Company, large blocks of land might find their way into the hands of certain corporations and thus be locked up and withheld from settlement. He confessed the explanations of the Minister of Justice had not satisfied him on that point.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. Macdonald said the reservation of 1,200,000 acres which it was proposed to place under the control of the Province, was not for the purpose of buying out the full-blooded Indians and extinguishing their titles. There were very few such Indians remaining in the Province, but such as there were they would be distinctly under the guardianship of the Dominion Government. The main representatives of the original tribes were their descendants, the half-breeds, and the best way of dealing with them was the same as United Empire loyalists had been dealt with, namely, giving small grants of land for them and their children. That was the answer he had to give to his honourable friend.

In reply to Mr. RYMAL—

Hon. Mr. HOWE said that the Government only knew that the prisoners were all released, the mails were free, the country was opened, and the Hudson's Bay Company had commenced to sell their goods again.

In further reply to Mr. Rymal—

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said no writ had been issued against Riel; the proper power to arrest Riel was the Imperial Power. It was with her and her only that steps could be taken. If any offenders are brought within the bounds of Canada, they had to be tried. They could not have any ex post facto jurisdiction.

Mr. MILLS asked if the prisoners were in confinement would they be set free therefore on the transfer to this Government, and whether crimes committed anterior to the transfer would not be subject to punishment according to law?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said if there was a prisoner in Newfoundland at Confederation he would be tried under the same laws as he was taken into custody under.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON asked if the Bill was complete, or whether it would be recast after the discussion that night.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said the Bill was drafted and complete.

The Bill was read a first time.

Second time to-morrow.

Hon. Mr. HOWE then laid on the table the Report of Father Thibault's mission.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD laid on the table the Report of the Postmaster-General for 1869.

Mr. MILLS asked if any application had been made to the Government on behalf of any person or persons on account of losses sustained by him or them from the destruction of property by the insurgents in the North-West?

CANADA.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said there had been no formal applications, but they had heard statements made of such losses.

Mr. MILLS asked if the Hudson Bay Company had made any such claim.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.—No.

Mr. BOWMAN asked why postage rates on papers to Germany had been raised from 6 cents to 9 cents, while postage on letters had been reduced, and whether it was the intention of the Government to correct this anomaly?

Hon. Mr. LANGEVIN said the arrangement rested with the Imperial Government. The matter, however, was still in abeyance.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS gave notice of a Resolution relating to superannuation.

The House then adjourned at 11:55 p. m.

BILL.

[1870.]

An Act to amend and continue the Act 32 and 33 Victoria, chapter 3, and to establish and provide for the Government of the Province of Manitoba.

WHEREAS it is probable that Her Majesty the Queen may, pursuant to the "British North America Act of 1867," be pleased to admit Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, before the next Session of the Parliament of Canada:

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to prepare for the transfer of the said Territories to the Government of Canada at the time appointed by the Queen for such admission:

AND WHEREAS it is expedient also to provide for the organization of part of the said Territories into a Province, and for the establishment of a Government therefor, and to make provision for the Civil Government of the remaining part of the said Territories, not included within the limits of Province:

Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

1. On from and after the day upon which the Queen, by and with the advice and consent of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, under the authority of the 146th Section of the British North America Act, 1867, shall, by Order in Council in that behalf, admit Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, there shall be formed out of the same a Province, which shall be one of the Provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and which shall be called the Province of Manitoba, and be bounded as follows: that is to say, commencing at the point where the meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude from Greenwich intersects the parallel of forty-nine degrees north latitude, thence due west along said parallel of forty-nine degrees north latitude (which forms a portion of the boundary line between the United States of America and the said North-Western Territory) to the meridian of ninety-nine degrees of west longitude, then due north along said meridian of ninety-nine degrees west longitude, to the intersection of the same with the parallel of fifty degrees and thirty minutes north latitude,—thence due east along said parallel of fifty degrees and thirty minutes north latitude, to its intersection with the before-mentioned meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude,—thence due south along said meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude to the place of beginning.

2. On from and after the said day on which the Order of the Queen in Council shall issue as aforesaid, the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or, by reasonable intendment, may be held to be specially applicable to, or only to affect one or more, but not the whole of the Provinces now composing the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by this Act, be applicable to the Province of Manitoba in the same way, and to the like extent as they apply to the several provinces of Canada and as if the Province of Manitoba had been one of the Provinces originally united by the said Act.

3. The said Province shall be represented in the Senate by two Members, until it shall have according to decennial census, a population of fifty thousand souls, and from thenceforth it shall be represented therein by three Members until it shall have, according to decennial census, a population of seventy-five thousand souls, and from thenceforth it shall be represented therein by four Members.

4. The said Province shall be represented in the first instance in the House of Commons by four Members, and for that purpose shall be divided by proclamation of the Governor-General, into four Electoral Districts, each of which shall be represented by one Member: Provided that, on the completion of the Census in the year 1881, and of each decennial Census afterwards, the representation of the said Province shall be re-adjusted according to the provisions of the fifty-first section of the British North America Act, 1867.

5. Until the Parliament of Canada otherwise provides, the qualification of voters at Elections of Members of the House of Commons shall be the same as for the Legislative Assembly hereinafter mentioned: And no person shall be qualified to be elected or to sit and vote as a Member for any Electoral District unless he is a duly qualified voter within the said Province.

6. For the said Province there shall be an officer styled the Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council by instrument under the Great Seal of Canada.

7. The Executive Council of the Province shall be composed of such persons, and under such designations, as the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time think fit, and in the first instance of not more than five persons.

8. Unless and until the Executive Government of the Province otherwise direct, the seat of Government of the same shall be at Fort Garry, or within one mile thereof.

9. There shall be a Legislature for the Province, consisting of the Lieutenant-Governor, and of two Houses styled respectively the Legislative Council of Manitoba, and the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba.

10. The Legislative Council shall in the first instance be composed of seven members, and after the expiration of four years from the time of the first appointment of such seven Members, may be increased to not more than twelve Members. Every Member of the Legislative Council shall be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in the Queen's name, by Instrument under the Great Seal of Manitoba, and shall hold office for the term of his life, unless and until the Legislature of Manitoba otherwise provides under the British North America Act, 1867.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time, by Instrument under the Great Seal, appoint a Member of the Legislative Council to be Speaker thereof, and may remove him and appoint another in his stead.

12. Until the Legislature of the Province otherwise provides, the presence of a majority of the whole number of the Legislative Council, including the Speaker, shall be necessary to constitute a meeting for the exercise of its powers.

13. Questions arising in the Legislative Council shall be decided by a majority of voices, and the Speaker shall in all cases have a vote, and when the voices are equal the decision shall be deemed to be in the negative.

14. The Legislative Assembly shall be composed of twenty-four Members, to be elected to represent the Electoral Divisions into which the said Province may be divided by the Lieutenant-Governor as hereinafter mentioned.

15. The Lieutenant-Governor shall (within six months of the date of the Order of Her Majesty in Council, admitting Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union), by Proclamation under the Great Seal, divide the said Province into twenty-four Electoral Divisions, due regard being had to existing Local Divisions and population.

16. Every male person shall be entitled to vote for a Member to serve in the Legislative Assembly for any Electoral Division, who is qualified as follows; that is to say, if he is:—

- (1.) Of the full age of twenty-one years, and not subject to any legal incapacity.
- (2.) A Subject of Her Majesty by birth or naturalization.
- (3.) And a bonâ fide householder within the Electoral Division at the date of the Writ of Election for the same, and has been a bonâ fide householder for one year next before the said date.

17. Every Legislative Assembly shall continue for four years from the date of the return of the writs for returning the same (subject nevertheless to being sooner dissolved by the Lieutenant-Governor), and no longer.

18. There shall be a Session of the Legislature once at least in every year, so that twelve months shall not intervene between the last sitting of the Legislature in one Session, and its first sitting in the next Session.

19. The following provisions of the British North America Act, 1867 respecting the House of Commons of Canada shall extend and apply to the Legislative Assembly, that is to say:—Provisions relating to the election of a Speaker, originally, and on vacancies—the duties of the Speaker,—the absence of the Speaker and the mode of voting, as if those Provisions were here re-enacted, and made applicable in terms to the Legislative Assembly.

20. In and for the Province the said Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education, subject and according to the following provisions.

- (1.) Nothing in any such Law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to Denominational Schools which any class of persons have by Law or practice in the Province at the Union:—
- (2.) An appeal shall lie to Governor-General in Council from any Act or decision of the Legislature of the Province, or of any provincial authority affecting any right or privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic minority of the Queen's subjects in relation to education.
- (3.) In case any such Provincial Law as from time to time seems to the Governor-General in Council requisite for the due execution of the provisions of this Section is not made, or in case any decision of the Governor-General in Council on any appeal under this Section is not duly executed by the proper provincial authority in that behalf, then, and in every such case, and as far only as the circumstances of each case require, the Parliament of Canada may make remedial Laws for the due execution of the provisions of this Section, and of any decision of the Governor-General in Council under this Section.

21. Either the English or the French language may be used by any person, in the Debates of the Houses of the Legislature, and both those languages shall be used in the respective Records and Journals of those Houses, and either of those languages may be used by any person, or in any pleading or process in, or issuing from any Court of Canada established under the British North

CANADA.

America Act, 1867, or in or from all or any of the Courts of the Province. The Acts of the Legislature shall be printed and published in both those languages.

[N.B.—The Clauses from 22 to 30, inclusive, are to be introduced by Resolution, and do not form part of this Bill.]

22. Inasmuch as the Province is not in debt, the said Province shall be entitled to be paid, and to receive from the Government of Canada, by half-yearly payments in advance, interest at the rate of five per centum per annum on the sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and ninety dollars.

23. The sum of thirty thousand dollars shall be paid yearly by Canada to the Province for the support of its Government and Legislature, and an annual grant in aid of the said Province shall be made, equal to eighty cents per head of the population, estimated at seventeen thousand souls; and such grant of eighty cents per head shall be augmented in proportion to the increase of population, as may be shown by the census that shall be taken thereof, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and by each subsequent decennial census, until its population amounts to four hundred thousand souls, at which amount such grant shall remain thereafter, and such sum shall be in full settlement of all future demands on Canada, and shall be paid half-yearly, in advance, to the said Province.

24. Canada will assume and defray the charges for the following services:—

1. Salary of the Lieutenant-Governor.
2. Salaries and allowances of the Judges of the Superior and District or County Courts.
3. Charges in respect of the Department of the Customs.
4. Postal Department.
5. Protection of Fisheries.
6. Militia.
7. Geological Survey.
8. The Penitentiary.

9. And such further charges as may be incident to, and connected with the services which by the British North America Act, 1867, appertain to the Government, and as are, or may be allowed to the other Provinces.

25. The Customs' duties now by law chargeable in Rupert's Land shall be continued without increase for the period of three years from and after the passing of this Act.

26. All ungranted or waste lands in the Province shall be, from and after the date of the said transfer, vested in the Crown, and administered by the Government of Canada for the purposes of the Dominion, subject to and except and so far as the same may be affected by the conditions and stipulations contained in the agreement for the surrender of Rupert's Land by the Hudson Bay Company to Her Majesty.

27. And whereas it is expedient towards the extinguishment of the Indian Title to the lands in the Province, to appropriate a portion of such ungranted lands to the extent of one million four hundred thousand acres thereof, for the benefit of the families of the half-breed residents, it is hereby enacted, that under regulations to be from time to time made by the Governor-General in Council, the Lieutenant-Governor shall select such lots or tracts in such parts of the Province as he may deem expedient, to the extent aforesaid, and divide the same among the children of the half-breed heads of families residing in the Province at the time of the said transfer to Canada, and the same shall be granted to the said children respectively, in such mode and on such conditions as to settlement and otherwise, as the Governor-General in Council may from time to time determine.

28. For the quieting of titles, and assuring to the settlers in the Province the peaceable possession of the lands now held by them, it is enacted as follows:—

1. All grants of land in freehold made by the Hudson Bay Company prior to the transfer to Canada, shall, if required by the owner, be confirmed by grant from the Crown.
2. All grants of estates less than freehold in land made by the Hudson's Bay Company prior to the transfer to Canada shall, if required by the owner, be converted into an estate in freehold by grant from the Crown.
3. All titles by occupancy with the sanction and under the license and authority of the Hudson's Bay Company prior to the transfer to Canada, of land in that part of the Province in which the Indian title has been extinguished, shall, if required by the owner, be converted into an estate in freehold by grant from the Crown.
4. All persons in peaceable possession of tracts of land at the time of the said transfer, in those parts of the Province in which the Indian Title has not been extinguished, shall have the right of pre-emption of the same, on such terms and conditions as may be determined by the Governor in Council.
5. The Lieutenant-Governor is hereby authorised, under regulations to be made from time to time by the Governor-General in Council, to make all such provisions for ascertaining and adjusting, on fair and equitable terms, the rights of common, and rights of cutting hay held and enjoyed by the settlers in the Province, and for the commutation of the same by grants of land from the Crown.

29. The Governor-General in Council shall from time to time settle and appoint the mode and form of Grants of Land from the Crown, and any Order in Council for that purpose when published in the 'Canada Gazette' shall have the same force and effect as if it were a portion of this Act.

30. Nothing in this Act shall in any way prejudice or affect the rights or properties of the Hudson's Bay Company, as contained in the conditions under which that Company surrendered Rupert's Land to Her Majesty.

CANADA.

31. And with respect to such portion of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory as is not included in the Province of Manitoba, it is hereby enacted, That the Lieutenant-Governor of the said Province shall be appointed, by Commission under the Great Seal of Canada, to be the Lieutenant-Governor of the same, under the name of the North-West Territories, and subject to the provisions of the Act in the next Section mentioned.

32. Except as hereinbefore is enacted and provided, the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed in the now last Session thereof, and entitled, "An Act for the temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory, when united with Canada," is hereby re-enacted, extended, and continued in force until the 1st day of January, 1871, and until the end of the Session of Parliament then next succeeding.

REPORT of DONALD A. SMITH, Esq., North West Territories.

To the Hon. JOSEPH HOWE, Secretary of State for the Provinces.

SIR,

Ottawa, 12th April, 1870.

In pursuance of the commission confided to me by His Excellency the Governor-General, in relation to the affairs of the North-West Territories, I addressed you from time to time during my residence within Fort Garry, a correspondence carried on under very unfavourable circumstances, as will appear from the report I have now the honour to submit.

Leaving Ottawa on the 13th December last, I reached St. Cloud, the terminus of railway communication on the 17th, continuing on the same day by stage, and arriving at Abercrombie on the evening of the 19th. Here we had to abandon wheeled carriages, and, procuring a sleigh, after a couple of hours' rest, we resumed the journey, and on the afternoon of the 21st met Hon. Mr. McDougall and party about thirty miles beyond Georgetown. From him I learned how serious the aspect of affairs had latterly become at Red River; and, pushing on, we got to Pembina about 11 p.m. of the 24th, and to Fort Garry on the 27th.

The Gate of the Fort we found open, but guarded by several armed men, who, on my desiring to be shown to Governor McTavish's house, requested me to wait till they could communicate with their chief. In a short time Mr. Louis Riel appeared. I announced my name; he said he had heard of my arrival at Pembina, and was about to send off a party to bring me in. I then accompanied him to a room occupied by ten or a dozen men, whom he introduced to me as members of the "Provisional Government." He requested to know the purport of my visit, to which I replied in substance that I was connected with the Hudson Bay Company, but also held a commission from the Canadian Government to the people of Red River, and would be prepared to produce my credentials so soon as they, the people, were willing to receive me. I was then asked to take an oath not to attempt to leave the fort that night, nor to upset their government, legally established. This request I peremptorily refused to comply with, but said that, being very tired, I had no desire to go outside the gate that night, and promised to take no immediate steps forcibly to upset the so-called "Provisional Government," "legal or illegal, as it might be," without first announcing my intention to do so—Mr. Riel taking exception to the word illegal, while I insisted on retaining it. Mr. O'Donoghue, to get over the difficulty, remarked, "That is as he" (meaning myself) "understands it," to which I rejoined, "Precisely so." The above explanation, I am the more particular in giving, as it has been reported that I at once acknowledged the Provisional Government to be legal. Neither then nor afterwards did I do so.

I took up my quarters in one of the houses occupied by the Hudson Bay Company's officers, and from that date until towards the close of February, was virtually a prisoner within the Fort, although with permission to go outside the walls for exercise, accompanied by two armed guards, a privilege of which I never availed myself.

All my official papers had been left in charge of Mr. Provencher, at Pembina, as I had been warned that if found in my possession, they would unquestionably be seized, as were those brought into the Settlement shortly after by the Rev. Mr. Thiebault and Colonel De Salaberry.

The state of matters at this time, in and around Fort Garry, was most unsatisfactory, and truly humiliating. Upwards of sixty British subjects were held in close confinement as "political prisoners;" security for persons or property, there was none; the Fort, with its large supplies of ammunition, provisions, and stores of all kinds, was in the possession of a few hundred French half-breeds, whose leaders had declared their determination to use every effort for the purpose of annexing the Territory to the United States; and the Governor and Council of Assiniboine were powerless to enforce the law.

CANADA.

On the 6th January, I saw Mr. Riel, and soon came to the conclusion that no good could arise from entering into any negotiations with his "Council," even were we to admit their authority, which I was not prepared to do.

We learnt that on the 13th, the Grand-Vicar Thiebault and Colonel De Salaberry appeared before the "President and Council of the People," when some explanations and compliments were exchanged, after which the Very Rev. gentleman and his associate were politely bowed out and lost sight of.

Meantime we had frequent visits in the Fort from some of the most influential and most reliable men in the Settlement, who gladly made known to the people generally, the liberal intentions of the Canadian Government, and in consequence one after another of Riel's councillors seceded from him, and being joined by their friends and by many of their compatriots and co-religionists who had throughout held aloof from the Insurgents, they determined no longer to submit to his dictation. This change evidently had a marked effect on Riel, causing him to alter his tactics and to profess a desire for an accommodation with Canada; accordingly, on the 14th January, he called on me, informed me that he had seen Messrs. Thiebault and De Salaberry, whose instructions did not authorise them to give assurances that the people would be secured in possession of their rights on entering into the Confederation, their errand being merely "to calm the French half-breeds." He then asked to see my Commission, and on my explaining that, owing entirely to the action taken by himself, it was not in my possession, in an excited yet faltering manner he said, "Yes, I know, 'tis a great pity; but how soon could you have it?" "Probably in five or six days," I replied. "That is too long, far too long," he responded, and then asked where the documents were deposited, requesting at the same time a written order for their delivery to his messenger. To this I would not accede, but on his assuring me that they would be delivered into my hands, and that I should be afforded an opportunity of communicating their contents to the people, I consented to send a friend for them. It was so decided, and immediately after the messenger had received his instructions from me, I was placed under strict arrest, a Captain's guard being assigned to me, whose instructions were, not to lose sight of me for one moment day or night, and to prevent me from communicating either verbally or in writing with any individual. I protested, saying, "am I to consider myself a prisoner?" He replied, "certainly not, I have the utmost confidence in your honour, but circumstances demand this." It was now about 10 o'clock, and my messenger having been marched out, I retired to bed, but only to be awakened 'twixt two and three o'clock in the morning of the 15th, by Mr. Riel, who, with a guard, stood by the bedside and again demanded a written order for the delivery of my Official Papers, which I again peremptorily refused to give.

The well affected French party became aware of what had happened, and not believing in Riel's good faith, determined to prevent the papers from falling into his hands. They got together some sixty or eighty men, who met my friend on his way back and were escorting him, when on the 18th, about 10 miles from the Fort, they were accosted by Riel and some of his party, and by the Reverend Mr. Ritchot. An altercation took place, Riel attempted to use his pistol, saying: "he would not be taken alive in his own country," on which a revolver was levelled at his head, and Mr. Ritchot having interposed, he was unceremoniously told to stand aside and "not to interfere any further with matters unconnected with his spiritual duties." It may be well to note that all those who took part in this affair were Catholics, and, with one or two exceptions, French Half-breeds. Nothing more serious happened at this time, and the party proceeded together to Fort Garry, where they arrived in the forenoon. A few minutes before they entered the house, the Very Rev. Mr. Thibault, Pere Lestanc, and Colonel De Salaberry, called upon me and, with the exception of my guard, they were the first individuals with whom I was permitted to converse since the 14th. They appeared to be much concerned, and said it was currently reported I had been endeavouring to incite the different parties to hostile collision. I repudiated any such charge; explained that I had acted wholly in the cause of peace and order, and with the desire of making the people, both French and English, fully acquainted with the liberal views of the Canadian Government, so that a peaceful transfer of the Territory might be effected, adding that I was pleased to think there was now every likelihood this would speedily be accomplished. In the meantime, the party in possession of my papers entered the adjoining room, on which Pere Lestanc joined them, while Messrs. Thibault and De Salaberry went outside. Immediately after they retired, Mr. Riel came to me, saying: "Your commission is here; but in the hands of men who had no right to have it." I expressed satisfaction that it had been brought in, and said, being now in possession of it, I must be relieved from all restraint, and be permitted freely to communicate with the people. He at once removed the guard, and we went up to the party who had just arrived. Messrs. Riel and O'Donoghue, with a few of their friends, were present, and vehemently protested against the action now being taken, while the ex-councillors accused them of treason to the Imperial Crown, and of using every effort to bring about the annexation of the Country to the United States. Riel replied "that was only supposing the people desired it, but that he was willing the question should be submitted to them." Pere Lestanc spoke warmly in favour of the "President," who, he said, had acted so as to merit the gratitude of his countrymen, and begged them still to place confidence in him. This evidently had no effect, and ultimately, after a good deal of recrimination, it was arranged that a meeting of the inhabitants from all parts of the Settlement should be called for the morrow, the 19th, at which the papers bearing on the subject should be read, a guard of forty men remaining in the house to ensure the safe-keeping of the documents.

Riel's men were now falling away from him, while the loyal party expressed their determination no longer to be guided in the matter either by him or by Pere Lestanc and his associates. They were full of hope, and confident that the following day would bring with it complete success to the cause of Canada.

Late that night Pere Lestanc paid them another visit, which was prolonged for several hours beyond midnight, and next morning it was found that a majority of those who had seceded from Riel were again on friendly terms with him.

The hour for the meeting having arrived, upwards of a thousand people attended, and deeming it of great importance that the explanations to be made on behalf of the Canadian Government should be faithfully rendered to the French-speaking portion of the Settlers, whose leaders had studiously withheld from them all knowledge of the true state of matters in connection with the proposed transfer of the country, I requested Colonel de Salaberry to act as interpreter, but the Colonel, diffident of his own ability as a translator, proposed Mr. Riel as interpreter, and the latter was appointed accordingly.

At this meeting, and that held the following day, the reading of the Commission, the Queen's Letter, and every other document was contested with much obstinacy, but ultimately carried; and threats were used to myself in the presence and hearing of the Chairman, of the Secretary, Judge Black, and others, more especially by Mr. Riel and Rev. Mr. Lestanc. At the commencement of the meeting I requested the Chairman and those near him to begin by insisting that all arms should be laid down, and that the flag then flying (fleur-de-lis and shamrocks) should be replaced by the British ensign; this, they thought, would come better at an after-stage; but the opportunity of doing so, now lost, never recurred.

As is generally known, the result of the meeting was the appointment of forty delegates, twenty from either side, to meet on 25th January, "with the object of considering the subject of Mr. Smith's Commission, and to decide what would be the best for the welfare of the country," the English as a body, and a large number of the French, declaring their entire satisfaction with the explanations given, and their earnest desire for union with Canada.

On the 22nd, Riel had several conferences with the well-affected French within the Fort: he was melted even to tears, told them how earnestly he desired an arrangement with Canada, and assured them that he would lay down his authority immediately on the meeting of the Convention. They believed him sincere, and, although I considered that their guard in the Fort should not be decreased, they held that ten men would be amply sufficient to leave while they went to secure their elections; the consequence was that they had hardly gone when repressive measures were resorted to, and the Hudson Bay Company's stores, which had hitherto been only partially in their hands, were now taken complete possession of by Riel.

Efforts were made to have the prisoners released, but without effect.

The Delegates met on the 25th, and continued in session till the 10th February. On the 26th, I handed to their Chairman, Judge Black, the documents read at the meetings of the 19th and 20th January, and on the 27th, attended the Convention by appointment. I was received with much cordiality by all the Delegates, explained to them the views of the Canadian Government, and gave assurances that on entering confederation, they would be secured in the possession of all rights, privileges, and immunities enjoyed by British subjects in other parts of the Dominion; but, on being requested by Mr. Riel to give an opinion regarding a certain "list of rights," prepared by his party in December last, I declined to do so, thinking it better that the present Convention should place in my hands a paper, stating their wishes to which I should "be happy to give such answers as I believed would be in accordance with the views of the Canadian Government." The Convention then set about the task of preparing a "list of rights," embodying the conditions on which they would be willing to enter the confederation. While the discussion regarding this list was going on, Mr. Riel called on me, and asked if the Canadian Government would consent to receive them as a Province—my reply was, that I could not speak with any degree of certainty on the subject, as it had not been referred to when I was at Ottawa, the intention then being that the North-West should, in the first instance, be incorporated under the Dominion as a Territory; but I added, that no doubt it would become a Province within two or three years. On this Mr. Riel, with much emphasis, exclaimed "then the Hudson Bay Company is not safe yet," to which I answered "Mr. Riel, that cannot influence me in the slightest degree, and I am quite prepared to act as may be required of me in my capacity as Canadian Commissioner." This was on the evening of the 3rd February. On the following day the proposition to enter as a Province was negatived by the Convention, and on the 5th, another motion directed against the Hudson Bay Company, also failed; the language used by Mr. Riel on the latter occasion having been violent in the extreme. The same evening, Riel proceeded to Governor McTavish, who had been dangerously ill for many weeks back, and was then barely able to sit up, placed a guard over him, and heaping reproaches and insult on him, declared that he would have him shot before midnight. Riel then sought out Dr. Cowan, the officer in immediate charge of Red River District, upbraided him for his persistent opposition to "the people," the insurgents, and declaring that his name would go down with infamy to posterity for the part he had taken, demanded that he would immediately swear allegiance to the Provisional Government, or prepare for death within three hours, giving him a quarter of an hour for consideration. The Doctor immediately replied, that he knew no legal authority in the country, but that of Great Britain, to which his allegiance was due and that he would not take the oath required of him. He was then seized and put in confinement along with the prisoners taken in December last. I was also put under strict guard, but not removed from the house.

Notwithstanding this, and the painful doubt created in the minds of the English members of the Convention as to the Course they should pursue after these arrests, the Delegates again met on the 7th. On the 5th, they had resolved to place in my hands the List of Rights they had drawn up, which was done at 11 o'clock on the 7th, with an intimation that the Convention would be glad to meet me at 1 o'clock p.m., the intervening two hours being allowed me to frame my answers. In drawing up these, I was allowed no reference to any document either written or printed, except the "List of Rights," and a guard stood over me to see that I should write nothing else than that to be presented to the Convention. I had just finished writing when Mr. Riel and his "Adjutant-General" Lepine, who was also a member of the Convention, came in, and Riel, looking at the latter in a significant manner, said, "the answers to the List of Rights must be simply yes or no." On this I remarked that I thought otherwise, and would act as circumstances might appear to me to require. I then retired, and on returning to the room a few minutes later, found there Mr. Riel, the Rev. Mr. Thibault, and Colonel De Salaberry. We proceeded together to the Convention, and, in course of conversation, Colonel De Salaberry said he would gladly have come to see me before, but could not, as he "had been a prisoner throughout."

The proceedings of the Convention as reported in the 'New Nation' newspaper, of the 11th and 18th February, copies of which I have had the honour of addressing to you, are sufficiently exact, and render it unnecessary for me here to enter into details. Suffice it to say that a large majority of the delegates expressed entire satisfaction with the answers to their "List of Rights," and professed confidence in the Canadian Government, to which I invited them to send delegates, with the view of effecting a speedy transfer of the Territory to the Dominion, an invitation received with acclamation and unanimously accepted, as will appear by resolution hereto annexed, along with the List of Rights and my answer to the same. The delegates named were John Black, Esq., Recorder, the Rev. Mr. Ritchot, and Mr. Alfred H. Scott. A good deal of opposition having been offered to the election of the last named of the three.

The proceedings of the Convention came to a close on the 10th February, by the nomination of a Provincial Government, in the formation of which several delegates declined to take any part. Governor Mactavish, Dr. Cowan, and two or three other persons, were then released and the Hudson Bay Company Officers again allowed to come and go at pleasure, but I was still confined to the Fort: Riel, as he expressly stated to Judge Black, being apprehensive of my influence with the people in the approaching election.

Riel promised that all the prisoners should soon be released. On the 11th and 12th six or eight of them were set at liberty, and Dr. Cowan was informed in my presence, that as they were all to be discharged without delay, the rooms they had occupied would be placed at his disposal in a day or two; Riel remarking at the same time that he would have them thoroughly cleaned out.

Rumours now began to circulate of a rising at the Portage, and on the night of the 14th and 15th of February, some 80 or 100 men from that district passed down close to Fort Garry, and proceeded to Kildonan, where they were joined by from 300 to 350 men, principally English half-breeds, from the lower parts of the Settlement. Had these men, properly armed and organized, been prepared to support the well affected French party, when the latter took action, about the middle of January, or even in the beginning of February, during the sitting of the Convention, order might have been restored and the transfer to Canada provided for without the necessity for firing a single shot; but now the rising was not only rash, but purposeless, as, without its intervention, the prisoners would unquestionably have been released. The party was entirely un-organized, indifferently armed, unprovided with food even for one meal, and wholly incapable of coping with the French now re-united, who, to the number of at least seven hundred were prepared to offer the most determined resistance, which, as they were in possession of a number of guns (six and three pounders), ample stores of ammunition, provisions, and every other requisite, they could have done most effectually. My sympathies were, in a great measure, with the Portage men, whom I believe to have been actuated by the best of motives; but under the circumstances it was not difficult to foresee that the issue could not be otherwise than disastrous to their cause. The attempt was, therefore, to be deplored, as it resulted in placing the whole Settlement at the feet of Riel. The great majority of the settlers, English and Scotch, discountenanced the movement and bitterly complained of those who had set it on foot. Forty-seven of the party were captured on their way home, while passing within a few hundred yards of the Fort; the explanation I have heard given for their otherwise inexplicable conduct in having taken this route, instead of making a detour which would have ensured safety, being a supposed promise by Riel that they would be permitted to pass unmolested. Their messenger, a young man named McLean, on being questioned by Archdeacon McLean and myself in presence of the Rev. Mr. Gardner and one or two other gentlemen, admitted that Riel, on being asked "if the party would be permitted to pass," was silent, and only, on being informed that they intended next day to use the route just outside the town, remarked "ah! that is good," and for his purpose it no doubt was so. Captain Bolton led the party, and he and his friends at the Portage assured me that he exerted himself to the utmost to keep them from rising, and only joined them at the last moment when he saw they were determined to go forward. He was captured on the 17th, tried by "Court-martial," and condemned to be shot at noon on the following day, but at the intercession of the Lord Bishop of Rupert's Land, Archdeacon McLean, and, in short, every influential man amongst the English, and I have been told also, at the earnest entreaty of the Catholic Clergy, the execution was delayed till midnight of Saturday, the 19th. Further than this, Riel declared he could not, would not, yield, except, indeed, Dr. Schultz should be captured in the meantime, in which case he would be shot instead of Bolton. Archdeacon McLean had been in close attendance on Captain Bolton for twenty-four hours, had administered to him the sacrament, received his last commands, and had promised to be present with him at the last moment, and when I met the Archdeacon on my way to see Riel, about 8 o'clock on the evening of the 19th, he was deeply affected, and had given up all hope. I found with Riel, Mr. H. N. Robinson, of 'The Nation' newspaper, and shortly afterwards Mr. James Ross, "Chief Justice," entered, followed in a few minutes by Mr. Bannatyne, Postmaster, who had been ordered to bring the key of the mail-bag, which Riel opened, and examining the letters perused and retained one or more. Mr. Ross pleaded for Bolton, but was repulsed in the most contemptuous manner. I had already been speaking to Riel on the subject when interrupted by Mr. Ross's entrance, and now resumed the conversation. Riel was obdurate and said that the English settlers and 'Canadians, but more especially the latter, had laughed at and despised the French half-breeds, believing that they would not dare to take the life of any one, and that, under these circumstances, it would be impossible to have peace and establish order in the country; an example must therefore be made, and he had firmly resolved that Bolton's execution should be carried out, bitterly as he deplored the necessity for doing so. I reasoned with him long and earnestly, until at length, about 10 o'clock, he yielded, and addressing me, apparently with much feeling, said "hitherto I have been deaf to all entreaties, and, in now granting you this man's life, or words to that effect, "may I ask you a favour?" "Anything," I replied, "that in honour I can do." He continued, "Canada has disunited us, will you use your influence to re-unite us? You can do so, and without this it must be war—bloody civil war!" I answered, that as I had said on first coming to the country I would now repeat, that "I would give my whole heart to effect a peaceable union of the country with Canada." "We want only our just rights as British subjects," he said, "and we want the English to join us simply to obtain these." "Then," I remarked, "I shall at once see them and induce them to go on with the election of delegates for that purpose;" and he replied, "if you can do this, war will be avoided, not only the lives but the liberty of all the prisoners will be secured, for on your success depend the lives of all the Canadians in the country." He immediately proceeded to the prison, and intimated to Archdeacon McLean that he had been induced by me to spare Captain Bolton's life, and had further promised to me that immediately on the meeting of the Council shortly to be elected, the whole of the prisoners would be released, requesting the Archdeacon, at the same time, to explain these circumstances to Captain Bolton and the other prisoners.

The moment was a fearful one for the Settlement: every man's life was in the hands of Riel and fully appreciating the significance of this, the Bishop of Rupert's Land and the Protestant clergy generally, now earnestly counselled the people to elect their delegates without loss of time as by this means they might to some extent control the course of events, while otherwise they were utterly powerless. I entirely concurred in this view of the case, and Archdeacon McLean having kindly offered to accompany me, we visited the different parts of the Settlement, and found that in several parishes, the people, and those the most loyal to the British Crown and most desirous for union with Canada, had already chosen their Councillors. I explained to all, that the Council was to be Provisional, in the strictest sense of the word, intended expressly for effecting the transference of the country to Canada, and for ensuring safety of life and property in the meantime. In some instances, I found they had drawn up petitions to Mr. Riel as "President" expressing submission, &c., these I requested them to destroy, advising that nothing more should be done than under the circumstances was absolutely necessary, namely, that having made their election, you should simply intimate the fact in formal terms to Mr. Bunn, who had been named Secretary of the Council, and not to Mr. Riel. The elections in the English parishes having taken place on the 26th February I again saw Riel, who re-assured me, that all the prisoners would be released within a day or two after the first meeting of the Council. On the 28th, he again sent for me and in presence of Mr. Fraser, delegate from the Scotch Parish, Kildonan, repeated his promise that the lives of the prisoners were secured, and that their release would shortly follow.

I had no further communication with Riel until Monday, the 4th March, when, about 10 o'clock in the morning, Pere Lestanc called on me. He informed me of Bishop Taché's expected arrival, not later certainly than the 8th, and probably some days earlier, adding that his Lordship had telegraphed to request that, if about to leave for Canada, I should defer my departure till he could communicate personally with me. He then said that the conduct of the prisoners was very unsatisfactory, that they were very unruly, insolent to the "soldiers," and their behaviour altogether so very bad, that he was afraid the guards might be forced to retaliate in self-defence. I expressed much surprise at the information he gave, as the prisoners, without exception, had promised to Archdeacon McLean and myself, that seeing their helpless condition, they would endeavour to act so as to avoid giving offence to their guards, and we encouraged them to look forward to being speedily released in fulfilment of the promise made by Mr. Riel. One man, Parker, was mentioned as having made himself particularly obnoxious by his violent conduct, but not one word was said on this occasion regarding Scott, or the slightest intimation given, that he or any other person had been condemned to be shot. About 11 o'clock Pere Lestanc left me and went up stairs to communicate to Governor McTavish, as he said, "the good news that Bishop Taché was expected so soon." The Rev. Mr. Young, Methodist clergyman, had just entered the house, and meeting the Père in the hall, conversed with him a few minutes. Mr. Young then came up to me, and from him I had the first intimation that it was intended to shoot Thomas Scott, and that the sentence was to be carried into effect at 12 o'clock, noon, that day. We agreed in believing that the thing was too monstrous to be possible, and Mr. Young mentioned that poor Scott himself was equally incredulous on the subject, thinking they merely intended to frighten him. However, even to keep him in suspense was of itself a horrible cruelty, and it was arranged that as Mr. Young had been sent for to attend the man, he should see Riel, ascertain exactly how the matter stood, and, if really serious, to let me know at once. Mr. Young accordingly called on Riel, was informed that Scott had been condemned, that the sentence was irrevocable, and would not be delayed one minute beyond noon. Mr. Young begged for delay, saying "the man is not prepared to die," but all without avail. He was paralyzed with horror, returned to the prisoner, and immediately sent a messenger to inform me of the result of his visit. I determined to find out Riel immediately, but recollecting that Père Lestanc was still up stairs with Mr. McTavish, went to him, related what I had heard, and asked him if he knew anything about the matter. His answer I cannot give in precise words, but it was to the effect that they had seen Mr. Riel on the other side (St. Boniface), and had all spoken to him about it, by which I understood that they had interceded for Scott. Governor McTavish was greatly shocked on being informed of Riel's purpose, and joined in reprobating it. Père Lestanc consented to accompany me, and we called on Riel. When we entered, he asked me, "what news from Canada." The mail had arrived the preceding day, and I replied, "only the intelligence that Bishop Taché will be here very soon." I then mentioned what I had heard regarding Scott, and before Riel answered, Père Lestanc interposed in French words, meaning "is there no way of escape?" Riel replied to him, "my Rev. Père, you know exactly how the matter stands," then turning to me, he said, I will explain to you, speaking at first in English, but shortly after using the French, remarking to me, "you understand that language." He said in substance that Scott had throughout been a most troublesome character, had been the ringleader in a rising against Mr. Snow, who had charge of the party employed by the Canadian Government during the preceding summer in road making; that he had risen against the "Provisional Government" in December last, that his life was then spared; that he escaped, had again been taken in arms, and once more pardoned,—referring, no doubt, to the promise he had made to me that the lives and liberty of all the prisoners were secured—but that he was incorrigible, and quite incapable of appreciating the clemency with which he had been treated; that he was rough and abusive to the guards, and insulting to him, Mr. Riel; that his example had been productive of the very worst effects on the other prisoners, who had become subordinate to such an extent, that it was difficult to withhold the guards from retaliating. He further said, “I sat down with Scott, as we are doing now, and ask him truthfully to tell me, as I would not use his statement against him, what he and the Portage party intended to have done with me, had they succeeded in capturing me, when they surrounded Coertu’s house,” to which he replied, “We intended to keep you as a hostage for the safety of the prisoners.” I argued with Riel, and endeavoured to show that some of the circumstances he had mentioned, and especially the last, were very strong reasons to urge why Scott’s life should not be sacrificed, and that if, as he represented, Scott was a rash, thoughtless man, whom none cared to have anything to do with; no evil need be apprehended from his example. I pointed out that the one great merit claimed for the insurrection was that, so far, it had been bloodless, except in one sad instance, which all were willing to look upon as an accident, and implored him not now to stain it to burden it with what would be considered a horrible crime. He exclaimed, “We must make Canada respect us. I replied, “She has every proper respect for the people of Red River, and this is shewn in her having sent Commissioners to treat with them.” I told him I had seen the prisoners some time back, when they commissioned me to say to their friends at the Portage, that they desired peace, and I offered to go to them again and reason with them, should that be necessary. On this, he said, “Look here, Mr. Smith, Mr. Scott, the Representative, went to see the prisoners at my desire, and on asking them whom they would vote for as Councillor, if they were permitted a choice outside of their own body? Thomas Scott came forward and said, “My boys, have nothing to do with those ——— Americans.” And when I remarked, “This is really a most trifling affair, and ought not to have been repeated,” he said, “do not attempt to prejudice us against the Americans, for, although we have not been with them—they are with us, and have been better friends to us than the Canadians.” Much more was said on both sides, but argument, entreaty, and protest alike failed to draw him from his purpose, and he closed by saying, “I have done three good things since I have commenced, I have spared Bolton’s life at your instance, and I do not regret it, for he is a fine fellow, I pardoned Gaddy, and he showed his gratitude by escaping out of the bastion, but I don’t grudge him his miserable life, and now I shall shoot Scott.” Lépine, the Adjutant-General, who was President of the Council of Seven, which tried Scott,—and five of whom, Riel told me, “With tears streaming from their eyes, condemned him as worthy of death,” a sentence which he had confirmed—now entered, and in answer to Riel, said “he must die.” Riel then requested The Rev. Père Lestanc to put the people on their knees for prayer, as it might do good to the condemned man’s soul. Referring to Père Lestanc, and making a final appeal (unnecessary here to repeat) I retired. It was now within a few minutes of one o’clock, and on entering the Governor’s house the Rev. Mr. Young joined me, and said, “It is now considerably past the hour, I trust you have succeeded.” “No,” I said, “for God’s sake go back at once to the poor man, for I fear the worst.” He left immediately, and a few minutes after he entered the room in which the prisoner was confined, some guards marched in and told Scott his hour was come. Not until then did the reality of his position flash upon poor Scott, he said good-bye to the other prisoners, was led outside the gate of the Fort, with a white handkerchief covering his head, his coffin, having a piece of white cotton thrown over it, was carried out; his eyes were bandaged; he continued in prayer, in which he had been engaged on the way for a few minutes; he asked Mr. Young how he should place himself, whether standing or kneeling, then knelt in the snow, said farewell, and immediately after fell back pierced by three bullets, which passed through his body. The firing party consisted of six men, all of whom it is said were more or less intoxicated. It has been further stated that only three of the muskets were loaded with ball cartridge, and that one man did not discharge his piece. Mr. Young turned aside when the first shots were fired, then went back to the body and again retired for a moment while a man discharged his revolver at the sufferer, the ball, it is said, entering the eye and passing round the head.

CANADA.

The wounded man groaned between the time of receiving the musket shots and the discharge of the revolvers. Mr. Young asked to have the remains for interment in the burying ground of the Presbyterian church, but this was not acceded to, and a similar request preferred by the Bishop of Rupert’s Land was also refused. He was buried within the walls of the fort. On descending the steps leading from the prison, poor Scott, addressing Mr. Young, said, “This is a cold blooded murder,” then engaged in prayer, and was so occupied until he was shot.

After this date I held no communication whatsoever with Riel, except in reference to getting away from the country, which I was not allowed to leave without a pass. I felt that under the circumstances it was not desirable I should remain longer at Red River, but it was not until late in the night of the 18th inst. Riel gave permission for my departure.

Although not accomplishing all that could have been desired, the mission to Red River, as I shall endeavour to show in a few words, has been productive of some good, and that it was not entirely successful, may fairly be attributed to the circumstances above referred to in connection with the action taken and meetings held in January last. Success, although in a lesser degree, might also have been gained at a later period but for the rising in February, which, though rash and productive of results the most unfortunate, I can hardly blame, knowing, as already stated, that those who took part in it were actuated and impelled by generous motives.

On reaching Red River in December last, I found the English-speaking portion of the inhabitants greatly divided in opinion as to the comparative advantages of union with Canada and the formation of a Crown colony, while a few, a very small number, favoured annexation to the United States. The explanations offered on the part of Canada they received as satisfactory, and, with hardly a dissentient voice, they would now vote for the immediate transfer to the Dominion. They earnestly requested me to assure His Excellency the Governor-General of their warm loyalty to the British Crown.

The case is different as regards the French half-breeds. A not inconsiderable number of them remained true to their allegiance during all the troubles through which they have had to pass, and with these will now be found associated many others whose minds had for a time been poisoned by gross misrepresentations made by designing men for their own selfish ends. A knowledge of the true state of the case, and of the advantages they would derive from union with Canada, had been carefully kept from them, and they were told to judge of Canadians generally, by the acts and bearing of some of the less reflective immigrants, who had denounced them as "cumberers of the ground," who must speedily make way for the "superior race" about to pour in upon them.

It is also too true that in the unauthorized proceedings of some of the recent Canadian arrivals, some plausible ground has been given for the feeling of jealousy and alarm with which the contemplated change of Government was regarded by the native population. In various localities these adventurers had been industriously marking off for themselves considerable, and in some cases very extensive and exceptionally valuable tracts of land, thereby impressing the minds of the people with the belief that the time had come when, in their own country, they were to be entirely supplanted by the stranger, a belief, however, which I have no doubt, might have been completely precluded by the prevention of all such operations, until Canada had fully unfolded her policy and shown the groundlessness of these fears.

Let us further bear in mind that many of the Catholic clergy in the country are not French Canadians but Frenchmen, and consequently, it may be presumed, not very conversant with British laws and institutions, and with the liberty and privileges enjoyed under them. Warmly attached to their flocks, they deemed it necessary to exact some guarantee that in their new political condition, they would not be treated with injustice. It is unnecessary here to point out how the breach widened until at length it attained a magnitude and significance little dreamt of in the commencement, even by those who joined most heartily in the movement. It is far more pleasing to be able to state, which I do with much confidence, that a large majority of the French party have no misgivings as to union with Canada, and that joined by and under the guidance of His Lordship, Bishop Taché, and other members of the clergy who enjoy their confidence, they will very shortly prove themselves to be staunch supporters of the Dominion, firm in their allegiance to England.

In course of the insurrection one deplorable crime and many grossly illegal acts have unquestionably been committed, but it would be alike impolitic and unjust to charge them on the French population generally.

Much obloquy has been heaped on the Hudson's Bay Company and their Governor and officers in the North-west, which I consider it quite unnecessary, at this moment, even to attempt to answer or refute, although, not doubting that both could be readily and satisfactorily done. Errors, many and grave, have, it cannot be denied, been committed on all sides, but wilful and intentional neglect of duty, cannot, I feel convinced, be laid to the charge, either of the Hudson's Bay Company, or their representatives in the country. Personally, I have been entirely unconnected with the administration of affairs in that department.

I would respectfully submit, that it is of the utmost importance, there should be a strong military force in the North-west as early as practicable. The minds of the Indians, especially the tribes in the Saskatchewan Country have been so perplexed and confused, by the occurrences of the past six months, that it would be very unsafe to trust to their forbearance; and indeed, until the question of Indian claims has been finally settled, it would not, in my opinion, be prudent to leave the country unprotected by military. The adjustment of those claims will require early attention, and some memoranda and evidence in my hands on the subject, I shall, if desired, be prepared to lay before the Government.

I have, &c.,
DON. A. SMITH.

"LIST OF RIGHTS."

"1. That in view of the present exceptional position of the North-West, duties upon goods imported into the country shall continue as at present (except in the case of spirituous liquors) for three years, and for such further time as may elapse until there be uninterrupted railroad communication between Red River Settlement and St. Paul, and also steam communication between Red River Settlement and Lake Superior.

"2. As long as this country remains a Territory in the Dominion of Canada, there shall be no direct taxation except such as may be imposed by the Local Legislature for Municipal or other Local purposes.

"3. During the time this country remains a Territory in the Dominion of Canada all military, civil, and other public expenses in connection with the general government of the country,—or that have

CANADA.

"hitherto been borne by the public funds of the Settlement beyond the receipt of the above mentioned duties, shall be met by the Dominion of Canada.

"4. That while the burden of public expense in this country is borne by Canada, the country be governed under a Lieutenant-Governor from Canada, and a Legislature, three members of whom being heads of departments of the Government, shall be nominated by the Governor-General of Canada.

"5. That, after the expiration of this exceptional period, the country shall be governed, as regards its local affairs, as the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec are now governed, by a Legislature elected by the people, and a Ministry responsible to it, under a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Governor-General of Canada.

"6. That there shall be no interference by the Dominion Parliament in the Local affairs of this Territory other than is allowed in any of the Provinces in the Confederation; and that this Territory shall have and enjoy in all respects, the same privileges, advantages, and aids in meeting the public expenses of this Territory as the Confederated Provinces have and enjoy.

"7. That while the North-West remains a Territory the Legislature have a right to pass all laws local to the Territory, over the veto of the Lieutenant-Governor, by a two-third vote.

"8. A Homestead and Pre-emption Law.

"9. That while the North-West remains a Territory, the sum of 25,000 dols. (twenty-five thousand dollars) a year be appropriated for schools, roads, and bridges.

"10. That all public buildings be at the cost of the Dominion Treasury.

"11. That there shall be guaranteed uninterrupted steam communication to Lake Superior within five years, and also the establishment by rail of a connection with the American railway as soon as it reaches the International line.

"12. That the English and French languages be common in the Legislature and Courts, and that all public documents and Acts of the Legislature be published in both languages.

"13. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak the French and English languages.

"14. That treaties be concluded between the Dominion and the several Indian tribes of the country, as soon as possible.

"15. That until the population of the country entitles us to more, we have four representatives in the Canadian Parliament—one in the Senate, and three in the Legislative Assembly.

"16. That all properties, rights, and privileges, as hitherto enjoyed by us, be respected; and the recognition and arrangement of local customs, usages and privileges, be made under the control of the Local Legislature.

"17. That the Local Legislature of this Territory have full control of all the public land inside a circumference, having Upper Fort Garry as the centre, and that the radii of this circumference be the number of miles that the American line is distant from Fort Garry.

"18. That every man in this country (except uncivilized and unsettled Indians) who has attained the age of twenty-one years, and every British subject, a stranger to this Territory, who has resided three years in the country, and is a householder, shall have a right to vote at the election of a member to serve in the Legislature of the country and in the Dominion Parliament; and every foreign subject, other than a British subject, who has resided the same length of time in the country, and is a householder, shall have the same right to vote, on condition of his taking the oath of allegiance—it being understood that this article be subject to amendment exclusively by the Local Legislature.

"19. That the North-West Territory shall never be held liable for any portion of the 300,000Z. paid to the Hudson Bay Company, or for any portion of the public debt of Canada, as it stands at the time of our entering the Confederation; and if, thereafter, we be called upon to assume our share of the said public debt, we consent only on condition that we first be allowed the amount for which we shall be held liable."

The foregoing document was put into my hands at 11 A. M., 7th February, and I was invited to meet the Delegates at 1 P. M., the same day, which I did, and then, as Canadian Commissioner, replied as follows:—

"1. With regard to the first Article, the Convention has already had a communication to the effect that the Dominion Government had provided by Order in Council for the continuance of the present tariff of duties in the Territory for at least two years; and I feel convinced that the Government will be prepared to recommend to Parliament such measures as will meet the views of the Convention, as expressed in this Article.

"2nd and 3rd. I believe the Canadian Government will ask the Dominion Parliament to meet the views of the Convention and their Constituents in respect to these Articles.

"4th. The Canadian Government assured me of their desire to consult the wishes of the people of the Territory in respect to matters connected with the Composition of the Local Legislature, and of their intention to select at least two-thirds of the Council from among the residents. This Council would have reported as to the best mode of proceeding in introducing the elective principle, and Parliament would then have been asked to pass an Act on the subject, the Government having no power to settle such a matter without an Act. Bearing this in mind, I do not hesitate to give it as my opinion that the Dominion Government will ask Parliament to provide a liberal Government for the country while it remains a Territory.

"5th. I have the most explicit assurance from the Canadian Government—that such will be the case.

"6th. For this the Dominion Government will provide in a liberal spirit.

"7th. This Article brings up some constitutional considerations, with which it would be presumption on my part, were I to deal summarily. But, I will repeat most distinctly that the Dominion Govern"ment will pay the utmost deference to the wishes of the Convention, as regards this and all other matters in connection with the Government of the country, and I have full confidence that the decision arrived at will be acceptable to the people.

"8th. I have been instructed by the Canadian Government—to make known to the people of the Settlement—that all property held by residents in peaceable possession will be secured to them; and that a most liberal land policy in regard to the future Settlement of the country will be adopted,—every privilege in this respect enjoyed in Ontario or Quebec, being extended to the Territory.

"9th. I feel certain that an amount even exceeding that here mentioned, will be appropriated for the purposes referred to.

"10th. I can safely promise that the Dominion Government will defray the cost of all the public buildings required for the general business of the Territory.

"11th. I do not hesitate to give this assurance, as the works on the Lake Superior route, which have been progressing actively since the early part of last summer, will doubtless be completed much within the time specified. As to the railway to Pembina, shortly after the American line reaches that point, it will certainly be carried out.

"12th. This will unquestionably be provided for.

"13th. The answer given to No. 12, will apply equally here.

"14th. Fully alive to the necessity of this, the Dominion Parliament will not fail to take an early opportunity of dealing with the matter, in order to extinguish in an equitable manner the claims of the Indians, so that settlers may obtain clear and indisputable titles.

"15th. The Convention will not expect me to speak definitely as to the number of representatives to be allotted to the Territory, but I can promise that the circumstances and requirements of the country will be fully and liberally considered in dealing with this matter.

"16th. On the part of the Canadian Government, as well as of Her Majesty's Representative in British North America, and also as coming immediately from the Sovereign, assurances have been given to all that the properties, rights, and privileges hitherto enjoyed by the people of the Territory would be respected, and I feel sure that the Dominion Government will confide to the Local Legislature the recognition and arrangement of local customs, usages, and privileges.

"17th. My knowledge of the country, and of the extent to which the concession here desired might affect public works, &c., is too limited to permit me to give any decided opinion on the subject, further than that full and substantial justice will be done in the matter.

"18th. Without entering into the details of the Article, I would say that the franchise will be so adjusted as to be satisfactory to the public, both native and immigrant, and in a manner conducive to the general welfare.

"19th. My belief is, that the Canadian Government has no intention of imposing on the North-West Territory the payment of any portion of the 300,000*l.*, and I have much confidence that they will be so actuated, in every respect, by wise and just motives; that in arranging for the distribution of the public debt of Canada, the North-West Territory will not be held liable for anything it ought not to bear; in short, that here, as in every other particular, substantial justice will be done.

"Having gone through the Articles, I would beg to say that, although authorized as Commissioner to act generally, as might appear best in the state of affairs here, it was thought probable some points might arise with which I could not deal personally, and to meet this I was instructed by the Dominion Government to invite a delegation of two or more of the residents of Red River to meet and confer with them at Ottawa. This I now do, and on the part of the Government promise that the gentlemen sent to Canada will be cordially received."

The invitation to send delegates to Canada was unanimously accepted by the Convention, and the following resolution was handed to me on the 8th February.

"Fort Garry, Court-House, 8th February, 1870.

"Resolved unanimously,—that as the Canadian Commissioners have invited a delegation from this country to Canada, to confer with the Canadian Government as to the affairs of this country; and as a cordial reception has been promised to said delegates, be it therefore resolved that the invitation be accepted, and that the same be signified to the Commissioners.

"By order.

"Secretary of State for
"the Provinces, Ottawa."

RIEL'S PROCLAMATION.

A special to the 'Toronto Telegraph,' from St. Paul, Minn., April 21st, says a prominent St. Paul, and Red River trader has just arrived from Fort Garry, which he left on the 10th inst. When he left Georgetown no mail had arrived at or left there for fifteen days, owing to the flood. He reports that on the arrival of Bishop Taché at Fort Garry he enlightened the people as to the intentions of Canada, and they now have a much better understanding of the transfer of the Territory. Bishop Taché was endeavouring to restore confidence. Most of the people fully expect a successful result from the mission of the delegates. The Sioux Indians are becoming troublesome, shooting cattle belonging to the settlers. They believe something is going on detrimental to their interest, and are kept quiet only by liberal supplies of presents. The people of the Settlement and the Hudson Bay

CANADA.

Company have acknowledged Riel's Government, and all have joined together for safety from the Indians until the bargain with Canada has been made, and a sufficient force from Canada arrives to ensure peace between the whites and Indians. The settlers hope, by temporising with the Indians, to keep them quiet until the plain hunters return to Fort Garry with their winter hunt, otherwise they may cut them off in small squads and plunder them.

The news of the arrest of the delegates and the furore in Canada over the death of Scott, has not reached the Settlement. This may have had a bad effect, as the people had come to the conclusion that everything was going on smoothly, and the terms with Canada were almost certain to be made.

Governor McTavish's health is improving.

Riel has given up to the Hudson Bay Company all the property confiscated, and issued the following Proclamation:—"Let the Assembly of twenty-eight Representatives which met on the 9th March be dear to the people of Red River; that Assembly has shown itself worthy of confidence. It has worked in union, and the members have devoted themselves to the public interests, and yielded only to the sentiments of good-will, duty, and generosity. Thanks to their noble conduct. Public authority will be employed to sustain and protect the people of the country. To-day the Government pardons all those whom political differences led astray, only for a time. Amnesty will be generously accorded to all those who will submit to the Government, and who will discountenance always dangerous gatherings. From this day forth public highways are open and the Hudson Bay Company can now resume business, and may circulate their money as of old. They pledge themselves to that course. The attention of the Government is also directed very especially to the northern part of the country, in order that trade may not receive any serious check, and that peace in the Indian districts may thereby be all the more securely maintained. The disastrous war which at one time threatened us, has left among us foes and various deplorable results, but the people feel assured of the conciliation of affairs. Having been elected by the grace of Providence and the suffrage of my fellow citizens to the highest position in the Government, I proclaim that peace reigns to-day in our midst. The Government will take every precaution to prevent this peace from being disturbed. While all is thus returning to order internally, also matters are looking favourable externally. Canada invites the Red River people to an amicable arrangement. She offers to guarantee us our rights and to give us a place in the Confederation equal to that of any other province. It is undefined with regard to our Provincial Government. Our national laws will be based upon justice, and shall be respected. This is a happy country to have escaped the many misfortunes that were prepared for her. She recommends that old friendship which used to bind us, and by ties of the same patriotism she has received them again for the sake of preserving their lives, their liberty, and their happiness. Let us remain united and we shall be happy. With strength of unity we shall attain prosperity. Oh, my fellow countrymen, without distinction of language, or without distinction of creed, keep my words in your hearts. If ever the time should unfortunately come when another division shall take place amongst us, as foreigners heretofore sought to create, that will be the signal for all the disasters which we have had the happiness to avoid. In order to prevent similar calamities the Government will treat with all the severity of the law those who dare again to compromise the public safety. It is ready to act against the disorder of parties as well as against that of individuals; but let us hope, however, that extreme measures will be unknown, and that the lessons of the past will guide us in the future.

"(Signed) LOUIS RIEL."

Enclosure 7 in No. 40.

The Globe and Telegraph denounces the Government policy with regard to the North-West, and the organisation of the Province of Manitobah, in unmeasured terms, as altogether in the interests of the rebellious French element.

A special to the Telegraph from St. Paul's dated May 3rd, says that large numbers of the Sioux are being driven from the American Territories, and are crossing over the British boundary, and it is feared they will give the Hudson Bay Hunters trouble.

"The Sioux are under the impression there is disturbance in Fort Garry district and that the half-breeds are plundering the Company, and they express a desire to have a share. An encounter between the Crees and Sioux was soon expected, and the community look to Canada for protection of life and property. The writer says, that Bishop Taché is working night and day through his missionaries and other sources to preserve peace among the Indians, half-breeds and whites. He has prevailed upon the half-breeds and Indians to respect the rights and property of the Hudson Bay Company, and each other, and is gradually bringing security and order out of chaos. The Red River community cannot understand why the Canada press and people extend them so little sympathy or credit for honesty of purpose in their present trying position. Travelling over the plains is represented as improving.

Parsien, who shot Sutherland, died of his wounds on the 6th ult.

The Provisional Government has appointed James McKay Commissioner to inquire into the nature of the complaints, and into the conduct of the Sioux.

"The New Nation of the 8th April contains the following items:—

"Bishop Taché visited White Horse Plains last week, by request, and addressed the people in the chapel. After alluding to his visit to the Council at Rome and his recall by a telegram from the Dominion Bishop, he said it was his belief that Canada would treat the people of the land in the kindliest and most honourable way. His people, when they reflected fully, would, he felt sure, trust to the sincerity of the professions of Canada, for they could not forget that by many links the countries were bound together; he, himself, and most of the Fathers in the Church here were Canadians. The Sisters living here were also to a large extent Canadians, and the fathers of his hearers for the most part had been Canadians. His Lordship has always met with a hearty reception from his people in this quarter, and his remarks seemed to leave a favourable impression.

Good times are looked for this Spring.

Hunters and traders are reported richly laden with robes and provisions.

The catch of fine fur has been a failure, but the supply of buffalo robes is larger than it has been for years.

(No. 97.)

Government House, Ottawa,
19th May, 1870.

MY LORD,

(Received 1st June, 1870.)

1. I have the honour to forward herewith certified copies of the Act "to establish "and provide for the Government of the Province of Manitoba."

2. The Act is so short that it seems needless to attempt to summarise its provisions.

3. I have been informed by trustworthy authority that it is likely to prove generally acceptable to the people of the North-West.

4. The gentleman recommended by my responsible advisers to fill the important office of Lieutenant-Governor is the Honourable A. G. Archibald of Nova Scotia.

5. Mr. Archibald has filled the offices of Solicitor-General and Attorney-General in the Province of Nova Scotia previous to confederation. He was a Member of the Convention in 1864 which discussed the terms of the present Confederation; and a Delegate to the London Conference, which finally settled the terms of union. He was appointed a Privy Councillor and Secretary of State for the Provinces in the first Government of the Dominion, but being defeated at the elections, he resigned his seat in the Cabinet.
He has since been returned by his former constituency of Colchester to the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Archibald is spoken of in all quarters as a man of ability, and sound, calm judgment, and I trust his selection may prove a fortunate one.

6. Colonel Wolseley, who is to command the expedition, leaves Toronto with Her Majesty's Troops on the 20th instant, and they go on as quickly as possible to Fort William at the head of Lake Superior.

7. I telegraphed to him yesterday to send me, for your Lordship's information, a short statement of his probable movements. He replied as follows:—

"There are 200 of the First Battalion of Volunteers and the gunboat 'Rescue' at the "Sault.

"All the Regular Troops will be at Fort William on the 26th of May. A post will "be formed there and fortified.

"It is hoped that all the Volunteers and Stores will have reached Fort William by "the 10th June.

"Expect to reach Fort Garry, with entire Force, about 1st August, and to leave with "Regulars between 20th and 25th of August, so as to reach Toronto by 1st October."

8. I also send a copy of the orders which he has issued.

9. A temporary difficulty occurred in consequence of the stoppage by the American Authorities of the steamer 'Chicora' at the Sault Ste. Marie Canal, which runs through American Territory, connecting Lake Huron with Lake Superior. She had no warlike stores whatever on board, the Canadian Government having from the very first decided not to attempt the sending of any such Stores, much less of Troops, through this Canal.

10. At the request of my Ministers, therefore, I addressed a representation to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, and I am happy to be able to report that the United States Government has very promptly sent instructions to allow the 'Chicora,' and vessels of the same class, to pass through the Canal.

11. I have placed the services of Lieutenant-Colonel McNevel, V. C., my Military Secretary, at the disposal of General Lindsay, for the Expedition. He will report fully to me, as occasion offers along the route, and I shall forward his reports to your Lordship for your information.

12. I beg to forward certain Resolutions passed at a Public Meeting at Sarnia, in Ontario, which have been sent on to me for the purpose, as Resolution 3 states, that
"this Meeting believes it expresses the enlightened public opinion of Canada in calling "on our Government to use its influence with the Imperial Authorities with the view to "the offer of a reward for the capture and arraignment at the bar of justice of Riel
"and his associates in the work of murder."

The Earl Granville, K.G.
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure 1 in
No. 44,

Enclosure 1 in No. 44.

An Act to amend and continue the Act 32 and 33 Victoria chapter 3, and to establish and provide for the Government of the Province of Manitoba.

WHEREAS it is probable that Her Majesty the Queen may, pursuant to the "British North America Act, 1867, be pleased to admit Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, before the next Session of the Parliament of Canada :

And Whereas it is expedient to prepare for the transfer of the said Territories to the Government of Canada at the time appointed by the Queen for such admission :

And Whereas it is expedient also to provide for the organization of part of the said Territories as a Province, and for the establishment of a Government therefor, and to make provision for the Civil Government of the remaining part of the said Territories, not included within the limits of the Province :

Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:—

1. On, from and after the day upon which the Queen, by and with the advice and consent of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, under the authority of the 146th Section of the "British North America Act, 1867," shall, by Order in Council in that behalf, admit Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, there shall be formed out of the same a Province, which shall be one of the Provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and which shall be called the Province of Manitoba, and be bounded as follows: that is to say, commencing at the point where the meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude from Greenwich intersects the parallel of forty-nine degrees north latitude,—thence due west along the said parallel of forty-nine degrees north latitude (which forms a portion of the boundary line between the United States of America and the said North-Western Territory) to the meridian of ninety-nine degrees of west longitude, then due north along the said meridian of ninety-nine degrees of west longitude, to the intersection of the same with the parallel of fifty degrees and thirty minutes north latitude,—thence due east along the said parallel of fifty degrees and thirty minutes north latitude to its intersection with the before-mentioned meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude,—thence due south along the said meridian of ninety-six degrees west longitude to the place of beginning.

2. On, from and after the said day on which the Order of the Queen in Council shall take effect as aforesaid, the provisions of the "British North America Act, 1867," shall, except those parts thereof which are in terms made, or, by reasonable intendment, may be held to be specially applicable to, or only to affect one or more, but not the whole of the Provinces now composing the Dominion, and except so far as the same may be varied by this Act, be applicable to the Province of Manitoba, in the same way, and to the like extent as they apply to the several Provinces of Canada, and as if the Province of Manitoba had been one of the Provinces originally united by the said Act.

3. The said Province shall be represented in the Senate of Canada by two Members, until it shall have, according to decennial census, a population of fifty thousand souls, and from thenceforth it shall be represented therein by three Members until it shall have, according to decennial census, a population of seventy-five thousand souls, and from thenceforth it shall be represented therein by four Members.

4. The said Province shall be represented, in the first instance, in the House of Commons, by four Members, and for that purpose shall be divided by proclamation of the Governor-General, into four Electoral Districts, each of which shall be represented by one Member: Provided that on the completion of the Census in the year 1881, and of each Decennial Census afterwards, the representation of the said Province shall be re-adjusted according to the provisions of the fifty-first section of the "British North America Act, 1867."

5. Until the Parliament of Canada otherwise provides, the qualification of voters at Elections of Members of the House of Commons shall be the same as for the Legislative Assembly hereinafter mentioned: And no person shall be qualified to be elected or to sit and vote as a Member for any Electoral District unless he is a duly qualified voter within the said Province.

6. For the said Province there shall be an officer styled the Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council, by instrument under the Great Seal of Canada.

7. The Executive Council of the Province shall be composed of such persons, and under such designations, as the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time think fit, and, in the first instance, of not more than five persons.

8. Unless and until the Executive Government of the Province otherwise directs, the seat of Government of the same shall be at Fort Garry, or within one mile thereof.

9. There shall be a Legislature for the Province, consisting of the Lieutenant-Governor, and of two Houses styled respectively the Legislative Council of Manitoba, and the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba.

10. The Legislative Council shall, in the first instance, be composed of seven Members, and after the expiration of four years from the time of the first appointment of such seven Members, may be increased to not more than twelve Members. Every Member of the Legislative Council shall be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in the Queen's name, by instrument under the Great Seal of Manitoba, and shall hold office for the term of his life, unless and until the Legislature of Manitoba otherwise provides under the "British North America Act, 1867."

11. The Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, by instrument under the Great Seal, appoint a Member of the Legislative Council to be Speaker thereof, and may remove him, and appoint another in his stead.

CANADA.

12. Until the Legislature of the Province otherwise provides, the presence of a majority of the whole number of the Legislative Council, including the Speaker shall be necessary to constitute a meeting for the exercise of its powers.

13. Questions arising in the Legislative Council shall be decided by a majority of voices, and the Speaker shall, in all cases have a vote, and when the voices are equal, the decision shall be deemed to be in the negative.

14. The Legislative Assembly shall be composed of twenty-four Members, to be elected to represent the Electoral Divisions into which the said Province may be divided by the Lieutenant-Governor as hereinafter mentioned.

15. The presence of a majority of the Members of the Legislative Assembly shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the House for the exercise of its powers,—and for that purpose the Speaker shall be reckoned as a Member.

16. The Lieutenant-Governor shall (within six months of the date of the Order of Her Majesty in Council, admitting Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union) by Proclamation under the Great Seal, divide the said Province into twenty-four Electoral Divisions, due regard being had to existing Local Divisions and population.

17. Every male person shall be entitled to vote for a Member to serve in the Legislative Assembly for any Electoral Division, who is qualified as follows; that is to say, if he is:—

- (1.) Of the full age of twenty-one years, and not subject to any legal incapacity:
- (2.) A Subject of Her Majesty by birth or naturalization:
- (3.) And a bonâ fide householder within the Electoral Division, at the date of the Writ of Election for the same, and has been a bonâ fide householder for one year next before the said date; or,
- (4.) If, being of the full age of twenty-one years, and not subject to any incapacity, and a subject of Her Majesty by birth or naturalization, he was at any time within twelve months prior to the passing of this Act, and (though in the interim temporarily absent) is at the time of such election a bonâ fide householder, and was resident within the Electoral Division at the date of the Writ of Election for the same.

But this fourth sub-section shall apply only to the first election to be held under this Act for Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly aforesaid.

18. For the first election of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly, and until the Legislature of the Province otherwise provides, the Lieutenant-Governor shall cause writs to be issued by such person, in such form, and addressed to such Returning Officers as he thinks fit; and for such first election, and until the Legislature of the Province otherwise provides, the Lieutenant-Governor shall, by proclamation, prescribe and declare the oaths to be taken by voters, the powers and duties of Returning and Deputy Returning Officers, the proceedings to be observed at such election, and the period during which such election may be continued, and such other provisions in respect to such first election as he may think fit.

19. Every Legislative Assembly shall continue for four years from the date of the return of the Writs for returning the same (subject nevertheless to being sooner dissolved by the Lieutenant-Governor) and no longer; and the first Session thereof shall be called at such time as the Lieutenant-Governor shall appoint.

20. There shall be a Session of the Legislature once at least in every year, so that twelve months shall not intervene between the last sitting of the Legislature in one Session, and its first sitting in the next Session.

21. The following provisions of the "British North America Act, 1867," respecting the House of Commons of Canada, shall extend and apply to the Legislative Assembly, that is to say:—Provisions relating to the Election of a Speaker, originally, and on vacancies—the duties of the Speaker,—the absence of the speaker and the mode of voting, as if those Provisions were here re-enacted, and made applicable in terms to the Legislative Assembly:

22. In and for the Province, the said Legislature may exclusively make Laws in relation to education, subject and according to the following provisions:—

- (1.) Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to Denominational Schools which any class of persons have by Law or practice in the Province at the Union:
- (2.) An appeal shall lie to the Governor-General in Council from any Act or decision of the Legislature of the Province, or of any Provincial authority, affecting any right or privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic minority of the Queen's Subjects in relation to education:
- (3.) In case any such Provisional Law as from time to time seems to the Governor-General in Council requisite for the due execution of the provisions of this Section is not made, or in case any decision of the Governor-General in Council on any appeal under this Section is not duly executed by the proper Provincial authority in that behalf, then, and in every such case, and as far only as the circumstances of each case require, the Parliament of Canada may make remedial Laws for the due execution of the provisions of this Section, and of any decision of the Governor-General in Council under this Section.

23. Either the English or the French language may be used by any person, in the debates of the Houses of the Legislature, and both those languages shall be used in the respective Records and Journals of those Houses, and either of those languages may be used by any person, or in Pleading or Process, in or issuing from any Court of Canada established under the "British North America Act, 1867," or in or from all or any of the Courts of the Province. The Acts of the Legislature shall be printed and published in both those Languages.

24. Inasmuch as the Province is not in debt, the said Province shall be entitled to be paid, and to receive from the Government of Canada, by half-yearly payments in advance, interest at the rate of five per centum per annum on the sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and ninety dollars.

25. The sum of thirty thousand dollars shall be paid yearly by Canada to the Province, for the support of its Government and Legislature, and an annual grant, in aid of the said Province shall be made, equal to Eighty cents per head of the population, estimated at seventeen thousand souls; and such grant of Eighty cents per head shall be augmented in proportion to the increase of population, as may be shewn by the census that shall be taken thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and by each subsequent decennial census, until its population amounts to four hundred thousand souls, at which amount such grant shall remain thereafter, and such sum shall be in full settlement of all future demands on Canada, and shall be paid half-yearly, in advance, to the said Province.

26. Canada will assume and defray the charges for the following services:—

- (1.) Salary of the Lieutenant-Governor.
- (2.) Salaries and allowances of the Judges of the Superior and District of County Courts.
- (3.) Charges in respect of the Department of the Customs.
- (4.) Postal Department.
- (5.) Protection of Fisheries.
- (6.) Militia.
- (7.) Geological Survey.
- (8.) The Penitentiary.
- (9.) And such further charges as may be incident to, and connected with the services which by the "British North America Act, 1867," appertain to the General Government, and as are, or may be allowed to the other Provinces.

27. The Customs' duties now by law chargeable in Rupert's Land, shall be continued without increase for the period of three years from and after the passing of this Act, and the proceeds of such duties shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

28. Such provisions of the Customs Laws of Canada (other than such as prescribe the rate of duties payable) as may be from time to time declared by the Governor-General in Council to apply to the Province of Manitoba, shall be applicable thereto, and in force therein accordingly.

29. Such provisions of the Laws of Canada, respecting the Inland Revenue, including those fixing the amount of duties, as may be from time to time declared by the Governor-General in Council applicable to the said Province, shall apply thereto, and be in force therein accordingly.

30. All ungranted or waste lands in the Province shall be, from and after the date of the said transfer, vested in the Crown, and administered by the Government of Canada for the purposes of the Dominion, subject to, and except and so far as the same may be affected by, the conditions and stipulations contained in the agreement for the surrender of Rupert's Land by the Hudson Bay Company to Her Majesty.

31. And whereas it is expedient, towards the extinguishment of the Indian Title to the lands in the Province, to appropriate a portion of such ungranted lands to the extent of one million four hundred thousand acres thereof, for the benefit of the families of the half-breed residents, it is hereby enacted, that under regulations to be from time to time made by the Governor-General in Council, the Lieutenant-Governor shall select such lots or tracts in such parts of the Province as he may deem expedient, to the extent aforesaid, and divide the same among the children of the half-breed heads of families, residing in the Province at the time of the said transfer to Canada, and the same shall be granted to the said children respectively, in such mode and on such conditions as to settlement and otherwise, as the Governor-General in Council shall from time to time determine.

32. For the quieting of titles, and assuring to the Settlers in the Province the peaceable possession of lands now held by them, it is enacted as follows:—

- (1.) All grants of land in freehold made by the Hudson's Bay Company up to the eighth day of March, in the year 1869, shall if required by the owner, be confirmed by grant from the Crown.
- (2.) All grants of estates less than freehold in land made by the Hudson's Bay Company up to the eighth day of March aforesaid, shall, if required by the owner be converted into an estate in freehold by grant from the Crown.
- (3.) All titles by occupancy with the sanction and under the license and authority of the Hudson Bay Company up to the eighth day of March aforesaid, of land in that part of the Province in which the Indian title has been extinguished, shall, if required by the owner, be converted into an estate in freehold by grant from the Crown.
- (4.) All persons in peaceable possession of tracts of land at the time of the transfer to Canada, in those parts of the Province in which the Indian Title has not been extinguished, shall have the right of pre-emption of the same, on such terms and conditions as may be determined by the Governor-in-Council.
- (5.) The Lieutenant-Governor is hereby authorised, under regulations to be made from time to time by the Governor-General in Council, to make all such provisions for ascertaining and adjusting, on fair and equitable terms, the rights of Common, and rights of cutting Hay held and enjoyed by the settlers in the Province, and for the commutation of the same by grants of land from the Crown.

33. The Governor-General in Council shall from time settle and appoint the mode and form of Grants of Land from the Crown, and any Order in Council for that purpose when published in the 'Canada Gazette,' shall have the same force and effect as if it were a portion of this Act.

34. Nothing in this Act shall in any way prejudice or affect the rights or properties of the Hudson's

CANADA. Bay Company, as contained in the conditions under which that Company, surrendered Rupert's Land to Her Majesty.

35. And with respect to such portion of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory, as is not included in the Province of Manitoba, it is hereby enacted, That the Lieutenant Governor of the said Province shall be appointed, by Commission under the Great Seal of Canada, to be the Lieutenant-Governor of the same, under the name of the North-West Territories, and subject to the provisions of the Act in the next Section mentioned.

36. Except as hereinbefore is enacted and provided, the Act of the Parliament of Canada, passed in the now last Session thereof, and entitled "An Act for the temporary government of Rupert's Land, and the North Western Territory when united with Canada," is hereby re-enacted, extended, and continued in force until the first day of January, 1871, and until the end of the Session of Parliament then next succeeding.

As Keeper of the Laws of the Dominion of Canada, I do hereby certify the foregoing to be a true Copy of the Original Enactment now in my possession, which received the Royal Assent on Thursday the twelfth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

JOHN F. TAYLOR,
Clerk of the Senate.

Office of the Senate of Canada,

Enclosure 2 in No. 44.

STANDING ORDERS FOR THE RED RIVER EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

Enclosure 2
in No. 44.

Toronto, 14th May, 1870.

1. The Expeditionary Force will proceed from the end of the Thunder Bay Road to the Lake of the Woods in boats. It will move by Detachments, consisting of one or more Companies. To each Company a Brigade of five boats will be attached.

2. The boats will be numbered 1, 2, 3, &c., &c., and the brigade will be distinguished by letters beginning at A.

3. In each boat there will be the following tools and equipment:—Two felling axes, one pick-axe, one spade, one shovel, two hand axes, two flanders kettles, two frying pans, two sails, two boat-hooks, two spare oars, "making eight in all;" four rowlocks, one set of blocks (single and double), one boat lamp, six thimbles for setting poles, one dipper, one rubber bucket, one boat-sponge, two cans of paint (black and white), five lbs. assorted boat-nails, one double-tin oil-can, one tin, with pitch, one tarpaulin, fenders, sixty fathoms tow-line, one can mosquito oil, &c., &c.; spare plank and tools necessary for repairs. There will also be the cooking utensils, &c., of the boatmen, for which the coxswain of each boat will be responsible. In every boat there will be 30 days' rations for the soldiers and boatmen, besides, also, about one ton of surplus stores.

4. With each brigade of boats there will be a carpenter's chest of tools and a fishing net.

5. The scale of rations for every one will be as follows:—1 lb. of biscuit, or 1½ lb. of soft bread, 1 lb. of salt pork, or 1½ lb. of fresh meat, 2 oz. of sugar, 1 oz. of tea, ½ oz. salt when fresh meat is issued, ½ pint of beans, or ¼ lb. preserved potatoes, ⅜ oz. pepper; the ration of flour, when issued, to be 1½ lb.

6. In each boat there will be three voyageurs, one of whom will be the coxswain and have entire charge of managing the boat.

7. The officer or N.C. officer in command of the men in each boat will render him every assistance in doing so, and any one going counter to his advice must understand that he is taking upon himself a grave responsibility, which may possibly affect the safety of the whole party.

8. No one, under any pretence, will be allowed to sit on the gunwale of the boats, and all must learn to sit steadily, moving as little as possible when the boat is under weigh, particularly in rapid water. When under sail the sheets must never be made fast, they must invariably be held by the hand.

9. To prevent supplies being sent to wrong places, it must be remembered that all stores belonging to the expedition have been divided into three classes, X., Y., Z., and marked accordingly; those marked Z. are to be taken with the Force when it finally starts from Fort Francis; those marked Y. are to be left at Fort Francis, and those marked X. at Fort William.

10. Officers commanding companies will not allow, under any pretence whatever, any person not belonging to the Force to be carried in the boats, unless he has a written permission, signed by the officer commanding the Force or by Lieutenant-Colonel Boulton.

11. The officer in immediate command at the Shebandowan end of the road will be held strictly responsible that no unauthorised person embarks. He will attend at the departure of each brigade of boats to see this order rigidly carried out.

12. Detachments will be posted temporarily at various portages along the route for the purpose of facilitating the transport of supplies to Fort Francis.

13. They will carry out this duty as follows:—They will daily send back to the nearest portage in rear a sufficient number of boats to carry 15 tons of stores; all the boatmen to be employed on this service, supplemented by as many soldiers as the officer commanding on the spot may consider necessary; all soldiers to take their arms and accoutrements with them.

14. One officer will invariably accompany the boats upon this duty, and will take with him at each trip supplies sufficient for the crews for three days, together with a portion of tools, &c., &c. The remainder of the detachment to be employed daily in carrying over the portage at their post the 15 tons of stores brought up by the boats on the previous day, and loading them in the boats sent back to receive them by the detachment in front.

15. The day after each detachment has reached its position it will commence operations by sending back for the surplus stores of the detachment in rear. This will be continued daily, until all the reserve supplies for Fort Francis have been sent forward.

16. The greatest possible care will be necessary in loading and unloading the boats to guard against their being injured. The Indian voyageurs having had great experience in loading canoes; their advice is to be attended to in this matter.

17. Every one concerned must learn that the success of the undertaking depends upon these boats, and if those provided be rendered unserviceable they cannot be replaced.

The Colonel Commanding will therefore have no alternative but to leave behind the crews of any boats that are rendered unfit for use.

19. Colonel McNeill will be stationed at the Shebandowan end of the road. Special instructions will be issued to him for his guidance.

19. Mr. Myer will be the control officer there, to superintend the shipment of stores. He will be responsible for the loading of the boats, and will decide also the description and amount of stores to be sent with each, in addition to those laid down as forming the equipment of each boat. He will hand over to the Captain of each Company, the evening before he starts, the complete equipment of his brigade of boats, receiving a receipt from him for it. The Officer commanding the Company will make an exact copy of the list in his pocket-book, specifying therein how he has distributed the stores, &c., by boats, and the name of the Officer or Sergeant in charge of each boat.

20. Mr. Myer will also hand over to every Officer commanding a Company rations complete for his men and voyageurs for thirty days, taking a receipt for the same; a list of these provisions to be also entered by the Captain in his pocket-book. These provisions must be distributed throughout the boats, so that in each boat there will be thirty days' rations for every one in it.

21. Mr. Myer will also hand over to every Officer commanding a Company as much surplus supplies (about 2000 lbs. weight for each boat) as his boats can conveniently carry—Mr. Myer to be the judge on this point—giving him an accurate list of the articles, which will be sent on with the stores when they are passed forward beyond the portage, where the Company is to be temporarily stationed on the line of route. This list will be signed as correct, or otherwise, by all the Officers commanding at the several portages when the stores pass through their posts; any article deficient to be noted on the list.

22. After the last detachment has left, the stores noted in the margin* will be shipped with as little delay as possible, at the rate of fifteen tons a-day. One or, if possible, two days before the last fifteen tons are to be despatched from Shebandowan Lake, Colonel McNeill will notify in writing, to all the posts in advance, stating when the last of the reserve stores will be sent through. He will send a written memorandum with the last fifteen tons, saying they are the last.

Upon receipt of this information (which will be signed by the Officer commanding each Detachment, and forwarded on to the next post) Officers commanding at all posts on the line between Shebandowan and Fort Francis will proceed without delay to the latter place, taking on with them their boats and all their equipments, and the remains of the thirty days' provisions sent originally with them.

23. Upon reaching Fort Francis they will complete their boats with thirty days' rations for all persons in them, and will embark such surplus stores as the Control Officer, Mr. Mellish, may indicate.

24. As soon as the detachment left at Bear Portage reaches Fort Francis the 200 men of the 1st, 60th Rifles, which had been stationed there during this movement will start for the Rat Portage to work at it.

25. By these arrangements, the last Detachment (that left at Shebandowan Lake) will reach Fort Francis the day after the last fifteen tons of the reserve supplies to be stored there reach that place.

26. The Detachments from Fort Francis will severally start from thence as soon as relieved by the Detachment coming up in rear.

27. Fresh instructions will be issued at Fort Francis with reference to the forward movement from that place.

28. In case of a man falling seriously ill, or being seriously injured whilst the Troops are moving to their several stations, the Medical Officer with the Detachment will decide whether the illness or injury is of such a nature as to prevent the man from proceeding further. If he pronounces the man as likely to be unfit for work for some time to come, he is to be left behind at the nearest portage where a Detachment is to be stationed, in charge of a Non-commissioned Officer and one man, who will take their arms, accoutrements, &c., &c., with them. A week's provisions to be left for the three men. All Officers commanding Detachments passing by them to see that they have always that quantity in their possession.

As soon as the Detachment to be stationed at the Portage where the sick man has been left arrives, he will be sent with the returning boats to the rear, to be forwarded on to the Hospital at Fort William.

Chests of tea.
Barrels of sugar.

Tins of potatoes.

CANADA.

If there is no Medical Officer with the Detachment, the sick man will be left behind in a similar manner until the arrival of a Detachment having a Doctor with it.

In both cases the N. C. Officer and Private left with the man will proceed on to join their Company as soon as the man has been sent to the rear.

The Officer commanding the 12th Detachment, whilst en route between his Post at the Kashaboiwe Portage and Fort Francis, will use his own discretion as to whether he will send serious cases of illness to the Hospital at Fort William, or take them on with him to Fort Francis. If he can possibly do so he should send them to the former place.

29. Officers commanding detachments, from the time of their embarking at Shebandowan, will keep a Journal of their route, entering the exact hour they start each morning, the hours they halt for meals and start again, the time they reach the halting-place for the night, giving the name of the place, the state of the weather, whether they used oars or sails during the day, &c., &c. All irregularities committed by their men to be recorded. They will also state whether they found the fires made by the previous detachment still burning or not.

30. The Officers commanding the several Detachments posted at the Portages will encamp their men in as compact order as possible on the end of the Portage nearest to Fort Francis, except when, from the marshiness of the ground, or other peculiar causes, there are good reasons for departing from this order.

They will pile up their provisions close to the landing place, at the Fort Francis side of the Portage, covering them over with the boat tarpaulins, and doing everything in their power to protect them from the weather.

The boats will remain on the Shebandowan side of the Portage, every precaution being taken to secure them at night by their painters to the shore. When there is a good beach they should be hauled up for the night, being launched every morning.

31. Each Detachment will have a Guard, consisting of at least three men per Company. They will mount with arms and accoutrements. Up to Fort Francis the arms for the other men will remain in their arm chests, unless when for special reasons the Officers commanding detachments may consider it necessary for the men to keep their arms in the tents.

The arms, if kept in these arm chests, must be frequently inspected by the Captains of Companies, to see that they are free from rust, and in good and serviceable order.

32. The greatest possible precautions to be taken to guard against the woods being set on fire.

The cooking places will be established as near the water as possible, and no other fires are to be allowed in the camp without the express permission of the officer commanding the detachment, who will assure himself, before giving such permission, that there is no danger to be apprehended.

When on the move, officers commanding companies will be held responsible that all fires are extinguished previous to their leaving a camp.

33. As a rule, the reveille will sound at 3 a.m. every morning, and the boats will start as soon after that as possible, the men to have some hot tea before starting. The boats of each brigade must keep as near together as possible, the Captain with his Bugler being in the leading boat; the senior subaltern and a sergeant in the rear boat.

A halt of one hour will be made at 8 a.m. for breakfast; another halt of an hour at 1 p.m. for dinner. Officers commanding companies may, of course, depart a little from these hours for meals; but, under no circumstances, is more than an hour to be allowed for each meal. They will always halt for the night at least one full hour before dark, so that there may be ample time to establish the Camp for the night. When on the move, it is not advisable to pitch tents except when it rains or threatens to do so—even then the smallest possible number should be pitched.

34. When it is necessary to track the boats, the crew will be divided into two parties, each consisting of four or five soldiers and one voyageur. Sergeants are not to be employed in tracking.

These two parties to relieve one another every two hours. Officers and N. C. Officers in charge of boats will see that the men returning to their boats after tracking put on their serge frocks at once, which are not to be removed for at least half an hour afterwards.

All Officers belonging to this force will be most careful in impressing upon those under their command the great necessity there is for cultivating the good will of the Indians and others employed as voyageurs.

Colonel Wolseley will punish with the utmost severity any one who ill treats them.

The same rule applies to all Indians who may be met on the line of route.

It must be remembered that the Government has made a treaty with them securing the right of way through their country; all are therefore bound to protect them from injury, and it is of special importance that our intercourse with them should be of the most friendly nature.

No Indians but those actually attached to the Force are to be allowed to pass the night in our Camps.

(Signed) G. J. WOLSELEY,
Colonel Commanding Expeditionary Force.

At a Public Meeting of the inhabitants of Sarnia, held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, the 14th day of April instant, the MAYOR in the Chair, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

First,

Moved by the Honourable A. VIDAL, Seconded by R. McKENZIE, Esq., and

CANADA.

Resolved,

That we, the inhabitants of the Town of Sarnia, in Public Meeting assembled, desire to express our deep indignation at the treatment to which our fellow countrymen in the North-West have been subjected at the hands of a disloyal fraction, which has temporarily usurped the functions of Government there, and violated the fundamental law of the British Empire by an illegal assumption of power over the lives and liberties of British freemen; and that we confess to a deep feeling of humiliation that our birthright privileges as British subjects should, even for a brief period, be trampled underfoot on British soil.

Secondly,

Moved by F. DAVIS, Esq., Seconded by T. B. PARDU, Esq., and

Resolved,

That the bloody and atrocious murder in mock legal form of our brave countryman Thomas Scott, for the simple crime of outspoken loyalty to Queen and country, is an act which calls loudly for punishment; and this meeting trusts that no unworthy parleying with rebels will be allowed to stay the strong right arm of a willing soldiery from carrying succour and protection to the overborne loyal population of Red River, and hurling from his fancied fortress of power the miscreant who murders and maltreats his fellow-subjects and insults the national honour.

Thirdly,

Moved by A. YOUNG, Esq., Seconded by R. S. GURD, Esq., and

Resolved,

That this Meeting believes it expresses the enlightened public opinion of Canada in calling on our Government to use its influence with the Imperial Authorities, with a view to the offer of a reward for the capture and arraignment at the Bar of Justice of Riel and his chief associates in the work of murder.

Fourthly.

Moved by JOSHUA ADAMS, Esq., seconded by G. R. S. CHALMERS, Esq., and

Resolved,

That this Meeting expresses the deepest sympathy with the relatives and friends of the brave and patriotic Scott, so foully murdered by Riel and his associates.

Fifthly,

Moved by J. H. WOOD, Esq., Seconded by the Rev. MR. MCCALLUM, and

Resolved,

That a copy of the foregoing Resolutions be at once forwarded to the Dominion Government.

Signed,
CHARLES TAYLOR, Chairman.

"Do what you like with the following:—

"The Queen has learnt with regret and surprise that certain misguided men have joined together to resist the entry of the Lieutenant-Governor into Her Majesty's possessions on the Red River.

"The Queen does not distrust Her subjects' loyalty in those Settlements, and must ascribe their opposition to a change plainly for their advantage to misrepresentation or misunderstanding.

"She relies upon your Government for taking every care to explain where there is a misunderstanding, and to ascertain the wants and conciliate the good will of the Settlers of the Red River. But at the same time she authorises you to tell them that she views with displeasure and sorrow their lawless and unreasonable proceedings, and that she expects that if they have any wish to express, or complaints to make, they will address themselves to the Governor of the Dominion of Canada, of which in a few days they will form a part.

"The Queen relies upon Her Representative being always ready on the one hand to give redress to well founded grievances and on the other hand to repress, with the authority which she has entrusted him, any unlawful disturbance."

COPY of a DESPATCH from The EARL GRANVILLE, K.G., to Governor
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN YOUNG, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.M.G.

(No. 214.)

Downing Street, 30th November, 1869.

SIR,

* Page 3.

I have received with much regret your Telegram of the 23rd * instant, informing me that disturbances had occurred in the Red River Settlements, and that Canada cannot accept the transfer of the Territories hitherto occupied by the Hudson's Bay Company, unless quiet possession can be given.

2. It becomes necessary, under these circumstances, to recall to you the state of this question.

3. Although Her Majesty's Government have long desired that the Title of the Hudson's Bay Company to these Territories should be extinguished, yet this extinction has been uniformly pressed forward by and in the interests of Canada.

4. On the 11th November, 1864, a Committee of the Executive Council of Canada, expressed themselves "more than ever impressed with the importance of opening up "to settlement and cultivation, the lands lying between Lake Superior and the Rocky "Mountains;" and expressed the opinion that the first step towards settlement was the extinction of all claim by the Hudson's Bay Company to proprietary rights in the soil, or exclusive right of trade.

5. By Mr. Cardwell's Despatch of the 17th June, 1865,† it appears that the Ministers of the then Province of Canada desired that the North-Western Territory should be made over to that Province, and undertook to negotiate with the Company for the termination of their rights.

6. On the 22nd of June, 1866, the Executive Council of Canada expressed the opinion that the most inviting parts of the Territory would shortly be peopled by persons whom the Company were unable to control; and who would establish a Government and Tribunals of their own, and assert their political independence—that such a community would cut British North America in two, and retard or prevent their communication by Railway, and, therefore, that "The future interests of "Canada and all British North America, were vitally concerned in the immediate "establishment of a strong Government there, and in its Settlement as a part of the "British Colonial system."

7. They express their conviction that the Confederate Government and Legislature will feel it to be one of their first duties to open negotiations with the Company for the transfer of their claims to the Territory—which, but for the approach of Confederation, they would themselves have done. And meantime they pray Her Majesty's Government to discountenance and prevent any such sales of any portion of the Territory as had then been proposed to its existing proprietors.

8. By the Act of Parliament which effected Confederation, The Queen was authorized, on certain terms, to annex these Territories to the Dominion. These powers the Canadian Parliament prayed her to exercise; Her Majesty's Government were unable to concur in the terms on which the transfer was proposed to be made, but after prolonged negotiations, and the passing of a second Act of Parliament, fresh terms were agreed upon between the Hudson's Bay Company and the Representatives of the Colony, and were embodied in a second Address from the Canadian Parliament,—the other requisite Instruments have been prepared, and the Canadian Government itself has named, first, the 1st of October, and next, the 1st of December, for the completion of the transfer. Meanwhile, the Company have been informed by the Agents of the Canadian Government (Messrs. Baring and Glyn), that the indemnity of 300,000*l.* will be paid, on due proof of the completion of their surrender.

9. Throughout these negotiations, it has never been hinted that the Company is to be bound to hand over its Territory in a state of tranquillity. Rather its inability to secure that tranquillity, and the dangers resulting from that inability to the neighbouring Colony, is taken for granted as a reason why its responsibilities should be adopted by Canada.

10. This being the state of the case, the Canadian Government, in anticipation of the transfer now agreed on by all parties, undertook certain operations in respect of land, subject in the first instance to a faint protest from the Company, and directed the future Lieutenant-Governor to enter the Territory. The result, unfortunately, has not met the expectations of the Colonial Government.

11. Mr. McDougall was met, it appears, by armed resistance, and the disturbances caused by his presence seem to have resulted in the plunder of the Company's Stores, and the occupation of Fort Garry by the insurgent portion of the population.

12. But the Canadian Government having, by this measure given occasion to an outbreak of violence in a Territory which they have engaged to take over, now appear to claim the right of postponing indefinitely, the completion of their engagements to the Company, and of imposing on Her Majesty's Government the responsibility of putting down the resistance which has thus arisen. This, at least, I understand from the passages "On surrender by the Company to the Queen of Great Britain, the "Government of the Company ceases," and "Canada cannot accept the transfer unless "quiet possession can be given."

13. You will, however, perceive, on referring to the Act of Parliament 31 and 32 Vict., chap. 105, that if on the one hand the Parliament of Canada embodies in an Address the terms on which they are prepared to receive Rupert's Land into the Dominion, and if, on the other hand, the Company surrender their Territory on terms agreed on with Her Majesty, it merely remains for Her Majesty, first by acceptance of the surrender, and next by Order in Council, to give effect to the arrangement thus agreed to by both parties—and it is provided that the surrender of the Territory becomes null and void, unless within a month of its acceptance by the Queen, Ruperts' Land is by such Order in Council admitted into the Dominion of Canada.

14. You will see, therefore, that it is impossible for Her Majesty to accept the surrender of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territory, unless it is certain within a month to be transferred to Canada.

15. Unless, therefore, it is to be so transferred, it must remain under the Jurisdiction of the Company, and liable to all the disorders which are to be expected when the prestige of a Government long known to be inadequate, is shaken by the knowledge that it is also expiring, and by the appearance, however well intended, of its successor. This is not a state of things in which Her Majesty's Government ought to acquiesce if they have the power of preventing it.

16. The British Government is by the Act of Parliament practically invested with the power, and therefore the duty, of giving effect to what has been deliberately agreed upon between the Company and the Colony. If after all that has passed, the Company present their surrender, and claim its acceptance by Her Majesty, as a means of enabling them to enforce obligations which it is too late to repudiate, and for the fulfilment of which the Canadian Government has itself fixed a time, I do not see how it is possible for Her Majesty's Government to reject their application on the grounds put forward by your Ministers.

17. I am glad to see that they are doing what they can to assist in the restoration of order; and I should not have been surprised to learn that, while completing the transaction practically as between themselves and the Company, they were desirous of choosing their own moment for a public announcement of the change of Jurisdiction.

18. But while Her Majesty's Government would have been ready to acquiesce in any such short postponement of the formal act of transfer, they do not feel that they are at liberty to treat the transaction as capable of being re-opened, or that they can refuse an application from the Company to complete a transfer which appears to them not merely the only means of providing for the restoration of order, but also to be due as a matter of mere justice to one of the parties.

19. Her Majesty's Government have reason to believe that the Hudson's Bay Company feel it to be their interest, and it is their wish, to assist to the extent of their power the Government of the Dominion; and I have to instruct you to impress strongly upon your Ministers, the anxious desire of Her Majesty's Government to make the authority of the Queen available in their support.

SIR,

Downing Street, 13th December, 1869.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch, No. 132,* of the 17th of November, forwarding copy of an approved Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, with reference to the preliminary instructions addressed to Mr. W. McDougall on proceeding to the North-West Territory.

These instructions appear to be well-considered, and likely to attain their object if, after the transfer of the Territories has taken place, Mr. McDougall should execute them with his usual judgment.

SIR,

Downing Street, 8th January, 1870.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatches 134-147, and 164, noted in the margin, relating to the recent disturbances in the Red River Settlement. In the Despatch No. 156 you enclose the copy of a Minute of the Privy Council of Canada, conveying their views on the present position of the Canadian Government in regard to the transfer of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territories to Canada.

I observe with great satisfaction the anxiety manifested by the Canadian Government to avoid any collision with the Insurgents in the Red River Settlement, and to exhaust all means of explanation and conciliation before having recourse to force. I entirely agree with your Ministers that bloodshed might lead to the most deplorable consequences, and should not be risked except under the pressure of the most urgent necessity. The illness of Mr. McTavish is much to be lamented. But I have perfect confidence in the Hudson's Bay Company, and have no reason to doubt that their Officers in the Territory are animated by an equally friendly spirit with the Company.

A statement has appeared in a newspaper report, to the effect that Mr. McDougall was enlisting Sioux Indians, with the view of employing them against the Insurgents. I do not doubt that this intention was erroneously imputed to Mr. McDougall. If any apprehension on the subject had existed in my mind it would have been removed by the Minute of the Privy Council.

No. 4, Jan. 5,

I have received your Despatches, noted in the margin, relating to the progress of affairs in the Red River Settlement.

I never supposed, as you are aware, that Mr. McDougall intended to invoke the aid of the Indians. But I am glad to be assured that he never has done so. At the same time, I think it unfortunate, however difficult and embarrassing Mr. McDougall's position undoubtedly was, that any steps should have been taken which could give rise to such an apprehension.

I much more seriously regret the Proclamation put forth by Mr. McDougall, and the Commission issued by him to Colonel Dennis.

The Proclamation recited that Her Majesty has transferred Rupert's Land to Canada, which has not been done; assumes the Authority of Lieutenant-Governor, which did not legally belong to him; and purported to extinguish the powers belonging to Mr. McTavish, who is in fact the only legal Governor of the Territory.

A subsequent Commission empowered Colonel Dennis to arm those adhering to him, to attack, arrest, disarm, and disperse armed men disturbing the public peace, and to assault, fire upon, and break into houses in which these armed men were to be found.

If Colonel Dennis had acted on this, the most disastrous consequences might have ensued. As it is, Governor McTavish must suppose his authority extinguished, none other being substituted for it; and the discovery that the statements made in the Proclamation are unfounded in fact, must detract from the weight of any subsequent Proclamations.

These proceedings do not render Her Majesty's Government less desirous of the restoration of tranquillity under the authority of the Dominion. But they have certainly enhanced the responsibility of the Canadian Government, and added to the complications which I was afraid might arise from the delay in completing the surrender of Rupert's Land to the Dominion.

I enclose copies of two Letters which I have received from Sir S. Northcote. On the first of these, which relates to the political position of the Company, I shall not offer any observations. The results of the Mission of M. Thiebault, Colonel Salaberry, and Mr. Donald Smith, may afford the answer to be given to the questions which it raises.

On the second I am bound to state my opinion, that, considering all that has passed, the claim of the Company to interest on the purchase-money of their Territory from the 1st of last month appears to me a reasonable one.

SIR,

Downing Street, 23rd March, 1870.

As the season approaches at which it will be possible to despatch troops to the Red River Settlement, I find myself embarrassed by the want of explicit information respecting the views of your Government on matters which ought to be decided before Her Majesty's Government takes part in such an expedition. Among these are: the time at which the Canadian Government will be prepared to take over the Hudson Bay Company's territory; the arrangements for governing it during the short interval between its surrender by the Company and its annexation to Canada; the time of its union with Canada; the apportionment of the cost of the expedition, if it should be found absolutely necessary to send one; and the arrangements for provisioning the Imperial Troops during the four months of their sojourn in the Red River Settlement. All these are matters on which misapprehension may exist, or differences arise; and I am very apprehensive lest, at a critical moment, Her Majesty's Government may be placed under the alternative of delaying an operation in which time is of paramount importance, or of refusing their assistance, or of giving that assistance without any assurance that what they hold to be its indispensable conditions are accepted by the Government of the Dominion.

The discussion of such questions cannot be conducted by telegram, and it would be too late to conduct them by Despatch, even if the information as yet received from you indicated the points to which I ought to address myself. It is therefore fortunate that I am able to communicate with you more fully than could be done by writing, through Sir Clinton Murdoch, the Chairman of the Emigration Board, who is about to proceed, at the Earl of Clarendon's request, to Washington, to negotiate a convention with the Government of the United States respecting the carriage of passengers, and has hastened his journey in order to be able to visit Ottawa on his way. While in America I have instructed him to obtain all the information he can concerning the working of the present regulations respecting emigration to Canada, and in particular concerning the free grant system, which is an object of considerable interest at present in this country. But I have also informed him unreservedly of the views of Her Majesty's Government in relation to the Red River Settlement; and I think that if, after free communication with him, you entertain any apprehension as to the conclusion of explicit and satisfactory arrangements, especially with regard to the questions to which I have above adverted, you will be at liberty to detain him at Ottawa until all such apprehensions are removed.

23rd March,
1870, p. 335.

I enclose the copy of a Letter which I have caused to be addressed to the War Office respecting the instructions to be given to Major-General Lindsay, who is proceeding to Canada to take command of the troops, and will leave England with Sir Clinton Murdoch, by the mail packet of the 24th instant.

With regard to the conditions on which Imperial Troops may be allowed to cooperate with the Canadian force, in supporting order in that Settlement, I refer you to the Telegram which you have already received, and to the oral explanations which you will receive from Sir C. Murdoch, who is in possession of the views of Her Majesty's Government.

Subject to these conditions, the number of Imperial Troops sent may be 200 or 250 as General Lindsay shall think best. They must, however, be accompanied by such a Canadian force as will enable the Government of Red River to bring together in case of emergency at least 800 trained volunteers and militia, besides the Imperial Troops.

The expense fairly attaching to such British Contingent as may be sent will be borne by this country. The rest must be defrayed from the Canadian Exchequer. The working out of the details of this arrangement would necessarily have to be conducted on the spot.

† Above.

I am directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge your Letter of the 4th inst.,† stating that the Hudson Bay Company have received notice from the Agents of the Canadian Government that the money to be paid to them on the surrender of their rights, will be forthcoming on the production of a Certificate that the Company's surrender had been accepted by the Queen, and expressing your trust that no delay will take place in the acceptance of the surrender.

You are aware, by personal communication with this Department, and also, his Lordship believes, by a Letter addressed to you by Mr. Rose, who is acting for Canada in this country, that in consequence of certain disturbances which have broken out in the Red River country, and which make it doubtful how soon the Canadian Government will obtain quiet possession of that country, he had received instructions to delay, and had in fact taken steps to delay for the present, the payment to you of the sum referred to in your Letter.

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

Under these unexpected circumstances, Lord Granville has thought it necessary to consult the Law Officers on several questions which must seriously affect the course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government.

MINUTES of a MEETING of the Governor and Council of Assiniboine, held in the Court-room of Assiniboine on Monday the 25th October, 1869, at which the following Members were present, viz:—

JOHN BLACK, Esq., Acting Governor, President.

Right Rev. the LORD BISHOP of Rupert's Land, Councillor.

Andrew G. B. Bannatyne, Esq., do.

William Cowan, Esq., M.D., do.

Doctor Bird, do.

Thomas Bunn, Esq., do.

William Fraser, Esq., do.

John Sutherland, Esq., do.

Mr. Black stated that in consequence, as he very much regretted to say, of Governor McTavish's continued illness, he was again called upon to preside at the present Meeting of the Council.

The Minutes of the late Meeting having been read and approved, Mr. Black proceeded to say, that at their last Meeting, as the Council was aware, an Address had been prepared for the purpose of being presented to the Hon. William McDougall on his arrival in the Settlement—an event which was expected to take place at some very early date—that the Council, while preparing that Address, were impressed with the conviction that the feelings of welcome and loyalty therein expressed were concurred in by the Settlement generally, or, at least, were so far shared by the great majority of the people as to preclude all idea of open demonstrations of dissent; but he was much concerned now to say that, unhappily, such was not the case, and that a large party among the French population appeared to be animated by a very different spirit. It had become too evident that among them sentiments of a directly opposite nature prevailed with regard to the impending change in the

CANADA.

Government of the Country, and prevailed so strongly that, according to information lately received, and of the correctness of which there could be no doubt, they had organized themselves into armed bodies, for the purpose of intercepting Mr. McDougall on the road between this and Pembina, with the openly avowed intention of preventing his entrance into the Settlement. It was to consider that serious state of matters that the Council had been assembled, and to see whether any and what measures could be adopted to prevent the threatened outrage.

The Council unanimously expressed their indignant reprobation of the outrageous proceedings referred to by the President; but feeling strongly impressed with the idea that the parties concerned in them must be acting in utter forgetfulness, or even, perhaps, ignorance of the highly criminal character of their actions, and of the very serious consequences they involved, it was thought that by calm reasoning and advice they might be induced to abandon their dangerous schemes before they had irretrievably committed themselves. With this object in view, therefore, Mr. Riel and Mr. Bruce, who were known to hold leading positions in the party opposed to Mr. McDougall, had been invited to be present at this Meeting of the Council, and on being questioned by the Council as to the motives and intentions of the party they represented, Mr. Riel, who alone addressed the Council on the occasion, substantially said, in the course of a long and somewhat irregular discussion, that his party were perfectly satisfied with the present Government, and wanted no other; that they objected to any Governor coming from Canada without their being consulted in the matter; that they would never admit any Governor, no matter by whom he might be appointed, if not by the Hudson's Bay Company, unless Delegates were previously sent, with whom they might negotiate as to the terms and conditions under which they would acknowledge him; that they were uneducated, and only half civilised, and felt, if a large immigration were to take place, they would probably be crowded out of a country which they claimed as their own; that they knew that they were, in a sense, poor and insignificant, but that it was just because they were aware of their insignificance that they had felt so much at being treated as if they were more insignificant than they in reality were; that their existence, or, at least, their wishes, had been entirely ignored; that if Mr. McDougall were once here, most probably the English-speaking population would allow him to be installed in office as Governor, and then he would be "our Master or King," as he says, and that, therefore, they intended to send him back; that they consider that they are acting, not only for their own good, but for the good of the whole Settlement; that they did not feel that they were breaking any law, but were simply acting in defence of their own liberty; and that they were determined to prevent Mr. McDougall from coming into the Settlement at all hazards.

The Council endeavoured to convince Mr. Riel of the erroneous nature of the views held by himself and the party he represented, explained the highly criminal character of their proceedings, and pointed out the very disastrous consequences which might accrue, not only to themselves, but to the Settlement generally, if they persisted in their present course. He was earnestly advised to exercise his influence with his party in dissuading them from attempting to molest Mr. McDougall in any way, and inducing them to return peaceably to their homes, assuring him that, sooner or later, heavy retribution would fall upon them if they carried their plans into execution.

Mr. Riel, however, refused to adopt the views of the Council, and obstinately persisted in expressing his determination to oppose Mr. McDougall's entrance into the Settlement; declining even to press the reasoning and advice of the Council upon his party, although he reluctantly promised to repeat to them what he had just heard, and inform Governor Mactavish of the result by Thursday at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Riel and Mr. Bruce having retired, the Council resumed the consideration of the subject before them, and the expediency of calling out an armed force to meet and protect Mr. McDougall was suggested; but as it was seen that it would be from the English-speaking part of the community, that such a force, if forthcoming at all, would be chiefly drawn, the result would evidently be to bring into armed collision sections of the people who, although they have hitherto lived together in comparative harmony, yet differed from each other so widely in point of race, of language and religion, as well as general habits, that the commencement of actual hostilities between them would probably involve, not only themselves, but the surrounding Indians in a sanguinary and protracted struggle; and the Council, therefore, felt that, without a regular military force to fall back upon, they could hardly be held justified, under almost any circumstances, in resorting to an experiment so full of possible mischief to the whole Country.

The Council at length, having heard that a number of the more intelligent and influential among the French were not implicated in the hostile movement against Mr. McDougall, adopted the following Resolution which was moved by Mr. Bannatyne, and seconded by Mr. McBeath:—

That Messrs. Dease and Goulet be appointed immediately to collect as many of the more respectable of the French community as they could, and with them proceed to the camp of the party who intend to intercept Governor McDougall, and endeavour, if possible, to procure their peaceable dispersion; and that Mr. Dease report to Mr. MacTavish, on or before Thursday next, as to their success or otherwise.

The Council then adjourned.

MINUTES of a MEETING of the Governor and Council of Assiniboine, held on 30th October, 1869, at which the following Members were present:—

JOHN BLACK, Esq., Acting Governor, President.

The Right Rev. the LORD BISHOP of Rupert's Land, Councillor.
Dr. Cowan,	do.
Andrew G. B. Bannatyne, Esq.,	do.
Doctor Bird,	do.
John Sutherland, Esq.,	do.
William Fraser, Esq.,	do.

The President, referring to the decision they had come to at the last Council, as to Mr. Dease proceeding with a number of his countrymen to the locality where were assembled the people who have been threatening to intercept the Honourable Mr. McDougall on his way to the Settlement, informed the Council that Mr. Dease's Mission had entirely failed in producing the desired result. Not only had that, and every other effort of a conciliatory character, proved fruitless in procuring the peaceable dispersion of the assemblage of malcontents, but they appeared to be even more fully bent upon their purpose. In these circumstances, and under the impression that Mr. McDougall had, in all probability, reached Pembina, the Governor believed that the time had fully come for entering into communication with Mr. McDougall on the subject; and in order that no time might be lost, should the Council see fit to coincide in that view of the matter, the President submitted for consideration the draft of a Letter from Governor Mactavish in the name of the Council.

After an earnest and careful consideration of the present position of affairs, the Council, on the motion of the Bishop of Rupert's Land, seconded by Mr. Sutherland—

Resolved that, in their opinion, a Letter should immediately be sent to Mr. McDougall, in accordance with the draft that had been agreed upon.

EXTRACT of a Letter from Governor MACTAVISH to W. G. SMITH, Esq., Secretary.

Fort Garry, Red River,
16th November, 1869.

"SIR,
"Since last writing you, on the 9th inst., I regret to say that there has been no improvement in the state of matters here. A body of armed Canadian half-breeds, under the orders of their leader, Louis Riel, still occupy this establishment; and, though the men generally are quiet and orderly, and evidently unwilling to give offence, it appears to me that Riel himself is not inclined to be so civil. A larger body of the same people still guard the highway to Pembina at La Rivière Salé, about ten miles above the Forks on the Red River, determined that neither Mr. McDougall nor any member of his Staff will get into the Settlement. Mr. McDougall still remains on the American side of the Frontier, at Pembina, waiting the course of events.

"Louis Riel yesterday sent me, on the part of the French-speaking section of the population, but signed only by himself, a protest against the Hudson's Bay Company maintaining near the Boundary Line of the Territory the Honourable William McDougall, and informing me that the Company's properties in this Country would be security for any troubles arising from Mr. McDougall's remaining there. This with the demand for the keys of two Bastions containing some muskets—which he made to Chief Trader Cowan some nights previously—would seem to show that he, at least, would proceed to considerable lengths; and I have no doubt that, if any hostile collision takes place, the Company's property elsewhere, as well as here, is in very great danger. Until that takes place, or that it is clearly seen that the disturbance is to be put down by force, I think hesitation on the part of the people will prevent any very extreme proceedings; even if the leaders wished for them, which—as there seems to be, at least, one Fenian in the movement, and he evident in close intimacy with Riel—may very well be the case.

"The person in question is Mr. O'Donoghue, who came here two years ago as a Schoolmaster for the Roman Catholic Mission, and who, for the last year has worn the Soutane, and given out that he was preparing for the Priesthood, but who has, since the outbreak, thrown off his dress and fairly joined the malcontents, and, as I am informed, made them believe he can procure for them Fenian assistance.

"The Leaders of the French half-breeds had, some time ago, invited the Protestant Parishes in the Settlement to send Delegates to meet those from the Roman Catholic Parishes, which was done, and the Delegates have met to-day to consider the state of the Country. Some are sanguine that this may end in some arrangement by which Mr. McDougall may be allowed to come here in safety; but I fear that this will not be agreed to by the French half-breeds on any conditions.

"However, I took the opportunity to send to the Meeting an Address to the people of Red River, showing the state of matters, and protesting against the actions of the malcontents. This I did, more to satisfy Mr. McDougall and most of the Members of the Council of Assiniboine, than from any hope that any good can come of it in so far as it concerns those whose acts are objected to.

Copy of a LETTER from the Right Hon. Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE, Bart., M.P., to Sir FREDERIC ROGERS, Bart., K.C.M.G.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
December 28, 1869.

SIR,

I am desired by the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company to transmit to you, for the information of Earl Granville, copies of the several communications named in the accompanying list, some of which have been already privately forwarded to his Lordship.

The Committee regret extremely the unfortunate occurrences described by Mr. Mactavish. They are most anxious to co-operate with Her Majesty's Government in any measures which Earl Granville may think it expedient to adopt, with a view to the restoration of order and the settlement of the Territory. They sincerely trust that these objects may be attained without the employment of force, and above all without a collision between the different sections of the population of the Red River Settlement; feeling assured that the effects of any such collision would be very disastrous to the prosperity of the country. At the same time they desire me to express to Earl Granville their conviction that it is most undesirable to leave matters in their present undefined position. The Company's authority, which (as Lord Granville is aware) has long been exercised under a sense of difficulty, has been greatly weakened by the steps which have been taken for the transfer of the Country to the Dominion of Canada—a transfer which, according to the arrangements publicly and officially announced, ought to have been formally completed on the 1st instant. On the other hand the authority of the Dominion has not yet been established; and the announcement that the Dominion Government intend to withhold the purchase money—and therefore, of course, to abstain from accepting the responsibility of the Government, until the present troubles are at an end, must naturally deprive their action of any force.

The Committee cannot recognize in the circumstances which have occurred any reason for the Dominion Government delaying the performance of the engagement into which they have entered, under the sanction of Her Majesty's Government, with this Company; and they trust that Earl Granville will take measures for giving immediate effect to that engagement, formally placing the Settlement under the charge of the authority which must be responsible for its good government, and, at the same time, causing the stipulated price of the land to be handed over to the Company.

EXTRACT of a LETTER from Governor MACTAVISH to W. G. SMITH, Secretary of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Dated Fort Garry, Red River, 2nd November, 1869.

"There has been during the autumn considerable agitation among the Canadian half-breed population here, regarding the Government to be established here. They seem to have been fully, if not correctly, informed of how the Government was to be composed, and they seemed to think that, from what was told, their interests would be overlooked and their religion interfered with; but it appeared as if the course they meant to take was to await the arrival of the Honourable William McDougall, who, they understood, was coming here as Governor, and then endeavour to make such arrangements with him as would secure their rights and interests. But, about twelve days ago, a party of French half-breeds took possession of the road to Pembina, erected barriers at intervals, the head-quarters of the movement being at a spot named St. Norbert, about nine miles from Fort Garry. Their declared object was to interrupt the march of Mr. McDougall, and, to use their own expression, "to turn him back."

"At a meeting of the Council of Assiniboine, held on 25th ult., the question of the best means to be used in the emergency was fully debated. Messrs. Bruce and Riel, the heads of the French movement, were present, and the Council used all the arguments in their power to induce them to forego their designs of opposing the entrance of Mr. McDougall. They were, however, unavailing.

"After proper consideration, the Council agreed that, for various reasons, it would be unwise either to enrol a force of special constables or call out a counter demonstration of the inhabitants favourable to Mr. McDougall. I, however, communicated with the latter gentleman, acquainting him with the state of public feeling, and leaving it to his discretion to act as he might see fit.

"Yesterday, I was informed that Mr. Provencher, an official on the Staff of the new Government, had been stopped at St. Norbert and forced to return to Pembina, along with Captain Cameron, R.A., who had arrived at the barrier a few hours after the former.

"Governor McDougall himself had arrived at Pembina on the evening of the 30th ult. A party, consisting of less than fifty half-breeds, have come to meet him there. He ought on the evening of the 31st to have received a letter from me, copy of which I enclose, forwarded express per Colonel Dennis, who was to travel by an indirect route.

"As I close this Letter, a party of one hundred of the malcontents have arrived, and taken possession of Fort Garry, under pretext of defending it, as, from information in his possession, Mr. Riel alleges it is in danger. Guards are posted at each gate, and parade the platforms. They give assurances that nothing will be touched and nothing taken. For what provisions they require, they offer to pay in the name of the 'Council of the Republic of the Half-breeds.'

"About four hundred men continue on guard at St. Norbert. Outgoing and incoming mails are subjected to examination."

From Governor W. MACTAVISH to WILLIAM GREGORY SMITH, Esq., Secretary, Hudson's Bay House, London.

Sir,

Fort Garry, Red River, 9th November, 1869.

I have the honour to inform you that I yesterday heard from the Honourable William McDougall, in reply to my Letter to him, copy of which was sent you with my Letter of 2nd instant. A copy of his Letters will be sent you hereafter; in the mean time I may say that Mr. McDougall does not seem to think I have acted energetically in the matter, and reminds me very pointedly that at present I am responsible for the peace of the country.

He mentions that on receiving at Pembina an intimation that he was not to proceed to the Settlement, he had gone to the Company's establishment at Pembina, where he remained till he was ordered to withdraw within American Territory by an armed band of half-breed horsemen, and that, in consequence, he was, when he wrote me, camped on American Territory, where he would remain till he heard from me the result of the efforts made here to open the road to the Settlement, or till I informed him that I considered his remaining longer at Pembina useless, which is, in my opinion, a point on which I cannot advise Mr. McDougall, though I feel convinced that at present his entry into this Settlement would lead to more serious difficulties than those to which we are at present exposed. Mr. McDougall refers to "Military and other arrangements" which arise out of the outrage to which he has been subjected.

Here matters remain much as they were. The Committee seem to be in constant session, but nothing is heard of them till the Secretary, Louis Riel, issues his Manifestoes, "by order." The idea of their organisation seems to have been taken from the plan used to distribute the relief supplies last winter, each Canadian parish having sent a Delegate to form the Central Committee; and in an invitation issued this morning to the Protestant part of the community, delegates are requested to meet the twelve members of the Committee already formed from the Roman Catholic parishes in council. Here the same plan is adhered to, and the Protestant parishes are named, the object of the proposed meeting being, "Since the Invader is driven from our soil," to consult on the state of the country and the government to be adopted. The position is undoubtedly serious, and the case will require very careful handling, as any collision between parties will lead to the plain Indians being brought down on the Settlement next spring, as well as disturbances over all the Plain districts, which will not be put down for years, long before which the whole business of the country will have been destroyed.

CANADA.

William Gregory Smith, Esq.

EXTRACT of LETTER from Governor MACTAVISH to W. G. SMITH, Esq., Secretary.

Dated Fort Garry, Red River, 23rd November, 1869.

"Since I last wrote you the Delegates from the parishes in the Settlement have had several meetings, and are again assembled to-day. Up to yesterday evening the only point made out was that the French party declared that Mr. McDougall could only be brought into the Settlement over their dead bodies, and this was said in reply to a proposal on the part of the English Delegates that Mr. McDougall should come in after making some concessions as regarded the representation of the people in his Council. It is expected that some conclusion will be arrived at to-day; but I rather think the French party will only agree to the appointment of a Provisional Government.

"Early this morning Louis Riel, the leader of the French half-breeds, requested Mr. John H. Matcavish, the Accountant here, to come over to the office; and on Mr. Mactavish going there, Riel, accompanied by a number of armed men, called on him to give up the public accounts. This he refused to do, on which Riel told him he would be compelled by force to do so. It ended in Riel taking possession of the Land Register, the book in which the account of the Governor and Council of Assiniboine with the Fur Trade was kept, and the Cash Blotter, no doubt with a view to making out the balance of the Colonial Public Funds with the Fur Trade, for the purpose of demanding it to be paid over.

"Riel was careful to let Mr. Mactavish understand that there was not only no desire to meddle with private funds, but every desire to respect them; but how far this resolution will be carried out it is very difficult to say, though at the time it was made I have no doubt it was sincere.

"I have not, since writing you, heard directly from Mr. McDougall; but he is still at Pembina. I enclose copy of Proclamation issued by me to the people of Red River."

With reference to Sir Stafford Northcote's Letter of the 28th ultimo,* I have the honour to transmit, for the information of Lord Granville, the accompanying copy of a Communication from Governor Mactavish, dated Fort Garry, November 30th, on the subject of the present disturbed state of matters at Red River Settlement.

Enclosure No. 7.

Governor MACTAVISH to W. G. SMITH, Esq., Secretary, Hudson Bay House, London.

SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River, 30th November, 1869.

Since writing you on the 23rd instant, there has been little change in the state of matters here. The Meeting of Delegates from the Parishes adjourned on the 23rd till to-morrow, the 1st of December; on the French Delegates proposing, or, rather insisting on, a Provisional Government. Some expect that the matter will be arranged to-morrow, that the present Government should continue to act, but I doubt very much if the Roman Catholic Delegates will not insist on the Provisional Government, which they evidently think will be the best for securing to the people of the Settlement representation in the Government.

I have little doubt that, when to-morrow was named for the meeting of the Delegates, it was thought that the Royal Proclamation would have been here, and the Governor and Council of Assiniboia superseded, and from Mr. McDougall not being in the Territory, that there would be no Government, and, in consequence, the ground would be clear for them to form a new Government. To-morrow will probably lead to some result, but whether satisfactory or not, it is very difficult to say. I rather fear it will lead to a collision between the two sections of the Settlement, which has been avoided hitherto only by the greatest forbearance.

The Hon. William McDougall is still at Pembina, and, I think, intends coming into the Settlement as soon as the day comes on which he is authorized to assume the Government of the country. He wrote me stating that he was informed by some of the Canadians here, that some Government provisions, stored in Dr. Schultz's warehouse, was threatened to be seized by the Canadian half-breeds, and calling upon me to protect it in Dr. Schultz's Store, or get it removed to a place of safety. As Mr. Grant, who has charge of the provisions, preferred to have a guard of policemen set over it, I have put eight men to watch it, but I fear it may be the cause ultimately of a collision, which, as the people in the Settlement are a good deal excited at present, would no doubt be serious.

Sir STAFFORD H. NORTHGOTE, Bart., M.P.

SIR,

Downing Street, 8th January, 1870.

* I am directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 28th of December, relating to the disturbances which have occurred in the Red River Settlement, and urging that the arrangements for the transfer of the Territories may proceed, and the stipulated price be paid over to the Hudson Bay Company without delay.

Lord Granville desires me to inform you that he has lately received from the Governor-General of Canada a Minute of the Privy Council of the Dominion, conveying the expression of their views on the present position of the Canadian Government in regard to this question.

In this Minute the Canadian Government repeat the expression of their desire to acquire the Territory, and of their readiness to perform all the obligations incurred by Canada under the recent arrangements for the completion of the transfer. They urge a temporary delay in proceeding with the transfer, from a conviction of the gravity of the present situation, and not from any desire to repudiate or postpone the performance of any of their engagements. They submit that the Government of the Company, which the Inhabitants have been accustomed to respect, should be continued while steps are being taken to remove the misapprehensions which exist, and to reconcile the people to the change.

They point out that any hasty attempt by the Canadian Government to force their rule on the Insurgents might lead to bloodshed, and sow an ineradicable hatred to the union of the Countries, and thus mar the further prosperity of British North America. And they represent that even were the purchase money paid over to the Company at once, it would not the less remain impolitic to put an end to the only existing Authority in the country, and compel Canada to assert her title by force.

They inform Lord Granville that they are taking active measures to bring about a happier state of affairs. They have sent on a mission of peace to the French half-breeds now in arms, the Very Rev. Mr. Thiebault, Vicar-General (who has laboured as a clergyman among them for thirty-nine years), and also Colonel de Salaberry, a gentleman well acquainted with the country, and with the manners and feelings of the inhabitants. They have also sent Mr. Donald A. Smith, the Chief Agent of the Hudson's Bay Company at Montreal, as a Special Commissioner. From his position as an Officer of the Company, the Committee anticipate that he will obtain ready access to Fort Garry, and that he will be able to strengthen the hands of Governor Mactavish, and arrange with the loyal and well affected portion of the people for a restoration of order. The Committee express their confident hope that these measures will succeed; but in the event of failure, the Canadian Government are making preparations for sending a Military Force in the early spring.

CANADA.

Lord Granville desires me to add, that the reasons given by the Canadian Government for delaying the transfer, weighty in themselves, become practically conclusive, when it is considered that Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson Bay Company must alike look to that Government for the practical accomplishment of the transfer, and that they appear in fact to be conducting it in the spirit which Her Majesty's Government approve, and which is most calculated to avoid that injury to the trade of the Company which Mr. Mactavish anticipates from any violent measures.

Lord Granville moreover learns from the Law Officers of the Crown, that, although it would be competent to Her Majesty's Government to complete the transfer, by accepting the surrender of the Company, and issuing the requisite Order in Council, yet this acceptance would not place the Company in a position to obtain by any legal process the sum of £300,000, recently deposited by Mr. Rose, for the purpose of being available for their payment. And considering that, even after the surrender is completed, questions may possibly arise, or further arrangements may have to be made between the Hudson Bay Company and the Canadian Government, his Lordship believes that a short delay in the completion of the contract, however in itself inconvenient, may be more than compensated by ensuring that the surrender is finally effected with the full consent and agreement of both parties interested.

From Governor W. MACTAVISH, to WILLIAM GREGORY SMITH, Esq., Secretary, Hudson Bay House, London.

SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River, 11th December, 1869.

Since writing you on the 30th ultimo I am sorry to say that the state of affairs here has shown no improvement.

On the 1st instant the Proclamation of the transfer of the Territory to Canada was published here. It was brought to the Settlement by Colonel Dennis, who was likewise authorized, by a Commission from Lieutenant-Governor McDougall, to raise a force in the Settlement to put down the party who had taken up arms here against the Canadian Government. Colonel Dennis, in virtue of this Commission, took possession of Lower Fort Garry and commenced organising a force, but has since suspended the movement to give an opportunity to the Insurgents to treat with Governor McDougall.

I send you Copy of Colonel Dennis's Commission, with his call on the loyal inhabitants appended, as well as of his subsequent order to stop the movement. I have also been informed that Lieutenant-Governor McDougall has issued another Proclamation retaining in their offices all officials in the Settlement under the former Government, with the exception, of course, of myself. I being relieved of the office of Governor, the duty will, I suppose, for the present, be attended to by Colonel Dennis, who, in the Commission above alluded to, is named Lieutenant and Conservator of the Peace.

When Louis Riel, with a party of armed men, first occupied this establishment, Doctor Cowan, under protest, supplied them with daily food, under the belief that if they once commenced to break into stores to supply their wants there would be no end to it. I did not agree on this subject, but, as the arrangement was made, I thought it better to follow the course agreed on for a time; but, so soon as I was able to speak to them, I got the leaders together, and pointed out to them that to persevere in the course they had taken was ruin to themselves, and ordered them to leave this establishment, refusing to allow anything whatever to be supplied them from the Stores. At a Meeting held afterwards by them on this subject, I am told the Rev. M. Richot, one of the Roman Catholic priests here, urged them to hold out, alleging that their case was already before the Canadians, that the Ministry would fall, and that the demands of the Red River people would be granted and their rights secured. They decided on not dispersing, and, after some hesitation, broke open one of our Stores and took provisions and some bags of ball out of it. Subsequently Riel entered the shop and took about ten common Indian guns which were there, and on the following day he broke into another Store, and took seven Indian guns from it. Since then he has cleared all the Stores of the merchants in the village of Winnipeg of all their guns and ammunition.

A number of Canadians in the neighbourhood, on hearing that Colonel Dennis was enrolling men, went to the Lower Fort to see him, and were enrolled, but were ordered by Colonel Dennis to return and hold themselves in readiness, when called on, to join him. It appears they collected, to the number of sixty men, in Doctor Schultz's house. Riel placed a number of men to watch them, and, after some time, all gave themselves up without a shot being fired, and were, along with some women and children who were with them, made prisoners, and are still held as such by Riel.

While this was going on a party of forty armed men were sent to Pembina to drive Governor McDougall out of the Territory, a report that he had returned to the Company's establishment having spread. This party, however, returned last night, and report that Mr. McDougall was still across the Boundary Line, but that some of the half-breeds on the American side had determined to drive him off; and I am told that an American citizen at Pembina had laid an information against Mr. McDougall of having recruited and executed plans within American Territory against a friendly people.

Yesterday the party hoisted a flag, which was saluted with much formality. About sixty of the scholars of the Roman Catholic Seminary here, conducted by a Roman Catholic priest, assisted at the ceremony. This party has published a List of the "Rights" which they demand from Canada, and a Declaration which purports to be made on the part of the people of Rupert's Land and the North-West. But, of course, the great majority of the inhabitants have not authorised either Bruce or Riel to act for them, and, in point of fact, the great bulk of them object to the means used to enforce their rights. I send enclosed a French copy of the Declaration, and will, as soon as I can get a copy, send you the "List of Rights."

I confess that circumstances make me more doubtful about the settlement of this most vexatious affair than I was, as, if the mischief remains working till spring, the country will be overrun by a lawless horde of sympathisers from Minnesota and Dakota, who, under the pretence of aiding, will assume the direction of the movement, and will pay but little respect to the rights of half-breeds or others in the Territory.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency the Honourable WILLIAM McDOUGALL, a Member of Her Majesty's Privy Council of Canada, and Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, &c.

To all to whom these shall come

GREETING :

Whereas HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Dominion of Canada, bearing date the twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, in the thirty-third year of Her Majesty's reign, has been graciously pleased to constitute and appoint me, on, from and after the day to be named by Her Majesty for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union or Dominion of Canada, to be

CANADA.

Lieutenant-Governor in and over the North-West Territories during Her Majesty's pleasure, and did thereby authorize and empower, and require and command me, on, from and after the day aforesaid, to do and execute all things in due manner that shall belong to my said Command and the trust reposed in me, according to the several powers and instructions granted or appointed me by that Her Majesty's Commission and the Act of Parliament passed in the thirty-second year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the Temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory when "United with Canada," and the instructions given me with such Commission, or by such further instructions as may hereafter be given in respect of the North-West Territories and the government thereof by Her Majesty's Governor-General in Council, under the Sign Manual, or through one of Her Majesty's Privy Council of Canada, according to such laws as are now and shall hereafter be in force within the said North-West Territories.

And whereas Her Majesty has declared and named the first day of December instant as the day for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory into the Union and Dominion of Canada; and whereas by virtue and in pursuance of "The British North American Act of 1867," "The Rupert's Land Act of 1868," the said "Act for the temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory, when United with Canada," and the said Declaration and Order of Her Majesty, Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory have been admitted into union with, and have now become part of the Dominion of Canada, and are henceforth to be known as the North-West Territories.

Now know ye that I have thought fit to issue this Proclamation to make known Her Majesty's said Appointment to all Officers, Magistrates, Ministers and Subjects of Her Majesty, and others within the said the North-West Territories, and I do hereby require and command that all and singular the Public Officers and Functionaries holding office in Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory at the time of their admission into the Union as aforesaid, excepting the Public Officer or Functionary at the head of the administration of affairs, do continue in the execution of their several and respective offices, duties, places, and employments, until otherwise ordered by me under the authority of the said last-mentioned Act; and I do hereby further require and command that all Her Majesty's loving subjects, and all others whom it may concern, do take notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and Seal at Arms at Red River, in the said Territories, the second day of December, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the Thirty-third Year of Her Majesty's Reign.

DECLARATION

DES HABITANTS DE LA TERRE DE RUPERT ET DU NORD-OUEST.

Il est admis que, dans toute société, l'autorité publique est inviolable. Et il est reconnu qu'une population, qui n'a aucune sorte de gouvernement est maîtresse d'adopter une forme de gouvernement plutôt qu'une autre, de refuser ou d'accepter celle qui lui est proposée. Conformément au premier principe, le peuple de la Terre de Rupert et du Nord-Ouest supportait et respectait l'autorité qu'il dut accepter, à cause des circonstances particulières qui avaient entouré son berceau.

Une compagnie d'aventuriers, connue sous le nom d'Honorable Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson, et revêtue de certains pouvoirs par Sa Majesté le Roi Charles II., vint s'établir dans la Terre de Rupert et dans le Nord-Ouest, pour y faire la traite. Cette Compagnie avait besoin d'une constitution; mais comme il s'agissait de commerce, cette constitution s'y rapportait surtout. Cependant, comme il n'y avait alors aucun gouvernement qui s'occupât des intérêts du peuple, déjà établi dans le pays, besoin lui fut de recourir pour les affaires judiciaires aux officiers de cette Compagnie: de là l'origine du gouvernement qui, s'étant un peu modifié avec les circonstances, a régi le pays jusqu'à cette époque. Ce gouvernement ainsi admis, était loin de répondre aux besoins de la population actuelle qui, à force d'énergie et de dévouement, s'est développée, s'est accrue et s'est élevée au point de mériter, à cause de son nombre, de sa civilisation et de son commerce, une place parmi les Colonies.

Toujours mu par les principes émis plus haut, le peuple de la Terre de Rupert et du Nord-Ouest supportait généreusement le sous-dit gouvernement et lui obéissait fidèlement, lorsque, contre le droit des gens, en mars 1869, ce gouvernement abandonna et transporta au Canada, par des transactions qu'il n'a pas même daigné communiquer à son peuple, tous les droits qu'il avait ou qu'il prétendait avoir dans le pays.

Il est aussi admis qu'un peuple peut adopter la forme de gouvernement qu'il lui plaît, quand la puissance à laquelle il était soumis, l'abandonne ou l'assujettit, contre son gré, à une puissance étrangère; et que de plus, en l'assujettissant ainsi, elle ne transfère aucun droit à la puissance à laquelle elle le soumet.

Nous, les Représentants élus par le peuple, réunis en Conseil au Fort Garry, après avoir invoqué le Dieu des nations, appuyés sur ces principes fondamentaux de morale, Déclarons solennellement au nom de nos constituants et en nos propres noms, devant Dieu et devant les hommes—

1°. Que du jour où le gouvernement, que nous avons toujours respecté, nous a abandonnés en trans-férant à une puissance étrangère l'autorité sacrée qui lui avait été confiée, nous devenons libres et dégagés de toute obéissance à son égard : et que la seule autorité légitime aujourd'hui dans la Terre de Rupert et du Nord-Ouest est l'autorité provisionnement accordée par le peuple à nous ses Représentants, ce vingt-quatrième jour de novembre, mil huit cent soixante-neuf.

2°. Que nous refusons de reconnaître l'autorité du Canada qui prétend avoir droit de venir nous imposer une forme de gouvernement despotique, encore plus contraire à nos droits et à nos intérêts que ne l'a été le gouvernement à quel nous étions soumis par nécessité jusqu'à ces derniers temps.

3°. Que le 1^{er} novembre dernier, en déléguant une expédition chargée de reconduire au-delà des bornes de notre pays le Sieur William McDougall et ses compagnons, s'avancant sur nos terres, au nom du Canada, malgré une défense à lui intimée par nous et sans même une notification préalable de sa part, pour venir gouverner en despote, nous n'avons fait qu'agir conformément au droit sacré que tout citoyen a de s'opposer énergiquement à l'asservissement de sa patrie.

4°. Que nous continuerons à nous opposer de toutes nos forces à l'entrée du gouvernement du Canada dans notre pays, sous la forme énoncée, et en cas de persistance de sa part à venir nous troubler avec la force armée, nous protestons d'avance contre ces actes injustes, et le déclarons responsable, devant Dieu et devant les peuples, des malheurs incalculables qui seraient la suite de son ambition. Qu'il sache qu'avant de voir asservir notre patrie, nous saurons tirer parti des moyens de défense que la Providence nous a mis entre les mains ; et que ce n'est pas pour la voir envahie par des étrangers, que nous l'avons tant de fois défendue au prix de notre sang, contre les hordes de barbares, devenus aujourd'hui nos amis et nos alliés.

5°. Que cependant, la puissance du Canada nous trouvera toujours prêts à entrer avec elle dans des négociations favorables à son agrandissement et à notre prospérité.

À l'appui de ces déclarations et pour la conservation de la paix, des propriétés et des personnes, comptant sur la Divine Providence, nous engageons par serment nos vies, nos fortunes et notre honneur.

Donné au Fort Garry, ce huitième jour de décembre mil huit cent soixante-neuf.

LIST OF RIGHTS.

1. That the people have the right to elect their own Legislature.
 2. That the Legislature have the power to pass all Laws local to the Territory, over the veto of the Executive, by a two-thirds vote.
 3. That no Act of the Dominion Parliament (local to the Territory) be binding on the people until sanctioned by the Legislature of the Territory.
 4. That all Sheriffs, Magistrates, Constables, School Commissioners, &c., be elected by the people.
 5. A free Homestead and pre-emption Land Laws.
 6. That a portion of the public Lands be appropriated to the benefit of Schools, the building of Bridges, Roads, and public Buildings.
 7. That it be guaranteed to connect Winnipeg by Rail with the nearest line of Railroad, within a term of five years ; the Land Grant to be subject to the Local Legislature.
 8. That for the term of four years all Military, Civil, and Municipal Expenses be paid out of the Dominion Funds.
 9. That the Military be composed of the Inhabitants now existing in the Territory.
 10. That the English and French languages be common in the Legislature and Courts ; and that all public Documents and Acts of the Legislature be published in both languages.
 11. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak the English and French languages.
 12. That Treaties be concluded and ratified between the Dominion Government and the several Tribes of Indians in the Territory, to ensure peace on the Frontier.
 13. That we have a fair and full representation in the Canadian Parliament.
 14. That all privileges, customs, and usages existing at the time of the transfer be respected.
- All the above Articles have been severally discussed and adopted by the French and English Representatives, without a dissenting voice, as the Conditions upon which the people of Rupert's Land enter into Confederation.

The French Representatives then proposed, in order to secure the above Rights, that a Delegation be appointed, and sent to Pembina to see Mr. McDougall, and ask him if he could guarantee these Rights by virtue of his Commission ; and if he could do so, that then the French people would join to a man to escort Mr. McDougall into his Government-seat. But, on the contrary, if Mr. McDougall could not guarantee such Rights, that the Delegates request him to remain where he is, or return till the Rights be guaranteed by Act of the Canadian Parliament.

The English Representatives refused to appoint Delegates to go to Pembina, to consult with Mr. McDougall, stating that they had no authority to do so from their constituents, upon which the Council was dissolved.

The Meeting, at which the above Resolutions were adopted, was held at Fort Garry, on Wednesday, December 1, 1869.

CANADA.

THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

(L. S.) By His Excellency the Honourable WILLIAM McDUGALL, a Member of our Privy Council for Canada, and Companion of our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories:

To JOHN STOUGHTON DENNIS, Esquire, Lieutenant-Colonel Militia Staff, Canada, Greeting:

Whereas large bodies of armed men have unlawfully assembled on the high road between Fort Garry and Pembina, in the Colony or District of Assiniboia, and have with force and arms arrested and held as prisoners numerous private and official persons, and prevented them from proceeding on their lawful journey and business, and have committed other acts of lawless violence, in contempt and defiance of the Magistrates and Local Authorities.

And whereas William Mactavish, Esquire, Governor of Assiniboia, did on the sixteenth day of November last, publish and make known to those armed men and all others whom it might concern, that the lawless acts aforesaid, and which were particularly set forth in his Proclamation, were "contrary to the remonstrances and protests of the Public Authorities," and did therein himself protest against each and all of the said unlawful acts and intents; and charged and commanded the said armed persons to immediately disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations or lawful business, under the pains and penalties of the Law.

And whereas, since the issue of the said Protest or Proclamation, certain armed men aforesaid have taken possession of the public Records and Papers at Fort Garry, and have seized and held as prisoners public Officers or persons having charge of the same; and, as I am credibly informed, still keep unlawful possession of the said Records and public Property, and with force of arms continue to obstruct public Officers and others in the performance of their lawful duty and business, to the great terror, loss, and injury of Her Majesty's peaceable subjects, and in contempt of her Royal Authority.

And whereas Her Majesty by Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of the Dominion of Canada, bearing date the twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, has been graciously pleased to appoint me to be, from and after the first day of December instant, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories, and did thereby authorise and command me to do and execute all things in due manner that should belong to my said Command:

Know you, that reposing trust and confidence in your courage, loyalty, fidelity, discretion, and ability, and under and by virtue of the authority in me vested, I have nominated and appointed, and by these Presents do nominate and appoint you, the said John Stoughton Dennis, to be my Lieutenant and a Conservator of the Peace in and for the North-West Territories; and, as such, to raise, organize, arm, equip, and provision a sufficient Force within the said Territories; and, with the said Force, to attack, arrest, disarm, or disperse the said armed men so unlawfully assembled and disturbing the public peace; and for that purpose, and with the Force aforesaid, to assault, fire upon, pull down, or break into any Fort, House, Stronghold, or other place in which the said armed men may be found; and I hereby authorise you, as such Lieutenant and Conservator of the Peace, to hire, purchase, impress, and take all necessary clothing, arms, ammunition and supplies, and all cattle, horses, waggons, sleighs, or other vehicles which may be required for the use of the Force to be raised as aforesaid; and I further authorise you to appoint as many Officers and Deputies under you, and to give them such orders and instructions from time to time, as may be found necessary for the due performance of the service herewith required of you, reporting to me the said appointments and orders, as you shall find opportunity, for confirmation or otherwise; and I hereby give you full power and authority to call upon all Magistrates and Peace Officers to aid and assist you, and to order all or any of the inhabitants of the said North-West Territories, in the name of Her Majesty the Queen, to support and assist you in protecting the lives and property of Her Majesty's loyal subjects, and in preserving the public peace; and for that purpose to take, disperse, or overcome by force the said armed men, and all others who may be found aiding or abetting them in their unlawful acts.

And the said persons, so called upon in Her Majesty's name, are hereby ordered and enjoined at their peril to obey your orders and directions in that behalf; and this shall be sufficient Warrant for what you or they may do in the premises, so long as this Commission remains in force.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at Red River, in the said Territories, this first day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the thirty-third year of our reign.

(Signed) WILLIAM McDUGALL.
(By command) J. A. N. PROVENCHER, Secretary.

By virtue of the above Commission from the Lieutenant-Governor, I now hereby call on and order all loyal men of the North-West Territories to assist me by every means in their power to carry out the same, and thereby uphold the supremacy of the Queen in this part of Her Majesty's Dominions.

Given under my hand at the Stone Fort, Lower Settlement, this 6th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

CANADA.

Lower Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, December 9th, 1869.

By certain printed papers of late put in circulation by the French party, communication with the Lieutenant-Governor is indicated with a view to laying before him alleged rights on the part of those now in arms.

I think that course very desirable, and that it would lead to good results.

Under the belief that the party in arms are sincere in their desire for peace, and feeling that to abandon for the present the call on the loyal to arms, would, in view of such communication, relieve the situation of much embarrassment, and so contribute to bring about peace and save the country from what will otherwise end in ruin and desolation, I now call on and order the loyal party in the North-West Territories to cease further action under the appeal to arms made by me; and I call on the French party to satisfy the people of their sincerity in wishing for a peaceful ending of all these troubles by sending a deputation to the Lieutenant-Governor at Pembina without unnecessary delay.

Given under my hand, at the Lower Fort Garry, this 9th day of December, 1869.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c., &c.

To all whom these presents shall come,

PROCLAMATION,

GREETING:

Whereas by "The British North America Act, 1867," it was, amongst other things, enacted that it should be lawful for Her Majesty, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council on Address from the Houses of Parliament of Canada, to admit Rupert's Land and the North-West Territories, or either of them, into the Union or Dominion of Canada on such terms and conditions as are in the Address expressed and as Her Majesty thinks fit to approve.

And whereas for the purpose of carrying into effect the said provisions of the "British North America Act, 1867," the "Rupert's Land Act, 1868," enacted and declared that it should be competent for "the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson Bay" to surrender to Her Majesty, and for Her Majesty by any instrument under Her sign manual and signet to accept a surrender of all or any of the lands, territories, powers, and authorities whatsoever, granted or purported to be granted by certain Letters Patent of His late Majesty King Charles the Second to the said Governor and Company within Rupert's Land, upon such terms and conditions as should be agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company.

And whereas by the "Rupert's Land Act, 1868," it is further enacted that, from the date of the admission of Rupert's Land into the Dominion of Canada as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the Parliament of Canada to make, ordain, and establish within the land and territory so admitted, as aforesaid, all such laws, institutions, and ordinances, and to constitute such Courts and Officers as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others therein.

CANADA.

And whereas it is further provided by the said Act that, until otherwise enacted by the said Parliament of Canada, all the powers, authorities, and jurisdiction of the several Courts of Justice now established in Rupert's Land, and of the several Officers thereof, and of all Magistrates and Justices now acting within the said limits, shall continue in full force and effect therein.

And whereas the said Governor and Company have surrendered to Her Majesty, and Her Majesty has accepted a surrender, of all the lands, territories, rights, privileges, liberties, franchises, powers, and authorities granted, or purported to be granted, by the said Letters Patent, upon certain terms and conditions agreed upon by and between Her Majesty and the said Governor and Company.

And whereas Her Majesty, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and on an Address from both the Houses of the Parliament of Canada, in pursuance of the One hundred and forty-sixth Section of the "British North America Act, 1867," hath declared that Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory shall, from the First day of December, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, be admitted into and become part of the Dominion of Canada, upon the terms and conditions expressed in the said Address, of which Her Majesty has approved, and Rupert's Land and the said North-Western Territory are admitted into the Union, and have become part of the Dominion of Canada accordingly.

And whereas the Parliament of Canada by an Act intituled "An Act for the Temporary Government of Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory when united with Canada," enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor by any Order or Orders to be by him from time to time made, with the advice of the Privy Council (and subject to such conditions and restrictions as to him should seem meet), to authorize and empower such Officer as he may from time to time appoint as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories to make provisions for the Administration of Justice therein, and generally to make, ordain, and establish all such laws and institutions and ordinances as may be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others therein.

NOW KNOW YE that WE have seen fit by our Royal Letters Patent, bearing date the Twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, to appoint the Honourable William MacDougall, of the City of Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, in Our Dominion of Canada, and Member of Our Privy Council for Canada and Companion of Our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, on, from, and after the day to be named by Us for the admission of Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory aforesaid into the Union or Dominion of Canada, to wit, on, from, and after the First day of December, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, to be during our pleasure Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories.

AND WE DID thereby authorize and empower and require and command him in due manner to do and execute in all things that shall belong to his said Command, and the trust We have reposed in him, accordingly to the several provisions and instructions granted or appointed him by virtue of Our said Commission, and the Act of the Parliament of Canada hereinbefore recited, and according to such instructions as have been or may from time to time be given him, and to such laws as are or shall be enforced within the North-West Territories.

Of all which our loving subjects of our said Territories, and all others whom these presents may concern, are hereby required to take notice and to govern themselves accordingly.

In testimony whereof We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of our North-West Territories to be hereunto affixed. Witness Our trusty and well-beloved the Honourable William MacDougall, Member of Our Privy Council for Canada, and Companion of Our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Governor of Our North-West Territories, &c., &c., &c. At the Red River, in Our aforesaid North-West Territories, this First day of December, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and in the thirty-third year of Our Reign.

By Command,

to Sir FREDERIC ROGERS, Bart., K.C.M.G.

SIR,

Hudson Bay House, London, 21st January, 1870.

I am desired by the Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company to acknowledge your Letter of the 8th* instant, communicating to me the substance of a Minute recently received from the Privy Council of the Dominion of Canada, in which the Canadian Government urge a temporary delay in proceeding with the transfer of the Company's Territory, in consequence of the gravity of the present situation of affairs; and submit that the Government of the Company, which the inhabitants have been accustomed to respect, should be continued while steps are being taken to remove the misapprehensions which exist, and to reconcile the people to the change. You add that Earl Granville is of opinion that the reasons given by the Canadian Government for such delay are weighty in themselves, and become practically conclusive when it is considered that Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company must alike look to that Government for the practical accomplishment of the transfer, and that they appear in fact to be conducting it in the spirit which Her Majesty's Government approve, and which is most calculated to avoid injury to the trade of the Company.

The Committee are fully alive to the importance of restoring, and of preserving, the peace of the Territory, and they are anxious, in the interests of the Company, as well as from a sincere desire to co-operate with Her Majesty's Government, to adopt any suggestions which may, after full consideration, appear to Earl Granville likely to conduce to that end. They have, of course, a duty to discharge to their shareholders, which they must regard as a primary one; but they are satisfied that in any case Her Majesty's Government, at whose request they have committed themselves to the negotiation which has led the Company into its present position, will protect their interests, and will not allow the Company to suffer from its acquiescence in the policy which has been urged upon it, or in that which may be urged hereafter, by the authority of the Colonial Office. Desiring, as they do, to keep the pecuniary claims of the Company separate from the political questions now at issue, the Committee have instructed me to reserve the discussion of those claims for a separate Letter, and to confine myself, in the present communication, to the suggestion of the Government of Canada, that it would be expedient for the present to retain the Company's Government, as that to which the inhabitants of the Red River Territory are accustomed, until the misapprehensions which exist are removed, and the people are reconciled to the change.

It is with great deference that the Committee venture to express their doubts as to the policy of such a course. Lord Granville is aware that for many years they have felt that their authority, however sufficient in former times and under widely different circumstances, had become too weak for the maintenance of order and the protection of the peace of the Settlement. As far back as in August, 1863, Sir Edmund Head communicated to Her Majesty's Government the opinion of the Committee that the time had come when it was expedient that the executive and judicial authority over the Settlement should be vested in officers deriving such authority directly from the Crown, and exercising it in the name of Her Majesty; and again, as lately as in February last, in reply to Lord Granville's question, "What course the Company would propose to take for securing that life and property are adequately protected, and international obligations duly performed in their Territory so long as they remain responsible for its government?" I was instructed by the Committee to reply, that they believed that the most satisfactory plan which could be adopted would be the erection of the Settlement into a Crown Colony, and that they were prepared to recommend to their Shareholders the adoption of measures which would enable Her Majesty's Government to take that step without casting any pecuniary burden upon the National Exchequer. It can hardly be necessary for me to remark that the considerations which led to these expressions of opinion on the part of this Committee, and which Earl Granville's question shows to have been present to his Lordship's mind also, have acquired additional force under existing circumstances. The moral authority of the Company's Government has been greatly weakened by the announcement that a sale of the Territory to the Dominion had been agreed to; its physical weakness has unfortunately been demonstrated by the recent occurrences; and a further complication has been introduced into the affairs of the Settlement by the two Proclamations, dated 1st and 2nd December respectively, in which Mr. McDougall announces that the transfer of the Territory to Canada has been completed, and that he has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor, and by which he also removes Governor Mactavish from his post, and takes upon himself the responsibility of the Administration. These Proclamations had not reached this country when your Despatch of the 8th was written. They strengthen the conviction of the Committee that the proposal that the Company should undertake the provisional administration of the country in its present excited state, and should endeavour to restore tranquillity and to prepare the way for the transfer which has given occasion for the excitement, is one which they cannot entertain unless they are informed that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to arm the Company with powers adequate to so arduous a task.

In the event of Lord Granville's coming to the conclusion that it is desirable that this Company should temporarily undertake the Government of the Settlement, I am to request that the period for which it is desired that they should do so may be defined, and I am to inquire whether Her Majesty's Government propose to place any force at the Company's disposal; whether they will co-operate with the Company in submitting to Parliament such measure or measures as may be found necessary to give full authority to them in respect of the Government of the Colony; and lastly, whether it is his Lordship's intention that the Company, while provisionally administering the affairs of the Settlement, should do so entirely on their own responsibility, subject to Imperial Authority alone, or whether they should in any way act under the instructions of the Dominion Government.

* Page 186.

The Committee observe that, in your Letter under reply, no direct answer is given to the hope expressed in my Letter of the 28th* December, that Lord Granville would forthwith take steps for formally placing the Settlement under the authority which is to be responsible for its good government. They venture respectfully, but very earnestly, to repeat their expression of hope that this may soon be done. The large stake which they have in the prosperity of the country emboldens them to make the suggestion that, if it is thought better that the Dominion Government should not yet take the administration into their hands, Her Majesty's Government should at all events accept the surrender which the Company are prepared to make, and should exercise direct authority in the Colony until such time as the transfer to Canada is thought expedient. The Committee are aware that this course could not be taken without an enlargement of the time limited by the Act of Parliament for the transfer of the Colony to Canada after its surrender to the Crown; but as Parliament is shortly about to meet they presume that such an enlargement could be obtained.

SIR,

In my Letter of yesterday's date,† in answer to yours of the 8th instant, I stated to you that the Committee had instructed me to reserve for a separate communication the question of the Company's pecuniary claims in connection with the pending transfer of their land to Canada. This question is to them a very serious one.

It was not without much hesitation that they agreed, at the instance of the Government and on the strong representations of Lord Granville, to recommend their Shareholders to accept the price of 300,000*l.* for the lands, which it was desired that they should surrender. It was not without serious difficulty that they obtained their Shareholders' assent to that recommendation. That assent having once been given, the Committee applied themselves to the arrangement of the necessary details, and by the end of July had arrived at a complete settlement of the terms of the Deed of Transfer, in a manner satisfactory both to Her Majesty's Government and to the Government of Canada. They were at that time ready, so far as they were concerned, to execute the Deed and to surrender the country; but it was communicated to them by Her Majesty's Government, that the Dominion Government desired, for their own convenience, that the actual transfer should not take place until the 1st December. To this delay the Committee made no objection, and regarding the arrangement as definitive, they communicated it to their Shareholders at the General Meeting on the 23rd November, and undertook that so soon as the money should have been paid a Special General Meeting should be called for the purpose of considering a resolution for its distribution among the Shareholders. At that time the Committee fully expected that the money would be paid within the first few days of December.

It was actually provided and lodged at a London House for the purpose of being handed over to the Company so soon as Her Majesty's Government had certified the execution of the Deed of transfer. Suddenly, and in consequence of some disturbance at Red River, for which the Company were in no sense responsible, the Canadian Commissioner in this country received instructions from his Government to delay for the present the payment of the money; and the money remains unpaid to the present time, to the great disappointment and inconvenience of the Shareholders, who feel the uncertainty of their position even more keenly than the delay.

The Committee are pleased to learn from your Letter of the 8th, that the Canadian Government have informed Lord Granville that they have no desire to "repudiate" or to "postpone" the performance of any of their engagements. It had never entered into the minds of this Committee to impute such a desire to the Dominion Government. They place entire confidence in its good faith; and they also feel perfectly convinced that Her Majesty's Government, at whose especial request the Company entered into this arrangement, would, if it were necessary, take care to secure it full justice. It is not, then, any doubt as to the good faith of Canada; but the extreme inconvenience of their own uncertain position, and the detriment which the interests of the Company must sustain from an indefinite postponement of this payment, which induce the Committee to press for a speedy settlement.

They submit to Lord Granville that the Company are in equity entitled to receive interest on the purchase money from the 1st December, 1869, at the stipulated rate of 5l. per cent., and to be reimbursed any costs and charges to which they may have been, or may be, put in respect of the administration of the Colony since that date.

I am to add that the Committee have received a communication from a Shareholder intimating that it is intended to present a requisition for a General Meeting of the Company, and they apprehend that such a Meeting must ere long be called. It would be very desirable that, before it takes place, they should be in possession of the definitive views of Her Majesty's Government.

From Governor WM. MACTAVISH to WILLIAM GREGORY SMITH, Esq., Secretary, Hudson Bay House, London.

SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River, 25th December, 1869.

I regret very much to have to inform you that, within the last few days, matters here have assumed a worse appearance than they had previously worn. On the evening of the 17th instant Louis Riel, the apparent leader of the malcontents, came to me, and after going over what they had done, informed me that, notwithstanding my own opinion as well as that of others, his party were determined to proceed in the course they had taken, and that to do so money was a necessity; that before going to other parties, apparently friends, but whose object in assisting the malcontents might not be disinterested, and whose interference in the matter would certainly lead to great disorder in the country, he thought it better to come to me and propose that the Company should make a Loan (possibly about 1000*l*.) to the "Provisional Government." I, of course, pointed out to him that the Government he alluded to was not a Government, but simply a body of men supported by a section of a section of the people of the country; to which he replied, that the Government had been proclaimed, but was not yet fully formed, though quite strong enough to attain its object; that he as well as the other Red River people engaged in it were anxious for Canadian connection, but that if forced to look for aid from foreigners, there could be no means of treating with Canada. On those grounds a Loan from the Company would be a great advantage to the country. I pointed out to him that, for any difficulties he might create, or their consequences, the Company could not be held responsible; as I had from the beginning pointed out to him that the steps he was taking were unnecessary as well as illegal, and could eventually only lead to the injury of the people he had induced to support him.

On the 20th instant he, with two members of his "Council," waited on me and formally demanded a Loan for the use of the "Provisional Government." We had a good deal of conversation on the subject, in the course of which I said I did not consider I could entertain their proposition. However, it ended for the time in their appointing the morning of the 22nd instant for another call on me. On that day they again came, and after some discussion and unwillingness to come to the worst, they left me, fully satisfied I would not make the Loan. Before leaving, however, Riel made a threatening speech, informing me the Company had abused and kept down the half-breeds, and ended by selling them with the country, and that it was full time the half-breeds got their redress.

On leaving me, he, accompanied by Mr. O'Donoghue (whom I have before mentioned), went to the Office, having sent some of their people to bring Mr. John H. Mactavish thither as a prisoner. They took the key from his pocket and opened the safe, the contents of which amounted in all to 1090*l*. 4*s*. Of this sum, 262*l*. was in old Hudson Bay notes, tied up as cancelled, 757*l*. in Hudson Bay promissory notes, and the remainder in American currency, gold and silver coins. The safe and its contents were then carried off.

Yesterday John Bruce, who is President of the Provisional Government, took a considerable quantity of goods from the sale shop here to pay the people who have been engaged in support of the disturbances; but, though there has been kept a full account of the goods so taken, I am unable to say at present to what value they amounted; but I feel certain I understate the cost of this business to the trade when I put it at 4000*l*. to this date, with every likelihood of the loss of everything in the establishment, as well as at White Horse Plain, before spring.

The consequences of these disturbances will be most disastrous to the trade, as they will render it impossible to make arrangements for next year's business, and will besides endanger the Company's property in every part of the country.

I do not well see how the matter can be dealt with, as I do not believe a force can be organized in the country to cope with the party now in arms, and those who will certainly join them; at least, to do so will require considerable time and a competent Staff of Officers to train recruits. Troops sent either by England or Canada will not be allowed to pass through the States, as even should the Federal Government consent, the Troops, in passing through the Western States, would certainly be mobbed. The United States alone has the power to make its wishes felt by the malcontents here, and it is most likely that such assistance could only be got by the prospect of the early annexation of the country; and though, I doubt not, this will be its ultimate destiny, there would probably be objections to it at present. Indeed, it is now for the interest of Settlers here that annexation should take place at once.

I am told that Colonel De Salaberry and the Rev. M. Thibeault, a priest who had been in the country nearly thirty years, but who went to Canada about eighteen months ago, are now at Pembina on their way hither, as emissaries from the Canadian Government. Doubtless Mr. Thibeault has been chosen on account of his supposed influence with the half-breeds; but I fear that it will be found insufficient, as I believe Bishop Taché alone has influence sufficient to detach the men from their present leaders, and even he might fail; and, as said before, I am of opinion that the leaders, or their advisers, have fully made up their minds to have nothing to do with Canada.

In consequence of the safe robbery, I have given up redeeming Hudson's Bay promissory notes here. On the face of all notes they are declared redeemable only at York Factory, and we had better adhere CANADA. — to that, as we would find that the business could only be carried on under the surveillance of an armed guard, who would take possession of the notes so soon as they were in our hands.

William Gregory Smith, Esq.

I have, &c.,
(Signed)

W. MACTAVISH.

P.S.—I find I have omitted to say that, towards the end of the conversation with Riel on the 22nd instant, he had informed me that the amount of the Loan he wished for his Government would be about 10,000% sterling.

I beg to enclose copy of a Letter received from the Hon. William McDougall, dated Pembina, 16th December, 1869.

(Signed) W. M.

Letter from Governor MACTAVISH to WILLIAM GREGORY SMITH, Esq., Secretary, Hudson Bay House, London.

SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River, 28th December, 1869.

On the evening of the 27th instant, the Rev. Mr. Thibeault, who had been for many years Parish Priest at the White Horse Plains, and Vicar-General of the Roman Catholic Diocese of St. Boniface, arrived in the Settlement, and took up his residence in the house of the Bishop of St. Boniface, with the clergy residing there. It is understood that Mr. Thibeault, with Colonel de Salaberry, came here on a mission from the Canadian Government, to endeavour to come to some settlement with the malcontents here, but I have not seen Mr. Thibeault, who appears to keep close in his quarters. Mr. De Salaberry remained at Pembina, and I understand a party has been sent to re-occupy the Company's establishment there, and to send Mr. de Salaberry down. From what I see, I do not think their mission will have any success.

Last evening Mr. Chief-Factor Donald A. Smith, and Mr. Chief-Trader Richard Hardisty arrived here, and were at once taken before Riel, who, after examining them, took them over to Doctor Cowan. I have seen Mr. Smith only for a short time last evening, but I learn from him that there was some probability of his being appointed a Commissioner to arrange the matters in dispute. As I before said, I am doubtful if the leaders in this business wish to make an arrangement with Canada, and in my opinion the only way to bring one about, is by acting on the half-breeds, who support the disturbance, and to get an opportunity of doing so will require that at least one of the Commissioners should be of such influence as to render any stoppage of free intercourse between them and the people impossible. I have no doubt that the Rev. Mr. Thibeault will not be allowed to go freely among his own parishioners.

Mr. Smith informs me that Doctor Tupper, a member of the Dominion Parliament, left Pembina before the former, to come down to the Settlement. On his way down, Mr. Smith could hear nothing of Doctor Tupper, nor have I heard of his arrival in the Settlement.

I have, &c.,

William Gregory Smith, Esq.,
&c. &c. &c.

W. MACTAVISH.

Letter from the Hon. WILLIAM McDUGALL to Governor MACTAVISH.

MY DEAR SIR,

Pembina, 16th December, 1869.

In consequence of the continued occupation of Fort Garry by the Insurgents, under M. Louis Riel, and the submission of the Local Authorities to his orders, and having no force at my command to establish the supremacy of law in that neighbourhood, I have determined to return as far as St. Paul, and await there the orders of Her Majesty's Imperial and Canadian Governments.

I have not had the honour to receive from you any message or communication since your private note of the 19th of November. The roads at this point have been so effectually watched and guarded by the Insurgents, that I have not ventured to send to you any official or other communication that could, if it fell into their hands, betray the situation, or give information or encouragement to them. I send this by the hands of Indians, whom I have found loyal and faithful, where so many others have proved the reverse. I have little doubt it will reach you safely.

I am advised by the Secretary of State for the Provinces, that his Excellency the Governor-General has communicated to Lord Granville my Despatches up to the 9th of November, and has also telegraphed the more recent events, including, I presume, the occupation of Fort Garry by the half-breeds under Riel. I observe, by a paragraph in the 'Montreal Gazette,' that the Dominion Government have telegraphed their Agent in London to withhold the payment to the Hudson Bay Company of the purchase money agreed to be paid to them for the transfer of their rights in Rupert's Land. I have no official confirmation of this statement, but will not be surprised if it should prove true.

Under these circumstances it becomes important to consider carefully the legal position of all parties in the present crisis. I venture to submit my view of the case as it stands in the North-West Territories.

If, in consequence of the action of the Dominion Government, the surrender and transfer of the Country did not take place on the first day of December, as previously agreed, then you are the Chief

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

203

Executive Officer as before, and responsible for the preservation of the peace, and the enforcement of the law.

CANADA.

If, on the other hand, the Transfer did take place on the first day of December, then, I take it, my Commission came into force, and the notice in the form of a Proclamation issued by my authority on that day, correctly recited the facts, and disclosed the legal status of the respective parties. I learn from Colonel Dennis that a notice of Proclamation issued by me on the 2nd day of December, confirming and continuing all Public Officers in their duties and functions, excepting (in the words of the "Canadian Act") "the Public Officer or Functionary at the Head of Administration of Affairs," was duly printed and published in the Settlement, although it was reported here that the messenger who carried it forward was arrested and his papers taken from him by Riel's party. You will observe, by reference to the 5th section of "Rupert's Land Act," that, until otherwise enacted by the Parliament of Canada, "All the Powers, Authorities, and Jurisdiction of the several Courts of Justice now established in Rupert's Land, and the several Officers thereof, and of all Magistrates and Justices," are continued in full force, and by the 6th section of the Canadian Act, "For the temporary Government of Rupert's Land, &c., all Public Officers and Functionaries holding office in Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory," with the exception already mentioned, "shall continue to be Public Officers and Functionaries of the North-West Territories, with the same duties and powers as before," until otherwise ordered by the Lieutenant-Governor.

My Proclamation of the 2nd instant was intended to notify all these Officers that I had not "otherwise ordered," and that by force of both Acts they still held and were bound to exercise their "Powers, Jurisdiction, and Duties" as before. Whether the transfer has been delayed or not, I think it is clear that the present "Magistrates" and Authorities are still legally in office, and bound, as far they can, to perform the duties of their respective offices as before. In your case, the continuance of your powers and jurisdiction as Governor depends upon the Transfer. If, as I am inclined to think has happened, the Company surrendered, and Her Majesty transferred on the first day of December, notwithstanding the events occurring on this side of the Atlantic, the gentleman who acted as Deputy-Governor, or would have assumed that office, under the laws of Assiniboia, prior to December 1st, will, in my absence, and without special deputation by me, be and become the Chief Executive Officer of the Territories.

I have thought it my duty to explain to you, as I understand it, the legal position of affairs within the Territory at the present time. I do not know whether Judge Black will concur with me, but I trust you will show him this Letter, and be guided, as I have no doubt you will, very much by his view.

I notice that Riel in his printed papers speaks for a very large part of the earth's surface, as well as for all the people who now inhabit it. You will, no doubt, agree with me, that he rules only the "Territory" within the range of his guns, and such people as take service in his ranks, or willingly submit to his orders.

SIR,

Fort Garry, Red River Settlement, 1st January, 1870.

Governor Mactavish informs me that by the Mail of the 28th ult., he intimated to you my arrival here in the night of the preceding day.

Immediately on arrival I was requested by Mr. Riel and his "Council" to take an oath that I would not endeavour to restore the Government of the Hudson Bay Company, or do anything to the injury

CANADA. — of the "Provisional Government legally constituted." This it is hardly necessary to say I at once declined to do, but I gave my word that I would take no active steps against the "Provisional Government constituted legally or illegally as the case might be," until I should inform them of my intention to the contrary. They received me courteously, and contrary to the usual custom allowed my luggage to pass without being searched, and since that date I have been here virtually confined to the Fort, as is the case with Governor Mactavish and all officers of the Company here, for without permission of Mr. Riel and his friends none may come in or go out. So far I am simply an officer of the Company, but hope next week to have a conference with the "Provisional Government" as Commissioner from the Dominion Government.

You do not, I presume, require to be informed that very hostile feelings are entertained in many quarters towards the Hudson Bay Company, and such as it will be most difficult to allay. At the same time the hostility to the Canadian Government is not less marked, and the chances of any early and amicable settlement of the points in dispute are not very great.

Governor Mactavish, I rejoice to say, is considerably improved in health, but still suffers great pain and is very weak.

" to have given satisfaction; but Mr. Riel thinks that the papers should have been submitted to " himself and Council for their approval.

CANADA.

"The result of the meeting was that the Roman Catholic portion of the Settlement should elect twenty representatives to meet with an equal number from the Protestant portion, and jointly in Council consider Mr. Smith's authority, and if satisfied he had the power, to make with him an arrangement securing to settlers here such rights as were considered due to them previous, but with a view to the establishment of the authority of the Dominion of Canada here.

"This seemed very satisfactory to all parties, and till this morning I had every hope that all difficulties would be got over. But Mr. Riel this forenoon entered Dr. Cowan's house, and in the presence of a number of people, a few of whom were opposed to him, violently abused the Hudson Bay Company and its officers, and, among other things, said that the Company must be struck down; demanded the keys of the shop, which he said must hereafter remain in the hands of one of his people, though I think as yet he has not enforced his demand, but he may do it at any moment. I have still some hope that something may come from the meeting of Delegates called together on Tuesday, the 25th instant, but they are feeble compared with those I had yesterday.

"It is unfortunate also that the Commissioner should have been a servant of the Company. The Rev. Mr. Thiebault and Colonel De Salaberry preceded Mr. Smith, but they had no power to make arrangements, and, as, no doubt, will be urged, were simply sent to make the way smooth, for Mr. Smith, though I have no doubt the idea is incorrect, at least in the sense taken.

"The Canadians and others taken prisoners by Riel and his party are still kept in confinement, though nearly all the Settlement is urgent in a demand for their release, it has not appeared to produce any effect."

SIR,

Hudson Bay House, London, 25th February, 1870.

I am directed by the Committee of the Hudson Bay Company to request that you will assure Lord Granville of the great satisfaction with which they have learnt that the negotiations which the Canadian Commissioners are now carrying on in the Red River Settlement are likely to lead to an amicable adjustment of the differences which have arisen there; and that you will also assure his Lordship that they will be most anxious to facilitate such an arrangement by any means in their power.

I am at the same time to observe that, as the Company is not directly represented on the Commission (although one of the Commissioners is also one of their officers), this Committee are not kept officially informed of the negotiations which are in progress. They are therefore under the necessity of requesting Lord Granville not to give his assent to any arrangement which may be proposed in consequence of those negotiations, until they have been afforded an opportunity of examining it, and of making such representations with respect to it which may appear to them to be necessary.

SIR, St. Paul, Minnesota, February 5, 1870.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 29th ultimo.

Your request shall be duly attended to, and all important information from Red River transmitted to you by telegraph. I have, however, to regret that most of the information I receive comes through the Pembina correspondents of our daily papers—a source very unreliable. A few days ago I telegraphed to you that Riel had been made a prisoner, and that the authority of Governor Mactavish had been restored in Red River. This was reported from Pembina, and was generally believed by this community; but later advices from the same quarter contradict the report.

I am directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge your letter of the 25th ultimo,† expressing the satisfaction of the Committee of the Hudson Bay Company at the opening of negotiations between the Red River Settlers and the Canadian Government, but requesting that before his Lordship's assent is given to any arrangement proposed in consequence of those negotiations, the Committee may be afforded an opportunity of examining it and making any necessary representations on the subject. † Page 206.

It appears to Lord Granville that the reference which the Committee desire might cause great delay at the most inopportune moment for the settlement of this question. And his Lordship would suggest for their consideration whether their object would not be most effectually answered by the presence of some representative of the Company at Ottawa during the proposed negotiations.

As it would be indispensable that the character and position of the person who undertakes this Mission should be such as to command the confidence of the Canadian Government and to justify the Company in entrusting to him the fullest powers, Lord Granville would be very glad to learn that you had yourself consented to represent the

I have the honour to acknowledge Mr. Holland's letter of the 16th instant,* enquiring whether, supposing the Canadian Government are prepared at once to pay over the 300,000*l.* due upon the surrender of Rupert's Land, the Company will hand over the Deed of Surrender duly executed without then raising any question respecting the claim for interest upon that sum or for other compensation, but leaving such claims to be dealt with separately and at a future time.

In reply, I am directed to state that the Committee is desirous, as it always has been, to do all in its power to facilitate any arrangement between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Canada, which has for its object the establishment of a settled Government at Red River capable of protecting life and property.

I am to remark that the question as to the payment of five per cent interest from the 1st December last has already been raised, and the Committee understands that Her Majesty's Government coincide with it in thinking the claim to be a reasonable one, and have so represented to the Canadian Government.

Under these circumstances the Committee is prepared to hand over the surrender in exchange for the payment of 300,000*l.*, but in doing so it must be distinctly understood that the Hudson Bay Company in no wise waive their claim to the interest thus recognized, or any claim they have for loss of property and interference with their trade, in consequence of the delay in the acceptance of the transfer by Her Majesty's Government.

* 4th May,
1870, p. 221.

Owing to the present state of affairs in the Red River Settlement, some short time must elapse before Her Majesty can be advised to accept the surrender under the provisions of the "Rupert's Land Act, 1868," but the Company may rest assured that the acceptance will not be unnecessarily delayed.

Lord Granville presumes that the Company will be prepared to leave this part of the matter in the hands of Her Majesty's Government.

SIR,

Hudson Bay House, London, May 13th, 1870.

I am desired by the Committee of this Company to communicate to Her Majesty's Government a Despatch which has just been received from Mr. William Mactavish, dated Fort Garry, 6th April, as the Committee deem it of the utmost importance that Her Majesty's Government should be made acquainted with the results which are arising from the proceedings adopted by the Government of Canada and which alone have led to the formation of the so-called "Provisional Government."

The Committee abstain from entering at this moment into the general question of the proceedings taken by the Canadian Government, or into the question as to who is to be held responsible for the damage and injuries they will have produced, but they are desirous to call the attention of Her Majesty's Government to one point of a most pressing character, the solution of which may involve the preservation or destruction of a large portion of the population.

Her Majesty's Government are probably aware that up to the present time both the inhabitants of Rupert's Land as well as the Indian population have been mainly dependent upon the supplies sent out by the Hudson Bay Company for their maintenance and subsistence.

It will be seen from Mr. Mactavish's report that considerable inroads have already been made upon the supplies which have remained in the Company's stores, and it will be also seen that Mr. Mactavish expresses very strong doubts as to the expediency of this Company, in the present state of the Territory, sending out any further supplies.

Should this Company act upon that suggestion, the almost certain result would be that the Indian population will be deprived of the means of obtaining food, and the rest of the population either left in the same predicament or, at all events, subjected to great loss, privation, and inconvenience in procuring the means of subsistence either from Canada or the United States.

The period is now fast approaching when the Company's supplies should be sent out, and as the question is one of a public nature the Committee beg to inquire whether Her Majesty's Government will give an engagement to this Company to indemnify them against any loss or damage they may sustain from their stores upon their arrival at the Company's posts or stations being interfered with by the Agents of the Provisional Government or by any of the disaffected population. As it is necessary that the Committee should come to a decision on the subject without delay, the Committee will be glad to receive a communication from Her Majesty's Government at their earliest convenience.

I should mention that the value of the supplies usually sent out at this period of the year is about 80,000*l*.

I have, &c.,

C. M. LAMPSON,

Deputy Governor.

The Under Secretary for the Colonies.

Enclosure 1 in No. 45.

Enclosure 1
in No. 45.

Extract of a Letter from Governor Mactavish to W. G. Smith, Secretary of the Hudson Bay Company, dated Fort Garry, Red River, 6th April, 1870.

"I beg to forward, for your information, the following general outline of events which have occurred here since I last addressed you on 12th February.

"I then mentioned that on the evening of 10th February a Provisional Government had been formed, of which Mr. Louis Riel was acknowledged President by the Congress of Representatives from the various parts of the Settlement.

"On the forenoon of 14th February it became known in Fort Garry that a party of Canadians and others from Portage La Prairie had arrived at Headingly on their way to this place with the avowed object of liberating the prisoners and overthrowing the French party.

"Simultaneously with this movement a general rising took place in the lower part of the Settlement, in the parishes of St. Andrew's and St. Clement's, from which a multitude of several hundred men came to Frog Plain, where they were joined by the party of more than one hundred men from the Portage.

"Headingly is about twelve miles from Fort Garry, situated on the Assiniboine; Frog Plain is about five miles from Fort Garry, situated on the Red River. In order to form a junction with the party from the Lower Settlement that from the Portage passed within sight of this Fort on the night of the 14th. The moon was bright, and they were expected by the French, who manned the bastions and walls, and fired several shots apparently as a salute. The Portage party, in passing through the village of Winnipeg, surrounded and searched a house in which Riel sometimes slept, though without finding him.

"The party from the Lower Settlement was led by Dr. Schultz, and on their arrival at Frog Plain they billeted themselves in the Scotch Church at that place. They sent a messenger to Fort Garry demanding the liberation of the prisoners, which had been promised by Riel on the formation of the Provisional Government, but had been only partially fulfilled. The French party had collected to the number of about seven hundred men, and were prepared to defend the Fort. On the evening of the 15th the last of the prisoners were set at liberty.

"After remaining in a disorderly crowd at Frog Plain, debating the best course for them to pursue, the greater number of the English party separated for their various homes on the evening of 16th February.

"On the morning of the 17th a number of men belonging to the Portage party passed Fort Garry on their way home from Frog Plain to Portage La Prairie. Riel immediately despatched a party of Frenchmen to intercept them, which was effected without a shot being fired. The number of prisoners so taken was forty-seven.

CANADA.

"They were nominally under command of Captain Boulton, late of the 100th Regiment, a Canadian gentleman wintering in the Settlement, who had connected himself with Colonel Dennis' operations last autumn,

"Four of the prisoners were condemned by Court-Martial to be executed, but in consequence of earnest representations Riel pardoned three of them, refusing, however, to interfere in favour of Captain Boulton. Late on the evening of the 19th, a few hours before the time fixed for the execution, Riel consented to respite Boulton on condition that Mr. Smith, the Canadian Commissioner, should make a tour through the Settlement and induce the inhabitants of the disaffected parishes to support the action of their representatives and acknowledge the Provisional Government.

"Mr. Smith, accompanied by Archdeacon MacLean, visited the various districts referred to, and finally the number of English delegates required to complete the "Legislative Council" were elected and returned.

"I regret to say that during the time occupied by the proceedings of the Assemblage at Frog Plain a young Scotchman, named John Hugh Sutherland, was shot by a Frenchman who had been taken prisoner. Sutherland was in no way connected with the movement; the person who shot him did so in the course of a futile effort to regain his liberty.

"I also regret to state that a prisoner named Scott was shot by order of a French Court-Martial on 4th March. His offence was, I believe, insubordination.

* * * * *

"The first meeting of the Legislative Assembly took place on 9th March. Bishop Taché arrived on the 10th, and was present at the second meeting of the Assembly on the 15th. He begged that the prisoners should all be liberated. Half their number were at once set free, and the remainder on the 20th March; the reason alleged for their protracted detention being that the popular excitement in the Settlement had not yet quieted down.

"Judge Black, the Rev. M. Richot and Mr. Alfred H. Scott, who had been appointed delegates from the people here, left the Settlement for Ottawa, on and about the 21st March.

"Mr. Black had acted as Delegate from one of the parishes in the Settlement at the Convention which sat to frame the Bill of Rights, and form a temporary Government which would be acceptable to all sections of the Colony. This Mr. Black did most reluctantly, and only on account of representations that his presence might be of essential service. The Convention elected Mr. Black as its Chairman. When requested to go to Ottawa as a delegate, he refused for a long time, and was with much difficulty ultimately prevailed on to go by Bishop Taché. He left on 24th ultimo with his sister. Captain Boulton returned along with him to Canada.

"Chief Factor Smith, accompanied by Chief Trader Hardisty, left this place for Canada on 19th ultimo, and Mr. De Salaberry followed on the 23rd. The Rev. Mr. Thibault will remain to reside in the Settlement.

"With regard to the present situation as respects the Company's operations in a commercial point of view, I beg to enclose copy of propositions made to me by Riel, by conceding which the Company would be permitted to resume business. The conditions bear very heavily upon us, but compliance was inevitable.

"Fort Garry had been entirely taken from our hands by the French half-breed party, the leaders of which had with violence seized the keys of all the shops, stores, and warehouses within its walls, and have for months past been carrying away the Company's property of all kinds in vast quantities without let or hindrance.

As you are aware, a large quantity of valuable furs have remained in store here since last autumn. These, along with everything else, have been seized, and we find ourselves perfectly powerless to repossess ourselves of them without the permission of Riel and his people. Our servants have been expelled from their houses and obliged to live outside the Fort, to provide accommodation for the half-breeds. Our Officers have been, as a special mark of favour, permitted to retain their houses with the exception of Dr. Cowan, whose entire house has been seized by Riel, and used as "Government house." The Outpost of White Horse Plain has been seized in like manner and occupied by a large guard of half-breeds. The cattle belonging to its farm have been appropriated, and as a sample of the damage perpetrated I may mention that, by latest advices, 70 of the best working oxen have been slaughtered and eaten.

"The small station at Oak Point on Lake Manitobah, was seized, and Chief Trader Deschambeault compelled to leave it. Riel, however, has since disclaimed the latter outrage as unauthorized by him, and the post is said to have been restored to the Company by his orders. In a former letter I mentioned that our Store at St. Boniface had been sacked by a faction of half-breeds opposed to Riel. Pembina, Lower Fort Garry, and Portage La Prairie have been visited from time to time throughout the winter by armed flying parties, and business of all kinds has been long entirely stopped in this District.

"Respecting the outside Territory, communication with inland districts has been impeded by the impossibility of our sending packets without first obtaining 'passes' from Riel, to enable the bearers to pass his scouts stationed on all the roads. Threats were also held out that parties should at once go west, with instructions addressed from the Provisional Government to the half-breed population in Swan River, and Saskatchewan districts, directing them to seize the Company's posts in these places, and after having seized all the provisions and furs in the Stores, bring them to Red River in Spring. An armed party was also to have visited Portage La Loche in Summer with the object of possessing themselves of the returns of Athabasca and Mackenzie River Districts, and of plundering every Fort along the route.

"These threats were not vain. In fact even had the Company's people been able partially to evade the consequences of such steps, the result must have been ruinous in any case, as the interruption to the traffic would have prevented our getting returns to York in time to go home by the ship. Our returns throughout the north would have been seized and appropriated by the French, and Forts would have been taken, and our people, cast adrift in the country, would have been compelled to shift for themselves as best they could.

"It is now fully three weeks since rumours first reached me that the time had been fixed at which, in the event of non-compliance with the terms to be proposed by Riel, the Company's people in Red River District were to be turned out of their Forts, and all property, whether personal to themselves or belonging to the Company, confiscated. Since then I have had repeated interviews with Riel, and after much delay, the enclosed list of conditions has been completed. * * * *

I feel that my compliance with their demands on behalf of the Company, affords our only chance of avoiding immediate inevitable destruction.

"Enclosed is also letter from Thomas Bunn, 'Secretary of State,' which was elicited by a request of Mr. John H. Mactavish, the Accountant, that the upper storey of the building, the lower part of which contains the Company's Public Office, should be restored to us, it being the residence of the Clerks, some of whom have been compelled to leave the Fort, but will now, I hope, return to resume their duties. The lower storey of the house in question we have been permitted to retain throughout the winter, and have consequently been enabled to preserve our books.

"We hope within a few days to be enabled to recommence business throughout the district, and, when the proper time arrives, to send perhaps eight boats to Portage La Loche instead of the usual number of fifteen. I shall, as soon as practicable, forward the furs in store here to Saint Paul. We hope to be able to carry on our summer trade, but in consequence of the dreadful pillage we have sustained, we shall do so in a very crippled condition. Indeed, we shall probably require to import some articles during the summer of which we have been rendered destitute by the drain of the past winter. These articles may, however, be obtained at St. Paul.

"I hope soon to be able to address you finally on a few matters affecting the Trade. I have felt unwilling to do so for some time past, as the mails are known to have been unsafe. This difficulty has now, I think, been got over. This Letter I forward to Saint Paul by Mr. Hill of that place, who has been here on a visit for a few days, and returns to-morrow. Meanwhile, I may say I consider the position of the Company in this country to be most critical, and I cannot advise the Board to allow any fresh importations of merchandise until some guarantee shall have been obtained from the English or Canadian Governments for our protection. The arrangements just concluded may enable us to export our returns and pursue the more necessary business of the approaching summer; but beyond that time the prospects are quite impenetrable, and even during its continuance they are very uncertain.

"Mr. Malmros, the American Consul, on quitting this place, lately appointed Mr. Henry M. Robinson, ex-Editor of the 'New Nation,' as Vice-Consul. In handing over the newspaper business to Mr. Thomas Spence, the new Editor, some difficulty rose which induced Riel to send for Robinson, who refused to answer his summons. Finally, after undergoing an act of violence, at the hands of the person sent to apprehend him, Robinson came to Fort, and after about an hour's detention, was suffered to depart. The Vice-Consul now asserts he has reported the matter to his Government in a manner which will secure the presence of American troops at Pembina for the protection of Americans and their property against more serious outrages in summer.

Maison du Gouvernement, Provisoire, Fort Garry.
28 Mars, 1870.

Monsieur,

En vue de nos pourparlers au sujet des affaires de la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson, dans ce pays, j'ai l'honneur de pouvoir vous assurer que mon grand désir est de rouvrir au plutôt, dans l'intérêt de tous, un libre cours au commerce.

Le peuple, en se ralliant au Gouvernement Provisoire, dans l'unanimité de ses sentiments, nous prescrit à tous les deux notre conduite.

Le Gouvernement Provisoire, établi sur la justice et la raison, remplira son œuvre.

La Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson dans ses intérêts commerciaux peut être épargnée mais cela vous regarde et ne dépend que d'elle même; j'ai eu l'honneur de vous dire que des arrangements étaient possibles, et ils le sont aux conditions suivantes.

1. Que toute la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson, dans le Nord-Ouest, reconnaisse le Gouvernement Provisoire.

2. Que vous souscriviez, au nom de la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson, à un emprunt du Gouvernement Provisoire pour la somme de 3000*l.* sterling.

3. Que sur la demande au Gouvernement Provisoire, dans le cas où les arrangements avec le Canada seraient entravés, vous garantissiez un supplément de 2000*l.* sterling à la somme surmentionnée.

4. Qu'il soit octroyé par la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson à l'administration militaire du Gouvernement Provisoire, pour valuer de 4000*l.*, en provisions de bouche et en marchandises au prix courant.

5. Que la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson remette immédiatement ses Bills en circulation.

6. Que la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson se désiste d'une quantité spécifiée de marchandises que le Gouvernement Provisoire se réserverait, en cas d'arrangement.

En acceptant ces conditions, la Compagnie verra ouvrir ses magasins sous la protection du Gouvernement Provisiore. Le Fort Garry sera ouvert, tout en restant le siège du Gouvernement sous une faible garde de cinquante hommes.

CANADA.

Voilà ; Monsieur les choses que nous impose la situation. Je ne reculerai pas devant mon devoir ; vous possédez le sentiment du vôtre, j'ai la confiance que votre décision sera favorable.

Permettez moi de vous exprimer ici les sentiments de sympathie que m'inspire le mauvais état de votre santé, et mes vœux sincères pour son prompt rétablissement.

J'ai' &c.,

A Monsieur William Mactavish, Gouverneur de la
Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson dans le Nord-Ouest.

(Signed)

LOUIS RIEL.

In the name of the Hudson Bay Company in this country, I accept and agree to fulfil all the above conditions and propositions. Witness my hand this fifth day of April, One thousand eight hundred and seventy, at the Red River Settlement.

I am directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 13th instant,* enquiring whether Her Majesty's Government would give an engagement to the Company to indemnify them against any loss or damage in respect of certain stores which the Company contemplate sending to Rupert's Land.

Lord Granville desires me to state that, before the goods arrive in Rupert's Land the responsibility for the peace of the country will probably have passed to the Canadian Government, to whom any proposal of this kind which the Company may think requisite had better be made by Telegram without loss of time.

I am to add that the presence of Sir Stafford Northcote at Ottawa appears to afford peculiar facilities for this course of proceeding.

I am favoured with your Letter of the 17th instant* in answer to mine of the 13th, and very much regret that Lord Granville should not have seen the necessity of giving the Hudson Bay Company the indemnity they asked for.

It is too late now to communicate with the Government of Canada on the subject. No satisfactory result could be arrived at by Telegram; besides which, Sir Stafford Northcote has now left Canada, and will sail from New York by the Steamer of the 25th.

Under these circumstances, the Committee of this Company have come to the determination, at all events, of not running the risk of the Indian and other population of the district being left without the means of subsistence, and they will therefore despatch the stores as usual. But, in adopting this step, the Committee adhere to their opinion that the Government ought to have undertaken the responsibility; and should any damage or loss occur by the proceedings of the Provisional Government, they will still look to Her Majesty's Government for Indemnity, should the Canadian Government decline to take it upon themselves.

Copy of a LETTER from Sir J. ROSE, K.C.M.G., to the EARL GRANVILLE, K.G.

18, Queen's Gate, Kensington, S.W.,
22nd November, 1869.

MY LORD,

I this day received a Telegram from Canada, to the effect that the Hon. William McDougall, who had been appointed as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territory, under the Act of the Canadian Parliament of last Session, while on his way to Red River was stopped by an armed force of half-breeds.

My Telegram further states that the Authorities were seemingly powerless and inactive, and that the force are said to be 1000 strong.

I think it my duty to convey this report to your Lordship without delay, as this unexpected obstacle to obtaining peaceful possession of the Territory may interpose a serious difficulty, as to the effect of which your Lordship will doubtless be informed by the Governor-General.

MY LORD,

* Above.

Referring to * the communication which I had the honour to address to your Lordship on the 22nd instant, and to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury on the 24th instant, respecting the difficulties which had arisen at Red River, I trust your Lordship will think it proper, under all the circumstances of the case, that the acceptance of the surrender by the Hudson's Bay Company, and the payment of the money should be deferred until the views of the Canadian Government, as to the effect which these unforeseen events may have, can be definitely ascertained.

I have communicated by telegraph with Sir John McDonald, and your Lordship will doubtless receive, through the Governor-General, formal intimation of the wishes of the Privy Council of Canada at a very early day.

I would also hope that the expediency of the course now suggested will commend itself to the Hudson's Bay Company.

The assent of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to guarantee the Loan was only obtained and communicated to me on the 22nd instant, and it will be impossible, by the exercise of every diligence, to have the Bonds engraved and signed before the 30th November. The understanding with Messrs. Baring, Brothers, and Co., and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co., the Financial Agents of the Dominion, was that the Bonds guaranteed by Her Majesty's Government would be deposited with them, to cover any payment they might make.

Although these gentlemen were ready to make any advance that might be required in anticipation of the actual delivery of the Bonds on being assured that the guarantee was previously assented to, this additional circumstance will, I trust, have its weight with your Lordship in commending to your judgment the desirability of having the explicit sanction of the Government of Canada to perfecting the arrangement, notwithstanding the unfortunate events which have transpired since the steps were taken to have the necessary preliminaries adjusted.

CANADA.

From the communications which have passed, that explicit approval would appear for the moment to be doubtful; and I can, in conclusion, but reiterate the earnest expression of my hope that the course now suggested may commend itself to your Lordship's judgment.

CANADA—THE RED RIVER INSURRECTION.

(By French Atlantic Cable.)

Toronto, December 21, 1869.

Despatches received here from the Red River Settlement are unfavourable. The Insurgents continued to show a determined resistance to the Authorities, and have seized the prominent Canadian sympathisers in the Settlement, and taken possession of a fort situate opposite Pembina. Colonel Dennis is reported to be retreating.

REUTER'S TELEGRAM.

(Per French Atlantic Cable.)

Toronto, February 1, 1870.

It is reported that the Ottawa Royal Canadian Rifles are not to be disbanded. On the contrary, six companies of the body, with a battery of artillery, will be sent to the Red River, via Fort William, next Spring.

Advices from the Red River Territory indicate an increasing disorganization among the Insurgents. Disaffection and general opposition was expressed against the proposal of annexation to the United States.

Intelligence received from Fort Garry, the stronghold of the Insurgents, states that their Commander Riel's authority has been superseded and the old Governor and Council has been restored.

A Commission is to be sent to treat with the Canadian Government for the transfer of the Territory to the Dominion.

PETITION to the Canadian Legislature for Annexation of Red River Settlement and North-West Territory to Canada.

To the Honourable Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada in Parliament assembled:*

The Humble Petition of the Undersigned, a British Subject, of the "North-West," and a Canadian Elector,

Most respectfully representeth:—

THAT in 1857, the people of Red River Settlement, by petition to the Canadian Parliament, earnestly prayed:† "That such measures might be devised and adopted as would extend to them the protection of the Canadian Government, laws, and institutions."

2. That in 1857-58, exploration of the region west of Lake Superior, to the Saskatchewan, by the Canadian Government, ascertained the fact of its high fertility; presenting, in the lower valleys of the Saskatchewan and Red River alone, a "total area of arable land of first quality, of 11,100,000 (eleven millions one hundred thousand) acres," while of "land fit for grazing purposes, the area" (according to the same authority, viz.: Blue Book, Canada,— "North-West Territory," 1859, page 32) "is much more considerable, and may with propriety be assumed as fully equal in extent." That, in fact, the country offers large inducement for settlement.

3. That in autumn, 1857, the Committee of the British House of Commons on this subject of the "North-West," reported, inter alia, as follows, viz.:—"Clause 7. Among the various subjects of Imperial policy which it is important to attain, your Committee consider that it is essential to meet the just and reasonable wishes of Canada to be enabled to annex to her territory such portions of the land in the neighbourhood as may be available to her for the purposes of settlement, with which lands she is willing to open and maintain communications, and for which she will provide the means of local administration. Your Committee apprehend that the districts on the Red River and the Saskatchewan are among those likely to be desired for early occupation. It is of great importance that the peace and good order of those districts should be effectually secured. Your Committee trust that there will be no difficulty in effecting such arrangements between Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company, by which these districts may be ceded to Canada on equitable principles, and within the districts thus annexed to her the authority of the Hudson's Bay Company would, of course, entirely cease." "Clause 14. Your Committee cannot doubt but that, when such grave interests are at stake, all the parties concerned will approach the subject in a spirit of conciliation and justice, and they therefore indulge a confident hope that the Government will be enabled in the next Session of Parliament to present a Bill which shall lay the foundation of an equitable and satisfactory arrangement, in the event, which we consider probable, of legislation being found necessary to that purpose."

4. That

* The same, mutatis mutandis, was addressed to the other two Branches of the Legislature.

† The Petition was signed by five hundred and ninety-five men, principally (it is to be presumed) heads of families, and representing the mass of the people; and also by the leading Indian Chiefs of the country.

4. That the measures sought have yet to be effectually initiated.

5. That the forlorn colonists who appeal to us are of British and French Canadian origin ; men whose most cherished associations attach them to the British flag, with a fervour which truly finds aspiration in the following words of their Petition (viz. : of 1857—paragraph 19, as printed) :—" When we contemplate," say they, "the mighty tide of immigration which has flowed towards the north these six years past, and has already filled the valley of the Upper Mississippi with settlers, and which will this year flow over the height of land and fill up the valley of the Red River, is there no danger of being carried away by that flood, and that we may thereby lose our nationality? We love the British name," &c. &c.

6. The contingency deprecated seems now about to fall. According to current report, the Legislature of Minnesota is moving for annexation of the Settlement to that State ; a proceeding which, from the augury of Texas, is (especially under the imminences of our hour), fraught with issues momentous not only to the distant denizens of the North-west, but to contiguous Canada, and to British interests generally in America North.

7. That the geographical position of the Red River Valley—centre of British North America—commanding, commercially, the whole great Winnipeg watershed of nearly half a million of square miles, and of fifteen hundred miles of wheat-zone, reaching to the richest known gold-field in the world, is, to every British subject, and more immediately to every Canadian, a point of utmost importance, and one worthy of all conservation and safeguard.

8. That the feasibility of a commercial route, at comparatively small cost, between Canada and Red River Settlement, has, by the surveys of 1857-58, been carefully ascertained, and amply stated in detail in official reports of that work.

9. That as to "Annexation to Canada" (of which from their report, as above cited, some hope appears to have been held out to the Honourable Committee) your petitioner humbly submits that the principles of public polity, ad hoc, enunciated by that body of British statesmen, also the known autonomy (largely Canadian) of the interesting colonists seeking it, and the special circumstances of the case, seem to call urgently for its immediate realization.

10. That the consideration which (and that, with some degree of solemnity) weighs most in the mind of your humblest petitioner, on this momentous subject, is, that it is the duty of all British subjects, as constituents solidaires of Britain in America, to maintain inviolate and inviolable, as best we may, that grand heritage in this "New World," from Atlantic to Pacific, which Providence has committed to us ; and in the fulfilment of that trust, ever to follow the sacred, primary principle in human progress, of "settlement," cultivation, civilization : with the incidental duty of faithful guardianship of the aboriginal, in his tutelary state ; and observing ever the jealously marked lines of "vested rights," whether legally or equitably acquired, of all fellow members of the great British family.

11. That the immediate danger which threatens the integrity of present Imperial rule in British America is the subtle ingression of a foreign power into its very centre—a strategical—a key point, of utmost significance and imminence ; outflanking Canada—yea, the British provinces and colonies, east and west, on this continent ; and menacing, with a power fast accumulating under passing events on our borders, our very national existence. Wherefore, your very humble petitioner, as a loyal British American in Canada, most respectfully and most earnestly prays that your Honourable House of Legislative Assembly will be pleased to advise or adopt such measures in the premises, as may, in the wisdom of your Honourable House, seem best calculated to meet the emergency in question.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c. &c.

My Lord,

Montreal, 11 February 1867.

THE accompanying memorial to Her Majesty, adopted at a public meeting of the inhabitants of the Red River Settlement, has been sent to me with a request that I would transmit it to your Lordship.

I have, &c.

Enclosure in No. 2.

RESOLUTIONS adopted at a Public Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Red River Settlement.

Encl. in No. 2.

1. Resolved, that it is the earnest desire of the people of Red River to see the Lake Superior route to British Columbia opened up for commerce and emigration, and to be united with the Grand Confederation of British North America.

2. Resolved, that in consequence of the great political changes which the British North American provinces are now on the eve of undergoing, and the settlement of the Hudson's Bay question, that no further delay should take place in creating the Red River a Crown colony, with the view of joining confederation under conditions which may be submitted for the approval of the people, who are fully alive to the great importance both to the Red River and Great Britain, of uniting under one grand confederation of the provinces, to advance British interests from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

3. Resolved, that in order to at once give an impetus to the immediate and general development of this vast country under confederation, a free port of entry should be granted, and the immediate opening up of the Lake Superior outlet for trade, with a regular and punctual postal communication.

4. Resolved, that the people desire further to impress upon the Imperial Government the importance of having a detachment of troops at Red River at the earliest opportunity, and would suggest as the shortest and most economical route through British territory, the Lake Superior route, which could easily be made passable for troops, with temporary improvements by a party of Sappers and Miners, and the voluntary assistance of the settlers between Lake of the Woods and Red River.

5. Resolved, that a memorial be drawn up and forwarded to the Imperial Government through the Secretary of the Colonies, briefly setting forth our views.

6. Resolved, that the press of the province of British North America and England be requested to publish the foregoing resolutions and memorial, and that the thanks of the meeting be hereby tendered to those newspapers who have already warmly espoused our cause.

It was then moved by Mr. McKenney, and seconded by Mr. O'Lone, that before adjourning the meeting, in the meantime, a committee be appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen, viz., Andrew McDermott, Esq., Dr. Schultz, Colonel Robinson, and Mr. Spence, to draft a memorial to be submitted at some future time for public signature.

The meeting then adjourned, and before leaving three hearty cheers were given for our gracious Queen and Royal Family.

To Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, &c. &c. &c., in Council assembled.

The Memorial of the undersigned, Merchants, Traders, &c., &c., loyal Inhabitants of that part of Rupert's Land, the Red River Settlement,

Humbly sheweth,

THAT whereas, it is the earnest wish and desire of the inhabitants of this isolated portion of your Most Gracious Majesty's Dominions in British North America to be created a Crown Colony, with a view of being embraced in the Grand Confederation of the provinces of British North America, to foster and protect British interests from the Atlantic to the Pacific;

Your Majesty's loyal memorialists would here briefly set forth their reasons that no further delay should take place in granting the prayer of this memorial; the provinces of British North America being now on the eve of a great political change; together with the settlement

settlement between your Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company, for the sovereignty and freehold of this valuable portion of your Majesty's possessions.

Therefore your Majesty's memorialists consider the time has now arrived when they may fairly urge upon your Majesty's Government the importance of favourably considering this memorial and prayer of your Majesty's loyal subjects in Rupert's Land, and thereby taking action thereon at the approaching Session of Parliament, and that the same may become law before dissolution of that Parliament.

Your Majesty's memorialists would here humbly represent for the consideration of your Majesty's Government, the rapid advancement of civilisation and settlement by our adjoining American neighbours, now extending to the confines of the boundary line. While notwithstanding our superior climate and vast agricultural and mineral resources, we must remain helpless to advance in developing the same, having no outlet or market, besides being entirely indebted to the enterprise of a foreign power for any postal or other communication with the outer world; the imports and exports of the country for the past year amounting to over 360,000 l. sterling.

That this state of affairs in such a valuable portion of your Majesty's possessions will now cease, notwithstanding previous unsuccessful applications, is the humble and earnest hope of your Majesty's most loyal memorialists.

Your Majesty's memorialists would humbly suggest to your Majesty's Government, as a means of the immediate development of this vast country, viz., with the creation of a Crown colony, the at once opening up of the Lake Superior route to British Columbia for commerce and emigration, and a regular postal communication, an early settlement of Indian land titles, and the presence of a military detachment.

Wherefore your Majesty's memorialists humbly pray that your Most Gracious Majesty may be pleased to recommend immediate action to be taken by your Majesty's Government on this memorial, and that the creation of this country to a Crown colony may become law during the approaching Session of Parliament, and your Majesty's humble memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray, &c.

My Lord,

Montreal, 22 February 1867.

IN my Despatch, No 22,* of the 11th February, I transmitted to your Lordship a memorial from the inhabitants of the Red River Settlement to Her Majesty the Queen, praying that their territory should be made a Crown Colony.

The question of the expediency either of such a change as they desire, or of the union of the Red River Settlement to Canada having thus been brought under my notice, I have thought it my duty to state my views on the subject for your information, and I have accordingly drawn up the enclosed memorandum, which I have now the honour to submit to your Lordship.

MEMORANDUM ON RED RIVER SETTLEMENT.

EXTRACT from a DESPATCH, No. 95, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor General of Canada, dated 17 June 1865.

"ON the fourth point, the subject of the North-Western Territory, the Canadian Ministers desired that that territory should be made over to Canada, and undertook to negotiate with the Hudson's Bay Company for the termination of their rights, on condition that the indemnity, if any, should be paid by a loan to be raised by Canada under the Imperial guarantee; with the sanction of the Cabinet, we assented to this proposal, undertaking that if the negotiation should be successful, we, on the part of the Crown, being satisfied that the amount of the indemnity was reasonable, and the security sufficient, would apply to the Imperial Parliament to sanction the agreement and to guarantee the amount."

1. By

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT, &c.

1. By this extract it appears that the Canadian Government is willing to negotiate for the acquirement of the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company.

2. As Canada negotiates to take over the territory of the Company, under the Protectorate of Great Britain, so it is expedient to consider what means the territory has of protecting itself from American encroachment, and what power Canada or Great Britain may have of aiding it to resist such encroachment; and, finally, what probability there is of such encroachment being made.

3. To understand this matter, the position of the Americans nearest the frontier, as also American position. that of the Hudson's Bay settlers at Fort Garry must be considered.

4. The nearest American port is at St. Paul's, some 430 miles from Pembina, the border British settlement. This latter place is 70 miles from Fort Garry.

The whole route is open prairie.

The American system of railways has as yet only extended to La Crosse, about 270 miles from St. Paul's, and as from St. Paul's the advance by settlers towards the frontier is but slow, so it may be some years before a railroad reaches Pembina.

5. The Red River Settlement at Fort Garry, the present capital of the Hudson's Bay Company's possessions, and their grand entrepôt, consists of about 10,000 inhabitants, the men being a race of hardy hunters, well accustomed to the use of arms, and each of them possessing a gun or rifle. They are moreover accomplished horsemen. Position of Hudson's Bay Company at Fort Garry.

They are reported to be a semi-barbarous race, but would, no doubt, fight well against an invading force, and at a great advantage from their habits of life, and their knowledge of the country.

6. The Settlement may also at present reckon very largely for its defence on the assistance of the Indians, who, from the faithful dealing of the Company with them, have learnt to put trust in the British name, and, from this cause, and also from their hatred of the Americans, would be trustworthy allies. Indian Allies.

This state of things, however, may not last.

At present the Indians are protected from themselves by the prohibition, and consequent absence of ardent spirits, except in such small quantities as can be surreptitiously introduced; and unfair dealing on the part of traders is also prevented by the system of barter rigorously enforced by the Hudson's Bay Company.

But it appears probable that if the rule of the Company is terminated by the union of its territory to Canada, partial freedom of trade, leading to extreme license (with its concomitant evils to the unfortunate Indian) will be introduced. Unscrupulous traders will then soon by their dishonest dealings destroy in the minds of the Indians that feeling of attachment to England which at present would render them her faithful allies, and thus would lay them open to American seduction.

In such case the Red River Settlement would be easily approached by a limited American force.

7. Three routes are at present used to Fort Garry.

Routes to Fort Garry.

First. From Hudson's Bay, at York.

By this route of 700 miles the furs, except buffalo skins, are sent to England, and through York provisions are brought to supply all the northern trappers' posts; but as this bay is only open for about six weeks in the year, this port may be reckoned for general trade or defensive purposes, useless,

Second. From the head of Lake Superior, at Pidgeon's Bay. This is a complete water course of 700 miles, but so replete with rapids, and consequent long portages, and so beset with natural difficulties, as to make the construction of a water communication by this line a matter of much difficulty, and the expense would probably be so enormous as to render the adoption of this route almost out of the question.

The third route is by the beaten track through the prairies from Fort Garry to St. Paul's. Its whole length, except the first 70 miles, being through American territory. By this road at present all the buffalo skins are exported.

It may here be remarked that, in case of necessity, Fort Garry can supply itself with provisions.

8. The result of this examination shows that in the event of war, as Lake Superior would be held by the United States navy, Fort Garry is effectually isolated from Canada, and that, in any case, until canals or railways are constructed, the United States must possess the only channel through which all the trade of the Red River Settlement must pass.

9. With regard to the future. Can the Red River Settlement be released from this dependence on the United States?

This question cannot be satisfactorily answered until the country between Fort Garry and Lake Superior has been well surveyed.

According to what is known at present a water communication appears almost impossible.

One route, that from Pidgeon Bay, has been already discussed, but even were it practicable, the fact that it is close to the United States territory would render it useless for defensive purposes.

443.

There

There is another water communication possible commencing at Fort William, but her again the difficulties for the first 50 miles are almost insurmountable.

10. Then, as to railways :

A railway might probably be constructed from Pidgeon Bay, north of the water communication, but this would be too close to the American frontier. A second, which is not liable to the last objection, might, perhaps, be projected from Fort William : but here there are vast natural difficulties :

First. A rise of 800 feet in the first 50 miles.

Second. One hundred miles of sterility and swamp unfit for settlement.

11. The following conclusions are, therefore, arrived at :—

First. That at present the channel of all the trade to and from the Red River Settlement is in the hands of the United States.

Secondly. That it is doubtful whether water communication, safe for defensive purposes, can ever be made from the Settlement to Lake Superior.

Thirdly. That, until thorough surveys are made, the possibility of the construction of a remunerative line of railway to Lake Superior cannot be estimated.

Fourthly. That even supposing a water communication, or a railway, were opened from Fort Garry to Lake Superior, all use of it in time of war would be impossible, unless a British gun-boat fleet could enter that lake. This entrance could not be effected until the Ottawa and French River Navigation to Lake Huron is opened, nor even then till a canal is constructed on the British side of the Sault St. Marie.

It is, however, reported that this latter work would be attended with no difficulty, and with but trifling expense, as it would not exceed a mile in length ; but it must be recollected that such a canal would be close to the American frontier, and that its destruction could not be prevented in winter in case of hostilities with the United States, without a strong military force to hold it.

On a careful consideration of the whole question the opinion I have formed is, that until a safe communication for military purposes is completed between Canada and Fort Garry, either the union of the Hudson's Bay territory to Canada, or the creation of a Crown colony at the Red River Settlement, would be a source of weakness and danger both to Canada and England.

The Memorial of the Inhabitants of Portage La Prairie Settlement, in Rupert's Land, British North America.

Humbly sheweth,

THAT in consequence of British law and protection only extending through the Council of Assiniboia, for a radius of 50 miles round Fort Garry, your Majesty's loyal subjects, inhabitants of this settlement, are left totally without law or protection, civil or criminal, and wholly different from any other settlement in any part of the British empire.

That this settlement contains a population of nearly 500, exclusive of Indians, and although

although nearer to the United States frontier than the adjoining settlement of Red River, and notwithstanding its vastly superior agricultural resources and climate, your Majesty's loyal memorialists are left helpless to develop the same or to attract immigration, from the want of law and protection.

Your Majesty's memorialists would here humbly represent that, in the opinion of settlers here, farmers who have immigrated from Canada, this settlement and the country extending westward for hundreds of miles is proved by actual experience to be one of the richest agricultural countries in the world, and is even acknowledged by the Government of the State of Minnesota, in its emigration pamphlets, to be vastly superior.

Your Majesty's memorialists would further humbly represent that, with the proper machinery to develop the resources of this vast, rich, and beautiful country, it would become the most attractive point of emigration in the British empire, and that the facilities offered by nature for the construction of a railway to the Rocky Mountains, for cheapness of construction, is unequalled, being one vast prairie and wooded level, and the depth of snow in winter rarely exceeding a few inches.

Your Majesty's memorialists humbly trust, that with the Confederation of the British North American Provinces, the time has arrived when they may fairly urge upon your Majesty's Government the importance of favourably considering this memorial, and immediate action thereon, or your Majesty's Royal sanction for our development, under the care and protection of the Confederate Government of British North America, in the interim of a final settlement with the Hudson's Bay Company.

Wherefore, your Majesty's memorialists humbly pray that your gracious Majesty may be pleased to cause such action to be taken as will give immediate protection to your Majesty's loyal memorialists, and the privileges of British subjects.

And as in duty bound they will ever pray.

Encl. 2, in No. 4.

At a Meeting of the Settlers of Portage la Prairie, Rupert's Land, held at the Store of Mr. Thomas Spence, Caledonia, on Friday, the 31st day of May 1867, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

1. Moved by Mr. John McLean, and seconded by Mr. Thomas Anderson, "That this meeting earnestly desires to lay before the British and British North American Confederate Governments their regret and despondency, as loyal British subjects, left to continue in their anomalous condition, notwithstanding that they inhabit a section of the country which, for salubrity of climate, richness of soil, and luxuriousness of vegetation, and, as an agricultural country, capable of supporting in comparative affluence millions of people, cannot be excelled, if equalled, in any part of the world."—Carried.

2. Moved by Mr. F. A. Bird, and seconded by Mr. Garvin Garnoch, "That this meeting desires to express, as briefly as possible, their anomalous condition, viz., that, being beyond the 50-mile limit from Fort Garry of the jurisdiction of the Council of Assiniboia, this settlement, containing a population of nearly 500, is totally without law or protection, civil or criminal, and entirely at the mercy of lawless bands of Indians and others."—Carried.

3. Moved by Mr. Sinclair, and seconded by Mr. C. Whiteford, "That efforts have been made by the people to organise and carry on a local government, but failed to continue the same successfully through a want of unity and dignity in the Government."—Carried.

4. Moved by Mr. Corrigan, and seconded by Mr. Thomas Anderson, "That, with the view of representing the sentiments of this people to the British Government, a memorial be addressed to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, praying for redress, and the privilege of British law and protection being extended to them as loyal British subjects; and that Messrs. Spence, McClean, and Garvin Garnoch be a committee to draft and forward the same to the proper authorities, and that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the Canadian Government, with a request that the same may be laid before the House at the first meeting of the Confederate Parliament of British North America."—Carried.

5. Moved by Mr. Hay, and seconded by Mr. J. Whiteford, "That the Honourable George Brown, M.P., be requested to present a copy of these resolutions and memorial at the first Confederate Parliament, and move to bring in a Bill for the temporary protection of this settlement under the Confederate Government, with Her Gracious Majesty's sanction."—Carried.

6. Moved by Mr. F. A. Bird, and seconded by Mr. McLean, "That the thanks of this meeting be tendered to the chairman and secretary for the dignified manner in which the meeting has been conducted, and that three cheers be given for the Queen and Royal family."—Carried.

Portage la Prairie, viâ Red River Settlement,
17 January 1868.

Dear Sir,

THE President and Council of Manitoba, Rupert's Land, have the honour to request that you will lay before the Government and Parliament of the Dominion of Canada this communication with information, and to request on our behalf from the Government, at the earliest convenience after consideration, a reply for the ultimate guidance and consideration of this Government.

1. For the information of your Government we would, in the first place, beg to state that the election of the President and Council and organisation of this Government only took place in the early part of the present month, and that the election was regularly conducted by the vote of the people. (In the adjoining colony of Assiniboia the election of the Council, the supposed representatives of the people, takes place in London, England).

This settlement has hitherto been totally unprovided for by law or protection, either by the Imperial Government or the Hudson Bay Company, without even a flag of acknowledgment, anomalous to any other British settlement in the Empire, all of which has been twice fully laid before Her Majesty's Government by petition of the people, praying for redress and protection, and to be admitted into the (or even attached pro tem.) Confederation of the Dominion of Canada, of which no further acknowledgment has been received than the mere official replies of receipt, and that the same "had been laid at the foot of the Throne."

Meantime, the increase of crime and the overbearing tone of the Indians increases towards the settlers, some of them emigrants of recent date from Canada; plunder and robbery daily going on, self-preservation demanded the immediate organisation of an independent Government.

2. The boundaries of the infant Government of Manitoba for jurisdiction is declared to be as follows:—

South, by the boundary line between the United States and British North America. East, by the boundary line of the jurisdiction of the Government of Assiniboia. West, by the River Souris, or Mouse river, running to the north, and the little Saskatchewan running to the south into the Assiniboine, and on the north by Lake Manitoba, as far as Manitoba House, which area embraces a large portion of the garden of the North-west.

3. The Council of Manitoba have recently, with much satisfaction, learned the resolutions regarding this country, and brought down to the House by the Honourable Mr. McDougall, on 30th November last; but, previous to this knowledge, this Council was pledged to the electors to act resolutely on either of the two following pledges, viz.:—

First. To know from the Government of the Dominion of Canada, in consequence of the 146th section of the "British North American Act of 1867," if that Government would be disposed to at once, under existing urgent circumstances, recognise the existence of this petty Government, or if we can be assured by your Government of our admission or attachment to the Dominion within six months.

Second. That should the reply of your Government prove unfavourable, as a last and desperate resource to throw ourselves upon the liberality and protection of the United States Government for recognition and ultimate annexation.

This

RED RIVER SETTLEMENT, &c.

11

This step as a last resort, and after grave deliberation, is to this Council and people an extremely reluctant one; but when all the circumstances of their total neglect and patient endurance of many years' disappointment, and daily perceiving the rapid advancement of their American neighbours are considered, any liberal Government could not but sympathise with a neglected people, compelled to renounce their loyalty under such circumstances. But this Council sincerely hope and pray that the early and favourable reply of your Government will avert such a humiliation and a calamity, through which serious and complicated evils might arise between the several Governments interested.

My Lord,

As President elect by the people of the newly-organised Government and Council of Manitoba in British Territory, I have the dutiful honour of laying before your Lordship, for the consideration of Her Most Gracious Majesty, our beloved Queen, the circumstances attending the creation of this self-supporting petty government in this isolated portion of Her Majesty's dominions; and as loyal British subjects we humbly and sincerely trust that Her Most Gracious Majesty and Her advisers will be pleased forthwith to give this Government favourable recognition, it being simply our aim to develop our resources, improve the condition of the people, and generally advance and preserve British interests in this rising far-west.

An humble address from the people of this settlement to Her Majesty the Queen, was forwarded through the Governor General of Canada in June last, briefly setting forth the superior attractions of this portion of the British dominions, the growing population, and the gradual influx of immigrants, humbly praying for recognition, law, and protection, to which no reply or acknowledgment has yet reached this people.

Early in January last, at a public meeting of settlers, who number over 400, it was unanimously declared to at once proceed to the election and construction of a Government, which has accordingly been duly carried out, a revenue imposed, public buildings commenced to carry out the laws, provisions made for Indian treaties, construction of roads and other public works tending to promote the interests and welfare of the people, the boundaries of the jurisdiction being, for the time being, proclaimed as follows:—

North, from a point running due north from the boundary line of Assiniboia, till it strikes Lake Manitoba; thence from the point struck, a straight line across the said lake to Manitoba Post; thence by longitudinal line 51, till it intersects line of latitude 100. West, by line of latitude 100 to the boundary line of the United States and British America.

East, the boundary line of the jurisdiction of the Council of Assiniboia.

South, the boundary line between British North America and the United States.

REPORT

ON THE

RED RIVER EXPEDITION OF 1870,

BY

ASSISTANT CONTROLLER IRVINE, C.M.G.,

WITH PREFACE.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command of Her Majesty, 1871.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE, BY HARRISON AND SONS, ST. MARTIN'S LANE.

1871.

[C. 391. Price 2½d.]

REPORT on the Red River Expedition of 1870, by Assistant Controller Irvine, C.M.G., with Preface.

THE first hint that the services of the Control Department were likely to be required for an expedition to Fort Garry was given to Acting Deputy Controller Martindale on the 5th April, but no definite understanding on the subject was come to till the 11th of that month.

Attention was diverted for the next few days to the anticipated Fenian raid on Canada, so that when Assistant-Controller Irvine arrived on the 15th from England, detailed to take charge of the Expedition, he found no preparatory steps had been taken, beyond the arrangement made, as a necessary preliminary, between General Lindsay and the Dominion Government, that the Control Department should have entire charge of the Expedition, both as regards the Regular Forces and the Militia, and that the share of expense to be borne by the Dominion Government should form a matter for subsequent investigation.

Conferences were held during the next few days to arrange the route to be taken, and to settle questions of supply, transport, equipment, &c.; and on the 22nd April tenders were advertised for, to be sent in at latest by the 30th, Mr. Irvine being detached at once to Toronto and Collingwood to take stock of the transport and supplies which had already been procured by the Dominion Government, and Deputy Commissary Wilkinson being instructed to make all necessary preparations at Toronto, where it was arranged that the Force should rendezvous.

On the 2nd and 3rd May tenders were accepted. The supplies obtained by them were reasonable in cost, and gave entire satisfaction throughout the Expedition.

The next few days were spent by Colonel Martindale in going to Collingwood and taking up steam transport, satisfactory arrangements having been almost completed when all negotiations were brought to an abrupt termination by a telegram from Ottawa, that the steam transport was to be arranged entirely by the Postmaster-General of the Dominion Government.

Time slipping by, General Lindsay, on the 11th May, instructed Colonel Martindale not to wait for sanction from the Government; and arrangements for transport were at once concluded with the Northern Railway of Canada and the owners of available steam-boats at 15 per cent. under the ordinary tariff.

The general arrangements for the Expedition had meantime progressed. A change in the ration necessitated further supplies of tea, sugar, and tins; 3,000 bags were purchased for the conveyance of flour; biscuits, and pork from Thunder Bay; and the whole energies of the Control Department at the main stations of Montreal, Quebec, and Kingston were being heavily taxed, for in addition to pushing forward stores to Toronto in readiness for shipment, many articles which could not be purchased, such as water-proof bags for blankets, and covers for pouches, had to be made in store; and the Department was already abnormally pressed by the shipment of stores to England, consequent on the withdrawal of troops from Canada.

The first steamer of the season, laden with a general cargo, left Collingwood for Thunder Bay on the 7th May; but being refused a passage, by the United States' Government, through the Sault St. Marie Canal, was compelled to land her freight on the Collingwood side.

It is well to describe exactly the effect of this refusal on the Expedition, for its difficulties were materially increased by it.

An excellent line of railway runs (a distance of 94 miles) from Toronto to the wharves at Collingwood, the shipping port for Lakes Huron and Superior, and therefore for Thunder Bay, some 700 miles further on.

Half way between Collingwood and Thunder Bay, to avoid the rapids between Lakes Huron and Superior, the Sault St. Marie Canal has been constructed, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, in United States territory; and the refusal of a passage through it consequently rendered through shipment to Thunder Bay, as intended, impracticable.

All stores, supplies, and men had to be landed on the Canadian shore of the rapids at the Lake Huron end, transported on land, and re-shipped on Lake Superior.

It necessitated, too, the engagement of fresh steamers, which, when engaged, could not lie within a mile of the shore, so that communication had to be carried on by means of scows.

It raised claims for wharfage and storage, and damaged the stores by crowding and transhipment, to the great increase of delay, confusion, and expense.*

The Force, the first detachment of which left Toronto on the 14th May, and reached Sault St. Marie on the 16th, consisted of 1,214 officers and men, and about 400 voyageurs and 100 teamsters—a total, say, of 1,700 men, for whom transport had to be provided, and supplies, the country between Thunder Bay and Fort Garry, a distance of 600 miles, producing nothing.

There was some little confusion at first at the Sault St. Marie Canal, in consequence of the unexpected disembarking there of men and stores; but a camp was soon pitched, and stores were placed under shelter, some in the Hudson Bay Company's buildings, and the remainder under tarpaulins.

The next three weeks were occupied in fitting up transport for carrying horses, &c., in unloading and loading, and in sending on supplies and men to Thunder Bay, the last detachment leaving Sault St. Marie on the 19th June, and reaching Prince Arthur's Landing at Thunder Bay on the 22nd.

Owing to the shallowness of the water, the steamers, both at Sault St. Marie and at Thunder Bay, had to lay some distance off the shore. Stores had consequently to be put on board and landed by means of scows, and considerable loss was occasioned, for the packages were not sufficiently strong to bear the constant handling.

The conduct of the Expedition from Thunder Bay being described at length in Assistant Controller Irvine's Report, it is only necessary to give here the general conclusions on the conduct of the Expedition arrived at by Colonel Martindale:—

"The delay," he writes, "that occurred, firstly, before the Control Department received any information regarding the proposed Expedition, and, secondly, before it was placed in a position to act, is to be regretted. It compelled many things to be done hurriedly that would have been the better for more time, and, in conjunction with its other duties, placed an undue and excessive pressure on the Department.

"Supplies were provided for a Force of about 1,700 men. They proved ample and of excellent quality, and met the wants of the Expedition.

"The question of the manner in which the supplies should be packed and carried was considered at the conferences regarding the Expedition, and the best advice that could be obtained was followed, but many of the packages proved too weak for the work they had to undergo. This arose partly from the unexpected transhipment at the Sault, and partly from its having been found more convenient not to shift the contents into bags at Thunder Bay, as originally intended. The tins supplied to carry the tea, sugar, and pepper, answered excellently.

"A sum of 1,500*l.* was taken up by Assistant Commissary Jolly on the 19th of May, on proceeding to Thunder Bay, and a further sum of 2,400*l.* by Commissary Pennell, on 20th June. At the close of the Expedition it was found necessary to send a final sum of 1,000*l.* sterling by an Officer of the 1st Battalion 60th Rifles, no Control Officer being available. The remainder required was raised in small sums at Thunder Bay, and by bills cashed by the Hudson Bay Company at Fort Garry.

"Mr. Dawson's accounts have not yet been received, but unless these greatly exceed what has been estimated for them, it would appear that the cost of the Expedition (not including the pay of the troops) will not exceed 91,487*l.*, the amount of the estimate referred to in paragraph 55.
